control, intelligent interest, and even the safety of the bank itself, a shareholders' bank, is absolutely unacceptable. In a private shareholders' bank started for ordinary banking business we need capital, because the larger the capital the greater the security for the depositors who will then have confidence in the security of their deposits. But here this shareholders' bank is going to have a capital of 5 crores, and we are going to entrust to it nearly 300 crores, or even more, of our currency assets which may increase to 400 or even 500 crores ; in addition there will be large public deposits amounting to crores again, and then Provincial Governments and public bodies will also necessarily bank with the Central Bank ; and can all these crores be secured by this paltry capital of 5 crores ? What then is the idea of this shareholders' bank ? From every point of view it is altogether unacceptable and ought to be rejected by this House. But the mystery why Government insist on it remains, and I will attempt to solve it. In the shareholders' bank in addition to the Governor and Deputy Governor some of the Directors also will be nominees of the Government and the remaining 9 people will be elected by the shareholders. These last will be elected at a meeting which will be meagrely unattended. As Mr. Vidya Sagar has pointed out, the number of people who take an interest in the annual meetings is so small that practically the Governor and Deputy Governor will nominate the remaining 9 directors, most of those present will be their followers ; and the Board will be constituted as the Governor and Deputy Governor desire. The Governor and Deputy Governor under the Finance Member's brilliant idea are to be the nominees of the Government. They will owe their office to Government ; they will be the creatures of the Government. The moment they pretend to any independence they will be deprived of their jobs. (An Honourable Member : " Why "). Yes, there is no doubt about it. Therefore the whole body of directors will be virtually the nominees of the Government of India and the Secretary of State. And what will be the result ? The policy against which this country has been crying out for 30 years and more, which has been pronounced by a packed Commission to be wrong and undesirable, that policy will be continued as it is under the screen of a so-called independent shareholders' bank. That is the mystery behind the insistence on a shareholders' Bank. In another portion of his book Mr. Hartley Withers points out that the directors, customers and depositors in a bank are mainly merchants trading on borrowed capital ; these people will never have the courage to stand up against the Governor and Deputy Governor on a point of policy. For if they do so, as Mr. Hartley Withers says, the next time they want accommodation they will be met with a frigid and discouraging countenance. And I would like to see in this world the commercial man who will have the courage to oppose the Governor and Deputy Governor who hold the strings of his solvency in the hollow of their hands.

Mr. Kikabhai Premchand : The same thing will happen with the other directors too.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I am not quite prepared to say it will not happen, but I am glad you admit it will happen under this. That is the greatest condemnation of a shareholders' bank. Mr. Kikabhai himself admits that this thing will happen in the shareholders' bank.

Mr. Kikabhai Premchand : But it will be the other way too.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : The " same thing " means " this thing will happen ". (Laughter.)

Mr. Kikabhai Premchand : I did not say that.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : If there is any meaning in language, it means you admit, now because your conscience is not being educated, (Laughter) that this thing is sure to happen in a shareholders' bank.

Sir, I am sure I have convinced this House that for all these reasons the idea of a shareholders' bank has only to be stated to be rejected. Sir, if there is to be no shareholders' bank, the substitute is provided in the Joint Select Committee's Report. We have heard from the Finance Member the most severe condemnation of that part of the scheme of the Joint Select Committee. I am here to maintain, and I am sure I shall do so to the conviction of this House, that in the present circumstances of this country, the scheme of the personnel of the Board of Directors evolved by the Joint Select Committee offers the only safeguard against such a bank drifting into the conditions which I have described in regard to a shareholders' bank. Believe me, Sir, even a State Bank has no charm for me unless it is a State Bank under national control : a State Bank without national control is a shareholders' bank minus the capital. Therefore, even a State Bank, unless it is controlled in the interests of the nation, is not acceptable to me, and I hope it will not be acceptable to this House. The Joint Committee's scheme, Sir, I submit, is a most moderate scheme ; in this country it is impossible to have a control which is fully national. (Mr. N. M. Joshi : " Why ? ") Because the House will not accept it ; the House is not national on the whole ; and it was not possible for us in this Joint Committee to secure national control in the full sense of the word. In any country outside India the question would never arise as to who should be the directors. The Germans may be a very competent body of financiers and bankers (some of them are). Dr. Schacht is supposed to be the greatest banker in Germany and one of the greatest bankers in Europe, but he would never, however clever he is, be elected a director of the Bank of England. In the Bank of England only Englishmen will be elected (Laughter), I mean or ' Scotchmen ' will be elected directors, because they belong to the same country. I will say, " Britisher "—a Britisher alone will be allowed, no Frenchman, no German and of course no Indian ; however clever Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas is, he can never hope to be a director of the Bank of England (Laughter), and Mr. Kikabhai may rest assured he will never be one. I of course do not even aspire to it. But, Sir, my point is that in the Bank of England no man but a Britisher can become a director. In Germany the same will be the case. I have also got with me the text of a statutory provision about the Irish Currency Board which says that only those who reside in that country will be eligible for election to that Board. (An Honourable Member : " Reside "?) Yes, reside, not be birds of passage like you, reside as bona fide traders, citizens and subjects who want to make India their home, not as visitors for the purpose of making money or a career and then going off to England. In this country, however, we have to say that because the British have financial interests in India they must find a place on the Board of this Bank. There are many Germans with financial interests in America, but no German will be admitted to be a director because he has financial interests. I have got a letter from a gentleman very well acquainted with Wall Street financial operations. He is in touch with the best bankers and statesmen of America. He himself is a great financier. He writes to warn me about the personnel of the Board of Directors of this Bank. (Honourable Members : "Who is he ? Name, Name"). Why should you want to have the name ? It is enough that he is a big man, a financier acquainted with the best brains, bankers and statesmen in America. He knows what is going on there, and writing to me about this Reserve Bank, he refers to one Mr. Paul Warburg. (Mr. Kikabhai Premchand : "Who" ?). Mr. Paul Warburg—you don't know even the name ? Mr. Paul Warburg is the author of the Federal Reserve Board ; the great scheme of the Federal Reserve Board, for which America is so celebrated to-day, was due to his initiative, and the President of the United States offered him during the war the post of Governor of the Federal Reserve Board. But he was a Jew of German extraction, and although settled in America, he said the prejudice against his German origin would be so great that for any financial disaster which might overcome America, he would be charged with having German sympathies and with having brought about that disaster. "Therefore in the interests of America I am not going to remain on the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Board" said Mr. Warburg.

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Is the Honourable Member aware that Mr. Paul Warburg was for many years a member of the Federal Reserve Board ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : But is he aware of this—which is more important—that he refused to accept the Governorship of the Federal Reserve Board because he was of German extraction ? And that shows that he must have understood the feeling in America that foreigners are not wanted. But here in this country we had to provide, I am ashamed to say in the Joint Committee we had to provide, that the European commercial interests must be represented. It is therefore, I say, a moderate scheme. If we had our way, there would not have been a single European on the Board of Directors of this Reserve Bank. That would have been the straightest and the most direct course for any country to follow, but under our moderate scheme we had to accept two representatives of European commercial interests, and, further, we had also to accept the Governor and Deputy Governor as Government nominees. Then, again, Sir, we gave Government the power of nominating two Indians, so that there will be even under the Joint Committee's Report two nominees of the Government as Governor and Deputy Governor, two nominees who will be Indians and two Europeans—and the Government guard their interests and they guard the interests of Government. Thus under this scheme of the Joint Committee, practically six representatives of Government, will be on the Board of Directors. Then we said "Having provided six for you, give us at least a majority of Indians whom we can trust, and whom we can elect according to our best judgment." We have provided that there will be two representatives of Indian commercial interests ; in addition three will be elected by the Central Legislature, through its elected Members, and three more will be elected by the elected Members of the various Provincial Councils and one will be elected by the co-operative banks. In addition to that there is going to be an officer of the Finance Department of the Government of India who will have no vote ; although we have only 9 out of a body of 15 which are elected by representative institutions, the Finance Member says that he cannot accept that under any circumstances. Why, Sir ? This Reserve Bank is not a private bank. It is to be charged with the custody, safety and control of the currency reserves of this country. The currency reserves of a country are for the safety of the note issue and the stability of exchange. Is there anybody in this House who will tell me that only commercial men are interested in this ? Stability of exchange and the safety of note issue are not subjects in which commercial men only are interested. Every humble man, every villager who has got a rupee, every petty clerk who has got a five-rupee note in his pocket, is equally interested, because the safety of the five-rupee note, the stability of exchange of the money he has got in his pocket, will depend on this bank. Therefore this bank is not an institution where the so-called qualified commercial men should alone be represented. Sir, as this Reserve Bank is to be entrusted with the safety and custody of our note issue and the stability of exchange, on which depend the stimulus to production, the safety of trade, and the improvement of the social life of the nation, when these very things, the foundations of a well organised State depend on this bank, when not the dividends of a few petty shareholders, not the speculation of capitalists and multi-millionaires, but the safety of the small savings of the villager and the petty clerk depend on the personnel of the Board of Directors of this bank, why on earth, may I ask, should these men be kept out of the Board of Directors ? Sir, the Joint Select Committee did the wisest thing in having a Board of Directors who will look after the interests not merely of the commercial men, not merely of the capitalists, but of the humble villager, the petty clerk and everybody who has got a coin or a note in his pocket.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : And of the tinker and the tailor.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Yes, it should be representative. The tailor as a constituent I want, not as master. You want to make the tailor my master. I want him as a fellow citizen. I repeat that the Joint Committee did the wisest thing in having a Board of Directors who will look after the interests of the agriculturist, the trader, the clerk, the poor man, the man in the street, the wage-earner and everybody ; and these Legislatures,—next to the Indian National Congress,—these Legislatures are the only bodies which represent public opinion in this country. I say here with the greatest confidence that if the Indian National Congress was given the power, the Board of Directors constituted will be the most competent and most efficient body that ever could be thought of in this country. But I know it cannot be expected in a Joint Committee of this House and the other House. Therefore, we had to turn to the Legislatures. Government have created the electors, franchise is fixed by them ; voters' lists are framed by them. There you find agriculturists, income-tax payers, householders, those who pay rent, wage-earners, everybody is represented on the roll of electors of the various Legislatures, and the chosen representatives of these people represent all interests not merely political interests as is being suggested. This House is not a mere political body. It does not deal merely with political questions. This House deals with political, military, industrial, social and commercial questions ; every conceivable interest of the nation is considered and finally adjudicated here. Yet, why should it be branded as merely a political institution ? Because Government know that if this House was given the power, if elected Members only were given the power, then the game would be up. That is the real objection. Otherwise, Sir, the local and the Central Legislatures are under the present conditions the best custodians of the country's interests. We may be politicians, but it is wrong to say that on a non-political issue we cannot bring to bear a non-political outlook. It is a libel ; it is calculated defamation, and is done with the deliberate object of throwing mud at the people's representatives. I claim, Sir, that the Joint Committee evolved a scheme under which you could constitute a Board which will be independent, reliable, and representing every interest in the country. But the Finance Member is dead against it ; he has carried on a campaign against it. For the last 10 days this House is convulsed with the various moves and counter-moves. We find that there was a conference at Viceregal Lodge with the best intention to find out a solution. The object of the conference was very laudable. But, I submit, Sir, that the intervention of the head of this Government in so controversial a matter, however well intentioned, is a grave constitutional impropriety. Sir, the Governor General has to assent to a Bill before it is placed finally on the Statute-book. He has to make up his mind whether he should give his assent or not ; and if he is made a partisan before the Bill is considered in this House, grave consequences will ensue jeopardising the confidence of the country in the impartiality of the head of the administration. It was a most improper course adopted by busybodies. The House will resent this. The Viceroy was made, I am afraid, a catspaw by officious men. This grave constitutional impropriety will, I hope, never be repeated—the intervention of the third party to legislation who is finally to assent to every piece of legislation. I am glad, Sir, I was not a party to it. Only an accident saved me. (Laughter.) Thus, Sir, for the last 8 or 10 days we have been in this great difficulty. The Finance Member would not hear of election by the Legislatures although I say they are the best and most competent bodies. Well, I am bound to give him an alternative. If he is genuine in his protestations that he made yesterday ; " If you simply eschew the Legislatures ", he said, " I am willing to have a Board with an Indian outlook, Indian majority and so on ", I am prepared to give an alternative if he is willing, if he is really in a mood to give us an independent elected majority on the Board of Directors of this Bank. Sir, the municipalities and district boards of this country represent all interests. The local boards represent the agricultural communities in the widest sense of the term ; they are in touch with local life and local interests in all parts of India ; the municipalities of this country are in touch with the city life of this country in all its aspects. I say, Sir, if the Government are willing to substitute an equally effective personnel of Board of Directors of this Bank in place of the Legislatures, here is an alternative which I am offering them for consideration, namely, that the elected Presidents of the local boards and the municipalities in every province be constituted into an electoral college and they elect one man from each province on the Board of Directors of this bank. In this way every class of people will be represented on the Board of Directors.

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

The elected heads of these bodies in each province constituted as an electoral college to elect one representative will be, in my opinion, the only effective substitute for what is really the best scheme, namely, the election by the Legislatures. I hold that Legislatures would have been the best, but if you must reject them, here is an alternative which, in my humble opinion, is an effective substitute if you want an independent Indian Board.

Sir, I have now disposed of the most contentious part of the Joint Committee's Report and I will only touch on one or two more points before resuming my seat. The first is the constitution of the reserves as adopted by the Joint Committee on the principle of proportional reserves. Sir, I am not in favour of them. I stand for the fixed fiduciary system : every civilized country, so long as it has not reverted to a state of barter, must have a certain minimum volume of currency which will always remain in circulation and which will never come for conversion into gold. Therefore, you might treat that minimum as a fixed fiduciary amount not requiring gold backing. Against that currency you can have securities of a corresponding amount. That will be the fiduciary portion of your reserves. That will never come for conversion into metal. You can fix the fiduciary amount as large as you like taking into account the rise of prices, the state of development of the country and all other considerations, but when you have done so, you should have all other notes backed by gold cent per cent. That is what is called the fixed fiduciary system. The superior merit of that system has been amply demonstrated ; while currency in most parts of the world, except perhaps America for which there are special reasons, could not stand the strain of the war, it is only the currency of England, based on the fixed fiduciary system, which could return to the gold standard earliest in spite of its great travail during and after the war. To-day, if England has a gold standard, I say it is due to this fixed fiduciary system. England is called the banker of the rest of the world because there you can at any time have gold for any credit instrument that you present. Why should not the system which has been the admiration of the entire world to-day be instituted in this country, and why instead should we be asked to adopt a system which the bankrupt nations of the world are compelled to resort to ? I will develop this question more when my amendment comes up for discussion in the House. But, in the meantime, the House ought to take a warning that these proportional reserves are dangerous. They are devices of the post-war Reserve Banks of Europe ? The bankrupt European States want loans from England and America and a beggar cannot be a chooser. Because they want money they have to accept any terms on which the creditors would lend them the money. The proportional reserves which the Reserve Banks are adopting in Europe are due to the fact that, unless they did so, neither England nor America would give them loans. Why should India follow them ? Do not be under the misapprehension that the fixed fiduciary system has been played out and that this new-fangled system is the last word in currency wisdom. The fixed fiduciary system has been tested by experience and has since the war been investigated three times on behalf of the Bank of England and found satisfactory. The Honourable the Finance Member who asks us to adopt these proportional reserves will not be surprised when I tell him that he was a member of one of those committees which upheld the fixed fiduciary system. He will have to explain to this House why with his signature on the report upholding the fixed fiduciary system he recommends the proportional reserve system to this country ? On the report of that Committee, dated the 3rd December 1919, the fourth signature is that of " Basil P. Blackett ". This document endorses the findings of a preliminary report stating that the fixed fiduciary system based on the Bank Charter Act of 1844 is the safest and the soundest.

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : For England.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Very well. The House will take note of that qualification. If it is the safest for England, why do you not recommend the safest course for India also ? The Finance Member attaches his signature to a document in which he affirms that the fixed fiduciary system is the best and yet, for reasons which we have yet to understand, he says India should not have gold cent per cent. against its notes. We will be very pleased to hear from him the reasons for this change. But until then the House will understand that the Finance Member speaks with two voices—one for India and the other for England. The fact is, England wants gold. I have got heaps of papers showing that England wants gold, more gold and nothing but gold. Under the system of reserve which is to be adopted in this country 40 per cent. is to be gold coin, gold bullion, gold securities ; and gold securities may be one-half of that 40 per cent. after the end of the tenth year. It means that if we have 400 crores of currency notes and rupees in circulation, we will have 160 crores of gold and gold securities, out of which 80 crores of gold securities may be kept in England or elsewhere, but in England mainly. This could not have been accomplished, under present circumstances by the Secretary of State for India without arousing bitter opposition and protest. It is, therefore, sought to be done with our consent in the name of a sound reserve system. I trust, Sir, the House will realise that the fixed fiduciary system is the best and not the proportional reserve system.

Now, Sir, I want to refer to the grave breach of faith which the.....

Mr. President : Order, order : If the Honourable Member is not fortunate enough to catch the eye of the Chair next time, he must thank himself.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Now, Sir, I only want to draw the attention of the House to the grave breach of faith which the Honourable the Finance Member has committed. I am not privileged to tell the House what happened in the Joint Committee, but now its Report is before the House. The Committee recommended that Government will not sell the silver in the currency reserves except in circumstances of extreme necessity. He accepted the recommendation of the Committee and before the ink was dry on that acceptance and before we reached our homes from Calcutta, we read in the newspapers that 42 lakhs worth of silver had been sold to the great detriment of the holders of silver and rupee securities in the country.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, a personal charge like this requires an immediate answer. What the Joint Committee said was that the Government should be cautious in selling silver. I was at considerable difficulty at that time because I knew we were selling silver cautiously, but to say that there is any charge against me for agreeing to something which I did not agree to is not correct and I object to it strongly and can only characterise it as something that ought not to be said in this House. (Applause from the Official Benches.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : The Honourable the Finance Member may charge me with what he likes. That is his habit when he has no real explanation for his actions. The Report is before the House. Let the Honourable Members read what the Joint Committee has recommended and what the Honourable the Finance Member has agreed to, and I would be surprised if they do not come to the same conclusion. Yesterday the Honourable the Finance Member was in a fighting mood when he said that the scheme of the Joint Committee was a monstrosity. In my opinion that scheme is the best. His scheme, as I have already said, seeks to maintain the existing control of the Government of India and the Secretary of State under the guise of an independant shareholders' bank. It is the same old jackdaw in peacock's feathers. Sir, with these words, I agree to the motion that the Report of the Joint Committee be taken into consideration.

Sir Alexander Murray (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated non-official) : Sir, I have listened with very great interest and a good deal of profit to the speeches delivered on both sides of the House. I have listened to the Honourable the Finance Member protesting that there is very little difference, only one or two points, between him and the other side. I have listened to speakers strongly differing from that statement. Undoubtedly there have been changes made in the Joint Committee, changes in the form of capital, changes of constitution, changes regarding coinage and other minor details, which are debatable but not worth referring to at the present moment The Minutes of Dissent also indicate that all parties are not of one mind and differ rather materially ; but I will leave it to the Leader of the House to deal with the gentlemen on the other side. I would, however, like to make one or two remarks regarding some of the statements made yesterday by my Honourable friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. The Pandit, in particular, referred to Professor Keynes and said that in 1913 he advocated a State Bank for India. Now it is quite true that in pre-war days, the Professor did use the words " State Bank " and drew a distinction between the form of Central Bank in force in England and the type of Bank on the Continent. But I do not think that what he had in view was the form of a State Bank that is particularly referred to here to-day as distinct from the ordinary Central Bank with shareholders' capital which we are accustomed to now-a-days. The Pandit also relied on something that my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas has said in his minority report. The Pandit paid a tribute to the knowledge of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas regarding currency and exchange matters as shown by the report. I would like, Sir, to associate myself. (Hear, hear), with what the Pandit has said. I was for six or seven months closely associated with him, seeing each other almost every day, and I can assure you, Sir, that I have never met anybody who tried to get at the root of the problem and who worked out each detail for himself in the manner Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas did. I have sat on more than one Committee with him and all I can say is that whenever there is a committee to be constituted in which both sides of a question must be closely looked into and in which both points of view must be carefully considered, I do not know anybody whose name would occur to me sooner than that of my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.

Mr. President : That is not the question at issue.

Sir Alexander Murray : The Pandit said that Sir Purshotamdas advocated a full-fledged State Bank. With all due respect to the Pandit, I must say that Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas did nothing of the kind. He advocated converting the Imperial Bank into a full-fledged Central Bank. I would like here to refer to the actual words used by Sir Purshotamdas. He said :

"Whilst fully appreciating the reasons which have induced my colleagues to propose the creation of a new Central Bank, and recognising that this is perhaps the ideal system, in the special conditions of India, I am of opinion that the ends in view for as far ahead as we can see will be better served by developing the Imperial Bank of India into a full-fledged Central Bank".

I agreed with a good deal of what Sir Purshotamdas said in his minute of dissent as regards a Central Bank for India. For instance, in particular, I entirely agree with Sir Purshotamdas in this sentence, which is the only sentence in which he refers to State as distinct from Central or Reserve Bank or anything else. He says :

"It is admitted that in India none but a State-aided bank has either found it possible systematically to develop branches, or is likely to be able to do so in future".

That is to say, in order to develop branch banking in India, it would be necessary in my Honourable friend's opinion to give State aid, and as a matter of fact I also hold the same opinion, and it is for the reason that I am somewhat disappointed that the Joint Committee in their wisdom thought it advisable to cut down the provisions that have been made for State aid being given to the Imperial Bank with a view to continuing their programme of developing branches in India. My Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas' main objection, as I understand it, to the Imperial Bank and the Central Bank operating side by side in India was that we would have two banks fed by Government funds to a great extent. My Honourable friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya used the same argument. Let us see, Sir, what that amounts to ? The recommendations of the Joint Committee which have been approved by them are to the effect that the Imperial Bank for twenty years should be allowed the use for the first five years of 3 crores interest-free, for the next five years of 2 crores interest-free and for the next five years of 1 crore interest-free while in the second period of five years, they also were to get one crore subject to two per cent. interest, for the third term of five years they were to get two crores subject to two per cent. interest and in the last term they were to get three crores subject to two per cent. interest. Now, what are the facts. The Government must keep their cash balances in some bank and in the past they have been keeping them in the Imperial Bank. Ordinarily they would keep them in the Reserve Bank whenever it is constituted. My Honourable friend, Mr. Kelkar, yesterday asked for figures from the Honourable the Finance Member who referred him to the blue-books. I have looked up the blue-book to which Mr. Kelkar was referred and I find given there the figures of the cash balances belonging to the Government of India held in the Imperial Bank during the years 1924-25, 1925-26 and 1926-27. These are the monthly averages 21 crores, 16 crores and 20 crores, apart altogether from the balances in the Government Treasuries, spread over the last three years. That means that there was loose cash in the Imperial Bank of India belonging to the Government of India averaging each month a sum of 19 crores. Now, what is it that is suggested that the Reserve Bank should give to the Imperial Bank in future ? It is suggested that they should have an average of 1½ crores interest-free and 1½ crores interest-bearing per annum. What are 3 crores per annum out of an average of 19 crores per annum which is the monthly average that lies in the Imperial Bank. There are three parties affected apart from the Imperial Bank ; there is the Government, there is the public and there is the indigenous banker. Now the Government suffers no loss because in the past they have been accustomed to carry 19 or 20 crores every month free of interest.

4 P.M.

The public are suffering no loss for the reason that they presumably are getting money cheaper than they would otherwise be doing, and the only party who suffers, as far as I can see, is the indigenous bank. I agree that the indigenous bank does suffer to a certain extent, though ultimately it probably benefits as a result of the increased banking facilities that come through the free use of this money being given. It was because I agreed with Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas as to the necessity for State aid being given to some bank or another to continue ordinary banking, the development of ordinary banking that I was strongly in favour of the Imperial Bank being allowed to carry on that work apart from the Reserve Bank, and it was on this point that Sir Purshotamdas and myself differed for the first time as regards the Imperial Bank and the Central Bank. You may have noticed that in the interesting minute of dissent of Sir Purshotamdas which extended to 153 paragraphs, only 4 paragraphs are devoted to the question of the Central Bank of India, whereas in the Report of the rest of the Members of the Commission, more than one-third of their Report is taken up with the question of the Reserve Bank and the best means of giving effect to the idea of a Central Bank in India. I think it is apparent on the face of it that there was pretty general agreement between Sir Purshotamdas and the rest of us as regards banking in India, the only difference between us being whether the Imperial Bank should be converted into the Reserve Bank, as Sir Purshotamdas desired, or whether we should have an entirely new Reserve Bank. Now, I would like to give you some of the reasons that influenced myself in thinking that it would be a mistake to carry on the Imperial Bank as the Reserve Bank. The Imperial Bank is the successor to the old Presidency Banks, the Bank of Bengal, the Bank of Bombay and the Bank of Madras. These Banks for over 100 years the Bank of Bengal goes back to the beginning of last century and the others to the early part of that century—these Banks have done a good deal for banking in India. Banking in India consisted mainly of three branches. There were the Presidency Reserve Banks which I have named ; there were the Exchange Banks, and there were the indigenous banks. Now, in 1921, the Presidency Banks were amalgamated in order that there might be a Central Bank. These words you will find in the debates that took place in 1921 in the old Council. The intention was that the Imperial Bank should be made a Central Bank ultimately, and I personally tried to persuade myself that it was only right that the Imperial Bank should be carried on as a Central Bank. But when I came to details I found that it was impossible. As one Member of the Commission said when we spoke of the amalgamated Presidency Banks and wondered whether it would be possible to recreate them with a view to allowing the new Imperial Bank to go on as the Reserve Bank, it was easy to scramble eggs, but very difficult to unscramble them after it had been done. If you can conceive, Sir, the Imperial Bank being converted into a Reserve Bank, and nothing else taking its place in the ordinary banking system of India, we will have a new Reserve Bank in the air and with the old Presidency Reserve Banks and their successor dropped out, nothing between the Reserve Bank up in the air and the Exchange Banks and the indigenous banks down below. That may be all right from the Exchange Banks' and the indigenous banks' point of view, but I personally could not bring myself to see that it was in the best interests of India that a void should be created, that all the Presidency Banks and their successor, the Imperial Bank, should be wiped out and nothing left to take their place. It was for that reason that I—in particular held the opinion that it was advisable that the Imperial Bank should continue as a Commercial Bank and that we should proceed to look round for other means of creating a Reserve Bank.

[Sir Alexander Murray.]

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : What was the precise disadvantage ?

Sir Alexander Murray : Turning now to the reasons for supporting a shareholders' bank, several Members on the other side, my friend Pandit Malaviya in particular, referred to Norway, Sweden, Denmark France, Belgium and Germany and made remarks which really are not borne out by the history of these banks as I read them. Norway, Sweden and Denmark have still pre-war banks and I may deal with them later. The case of France, Belgium and Germany is different. Speaking of Germany, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta made a statement that I would like to correct at once. He said that no foreigner would be allowed to be a member of the governing body of the German Bank.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I spoke of the Federal Reserve Bank mainly.

Sir Alexander Murray : I think the Honourable Member spoke about the German Bank.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I spoke of many banks including the German Bank.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : And in particular referred to the German Bank.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : If what I mentioned was incorrect, I stand corrected.

Mr. President : Order, order.

Sir Alexander Murray : May I say, Sir, that the constitution of the German Reichsbank provides for a governing body of 14 members, and one of these 14 at the present moment is an Englishman, Sir Charles Addis, who came and gave evidence before the Royal Commission. The Honourable the Finance Member has put Mr. Jamnadas right regarding the Federal Reserve Bank.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : May I correct Sir Alexander Murray ?

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member has any personal explanation to make, he must wait till the end of Sir Alexander Murray's speech.

Sir Alexander Murray : He also said that he did not think that the Bank of England would for a moment consider the possibility of any Indian born subject becoming a member of the Board. Personally I do not believe for a minute that if the conditions warranted it the Bank of England would object to having a Bombay born or Indian born member on their Board. They would certainly have him, if otherwise acceptable. My friend Mr. Jamnadas also referred to Canada —to Canada and Ireland, I think, in particular. Ireland is a country that stands by itself. Professor Parker Willis, who came over there as Chairman of the Committee that inquired into the possibility of creating a Reserve Bank for Ireland, decided that the size of the country and the trade done in it did not justify the expense involved in the formation of a Reserve Bank, and personally, I agree with Professor Parker Willis. I am amazed that my friend should compare the small trade done in Ireland with the big trading business in India. I am not an Indian in the sense Mr. Jamnadas is, but I do say there is no comparison between India and Ireland as far as trade and commerce are concerned. He also referred to New Zealand and specially to Canada where the very same interests are at work in preventing a Reserve Bank being formed as have been at work here for the past 100 years, or 90 years at any rate. In 1836 it was suggested that there should be a Central Bank in India, and vested interests turned it down. In Canada, I think there are 16, or may be 12, chartered banks operating, each one guaranteeing the other's notes, and I think the vested interests were too strong there to allow of the Reserve Bank being created. We next turned to Australia and South Africa as well as the other parts of the Empire before going to America for the form of Reserve Bank that might be suitable to us. Mr. Jamnadas Mehta was frank enough to confess that there is no Reserve Bank in Australia, and that is perfectly true, though I have seen it stated in the Press and elsewhere that Australia has a State Reserve Bank. That is not the case. I may quote here the statement made by Mr. Bruce, the Premier, when he was at home, that it was an ordinary trading bank and not a State Bank in the form in which we desire to see created a Central Bank for India. Turning to South Africa, we have been told that we ought not to copy South Africa, because it has not been a success—the Reserve Bank there. As a matter of fact, South Africa never had a chance. The constitution of that Bank was framed by a Committee of the House of Representatives without the addition of anybody else to that Committee. I ask you, Sir, suppose we were invited in this House—with due respect I believe that Members of this House do know as much about currency and finance as members of the House of Representatives—suppose we had been asked to frame a constitution without expert opinion or advice, we would have made pretty much the same mess of it as the people in South Africa. (At this stage Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya made a remark which was inaudible at the Reporters' table.) I was speaking of the constitution of the Committee. The Reserve Bank of South Africa carried on for a few years and found that they could not function properly. They brought two experts out to see what should be done to improve the working of the Bank. We had the benefit of reading their report and their evidence and a perusal of these documents is of considerable value. As a matter of fact, South Africa is comparatively a small country, compared with India. There are two big banks trading there, the Standard Bank of South Africa and the National Bank of South Africa now absorbed in

[Sir Alexander Murray.]

Barclay's Bank, and there the same old vested interests that stood in the way of a Reserve Bank for Canada stand in the way of the proper functioning of the Reserve Bank in South Africa. Although the Bank started in 1921, it was only during the last twelve months ending the 31st March 1927, that the Reserve Bank was given the Government balances which one would have thought to be the first thing that a Reserve Bank would have got in any country. Therefore, when people say that we ought not to copy anything that was done in South Africa, I agree that the conditions are quite different, but I do think that we are entitled to draw from the experiences of that Bank and the reports of the experts who came from other countries with a view to revising the constitution—we are entitled to draw assistance from them with a view to making recommendations as to what should be done in this country.

We then turned to America and found there a great deal in common between the two countries. America is a very big country ; so is India a very big country. America has its own particular problems as regards agriculture and the financing of agriculture ; so have we in India these problems. America has had its banks for over 130 years ; so has India its banks for over 150 years. The First Bank of the United States of America had Government capital and Government interests in the Bank, and the Second Bank there had Government capital and Government interests which continued till 1836. In the same way here, the old Bank of Bengal had Government capital and Government interests in the Bank. I believe I am right in saying that the Bank of Bombay and the Bank of Madras had Government capital and that, down to 1876 or something like that, Government held a share of the capital invested in banks in India and had a right to appoint directors to these banks Therefore, we were starting more or less on parallel lines, big countries, big turnovers, agriculture, big spaces to cover, Government moneys invested in the banks in both countries and then withdrawn, only banks with shareholders' capital functioning for the past 50 or 60 years or more in both countries. We were very fortunate. We could not go to America ourselves, but we got across men who certainly knew what they were talking about. Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, came across, and he brought with him Professor, Sprague and Professor Hollander, men who have made a deep study of the subject. He also brought the statistician of his Bank to give all the figures that they had at their disposal. Over and above, Mr. Roberts, the Vice-President of the National City Bank of New York, not a Reserve Bank but an ordinary Joint Stock trading indigenous bank—I think I am right in saying that the name of that Bank is now included in the Schedule of banks that are going to deal with the proposed Reserve Bank—Mr. Roberts, Vice-President of that Bank, came across and his evidence was very interesting. He compared India with America and he said that he had been approached in 1913 when they came to form the Federal Reserve Bank and he expressed the opinion that one Central Reserve Bank for the United States of America was the right thing. He also thought that one Central Bank in India with branches in the different sections was the right thing to do. But the people in the States did not accept his advice. They said that the country was so large, the interests were so varied, the seasonal demands for crops were so heavy that they should not have one Central Reserve Bank but 12

Reserve Banks. They have 12 Reserve Banks in the United States with a Central Board for these Banks in Washington. We proceeded to make a recommendation that in India we also should have one Reserve Bank only, but we suggested that there should be three local boards, three regional banks, following the example in America where they have got 12 instead of 3. We recommended that in Bombay and also in Madras and Calcutta there should be local boards which would function and create an interest in the Reserve Bank and help to keep the interest alive all over India. The Government of India and the Joint Committee in their wisdom have not agreed that there should be local boards they have suggested that there should be one Central Board and that in Bombay. I accept that recommendation myself, but I think it probable it will prove to be not on right lines. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya cited the cases of Norway, Sweden and Denmark and said that we ought to have a constitution such as they have, because there particular members of the Boards are nominated by the Legislature. In this connection I would point out to the Honourable Pandit that there is a difference between those countries and India. In those countries everybody in the Legislature is elected and the parties are either in power or out of power. If a party is in power and wants to do something with which the other party disagrees it is possible for the latter party to get into power and to bring up its own scheme and have it passed. With all due respect, in India that is not the position Here we have the Government in control and we have the Opposition. The elected Members here normally are in a state of opposition and it is only natural that they should be in a state of opposition.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Not necessarily.

Sir Alexander Murray : Well, very largely. I think that is a distinction between the Legislature in India and Legislatures at home where the responsibility must go with the party in power and if another party comes into power it in turn takes the responsibility. Here we have an opposition which does what it likes. We can indulge in destructive criticism and we have the power to cause a good deal of trouble without any responsibility attaching. Therefore, I say it is not right to make a comparison between what is done in Norway and Sweden and what may happen in our own particular case where only a limited number of the House is elected.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : We have the power and responsibility to legislate.

Sir Alexander Murray : I admit there is a distinction. The Pandit in particular made reference to the fact that at the present moment the Government of India and the India Office between them are responsible for the finances of India. He said, and I agree with him thoroughly, "For goodness' sake do not take away one of these safeguards, namely, the India Office, and leave us entirely in the hands of the Government of India." I quite agree with the Pandit. But see what he has suggested. He suggests—" put us in the place of the Secretary of State."

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : We want to nominate three directors.

Sir Alexander Murray : Yes, to be nominated by elected members only : what about an unfortunate man like myself who is a nominated member of this House as the result of an election by the Associated Chambers of Commerce. I do not know whether the Pandit was really talking for all the parties on his side of the House. As a matter of fact in the province that I come from, the leader of a particular party has just been asked if he would help to form a party in order to carry on the Government and he has refused. I do not know whether the other Members on his side of the House are prepared to endorse what my friend Mr. Malaviya said when he suggested that the elected Members of this House ought to take the place of the India Office so far as control of the Imperial Bank and its functions is concerned.

[Sir Alexander Murray.]

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I wish to correct a statement.....

Mr. President : Order, order. Sir Alexander Murray.

Sir Alexander Murray : Now, personally, I would like to have a shareholders' bank. I am entirely in favour of the shareholders' bank but since I came back to this country and had an opportunity of discussing the points at issue, I have realised that the mentality of the leading Indians is such as to make the vocal general opinion in India against the shareholders' bank.

Mr. Malaviya referred to railway State management. Now, there is a difference between railway State management and banking State management but all the same, in deference to the opinion that generally is held in India on this question, I think myself that I should not press any longer for the shareholders' bank, although I still think it is the best form. The point at issue here is not between State and shareholders. It is really between State and vested interests. Mr. Chetty was very clear, on this point in his speech this morning. Personally I felt rather hurt at some of the things Mr. Chetty said regarding non-official European business men. He would exclude them at any price from any say in the Bank. Later on he softened the blow by saying that he was quite prepared to exclude Indian capitalists also. I would like here to take strong exception to the general tenor of Mr. Chetty's remarks on this question of what he called the foreign capitalist. He also went as far as to say, if I remember aright, that he did not agree that the best man should always be chosen for any post. In particular, he said regarding the Governor of the Bank if the best man were to be chosen it might result in a Czecho-Slovakian being put in. I do not know why Mr. Chetty should have pitched upon a Czecho-Slovakian. There is no doubt that Czecho-Slovakia is one of the best run countries in Europe. President Maszarik and his chief Minister Dr. Benes are two of the cleverest men in Europe.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : That is exactly the reason why I referred to Czecho-Slovakia.

Sir Alexander Murray : I am very glad to hear it. I hope he did not make that remark by way of reproach. I would like to point out that so long as India is an integral part of the Empire and till such time as you are, shall I say, entirely self-governing, I do think that in matters of this description it is but natural that if there is an Englishman, or even a Scotsman or an Irishman who is suitable let us not really go to Czecho-Slovakia or to Russia or to any other country outside the Empire. Now, on this question of vested interests, I feel very sore. Mr. Chetty seems to think that we Europeans have no business interests in India, indeed no business to be in India at all. The firm with which I am associated has been in India for nearly a hundred years. We have very large interests in India. We are interested in jute mills, tea gardens, mines, timber—I would not like to enumerate all our interests. We have in our employ many thousands of people whose daily life depends on the management of the particular firm with which I am connected. And that is not a big firm as far as Calcutta goes. There are one or two firms even bigger. I only mention to you that we have been in the country for about a hundred years and when a man like myself has been nearly 30 years in the country surely we are entitled to a certain amount of consideration when it comes to expressing opinions as to how a Reserve Bank should be run or any other public body in which we are all interested.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Do your interests get that consideration in America ?

Sir Alexander Murray : In that connection Mr. Jamnadas Mehta made a reference to municipalities. I would like to tell him that I was a member and Chairman of a municipality as far back as last century and I have been for 16 or 17 years continuously serving in municipalities. I think that is an additional argument for saying that surely it is very hard on firms such as that with which I am associated that Mr. Chetty and other gentlemen on those Benches should think that we are not to express our opinions, still less to take an active part in the management of the public bodies in India.

Mr. R. K Shanmukham Chetty : I rise on a point of personal explanation.

Mr. President : Personal explanation cannot be given unless the Honourable Member gives way.

Sir Alexander Murray : With pleasure, Sir.

Mr. Jamnadas, M. Mehta : We have many more to offer

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not entitled to make a second speech.

Mr. Jamnadas, M Mehta : I want to correct some mis statements.

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member chooses to make strong speeches he must be prepared to hear strong replies.

Mr. Jamnadas, M. Mehta : I submit that we are entitled when mis-statements are made to contradict them. (Cries of " Order, order " from certain parts of the House.) What " Order, order ". I am submitting it to the Chair.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member will resume his seat. He has been told to wait till the end of the Honourable Member's speech

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : I did not intend to convey that the non-official European community in India should not have a voice in all these matters. What I object to is to their having a complete control in these matters. I said that the predominant control over the Reserve Bank in India must vest in Indian hands. That is what I said.

Sir Alexander Murray : I accept the statement from Mr. Chetty. I do not feel quite so sore about it now as I did. I am sorry that I allowed my feelings to carry me farther than was advisable, but one cannot help feeling these things after being associated with the country for so many years. I would like to turn now to the question of the type of Bank we ought to have. Assuming that I defer to the opinions of my friend Mr. Malaviya and others that the Bank ought not to be a shareholders' bank, I still think that we ought to have a Reserve Bank of some description. The Pandit referred us to the opinions of my esteemed friend Sir John Bell. Now, I agree with everything he says regarding Sir John Bell, the great experience which he has and the weight which ought to be attached to his views. He said in his dissenting minute :

[Sir Alexander Murray.]

"While the establishment of a Reserve Bank in India may be regarded as an ideal to be achieved in the future, I am not convinced that the present is an appropriate time."

Now, as I have said already, that has been said for the last 90 years. It was said in 1836, it was said in 1867, again in 1898, and it has been said down to the present time. And the Exchange Banks say the same thing, the indigenous banks say the same thing, all the vested interests say the same thing, and I am sorry that with all the weight I attach to Sir John Bell's point of view I cannot accept that point of view. Another point he has made is :

"It is true that the immediate establishment of a Reserve Bank has been recommended by the Currency Commission, and, if this recommendation be accepted, I think it would be better to give effect to it by transferring the Currency Department of Government to the Imperial Bank, and allowing that institution, at least for a period of years, to carry out the functions of a Reserve Bank."

Now, that is aslo what my friend Sir Purshotamdas has been saying, and it is quite natural. It is just the same old process. What will happen here is what has been happening in Australia. This House will set up the Imperial Bank as a Central Reserve Bank ; they will find it is not functioning properly, and they will come along later on and say, "Oh, the Imperial Bank as now constituted is not functioning properly as a Reserve Bank ; we shall have to decommercialise it." And before we know where we are we shall be in the position to which I referred in the earlier part of my speech. You will have the Imperial Bank entirely decommercialised and ending up in becoming nothing but a pure Reserve Bank. That might serve some particular interests but I cannot say it is the interest of India as a whole. And nothing that anybody can say will convince me that you can take out of the banking system of India the Imperial Bank as now working as the successor of the old Presidency Banks and still have an efficient banking system in India. For that reason I am strongly against any more of this putting off and putting off and allowing perhaps other 50 years to elapse before we have a Reserve Bank. Let us have a Reserve Bank of some decription now. It is for that reason I would appeal to Honourable Members to come to an understanding on this point. As far as I can judge from my conversations with my friends .....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member need not refer to private conversations in this House.

Sir Alexander Murray : I am sorry. I would like to say that as far as I understand the position, the elected Members of this House would like to appoint three members out of the 16 members of the directorate. Now three members are not a lot, and when it comes to appointing them I suppose we will probably find that one at least must be a Muhammadan.

In these days it is only right. I take it that another one must be a Parsi, in the light of the extraordinary knowledge of economics and finance which the Parsis in India have. So we are reduced to no more than one to represent the Hindus and the Sikhs and the Englishmen and Scotchmen and Anglo-Indians. Now surely to goodness we are not going to allow the negotiations for a Reserve Bank to break down on this question of the election of one, two or three men. I personally am prepared to consider any proposition put before me that will provide reasonably for the representation on the Bank not only of the particular interests of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Karachi and the big towns, but also of the interests of the hinterland, so to speak, of the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, the Punjab and all those other parts of India that we in the big towns do not hear much about and which really deserve to have their special interests protected every bit as much as those in the big towns. In the course of the debate a good deal of reference was made yesterday to monstrosities. I think the Leader of the House started it and I think my friend the Pandit took it up. I think it is simply monstrous myself that a word of that description should be attached even as a very loose label to the negotiations which are now going on for a Reserve Bank. I think India ought to have a Central Bank. As I have said, the question has been debated for years and it has been turned down again and again. The Bombay people and the Madras people combined against Bengal away back in the sixties I think to turn down the proposition for an amalgamated Central Bank. Then we amalgamated the Presidency Banks into the Imperial Bank in 1921, with a view to having a Central Bank, and I personally will be very disappointed if we do not have our Central Bank now. Reference was also made yesterday to what the world thought about us. The Leader of the House made the reference and the Pandit referred to it. Now, personally, though it is my misfortune to be only a non-official European business man I am as jealous of the fair name of India as any Indian born Member of this House or any Indian outside this House, and I do think that we in India with all our great interests are entitled to have a Reserve Bank that will rank in the same class as the Reserve Banks of other countries. It may be that the American Reserve Banks are suitable, or the South African Reserve Bank, but in these days it is necessary to have a Central Reserve Bank, and I appeal to this House to make an earnest endeavour to have a bank and not to be influenced by the putting off tactics of anybody who suggests that we ought not to have a Reserve Bank of any description. It is for that reason I cordially support the motion before the House that the Report of the Joint Committee be taken into consideration. And if the Bill as now before us, amended in Joint Committee, is not suitable, surely amongst a body of men such as we are it will be possible to make alterations that will meet the wishes of the people in the House. (Applause.)

Mr. President (to Mr. Jamnadas Mehta) : The Honourable Member will confine himself to a mere statement of fact in making a personal explanation, and not attempt to make another speech.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I wish to contradict a mis-statement by Sir Alexander Murray.

Mr. President : If it is not a personal explanation, then Honourable Member has no right.....

(At this stage Mr. Jamnadas Mehta remained standing and was called to order by the Chair and several Members.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Cannot I contradict a mis-statement ? Sir Alexander Murray said, challenging my statement, that there was no restriction in the German Reisch Bank against foreigners and.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is replying to the speech.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : He is wrong.

Mr. President : He may be wrong, but the Honourable Member is not entitled to give a reply.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : In this constitution of the German Bank which I hold in my hand it is said that the President and members of the Board of Management of the Bank must be German nationals.

Sir Alexander Murray : There are 14 members of the Governing Body of which 7 are nationals elected by nationals and 7 are foreigners, one of whom is Sir Charles Addis.

Mr. President (to Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta) : Anything more ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : That is all. I maintain that I am right.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think the Honourable Member has got hold of an old constitution.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I have the latest, that of 1924.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I can assure the Honourable Member that there is no doubt in the matter.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 31st August, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 31st August, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BENGAL DETENUS.

651. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly give the names of the Bengal detenus, and the provinces in which they are confined at present, together with a statement giving their weights when arrested, and their present weights ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I will communicate to the Honourable Member the names of those persons at present detained in jail under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act. I am afraid I cannot undertake to give the information asked for in the remaining part of the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member as to why he is not in a position to give the other information ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Because I do not consider it would be to anyone's advantage to do so.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Does not the Honourable Member consider that it is to the advantage of this country that it should know how these detenus are being treated ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I regret very much I cannot add to the answer I have already given.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the real reason why he is not prepared to give the information is that these detenus are being very badly treated ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Has the Honourable Member any objection to telling us whether they have lost weight or not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already said that I regret I cannot add to the answer I have already given.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he will give us any reasons why he cannot add to his answer.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think I have already done so.

RENTING OF PRIVATE BUNGALOWS AT DINAPORE BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY FOR THEIR NON-INDIAN EMPLOYEES.

652. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway authorities have rented private bungalows at Dinapore for the accommodation of their non-Indian employees ? If so, what is the total amount of rent which is paid on this account per month ? Why is a similar privilege not extended to Indian employees ? If bungalows have been rented for the Indian employees, what is the total amount of rent per month ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The required information is being obtained and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask when the Honourable Member received notice of this question and how long he has been taking to obtain this information ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot say off hand when notice was received, but it would take a considerable time to collect the information asked for.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he will be pleased to indicate when he instituted these inquiries ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As soon as the question came to me.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will this information be laid on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I expect the statement will be much too long. But if there is any desire in the House as a whole to have the information, I am quite prepared to put a copy of it in the Library.

REMEDYING OF DEFECTS AT BAIDYANATH DHAM ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

653. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that Baidyanath Dham (East Indian Railway) is an important place of pilgrimage and also a health resort, and is visited by a large number of pilgrims and visitors ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is no raised platform at the station, and that this is a source of considerable inconvenience and danger to the passengers, specially women and children ; and that there is no waiting room either for male or female passengers ?

(c) Is it also a fact that there are no arrangements for drinking water, and the lights during the night are insufficient both in the trains and at the station, which causes accidents, and risks of accidents and thefts ?

(d) Do Government propose to take the necessary action to remedy the defects complained of ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am bringing the suggestions in the Honourable Member's question to the notice of the Agent, East Indian Railway.

MOHMAND DISTURBANCE ON THE FRONTIER.

654. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government kindly give the causes and an account of the Mohmand disturbances on the Frontier in June last, and the part played by the land force and the Royal Air Force in suppressing them ?

(b) What was the number of casualties on both sides ?

Sir Denys Bray : The origins of the Mohmand disturbance are obscure. But they appear to be traceable to a concerted aggressive movement against the Maliks of certain loyal sections under the sustained agitation of a well-known Mullah. Their unexpected resistance brought a rival Mullah upon the scene, whose fanatical preaching succeeded in assembling a tribal lashkar, twelve to fifteen hundred strong. It crossed the administrative border on the night of June 5th and attacked the blockhouse line, despite clear warnings from us that any attack on the district would be at once met by bombing from the air. Orders were accordingly given to the Royal Air Force to disperse the lashkar ; and within 36 hours they did so. This striking success was achieved with surprisingly few casualties. The lashkar lost, it is believed, 15 killed and 16 severely wounded. The Royal Air Force had no casualties at all. Ground troops were held in readiness at Shabkadar and Shankargarh, but owing to the rapid dispersal of the enemy it was not found necessary to bring them into action.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it the policy of the Government of India that they should use aeroplanes to bomb men who are not in a position to resist with equal force the forces of the British Government ?

Sir Denys Bray : Certainly, Sir, if they attack the British Government

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask whether it is a civilized method to employ against these unarmed people ?

Sir Denys Bray : My Honourable friend is under a complete misapprehension if he thinks a tribal lashkar is unarmed. And I would point out at any rate in this particular case that the operations were amazingly humane. The casualties, as I said, were amazingly few. I have never known myself a tribal lashkar of this size attacking British India and being dispersed with so few casualties on their part.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I do not wish to ask question No. 655.

†655.*

NUMBER OF TIMES THE POWERS OF VETO AND CERTIFICATION HAVE BEEN USED SINCE THE INTRODUCTION OF THE REFORMS.

656. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly state how many times the powers of veto and certification have been used since the introduction of the Reforms, with respect to the actions of the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State separately, and the occasions on which the powers were used ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : Under the head " Powers of Veto " I understand the Honourable Member to refer, first, to the power conferred on the Governor General by sub-section (2-a) of section 67 of the Government of India Act to direct that no proceeding shall be taken by a Chamber of the Indian Legislature in relation to a Bill, clause or amendment which affects the safety or tranquillity of British India or any part thereof, and, secondly, to the power of the Governor General to withhold assent from a Bill passed by both Chambers of the Indian Legislature. No use has been made of either of these powers. The power of certification conferred by section 67B of the Act has been used on four occasions, particulars of which will be found in the statement which I lay on the table.

---

† Not asked by the Honourable Member.

Statement of cases in which the power of certification under section 67B has been used.

Serial No.	Name of Bill.	Occasion for use of Power.
1	The Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Bill, 1922.	Refusal by Legislative Assembly of leave to introduce.
2	The Indian Finance Bill, 1923 ..	Failure by Legislative Assembly to pass Bill in form recommended by Governor General.
3	The Indian Finance Bill, 1924 ..	Ditto.
4	The Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Bill, 1925.	Ditto.

PUBLICATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE SKEEN COMMITTEE.

657. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly state why the report of the Sub-Committee of the Skeen Committee, which visited Europe, etc., has not yet been published, and when will it be available ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer which I gave to Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru's starred question No. 512.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether any one of those witnesses who came before the Sub-Committee said that the evidence they were giving was confidential ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That has been answered by me already. No witness said so to the Sub-Committee.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member what objection the Government of India could have to the publication of the evidence ?

Mr. G. M. Young : It is not a question of the Government of India's objection but of the authorities under whom those official representatives served, that is, His Majesty's Government.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that this is a report of a Sub-Committee appointed by the Government of India, and that the Government of India are perfectly competent to issue this report if they so desire ?

Mr. G. M. Young : It is not a fact that the Sub-Committee was appointed by the Government of India.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask whether it is not a fact that the Sub-Committee is a Sub-Committee of a Committee appointed by the Government of India, and that therefore the Government of India are perfectly within their rights in publishing the evidence if they so desire ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That, Sir, is perfectly true.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, who was the authority that intimated to the Government of India or to the Skeen Committee the procedure that they should not disclose the information that was submitted to them and who acquiesced in it ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The fact intimated to the Government of India was that certain material laid before the Sub-Committee was confidential.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know who is the authority that said that it should be treated as confidential.

Mr. G. M. Young : The authority was His Majesty's Government.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether, if it were a fact that the material was confidential, the witnesses themselves would have said so ? Have they said so ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already twice informed the House that the witnesses did not say so to the Sub-Committee, as far as I am aware.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that the Sub-Committee itself recommended publication and that they are the best judges in this matter ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The first part of the question, Sir, I have already answered. The second is a matter of opinion.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if the Sub-Committee was informed that His Majesty's Government had decided that this material should be treated as confidential, and that therefore they should not do anything to get it published ?

Mr. G. M. Young : They were not so informed.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether it is not a fact that this question relates to the report of the Sub-Committee, and that the Home Government objected only to the publication of the proceedings without their consent ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir. I have already given very full information, on all these questions. The Home Government, referring to the material laid before the Sub-Committee, said that it was confidential, and, as regards the publication of the report, the Government of India, in consultation with the Home Government, decided not to publish the report.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do I understand that the Government of India then also objected to the publication of the report and not merely the Secretary of State for India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I cannot disclose the details of the discussion. The fact is that, as the result of a consultation with the Secretary of State for India, the Government of India decided not to publish the report.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether it is not a fact that the entire responsibility for the non-publication of the report does not rest with the Home Government ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that the publication of the Sub-Committee's report will be damaging to the Government case ?

INSPECTIONS OF COMBINED OFFICES IN THE GAYA DIVISION BY THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POST OFFICES AND THE TELEGRAPH TRAFFIC OFFICER.

658. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to question No. 97 of the 9th February 1925, will Government be pleased to state the number of inspections of combined offices, made by the Superintendent of Post Offices, and the number of inspections made by the Telegraph Traffic Officer in the Gaya Division (Bihar and Orissa) in 1926-27 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to give the names of those combined offices in Bihar and Orissa which are not required to be inspected at all by a Superintendent of Post Offices ? And is it not a fact that even important combined offices like Gaya, Ranchi, Jamshedpur, etc., are also required to be inspected at least once in a year by the Superintendent of Post Offices ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) 15 by Superintendents of Post Offices. 3 by the Deputy Postmaster-General, Traffic.

(b) A list will be given to the Honourable Member. This is a list of single-handed combined offices which are ordinarily inspected by Postal Inspectors and, if the necessity arises, by a Postal Superintendent.

The reply to the latter part of the question is in the affirmative.

DISTRIBUTION OF TELEGRAPH TRAFFIC WORK AMONG THE SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

659. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it not a fact that all Telegraph Traffic work originating in a circle office is distributed from there among the Superintendents of Post Offices for action and report ? If so, what arrangements are there in the Divisional offices for dealing with such cases ? Does not a separate section for Telegraph Traffic work exist in each circle office for the disposal of the very work, which is actually distributed among the Superintendents of Post Offices ?

(b) Do Government propose to take any steps either to check the distribution of Telegraph Traffic cases among the Superintendents of Post Offices, or to provide at least one clerk with Telegraphic Traffic qualifications in each Divisional office for dealing with such Traffic cases ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The fact is not as stated. Only cases calling for local enquiry are so distributed.

The staff of the Divisional Offices is calculated with reference to all the work, both postal and telegraph, which has to be dealt with.

The system of maintaining a separate section for telegraph traffic work in each Circle office is being abolished.

(b) Government do not admit the tendency referred to nor do they propose to make the provision suggested.

RATES OF ANNUAL INCREMENTS OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES AND FIRST CLASS POSTMASTERS.

660. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to question No. 315 of the 7th February 1927, will Government kindly state if the rates of annual increment in the pay of Superintendent of Post Offices, and first class Postmasters were not the same from 1910 to 1925 ?

(b) Is it not a fact that when the time-scale of pay was introduced, the same rates of annual increments were fixed in the pay of both classes of officers ?

(c) On what grounds have increments of Rs. 30 for first class Postmasters and Rs. 20 for Superintendent of Post Offices now been sanctioned ?

(d) Has there been any increase or decrease in the responsibilities and work of the two classes of officers owing to which the present differential rates of increment have been introduced ?

(e) Is it not a fact that a Superintendent of Post Offices has to inspect a much larger number of offices, and to control a much larger number of subordinates than first class Postmaster, but still the former gets the lower rate of increment, and the latter gets the higher rate of increment in the pay ?

(f) Is it not a fact that all first class Postmasters get free quarters, whereas Superintendents of Post Offices have to pay rents for their quarters ?

(g) Do Government propose to consider the question of equalizing the rates of increment in the pay of the two classes of officers ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) They were not the same.

(b) No.

(c) The increment in the scale for the first class Postmasters was raised from Rs. 20 to Rs. 30 in consideration of the fact that Postmasters do not usually attain gazetted rank until late in their service and in consequence very few of them could expect to rise to the maximum of the old scale.

The posts of Superintendents are filled partly by direct recruitment from outside the Department and partly by selection from the subordinate ranks, and generally speaking the incumbents of these posts pass the whole or greater part of their service therein. In these circumstances it is obvious that the scale of pay appropriate to Superintendents can have no relation to that sanctioned for gazetted Postmasters. It may be pointed out that the increment in the Superintendents' scale is Rs. 20 in the earlier and Rs. 25 in the later years of service.

(d) No.

(e) Generally speaking yes, but there are exceptions.

(f) Yes, because first class Postmasters are required to live on the post office premises in the interests of the service.

(g) No. The existing scales of pay were fixed by Government after a careful review of all the circumstances of the two classes of officers.

Haj Pilgrims.

661. *Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Will the Government please state the number of the Hadjis who are British subjects and went to the pilgrimage this year, and how many of them came back to the Indian shores ?

(b) Will the Government please state the number of the Hadjis who are British subjects and perished on account of scarcity of water and other hardships of the journey ?

(c) What steps, do Government propose to take to draw the attention of the Government of the Hedjaz to remove these inconveniences in future ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) 27,568 Indian pilgrims sailed from Indian ports. The return sailings are still incomplete, but so far some 20,000, of whom the bulk are Indians, have returned to India.

(b) The mortality among Indian pilgrims is reported to have been 1,800 or a little over 6 per cent. About 200 of these are believed to have perished at Mina, where shortage of water was reported ; death was due in almost all cases to senile debility or heat prostration, the shade temperature during the actual Haj being 124°. High though the death rate on this year's pilgrimage, it is understood to be among the lowest on record.

(c) His Majesty's Consul is continuously on the watch for opportunities to further the interests of Indian pilgrims.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What more falicities do Government propose to offer to British subjects going on pilgrimage ?

Sir Denys Bray : I am not sure that I have followed the gist of the Honourable Member's question ; but so far as facilities on the journey to and from the Hedjaz are concerned, perhaps he will address his remarks to my Honourable friend Mr. Dalal.

†662.*

GRANT OF SPECIAL ALLOWANCES, CORRESPONDING IN AMOUNT TO THE OVERSEAS ALLOWANCES DRAWN BY OFFICERS OF NON-INDIAN DOMICILE, TO INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

663. Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : With reference to the Overseas allowances first introduced in the scales of superior officers sanctioned in 1919-20 :

Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) On what principle the Government allowed to Indian officers already in service at the time on State Railways the same rates of rupee overseas pay as were sanctioned to officers of European domicile on the same scales and with the same service ;

(b) Whether, if the Government are satisfied that the principle followed by them is fair and equitable, they issued clear and definite instructions to the Company-worked Railways, when they sanctioned revised scales of pay with overseas allowances for those Railways, that the same principle should be followed in respect of rupee overseas pay to Indian officers, at least in those cases where the conditions of service for Indian and European officers were similar to those on State Railways ;

(c) Whether on the South Indian Railway in fixing the initial rate of pay of the various officers under the revised scales of 1920 with overseas allowance, the rate of pay was shown in the figure without showing basic pay and overseas pay separately ;

† Not put at the meeting, but the question and answer to it will be found at page 3732 of these proceedings.

(d) In the absence of a clear indication as stated above, whether or not initial pay included overseas pay in individual cases, what principle was followed by the South Indian Railway in fixing the initial pay of Indian and European officers respectively with reference to overseas allowance ;

(e) Whether in connection with the acting pay drawn by certain Indian officers acting in the District grade, the Government Examiner, the Agent, and the Home Board decided after a full discussion of the subject that the pay drawn under the revised scale by Indian officers in service prior to 1920 did not include any element of overseas allowance ;

(f) Whether it is a fact that on a subsequent representation from the Agent in 1922, the Home Board sanctioned in the case of Indian officers already in the service of the South Indian Railway Company, at the time of the introduction of the new scales, the grant of special allowances with effect from 1st January 1920 corresponding in amount to the overseas allowances drawn by officers of non-Indian domicile ;

(g) Whether when the allowances had been drawn by the Indian officers, the Home Board ordered a retrenchment of a portion of the amount drawn, on the ground that the initial pay already fixed for the Indian officers under the revised scales included an element of the overseas allowance, though this ruling was in direct contravention of the ruling of the Board on the same subject referred to in question (e) above ;

(h) What were the amounts retrenched in each case and the method of recovery adopted ;

(i) Whether it is a fact that during the previous revision of the scales of superior officers in 1908-09 certain European officers of the Medical Department whose initial pay had been admittedly by an error notified in excess were allowed to draw the increased rate of pay though the error had been detected before (and not after as in the present case) it had been actually drawn ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) As prior to the introduction of the overseas pay the European and Indian officers in the Railway Services were drawing the same scales of pay, it was considered that Indian officers in service, at the time overseas pay was introduced, should be granted overseas pay or its equivalent.

(b) The Government Resolutions on the subject were communicated to the Company-worked Railways.

(c) The scales of pay sanctioned for the different classes of officers of the South Indian Railway showed basic and overseas pay separately.

(d) Officers of non-Asiatic domicile were granted pay on the scale applicable to such officers. Indian officers, in service at the time these rates of pay were introduced, were granted the rates of pay of their substantive grades on the scale applicable to officers of non-Asiatic domicile.

(e) to (i). Government have no information.

ARREST OF SARDAR DIWAN SINGH, EDITOR OF THE Riyasat OF DELHI.

664. Mr. B. Das : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the recent raid made on the office of the Riyasat, an Urdu newspaper at Delhi, and the arrest of Sardar Diwan Singh, the editor of the paper at the instance of the Patiala State and his subsequent release by the Special Magistrate at Delhi, the details of which are published in the Hindustan Times of July 29, 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the alleged offence for which Sardar Diwan Singh was arrested had taken place thirteen years ago when he borrowed Rs. 300 from a private individual ?

(c) Is it a fact that such proceedings were taken before a formal complaint was lodged in a judicial court either in Patiala or in British India ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state if the Magistrate of Delhi permitting this police search and arrest satisfied himself that a court of law in the Patiala State had taken cognisance of the offence ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer this and the next question together.

(a) Government have seen the report referred to.

(b) The alleged offence took place in January 1916.

(c) No complaint was lodged in the Delhi Province, the offence alleged being in the Patiala State. Government have no information as to the proceedings in the Patiala State.

(d) The permission of the Magistrate was not required, the procedure followed being that laid down in Rule 26-7 of the Punjab Police Rules, 1915.

EXTRADITION PROCEEDINGS AGAINST SARDAR DIWAN SINGH, EDITOR OF THE Riyasat OF DELHI.

665. Mr. B. Das : Have extradition proceedings been started before any Magistrate at Delhi against Sardar Diwan Singh ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The answer is in the negative.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : With regard to No. 664 (c), is it a fact that the complaint was lodged three years ago ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information to that effect

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : As regards 665, is it a fact that Colonel Vincent refused extradition proceedings three years ago for the same criminal complaint ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : With regard to that also, I have no information.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether the Honourable Member saw a statement to the effect in the papers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that Sardar Diwan Singh wrote a series of articles against the Patiala State in the newspapers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have heard the allegation.

U. Tok Kyi : What is the nature of the offence committed by Sardar Diwan Singh ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not prepared to say that any offence was committed by him.

U. Tok Kyi : May I ask, Sir, if he is not a British subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware of that.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, if, having obtained the information that a search warrant had been issued, the Government will now enquire whether there is any attempt to start extradition proceedings against this person ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think it necessary to make any enquiry as to whether there is any intention to take extradition proceedings. If the authorities of the Patiala State propose to take extradition proceedings, they will doubtless do so according to law.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask if it is a fact that three years ago similar proceedings were taken and extradition was refused ? Would the Honourable Member not interfere in this matter now and protect the rights and liberties of a British subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must point out to the Honourable Member that extradition proceedings may involve proceedings of a judicial character. The Honourable Member seems to invite executive interference in proceedings of a judicial character.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that no judicial proceedings were taken against Sardar Diwan Singh and that the search took place without any materials being placed before the Magistrate ? Therefore it lends colour to the allegation that it is executive action and not judicial action that has taken place in this case.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member seems to be confusing search proceedings and extradition proceedings.

Diwan Chaman Lall : All that I am driving at is this. May I ask whether it is not clear to the Honourable Member, as it is clear to me, that since no actual judicial proceedings were taken or alleged to have been taken that action was taken against Diwan Singh ? Therefore it lends colour to the allegation that it was executive action and not judicial action that was taken.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that is more an argument than a question.

†666*—671.*

ISSUE OF PASSES OVER THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY DURING CHRISTMAS.

672. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) With reference to the reply given to question 1192 (b) on the 25th March 1927 that there is no religious differentiation with regard to the issue of passes during Christmas on the East Indian Railway are Government aware that the Agent of the East Indian Railway issued a circular in October, 1926, to the Agents of other railways that " the issue of second, intermediate and third class free passes to Indian employees—other than Indian Christians—for journeys over this railway between the 14th of December, 1926 and 14th of January, 1927, inclusively, should be withheld " ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3732—34 of these proceedings.

(b) Did the Agent of the East Indian Railway state in the above mentioned circular that " any applications for passes to non-Christian Indians in urgent or exceptional cases should be referred to this office with a statement of the special circumstances of the case " ?

(c) Was it further stated in the circular that " a special restriction will be imposed on applications from the Indian staff of this Railway for passes over your railway for the period under reference " ?

(d) Is it a fact that this circular is renewed every year ?

(e) Is it a fact that there is another circular which prohibits the issue of passes during Christmas for pilgrimages ?

(f) Were these circulars issued with the knowledge or consent of Government ?

(g) What were the reasons which made the East Indian Railway, which is a Government line, take the lead in suggesting religious discrimination in the issue of passes during Christmas ?

(h) Do Government propose to take any steps and, if so, what steps to convey its displeasure to the Agent of the East Indian Railway and to stop the practice of giving preference to Christian over Hindu and Muhammadan employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b), (c) and (e). Government have ascertained that the East Indian Railway Administration issued the circular letter mentioned to all railways, with which they interchange passes, regarding the issue by those railways of passes at Christmas to their employees over the East Indian Railway, and since the East Indian Railway had applied this restriction to other railways they imposed a similar restriction on their own employees wishing to travel on other lines. The reply given to the Honourable Member's previous question related to the issue of passes at Christmas time to East Indian Railway employees only for journeys over the East Indian Railway only and not over foreign lines, and I regret that this was not explained at the time, as it was not then known to Government. The exact position is that in view of the heavy public traffic over the East Indian Railway at Christmas time, East Indian Railway employees, whatever their religion, cannot get passes over the East Indian Railway unless the issuing officers are fully satisfied that the withholding of a pass to any individual during this period would cause real hardship ; and it is in this connection that the reference to pilgrimages in the Agent's notification, mentioned in part (e) of the Honourable Member's question, which is applicable only to the East Indian Railway, occurs. That is to say, a mere assertion that an employee wishes to go on a pilgrimage will not justify the issue of a pass unless the individual can show that refusal of a pass would be causing him real hardship. Further, the employees of other railways can, under the first circular mentioned in the Honourable Member's question, only get passes at Christmas time over the East Indian Railway if they are Indian Christians or if the Agent of the East Indian Railway in urgent or exceptional cases agrees to their grant ; and employees of the East Indian Railway can only get passes over other railways on the same condition.

(d) Yes.

(f) No.

(g) and (h). I do not think this restriction on passes in the interests of the public travelling over the East Indian Railway can be described as religious discrimination. It is no doubt unfortunate that it should not be possible to give to Indian Christians the same facilities for visiting their relations or families at the time of their great religious festival as it is ordinarily possible to grant to the members of other religions on similar occasions ; but the grant of passes must be subordinated to the needs of the travelling public.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask, Sir, whether the Agent of the East Indian Railway informed Government that there was such a circular in existence when he told them with reference to the question I asked in March last that no religious discrimination was made in the issue of passes.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir, because he was not asked for that information. The Honourable Member's previous question referred to the issue of passes by the East Indian Railway. This particular mention of Indian Christians occurs merely in a circular letter regarding the issue of passes not by the East Indian Railway but by other railways to the employees of those other railways. The answer given before by the East Indian Railway, and the answer given in the House either by me or by Sir Charles Innes was quite correct ; though had we had the information at that time that it only referred to local passes, we should of course have given that information to the House.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Does the Honourable Member mean to say that, while the East Indian Railway itself makes no religious discrimination, it asks other railways to discriminate between Christian and non-Christian employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, Sir. It withdraws during Christmas time, for traffic reasons, particular concessions to the non-Christian employees of other railways which are in force during other periods of the year.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the Honourable Member aware that the previous question of mine to which he has referred asked only whether religious discrimination was made in the issue of passes to non-Christian employees during Christmas and not at other times ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The previous question to which the Honourable Member refers was as follows :

" Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway does not issue passes to non-Christian employees during Christmas ? "

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Does the East Indian Railway, then, generally refrain from giving passes to its non-Christian employees during Christmas or not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The East Indian Railway, as I have explained, generally refrains from giving passes either to its non-Christian or to its Christian employees during Christmas time.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Does the circular state that or does it only single out non-Christian employees for that treatment ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The circular does not mention any distinction between the Christian and non-Christian employees. It runs as follows :

"In view of the heavy demand for passenger accommodation in the Railway's mail, express and passenger trains during the Christmas holidays, the issue of free passes to Railway servants, their families or dependants between now and the 5th of January should only be made when issuing Officers are fully satisfied that the withholding of passes during this period would cause real hardship. Passes required merely for the purpose of sight-seeing or pilgrimages during this period should not be given."

The Honourable Member will observe that no distinction is drawn in this circular between Christian and non-Christian employees of the East Indian Railway in the issue of passes by the East Indian Railway.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask the Honourable Member, Sir, whether in reply to my question he did not accept the accuracy of the quotation that I gave in part (a) of my question, and may I ask him the date of the circular from which he has read out just now ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : In reply to part (a) of the Honourable Member's question to-day, I admitted the accuracy of the quotation given in his question and explained that it occurred in a circular relating to the issue of passes not by the East Indian Railway but by other railways to the employees of those railways. The date of the circular I have just read out to the House is the 18th December 1926.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : How is it, then, that during Christmas, while the East Indian Railway asked other railways to discriminate between Christians and non-Christians, it subsequently issued a circular which does not mention non-Christians specifically ? Is it not to be inferred from it that the policy to be acted upon is the one mentioned in the circular issued in October 1926 from which I have quoted in my question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think, Sir, it will really be better if the Honourable Member will wait and see my reply in print. The position is exactly as I have explained it. Passes are withdrawn, except when real hardship is caused, from all employees of the East Indian Railway during Christmas time over their own railway. The withdrawal is not extended—I expect partly from motives of courtesy—to the Indian Christian employees of the other railways who can ordinarily grant passes over the East Indian Railway. I can only say that the Railway Board regret the necessity for this discrimination, if it can be called discrimination, against Indian Christians who, on their own railway, are not able to get those facilities at the time of their big religious festival which members of other religions can ordinarily get, because their religious festivals do not fall during a period of heavy traffic.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do the Railway Board, then, approve of this circular ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether any restrictions are imposed on Christian employees at any time of the year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I hope no restrictions are imposed on Christian or other employees of the railways except when the exigencies of traffic need them. I am perfectly sure that if the East Indian Railway found that the requirements of traffic at, say, the time of the Puja holidays made it impossible for them to issue passes in the ordinary way to all the servants of the railway, the restriction would be applied last to their Hindu employees.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know, Sir, whether Government have agreed to the policy of restricting the grant of passes only to non-Christian employees during Christmas and whether they think that there is no time of the year when restrictions should be imposed on other than non-Christian employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There is no policy of restricting the grant of passes to non-Christians during the Christmas holidays. I am afraid I have not been able to understand the Honourable Member's question.

OAKGROVE SCHOOL, MUSSOORIE.

673. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Do Government maintain the Oakgrove European School (Mussoorie) ?

(b) Is it meant exclusively for the children of the Christian employees of the East Indian and North Western Railways, or can children of non-Christian Indian employees of any class be admitted into it ?

(c) What is the total expenditure incurred on the school ?

(d) What is the scale of fees charged to its pupils ?

(e) Does the school submit any report periodically to Government ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay the latest report received by it on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) It is meant mainly for the children of European and Anglo-Indian employees of the East Indian and North Western Railways.

(c) The gross recurring expenditure in 1925-26 was Rs. 2,85,860. The Local Government contributed Rs. 29,000 towards this expenditure and the receipt from fees and other sources amounted to Rs. 1,51,452. The net expenditure was Rs. 1,34,408.

(d) A statement showing the scale of fees is placed on the table.

(e) No report is now submitted to Government.

Statement showing the scale of fees at Oakgrove School.

The children of employees of the East Indian Railway are charged according to the following scale :

Children of parents.	One child Rs.	Two children Rs.	Three children Rs.	Four children Rs.	Each additional child Rs.
On pay of Rs. 210 and under	14	26	36	45	9
On pay of Rs. 211 to Rs. 324	19	34	48	60	12
On pay of Rs. 325 and over..	21	37	52	66	14

The boarding and tuition fee of children of employees of other Railways is Rs. 49 and for non-railway children Rs. 50.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : May I know, Sir, why are Indian students not admitted in this school ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It was not the purpose for which the school was originally started. I may add that proposals with regard to the future utilization of this school are, I believe, contained in the report of the Educational Officer on special duty in the Railway Board, which I have just received but have not yet had time to read.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether the Government would now call for a report in view of the large expenditure which is incurred from Government funds on this school ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not think it is necessary to call for a report from the school. We can wait till it is decided how the school should be utilised in future.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the objection of the Government based on the fact that full information is given in the annual railway report ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There is, I think, no objection on that ground. The reason is that there is no particular ground why the Railway Board should ask for a specific report from this school.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether there is any proposal under consideration for opening this school to the sons of Indian employees who are willing to pay the necessary fees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have explained that certain proposals have been made, I understand, in the report of the Educational Officer who is on special duty under the Railway Board. I have only just received the report and have had no time to read it.

EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

674. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) When is the report of the officer appointed to inquire into the facilities for the education of children of railway employees expected ?

(b) Is it a fact that the authorities of the railway schools have been given no opportunity of expressing their views in regard to the future of those schools ?

(c) Are Government aware that there is an apprehension in the minds of the Indian staffs of these schools that their position may deteriorate considerably as a result of the enquiry referred to above and the procedure adopted by the investigating officer ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Railway Board have just received it.

(b) They have not so far been consulted.

(c) The Railway Board have no reason to believe that this is so.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Government before taking action on the report consult the teachers in Indian schools who will be affected by it ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Probably not, Sir ; but I really cannot say.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Would the Honourable Member kindly repeat the answer that he has given just now ?

Mr. A. A. L Parsons : Probably not ; but I cannot say.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether there is any particular ground for not consulting them or for not giving an opportunity to them to make representations to Government ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is not usual to consult, on a matter of policy, officers who on the whole are in a subordinate position.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it not a fact that in other Departments of Government when any service is affected, that service is given an opportunity of making its point of view known ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot speak for the Departments of Government except my own.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is that policy foreign to the Railway Department ?

†675*—678*.

ALLOWING OF DOOLIES ON THE VARIOUS PLATFORMS AT DELHI JUNCTION.

679. Mr. Ismail Khan : Why are not ' Doolies ' allowed on the various platforms of Delhi Junction ? Are the Government aware that it is a source of great inconvenience to purdahnashin ladies ? Do the Government intend to remove this grievance ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given in this Assembly on the 27th January 1927 to question No. 51, asked by Maulvi Muhammad Yakub on the same subject.

PROVISION OF A REFRESHMENT ROOM AT MEERUT CANTONMENT STATION.

680. Mr. Ismail Khan : Why is there not a proper refreshment room at Meerut Cantonment station, although mail and express trains pass through it.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The question of providing refreshment rooms is a matter for the Agent of the Railway to whom a copy of the Honourable Member's question and this reply is being sent.

PROVISION OF BENCHES MARKED FOR EUROPEANS ONLY IN MEERUT CANTONMENT STATION.

681. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) What is the reason for keeping benches marked " for Europeans only " in Meerut Cantonment station ?

(b) Do Government intend to remove such distinction ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3734—36 of these proceedings.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The matter is being brought to the attention of the Agent of the Railway with a view to the removal of any such discrimination, if it exists.

†682*—684*.

ADMISSION OF STUDENTS WHO HAVE PASSED THE HIGH SCHOOL EXAMINATION IN DELHI TO THE GOVERNMENT COLLEGE, AJMER.

685. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are Government aware that the prospectus of the Delhi University states that the University will examine candidates from Ajmer-Merwara, Ambala and Rajputana for the Matriculation Examination, and that the students from Ajmer-Merwara acting on the provisions of the prospectus sat for and passed the Matriculation Examination of the Delhi University this year ?

(b) Are Government aware that Ajmer-Merwara and Rajputana are under the United Provinces Intermediate Education Board for the Intermediate Examination ?

(c) Are Government also aware that the United Provinces Intermediate Board have refused to allow these students to join the First Year College Class in the Government College, Ajmer, though the Board rules say (Chapter XIV—paragraph 4, Allahabad University Calendar) that students who have passed the Matriculation Examination of the Delhi University, may, after reading one year in a Delhi College, be admitted to the Second Year College Class in the Government College, Ajmer ?

(d) Are Government prepared to remove this disqualification and move the United Provinces, Intermediate Education Board to permit the Government College, Ajmer, to admit now into its First Year Class, students who have passed the Delhi Matriculation Examination and not compel them to read for one year in a Delhi College before they are admitted into the Second Year College Class of the Ajmer Government College ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) No. The Delhi University does not hold a Matriculation Examination. But students from the territories named by the Honourable Member who have attended no school whatsoever since 1st June in the year preceding the Examination may under certain conditions appear at the High School Examination conducted by the Board of Secondary Education, Delhi.

(b) Yes.

(c) The Principal of the Government College, Ajmer, has refused admission to students who have taken the High School Examination conducted by the Board of Secondary Education, Delhi, because the United Provinces Board of High School and Intermediate Examination has not recognised that examination.

(d) Government understand that the Board of Secondary Education, Delhi, are already in correspondence with the Board of the High School and Intermediate Education, United Provinces, on the subject.

---

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at page 3736 of these proceedings.

TEACHING OF HINDI AT THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE, DEHRA DUN.

686. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are Government aware that there are in the Dehra Dun, Prince of Wales' Military College about 30 Hindu students whose mother tongue is Hindi ?

(b) Are Government aware that while there are three teachers to teach Persian and Urdu, there is not a single teacher to teach Hindi to the students ?

(c) Is it a fact that there was some time ago on the staff of the College a qualified Hindi teacher, but that the post of that teacher has since been abolished ?

(d) Are Government aware that for want of Hindi teaching, the Hindu students of the College lose positions in the Sandhurst competitive as well as the diploma examination and that this has given rise to discontent ?

(e) Are Government prepared to remove this hardship, from which Hindu students suffer in the Dehra Dun Military College ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) There are 23 Hindus at the College. The mother tongue of 10 of them is Hindi.

(b) There are two regular teachers of Persian and Urdu, and one religious teacher (Maulvi) who can also teach Urdu. One of the religious teachers also teaches Hindi.

(c) One of the vernacular teachers originally appointed was qualified to teach Gurmukhi and Hindi. His successor is only qualified to teach Gurmukhi, and the teaching of Hindi has been assigned to one of the religious teachers.

(d) No, Sir. Government are informed that the arrangements for Hindi teaching are adequate. Hindi moreover is not one of the subjects in the Sandhurst Entrance Examination. There is therefore no question of cadets losing places for want of Hindi teaching in this examination.

(e) Government will consider whether any change is necessary in the interests of Hindi speaking students who take the diploma examination ; and I will inform the Honourable Member of the decision reached.

DISCONTENT AMONG THE RAILWAY STATION STAFF AT KHANDWA.

687. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are Government aware that there is great discontent among the Khandwa railway station staff owing to assistant station masters and others having to do 12 hours continuous duty ?

(b) Will Government state the strength of the number taking staff at that station and if there has been any reduction in it since May last.?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the number of porters employed at that junction station, who have to do the risky work of uncoupling vehicles in addition to all station work ? Are the Railway Administration prepared to give them some relief by increasing their number ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have had no intimation of any discontent among the Khandwa Railway station staff, and are not aware of the numbers of staff maintained at individual stations ; but they have sent a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, who will no doubt take any action that may be necessary.

LOCATION OF AN OFFICE OF CONTROLLER OF MILITARY ACCOUNTS AT SECUNDERABAD.

688. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state whether along with the move of the Poona District Headquarters to Secunderabad, it is contemplated to locate a Controller's Office there for the accounting and audit of military expenditure of that District ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer is in the negative.

ABOLITION, AS SEPARATE UNITS, OF THE OFFICES OF THE DISTRICT CONTROLLERS OF MILITARY ACCOUNTS AT MHOW, PESHAWAR, BANGALORE AND CALCUTTA.

689. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state whether under the centralization scheme of Military Accounts Offices, it is proposed to abolish, as separate units, the offices of the District Controllers of Military Accounts at Mhow, Peshawar, Bangalore and Calcutta ? If so, when are the proposed changes likely to take place ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer in the case of the first two places mentioned is in the affirmative, and in the case of the latter two places the answer, so far as can be foreseen at present, is in the negative. The dates of proposed changes in the case of Mhow and Peshawar have not yet been fixed, but it is possible that they will take place in the late autumn of this year, and in the spring of next year, respectively.

GRANT OF A HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCE TO THE CLERKS OF THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT IN POONA.

690. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is it a fact that the Government of Bombay have from 1st March 1926 sanctioned a house rent allowance in Poona to their subordinates ? If so, do the Government of India intend to give the same allowance to their subordinates whose revision of salaries took place before 1st March 1926 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I assume that the Honourable Member refers in his question to the subordinate establishments of the Military Accounts Department. The Government of Bombay have, I understand, sanctioned a house rent allowance for their permanent employees in Poona drawing pay up to Rs. 100 a month. The question of granting a similar concession to the clerks of the Military Accounts Department was considered by the Government of India and it was decided that there was no justification for granting the concession to them, as their rates of pay and allowances, conditions of service, etc., are not similar to those of the corresponding classes serving under the Local Government.

RETIREMENT AFTER 25 YEARS' SERVICE OF DEPUTY ASSISTANT CONTROLLERS OF MILITARY ACCOUNTS, ACCOUNTANTS AND CLERKS.

691. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state the total number of Deputy Assistant Controllers of Military Accounts, accountants and clerks who took advantage of the concession of retiring voluntarily after completion of 25 years' service on or before 31st May 1927 ? Simultaneously with the grant of this concession, were any extensions granted to the time expired servants in that Department ? If so, in how many cases and why ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : 4 Deputy Assistant Controllers of Military Accounts, 23 accountants, and 17 clerks, took advantage of the concession mentioned. Extensions of service were granted in the case of 2 Deputy Assistant Controllers and 1 clerk, on the ground that it is in the interests of the State to retain those individuals.

WITHDRAWAL AND SUSPENSION OF INCREMENTS OF PAY OF CLERKS AND ACCOUNTANTS OF THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

692. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to my unstarred question No. 137 of 1st March 1927, will Government please furnish now the information called for if it has since been obtained ?

GRANT OF PRIVILEGE LEAVE TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

693. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government please furnish the information called for in my unstarred question No. 139 of 1st March 1927 ?

GRANT OF PRIVILEGE LEAVE TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

694 . Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government please furnish the information called for in my unstarred question No. 140 of 1st March 1927 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : With your permission, I propose to answer questions Nos. 692—694 together.

The information was received and duly communicated to the Honourable Member. A copy of each of the letters with enclosures is laid on the table.

Copy of a letter No. 1271-E., dated the 15th March 1927, from the Financial Adviser, Military Finance, Delhi, to N. C. Kelkar, Esqr., M.L.A., 2, Ferozshah Road, New Delhi.

With reference to the adinterim reply given by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, on the 1st March 1927, to your unstarred question No. 137, regarding the withdrawal and suspension of increments of pay of clerks and accountants of the Military Accounts Department, I now enclose a statement containing the information asked for therein.

Statement containing the information asked for in Unstarred Question No. 137.

Name of office.	No. of cases in each Military Accounts office in which increments of pay already sanctioned and which the clerks and accountants were actually in receipt of were withdrawn or suspended between 1st January and 31st December 1926.	Number of cases in each Military Accounts Office in which increments due to Accountants and clerks were stopped or not granted during the year ending 31st December 1926.
Controller of Military Accounts—
Peshawar District	4	7
Northern Command and Rawalpindi and Kohat Districts	4	3
Lahore District	Nil.	3
Waziristan District ..	4	5
Eastern Command and United Provinces District ..	7	6
Allahabad Brigade Area ..	Nil.	2
Presidency and Assam District	1	1
Burma District	4	2
Southern Command and Poona and Bombay Districts ...	9	4
Madras District	Nil.	Nil.
Central Provinces District ..	Nil.	4
Western Command and Baluchistan District	12	Nil.
Sind Rajputana District ..	Nil.	1
Field Controller of Military Accounts, Poona	Nil.	Nil.
Controller of Army Factory Accounts	Nil.	5
Controller of Royal Air Force Accounts	2	4
Controller of Marine Accounts	Nil.	1
Military Accountant General's Office	Nil.	Nil.
Total ..	47	48

Copy of a letter No. 1298-E., dated the 17th March 1927, from the Financial Adviser, Military Finance, Delhi, to N. C. Kelkar, Esq., M.L.A., 2, Ferozshah Road, New Delhi.

With reference to the adinterim reply given by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, on the 1st March 1927, to your unstarred questions Nos. 139 and 140, regarding the grant of privilege leave to the Military Accounts Department establishments, I am directed to state that, so far as question No. 139 is concerned, there were no cases of refusal of privilege leave on medical grounds by Controllers of Military Accounts. In a few cases, however, medical certificates granted by Registered Medical Practitioners, were required to be countersigned by staff or Civil Surgeons.

2. As regards question No. 140, I am to enclose herewith a statement furnishing the information asked for.

Statement furnishing the information asked for in Unstarred Question No. 140.

Name of Office.	Number of applications submitted by Deputy Assistant Controllers, Accountants and Clerks for the grant of privilege leave on private grounds during the calendar year 1926.	Number of cases in which leave referred to in column 2 was refused.	Number of applications for leave referred to in column 2 favourably considered.	Remarks.
1	2	3	4	5
Controllers of Military Accounts—
Peshawar District	35	4	31
Northern Command, and Rawalpindi and Kohat Districts ..	68	Nil.	68
Lahore District	60	Nil.	60
Waziristan District	71	6	65
Eastern Command and United Provinces District	62	2	60
Allahabad Brigade Area ..	17	Nil.	17
Presidency and Assam District	21	Nil.	21
Burma District	13	3	10
Southern Command and Poona and Bombay Districts ..	74	1	73
Madras District	51	Nil.	51
Central Provinces District ..	32	3	29
Western Command and Baluchistan District	52	11	41
Sind Rajputana Districts ..	45	4	41
Field Controller of Military Accounts, Poona	10	Nil.	10
Controller of Army Factory Accounts	180	3	177
Controller of Accounts, Royal Air Force	26	Nil.	26
Controller of Marine Accounts ..	21	Nil.	21
Military Accountant General's office.	42	Nil.	42
Total ..	880	37	843

CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILWAY FROM TALEGAON TO MUNCHER IN THE POONA DISTRICT.

695. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state :

(i) whether the Railway Board has received any proposal from the Government of Bombay regarding the building of a railway line from Talegaon to Muncher in the Poona District ? If so, in what year ?

(ii) what action has the Railway Board taken on these proposals ?

(iii) if no action has been so far taken, when are final orders likely to be issued ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (i) Yes. In 1927-28.

(ii) A survey was made by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration and they submitted a report which showed the line to be unremunerative. The Railway Board have asked the Railway Administration to re-examine the project and see whether a lighter and cheaper form of construction would not serve the purpose. The re-examination is now in progress.

(iii) Does not arise.

RECRUITMENT IN ENGLAND OF CHARGEMEN FOR STATE RAILWAYS.

696. *Mr. H. G. Cocke : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that chargemen for State Railways have in the past been recruited in England and brought out to India on agreements for five years on an initial salary of Rs. 360 rising to Rs. 425 ;

(b) whether a chargeman so engaged is permitted to bring out his wife and children ;

(c) whether a passage out and home is allowed for the chargeman and his wife under the agreement ;

(d) whether, in the event of a subsequent agreement being entered into, no further passages are allowed, and, in fact, only one return passage for a chargeman and his wife is allowed during the whole period of service in India ;

(e) whether Government take any steps before engaging married chargemen to explain the cost of living in India for a married couple ;

(f) whether Government will consider the desirability of refusing to recruit married men in future for these posts ;

(g) whether any of the Lee Commission recommendations have been applied to chargemen, and, if not, whether any steps are being taken in this direction.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) When qualified mechanics are not available in India they are recruited from England on a five years' agreement. On some railways they are called chargemen ; on others they have different designations. The rate of pay differs on different railways, but is Rs. 360 rising to Rs. 425 on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

(b) Yes, under Rule 3 of the Passage (Subordinate) Rules, 1925, published with the Finance Department Notification No. F.-57-C.S.R.|25, of the 30th December 1925.

(c) Yes.

(d) In addition to the passage out and home such employees are granted free passage to England and back to India, if granted leave on medical certificate. During the employee's service Government also pays half the cost of passages from and to India for the employee's family if they accompany him on leave, but not more than twice in all.

(e) The men are recruited by the High Commissioner, and I have no doubt that he is prepared to give them any information for which they may ask.

(f) I am doubtful if it is desirable, but the matter will be considered.

(g) The Lee Commission's recommendations have not been applied to chargemen. In the opinion of the Railway Board the passage concessions, if any, to be granted to railway subordinates should be settled in each individual case and entered in the terms of each individual contract.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : With reference to the Honourable Member's reply to (e) he stated that the High Commissioner is no doubt prepared to give any information for which the men may ask. But considering that these men are being brought out to India in cases where they are married on a pay upon which they cannot live, will the Honourable Member suggest to the High Commissioner that information be given even if it is not sought ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not prepared to ask the High Commissioner to put the position before these men exactly in the terms mentioned by my Honourable friend ; but I will write to the High Commissioner and ask him to see that before the men are recruited they are given information, whether they ask for it or not, as to conditions in the places in which they are likely to serve.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government considering the extension of the Lee concessions to the subordinate officers as a class on the Railways or to individual subordinate officers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I must ask for notice. I am not sure that the question is one which should be put to my Department.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The question arises out of the answer just given that the matter is to be considered in each individual case.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : That is the reason I ask for notice.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it the policy of Government to extend these concessions to individual subordinate officers on the railways as they apply ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I must still ask for notice.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Is the Government contemplating to make provision so that there will be no need to import men from England and so that sufficiently qualified men may be forthcoming to fill these posts in India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not quite sure that I have caught the full purport of my Honourable friend's question, but I can assure him that we only obtain these mechanics from England when qualified men are not available in India.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I want to know whether the Government is contemplating to make any provision for turning out such qualified men here so that there will be no necessity of importing them from England ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We should certainly like to do so, and I am not sure we have not already issued instructions with that object. Will the Honourable Member put down a question ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : I will.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask then on whose authority the Honourable Member made the statement just now that the extension of the Lee concessions to any individual case would depend on the consideration of that case ?

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member made the statement on behalf of Government.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I am not sure whether the Honourable Member is himself sure of that.

Mr. President : Order, order.

DECLARATION OF CHITTAGONG AS A MAJOR PORT.

697. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that Government have decided to declare Chittagong a major port ?

(b) If so, when is the necessary statutory enactment likely to be undertaken ?

(c) Have Government settled, in consultation with the Local Government, the constitution of a Port Trust at Chittagong ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given by me on the 22nd August to a similar question asked by Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim in this House.

(b) The necessary legislation to transfer the statutory authority vested in the Local Government by the Chittagong Port Act to the Governor General in Council will be undertaken as soon as the legislative programme of the Government of India permits It is not possible to give any definite date at present.

(c) There is already a Port Trust at Chittagong. The question of changing its constitution has not yet been discussed with the Local Government.

AMENDMENT OF THE POISONS ACT.

698. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that Act XII of 1919 (Poisons Act) is under revision ?

(b) If so, is it intended to bring the provisions of the said Act into line with the English law in any particular ?

(c) Is there any intention on the part of Government to undertake legislation on the lines of the Pharmacy Act, and the Food and Drugs Act of the United Kingdom ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a), (b) and (c). There is no proposal to revise the Poisons Act, but Local Governments have been asked whether they consider it necessary to undertake legislation for standardizing the preparation and sale of medicinal drugs. On receipt of their replies the matter will be considered.

GRANT OF A PASSPORT TO PROFESSOR KHANKHOJE TO RETURN TO INDIA.

699. Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Have Government seen the article published in the Bombay Chronicle, Sunday the 26th June 1927, under the heading, " An eminent Indian Exile Prof. Khankhoje and his deportation " ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state if the Professor has ever applied for passports to come to India and, if so, why were the passports refused to him ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the nature of the offence committed, if any, by the Professor which has weighed with the Government in refusing passports to him ?

(d) Do the Government still intend that passports should not be granted to Prof. Khankhoje ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No.

(b) He has not, so far as I am aware, applied for passport facilities to come to India, nor have such facilities been refused.

(c) and (d) therefore do not arise.

REPORT OF THE INDIAN AUXILIARY AND TERRITORIAL FORCES COMMITTEE.

700. Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Is it a fact, as published in Indian Papers of 31st July 1927 by Reuter in its news service dated London 28th July 1927, that Earl Winterton has said in the House of Commons that the views of the Government on the findings of the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee have been communicated to the Government of India and, if so, when were they communicated ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay the report of the views on the table for the information of the Assembly ?

(c) Have the Government of India finished their examination of the findings of the Committee and dealt with the views of the Secretary of State thereon ?

(d) If so, what conclusions have they arrived at and if not, when is it likely that the Government will finish their examination ?

(e) Are Government aware of the discontent that is spreading over the dilatoriness of the Government in the matter ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) to (e). The Honourable Member is referred to the answer which I gave on the 29th August to Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru's starred question No. 513.

GRANT OF A PENSION TO THE WIDOW OF BABU DINESH CHANDRA BANNERJEE.

701. Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to Resolutions Nos. 83 and 84 adopted by the 7th Session of the All-India Postal and R. M. S. Conference held at Nagpur in the month of June last, as published in their magazine Vol. VI No. 3 called the All-India Postal and R. M. S. Union Madras Circle of June 1927 ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to take into sympathetic consideration the request made in Resolution No. 83 of providing an adequate pension to the widow of the late Babu Dinesh Chandra Bannerjee, sub-postmaster of Barguly for the maintenance of his helpless and destitute family ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the circumstances under which the sub-postmaster died, particularly mentioning if it is a fact that the sub-postmaster applied several times for leave for taking treatment without success and eventually the leave was granted and the reliever came to assume charge he found the sub-postmaster dead at his post ?

(d) Concerning the Resolution No. 84, will the Government be pleased to state if the Government propose to grant the request made therein ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given on the 25th August to Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi's question No. 452.

(d) The answer is in the negative.

Dr. B. S. Moonjee : Sir, I do not want to ask question No. 702.

†702.*

TRAINING OF INDIANS IN AVIATION.

703. Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Now that the Director of Civil Aviation has been appointed, will Government be pleased to state if any scheme has been prepared for imparting education in the science and art of aviation to Indian boys, in India or abroad ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state if scholarships are to be established for teaching Indian students higher aviation abroad ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (b) and (c). As I have already indicated in reply to question No. 397, the Director of Civil Aviation has been engaged in the consideration of a number of questions in connection with the development of Civil Aviation in India, including that of the training of Indians for Civil Aviation. The question of the more advanced training of Indians in Aviation subjects out of India is also under consideration, but matters have not yet reached a stage at which a definite announcement can be made.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member how long the Director of Civil Aviation has been at his post ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Five months, Sir.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask what steps have so far been taken to train Indians for the purposes of civil aviation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No steps have been taken yet.

Diwan Chaman Lall : How long does the Honourable Member intend to take before such steps are definitely taken ?

† Not asked by the Honourable Member.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I cannot give any definite answer to my Honourable friend's question yet.

Diwan Chaman Lall : When may we expect a definite answer ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : As soon as some definite conclusion is arrived at in the matter.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member kindly indicate what sort of conclusions are being arrived at at the present moment ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is impossible for me to say. As I have said, certain investigations have been started,—the consideration of a number of questions has been started. The Honourable Member is a member of the Standing Finance Committee and he knows very well that no action will be possible which involves expenditure on a large scale before the scheme comes before the Standing Finance Committee.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask what necessity there was to appoint the Director of Civil Aviation until the Government had completed their proposals ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Director of Civil Aviation was appointed to help the Government in working out their proposals.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Was it to secure a very kushi job for a gentleman.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The answer to that is decidedly in the negative.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE POSTAL AND TELEGRAPHIC FACILITIES IN THE CHOTA NAGPUR DIVISION.

704. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are taking any practical and real steps to improve the postal and telegraphic facilities of the people of the Chota Nagpur Division and, if so, what ?

(b) Are the Government aware that it is not only the public but also the Governmental institutions in the said division that are badly in need of postal and telegraphic facilities ? If not, will Government make inquiries ?

(c) Are the Government aware that the District Board of Hazaribagh and also the police department thereof have been repeatedly applying to the local postal authorities there for opening post offices in certain places where there are already police stations and D. B. Hospitals ? Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are going to open this year post offices in those places, if so, how many and where ?

(d) What is the number of post and telegraphic offices in each of the five districts of the Chota Nagpur Division and how many such offices will be opened in each of them this year ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. During the last financial year 6 new offices were opened in the Chota Nagpur Division and in the current year 8 new offices have already been opened so far.

(b) Government are fully alive to the necessity ; no committee of enquiry is therefore needed.

(c) No such application has been received by the Postmaster-General, Bihar and Orissa Circle.

(d)

Distri t.	Post offices.	Combined Postal and Telegraph offices.
Hazaribagh	35	14
Palamau	27	3
Ranchi	41	9
Singhbhum	41	12
Manbhum	48	25
Total ..	192	63

The number of new offices in addition to those mentioned in part (a) that will be opened this year cannot be stated. It depends on the number of proposals maturing after the collection of statistics, on the importance of the localities and other factors.

(1) PROPOSED RAILWAY COMMUNICATION BETWEEN HAZARIBAGH TOWN AND HAZARIBAGH ROAD RAILWAY STATION.

(2) CONSTRUCTION OF THE NEW RAILWAY LINE BETWEEN BARKAKHANA AND BARWADIH IN THE CENTRAL INDIA COALFIELDS.

705. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) What is being done with regard to the proposed railway communication between Hazaribagh town and Hazaribagh Road railway station ? Is it also intended to extend it any further and if so, to what length and extent ?

(b) What is the progress made in the construction of the new railway line between Barkakhana and Barwadih in the Central India coalfields ? When is the completion expected ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) It is proposed to undertake the survey of this line in 1928-29. There is no proposal at present for an extension beyond Hazaribagh.

(b) Good progress has been made and it is hoped to open the line to traffic early in 1928.

VISIT TO INDIA OF SIR LAMING WORTHINGTON EVANS, SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR.

706. Maulvi Muhammad Shafee : Will the Government be pleased to make a statement on the following point :—

(a) Is it a fact that Sir Laming Worthington Evans, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for War, is coming to visit India in the next cold weather ?

(b) Is the visit connected with the problem of the North-West Frontier and the defence of India ?

(c) What are the aspects of the problem that are going to be considered by him ?

(d) Is there any modification in the policy of the North-West Frontier and the defence of India contemplated by the Government ?

(e) If so, what is the modification in contemplation ?

(f) Will this House be in a position to know the result of his study and consideration of the problems ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) to (f). The tour of the Secretary of State for War in India will be a private one. There has been no official correspondence on the subject. Sir Laming Worthington Evans is coming to inform himself, at first hand and on the spot, about military conditions in India. The Government of India are unable to say to which aspects of the matter he will devote the most attention, or what the results of his visit will be.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask whether the attention of the Honourable Member has been drawn to the controversies in the English Press regarding questions of Indian defence ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have seen an article in the Daily Telegraph on the subject.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Has the Honourable Member any statement to make with regard to that controversy ?

Mr. G. M. Young : None whatever.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is the visit of the War Minister due to that controversy ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already given the House all the information at my disposal in regard to the visit of the Secretary of State for War to India.

WITHHOLDING OF ORDERS FROM BRITISH FIRMS WHICH REFUSE ADMISSION TO INDIAN APPRENTICES IN SUCH FIRMS.

707. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that British firms with whom orders are usually placed by the High Commissioner for India in the matter of electrical engineering, ship-building, steel manufacturing, etc., refuse to have Indian apprentices in their firms on the plea that it is not customary for them to take " coloured apprentices " ?

(b) Do Government propose to ascertain from the High Commissioner for India, as to whether he has received reports from Indians, who have been refused admittance as apprentices in such firms ? And if so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the names of such firms which refuse to take Indian apprentices ?

(c) Will Government kindly state what action has been taken, or is proposed to be taken against such firms ; and what objection they have in instructing the High Commissioner for India to withhold placing any sort of orders with those British firms, which refuse to admit Indians as apprentices ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The High Commissioner for India has been addressed on the subject and on receipt of his reply further information will be supplied to the Honourable Member. In this connection, however, I invite his attention to paragraph 11 of the Government of India's letter to the High Commissioner No. S.-360, dated the 26th December, 1921, and paragraph 6 of the High Commissioner's letter No. 521-H. C., dated the 25th January 1922, copies of which were laid on the table of this House on the 18th March 1922, and which describe the policy followed in this matter.

REMOVAL OF THE OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX, BIHAR AND ORISSA, FROM RANCHI TO PATNA.

708. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Why is the office of the Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa, located at Ranchi, and not at Patna, which is the capital of the Province, and centrally situated ; and are Government aware that this causes much inconvenience, expense, and delay to the assessees, who have to prefer appeals or reviews ?

(b) Are Government aware that the majority of cases which come up before the Commissioner of Income-tax, are from Bihar proper, and from places that are nearer to Patna than to Ranchi ? And are Government aware that the best legal help is available at Patna at minimum cost ?

(c) Will Government kindly state what objection there is to the removal of the office of the Commissioner of Income-tax from Ranchi to Patna ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a), (b) and (c). The Commissioner's headquarters were located at Ranchi because, if they had been located at Patna, it would have been necessary to build an office and a residence for the Commissioner. The Government see no reason why the present arrangement should cause any appreciable inconvenience to the public and are not aware that it does so. No representation on the subject was made to the Member of the Central Board of Revenue when he visited Patna recently. Persons who have presented review petitions to the Commissioner have as a matter of fact no legal right to be heard in person or by pleader. Appeals to the Commissioner can hardly be numerous. In any case the Commissioner would no doubt arrange to dispose of any matter at Patna should the person concerned ask him to do so.

His attention will be drawn to the desirability of meeting the convenience of assessees in this respect so far as possible.

QUESTIONNAIRE OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE RELATING TO MINIMUM WAGES, ETC.

709. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) It is a fact that the delegates on behalf of the Government of India at the last International Labour Conference of the League of Nations accepted the principles underlying the final questionnaire as drafted ? If so, have the Government of India taken steps to consult Provincial Governments and labour organisations and public opinion in general ?

(b) Is it a fact that the International Labour Conference recently held has passed conventions and recommendations regarding "Sickness Insurance", and if so, will the Government of India as a signatory to the League of Nations ratify the said conventions and recommendations ?

(c) Was the complaint made by the Workers' Delegate from India at the last International Labour Conference that even though the Government of India has repealed the law relating to penal sanctions for breach of contract of service, some Local Governments have still these Acts in force, and if so, do the Government of India intend to direct the Local Governments to repeal them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) I presume that the Honourable Member is referring to the questionnaire relating to Minimum Wages. The representatives of the Government of India indicated that they were in favour of the questionnaire being sent out, but the Government of India did not accept any principles in this connection nor am I clear that any principles can be regarded as underlying a series of questions. The Government of India have only recently received the questionnaire and I am not yet able to say if it will be possible for them to consult Local Governments. There is no intention of consulting labour organisations or public opinion at this stage. The time allowed is extremely short and employers and labour organisations are separately represented at Geneva.

(b) Two Conventions and a Recommendation relating to Sickness Insurance were adopted. The Government of India have not yet had the opportunity of examining these and I am unable to say whether they will propose ratification of the Conventions or not Recommendations are not capable of ratification.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative and to the second part in the negative. So far as the Government of India are aware, the only Acts of the type to which reference was made are the Madras Planters Act, the repeal of which is under consideration in the Madras Legislative Council, and the Coorg Labour Act which will automatically cease to be operative on the 1st April, 1931.

Safety of the Railway Bridge at Rajahmundry.

710 Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is the railway bridge at Rajahmundry on the river Godavari in a sound condition for trains to run thereon with safety ? Is there any portion of the same which is weak ? If so, what steps are being taken to repair the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The bridge is safe for the passage of trains at a restricted speed. The girders are below the standard of strength required for modern train loads at full speed, and will be strengthened in 1931-32.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : I do not wish to put question No. 711 as the information was supplied on the first day of the Assembly in reply to a short notice question.

† 711.*

† Not asked by the Honourable Member.

ARTICLE IN THE MONTHLY JOURNAL Labour OF MAY 1927.

712. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the article under head ' Notes by Blue Bird ' published on pages 142-143 of the monthly journal Labour (of May, 1927) ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether or not the enquiry was originated on an anonymous letter ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state what are the special procedures prescribed for the disposal of anonymous or pseudonymous letters sent by the subordinates, in Bihar and Orissa Circle ?

(d) How many anonymous or pseudonymous letters have been dealt with in that manner during the last 5 years in the Bihar and Orissa Circle ?

(e) Is it a fact that proceedings against Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw were started on the basis of anonymous letters by the then Superintendent of Posts and Telegraphs ? Was Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw, before being suspended, allowed to explain his conduct as alleged in the anonymous letters and the Superintendent's reports based on those letters ? If the answer be in the negative, why ?

(f) Is it a fact that during the departmental inquiry Mr. S. A. Khan, Superintendent, who was cited as a defence witness, was refused the opportunity of giving evidence in due form ? If so, why ?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to lay on table letter No. P.J.-645 of the Postmaster General to Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw issued on 26th June 1923 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I propose with your permission, Sir, to answer this and questions Nos. 715 to 721 together as they relate to the same case. The officer concerned has taken advantage of the appeal rules to submit recently an appeal to the Government of India about his case. The various allegations contained in the Honourable Member's questions will receive careful examination in connection with that appeal and I am unable therefore at present to give any reply to his questions.

CASE OF MAHENDRA SINGH, EXTRA-DEPARTMENTAL AGENT, CHAIRAIYA.

713. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Was not Mahendra Singh, Extra-Departmental Agent Chairaiya, once removed from the charge of the office for unsatisfactory conduct and work on the report of the Officiating Inspector, Shiva Kishore Narayan, 2nd clerk in the office of the Superintendent of Post Offices, Gandak Division ?

(b) Was he again re-appointed as Extra-Departmental Agent ?

(c) If so, (i) why (ii) by whom (iii) how many applicants were there for the post and (iv) was none else possessed of requisite qualification ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) (i) Because the Extra-Departmental Agent appointed in his place was very much more unsatisfactory and neglected the work.

(ii) Officiating Superintendent, Mr. Sadat Ali Khan.

(iii) and (iv) One other, who was not selected.

TRANSFER OF SUKHARI RAM, MAIL PEON, BETTIAH.

714. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it not a fact that the appointments, leave and transfer of mail peons, boy messengers and other menials are regulated and controlled by the Inspectors, Head Postmasters and certain sub-postmasters of the selection grade appointment ?

(b) By whom was the transfer of Sukhari Ram, mail peon, Bettiah, controlled ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(b) There is no mail peon named Sukhari Ram at Bettiah.

DISMISSAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL.

†715. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the remarks in the character sheet of Harihar Prasad Shaw were in conformity with the Departmental Rule 160 as amended by the correction slip No. 192 of the Post Office Manual, Vol. II, and the orders of the Postmaster General in letter No. 49|P.P.-160, dated 1st March 1917, of the Postmaster General, Bihar and Orissa Circle ?

(b) If not, who is responsible for ignoring the Departmental Rules and the orders of the Postmaster General and what action, if any, has been taken for the infringement of rules ?

(c) Whether the remarks referred to were in existence in the official's character sheet on the 11th January 1923 on which date the Postmaster General's orders confirming Harihar Prasad Shaw in the combined cadre of the Superintendent's Head Clerk and Inspectors were issued ?

(d) If so, why were they ignored and by whom ?

(e) Were copies of the said character remarks or purport thereof communicated to Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw from time to time to enable him to make his position clear at the time ?

(f) If not, who is responsible for not communicating the same and thus ignoring the standing Departmental Rules and orders of the Postmaster General, and what action, if any, has been taken for the infringement of the rules ?

DISMISSAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL.

†716. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it was conclusively proved that a frame of a bicycle belonging to Government was misappropriated by Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw ?

(b) If so, was the frame confiscated ?

(c) If it was not confiscated, was it due to the fact that the Postmaster General was in doubt about the matter ?

(d) If the answer to (c) is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state why it was not confiscated ?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 712.

DISMISSAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL.

†717. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw entered the Postal Department on 10th September 1901 ?

(b) Is it a fact that only five months before dismissal, he was selected and nominated for a special grade appointment and confirmed in the combined cadre of Superintendent's Head Clerk and Inspector ? If so, what were the considerations that weighed with the authorities in granting him this promotion ? Were his good services in the past one of them ?

DISMISSAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL.

†718. Kumar Ganganand Sinha: Was Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw ever before the inquiry that culminated in his dismissal found inefficient or guilty of misconduct ?

DISMISSAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL.

†719. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that most of the charges against Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw in the departmental inquiry dealt with bribery and corruption alleged to have been committed on different occasions in connection with the transfer or posting of different subordinate employees ?

(b) Is it not a fact that a Head Clerk in the Superintendent's Office has no power whatsoever in the matter of transfer, etc. ?

(c) If so, was it found out what influence, if any, Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw had on the Superintendent during whose tenure of office these acts are said to have been committed and how ?

(d) If the Head Clerk wielded any influence on the Superintendent, what action, if any, did the Department take for preventing its Superintendents from becoming tools in the hands of their subordinates ?

DISMISSAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL.

†720. Kumar Ganganand Sinha: (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw was dismissed on doubt or strong suspicion regarding his resorting to corrupt practices or were the charges against him found to be conclusively proved ?

(b) If the latter, why were not criminal proceedings instituted against him ?

(c) Were the persons who deposed against Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw in the departmental inquiry on account of their status, length of service or other considerations deemed more trustworthy than Mr. Shaw by the authorities ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state on what account ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on table a copy of the findings of the departmental inquiry in Mr. Shaw's case ? If not, why ?

(e) Is it the practice in departmental inquiries to dismiss servants even on strong suspicions (i.e., even when conclusive proof as defined in the Evidence Act is not available) ?

(f) To whom can the final appeal of subordinates against misuse of authority by the higher officials be made ?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 712.

MEMORIAL OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD SHAW, A POSTAL OFFICIAL, IN REGARD TO HIS DISMISSAL.

721. †Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Has the Member in charge of the Department or the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs received any memorial from Mr. Harihar Prasad Shaw in regard to his dismissal ? If so, will the Government be pleased to lay a copy of the same on the table ? What action, if any, has been taken on that memorial ? If no action has been taken, why ?

IMPROVEMENT OF THE PAY AND ALLOWANCES OF POSTMEN AND INFERIOR SERVANTS.

722. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it has been found possible to improve the pay and allowances of postmen and inferior servants ? If so, to what extent ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The rates of house rent allowance for postmen and inferior servants in post offices at certain places where these were already granted have been enhanced and house rent allowances sanctioned for the same classes of officials at other places where such allowances were found to be necessary with effect from the 1st October 1926. The scales of pay of these officials serving at a number of places were improved with effect from the 1st May 1927, and the cases of similar officials serving at other places are now under examination

MAXIMUM OF THE CLERICAL TIME-SCALE OF PAY OF POSTAL CLERKS.

723. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Are Government aware of the fact that under the existing system an employee rising from postman's rank cannot reach the maximum ? If so, how do the Government propose to remedy the defect ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : If by the term "maximum" the Honourable Member refers to the maximum of the clerical time-scale of pay, the position is not as stated by him and there is no defect to be remedied.

INTRODUCTION OF A NEW GRADE OF CLERKS IN THE POST OFFICES AND THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

724. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Have Government finished consideration of the question of introducing a new grade of clerks for a certain class of work in the Post Offices and the Railway Mail Service ?

(b) If not, how long will it take to be finished ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) I am not in a position yet to state definitely how long it will take.

---

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 712.

LEAVE RESERVE OF THE LOWER GRADE STAFF OF THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

725. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Is it a fact that the lower grade staff of the Postal Department practically do not get any leave on account of the paucity of reserve staff ? Do Government contemplate enlarging the reserve in order to enable them to get leave ? If so, how ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is not quite clear to what staff the Honourable Member refers. Lower grade staff consists of packers, mail peons, letter-box peons, etc., but no reserve for such staff is maintained. On the other hand, there is a reserve staff of postmen in the larger offices. In either case it is not a fact that the staff do not get any leave. It is not intended to enlarge the reserve at present. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given to Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder's starred question No. 771 on the 8th March, 1927.

PROMOTION OF POSTMEN TO THE CLERICAL GRADE.

726. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Is it a fact that even a postman who has done clerical work for more than a year in the sorting or delivery department has to pass an examination for promotion to the clerical grade ? If so, what is the reason for requiring an examination in such cases ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Postmen do little or no clerical work in the sorting or delivery departments. A postman who has worked in these departments has to pass an examination for promotion to the clerical grade. The reason for requiring an examination in such cases is to prevent the admission into the clerical grade of men whose lack of education renders them subsequently unfit to perform the work of a clerk.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : May I know, Sir, what is the nature of the departmental examination that is being held and the qualification which a man gets by passing that examination ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I think there is a certain amount of confusion on the part of my Honourable friend in regard to this matter. The position has now been changed by the introduction of a new clerical grade on a lower scale of pay from 1st March. The clerical grade which the Honourable Member here refers to is the old clerical grade and the examination at which a postman has to sit before he is eligible for employment in that clerical grade is the same as that at which outsiders have also to appear.

PAY OF POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

727. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Are Government aware of the fact that in schemes for the revision of pay the senior men in the Postal service get a much smaller benefit than their juniors ? Do not the Government contemplate remedying the defect in future ? If the answer is in the negative, why ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett :

Part I.—Yes.

Part II.—No.

Part III.—In the opinion of Government no remedy is required, for an officer who has a certain number of years to serve must obviously derive a greater benefit from any scheme of improvement of pay than one of his seniors who has a smaller number of years to serve.

SECURITY BONDS OF POSTMEN.

728. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Is it a fact that a postman has to renew his security bond annually with a view to guarantee honest work on the part of the postman, when he is a new man ? If so, what is the policy underlying the taking of a guarantee ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A postman has to renew his security bond annually, only if he furnishes security in the form of a fidelity bond from an Insurance or other Company, because in such cases the company undertakes the risk for a period of one year at a time.

The policy underlying the taking of guarantee is to safeguard the department against loss.

WATCH AND WARD DEPARTMENT ON COMPANY-MANAGED RAILWAYS.

729. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the names of the Company-managed Railways that have not organised a Watch and Ward Department ?

(b) How many superior officers are there in the Watch and Ward Department, under the Railway Board ? How many of them are Indians, Anglo-Indians and Europeans ?

(c) If there are no Indians, do the Government contemplate making a few appointments of suitable Indians ?

(d) If the answer to (c) is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state how they would propose to Indianise 75 per cent. of the services as recommended by the Lee Commission ?

Mr. A. A. L Parsons : (a) All the Company-managed Railways have organised watch and ward establishments ; but on the Madras and Southern Mahratta, Burma, South Indian, Assam Bengal, Bengal and North Western and Rohilkund and Kumaon Railways, these establishments are under the Traffic Department and are not organised as a separate department.

(b) There are no superior officers in the Watch and Ward Departments of State-managed Railways directly under the Railway Board. On the State-managed Railways there are 7 superior officers—3 Superintendents and 4 Assistant Superintendents. Of these, 5 are Europeans and 2 Anglo-Indians.

(c) At present there are no vacancies. There is no reason at all why Indians should not be appointed when vacancies occur, but I should mention that the Department is almost invariably manned by police officers obtained on loan from Provincial Governments. It is, therefore, generally a matter of taking an officer whom a Provincial Government recommends and is prepared to spare.

(d) In view of the answer to (c), (d) does not arise.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIANS TO THE WATCH AND WARD DEPARTMENT OF STATE RAILWAYS.

730. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Is it a fact that most of the appointments to the superior posts in the Watch and Ward Department have been made after the Lee recommendations regarding 75 per cent. recruitment of Indians in railways have been adopted, and that not one Indian has been appointed ? If so, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Four officers have been appointed to superior posts in the Watch and Ward Department of State-managed Railways since the 1st April 1924, of whom 2 are statutory Indians and the remainder Europeans. All the 4 officers were obtained from Provincial Governments on their recommendation.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT AT THE MEETING, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONS, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

PAY, PENSIONS AND PROMOTIONS OF THE MEMBERS OF THE INDIA UNATTACHED LIST.

662. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Are Government aware of the grievances of the members of the India Unattached List regarding the condition of their service, that is to say their pay, pension and promotion ?

(b) Is the subject under their consideration, and if so, will they please state how matters stand with regard to the matter (vide starred question No. 685 (a) and (b) asked in the meeting of the Assembly held on the 1st March 1927 and Government reply) ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply which I gave on the 14th March last to his starred question No. 918. The matter is still under the consideration of the Secretary of State.

BOOKING OF PICTURE FRAMES, MOTOR TYRES, ETC., AT PARCEL RATES ON STATE RAILWAYS.

666. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to Government reply to unstarred question No. 2 (b) in the Council of State on 8th February 1927, regarding booking of picture frames, motor tyres, etc., at parcel rates on State Railways, will Government be pleased to get the information and communicate it to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The collection of the information from all Railways would involve more trouble than Government think worth while.

MEETINGS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY AND COUNCIL OF STATE WITH THE NUMBER OF RESOLUTIONS AND BILLS PASSED DURING THE LAST THREE SESSIONS.

667. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will Government be pleased to state the number of meetings held, the number of Resolutions moved, and the number of Bills passed in the Legislative Assembly and Council of State, respectively during the last three Sessions ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : A statement showing the information asked for is laid on the table.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

	Autumn Session, 1925.
Number of meetings	 18
Number of Resolutions moved	 12	(7 official and 5 non-official)
Number of Bills passed	 22
	Winter Session, 1926.
Number of meetings	 39
Number of Resolutions moved	 14	(8 non-official and 6 official)
Number of Bills passed	 27
	Autumn Session, 1926.
Number of meetings	 12
Number of Resolutions moved	 5	(One official and 4 non-official)
Number of Bills passed	 13

COUNCIL OF STATE.

	Autumn Session, 1925.
Number of meetings	 16
Number of Resolutions moved	 11
Number of Bills passed	 21
	Winter Session, 1926.
Number of meetings	 23
Number of Resolutions moved	 16
Number of Bills passed	 28
	Autumn Session, 1926.
Number of meetings	 8
Number of Resolutions moved	 4
Number of Bills passed	 14

CONTINUANCE OF THE PRESENT PRACTICE OF TAKING Taboots OVER THE SANGAM BRIDGE ON WELLESLEY ROAD, POONA.

668. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to Government reply to question No. 140 in the Council of State on the 7th March 1927, regarding continuance of the present practice of taking taboots over the Sangam Bridge on Wellesley Road, Poona, will Government please state if they have now received any reference from the Government of Bombay on the subject ? If not, will they please ascertain from the Government of Bombay as to their decision and communicate the result to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have received no reference from the Government of Bombay, but they understand from the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, that that Government has the subject under consideration.

DATE OF EXPIRATION OF THE AGREEMENT WITH THE BURMA RAILWAYS.

669. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) When will the term of agreement of the Burma Railways expire ?

(b) Has the question of handing over of the Burma Railways to State management on the expiration of its term of agreement which was under the consideration of Government, been considered (vide Government reply to unstarred question No. 201, on 21st March 1927) ?

(c) If so, will Government please communicate their decision to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The existing contract between the Secretary of State and the Burma Railways Company can be terminated by the Secretary of State on the 31st December, 1928, on twelve months prior notice.

(b) and (c). The question is still under consideration.

BENGAL DETENUS.

670. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the number, if any, of the Bengal detenus :

(a) who have been released on medical grounds ?

(b) who have been transferred from jail to village or home domicile, since the statement made by the Honourable the Home Member on the 21st March 1927?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) 1.

(b) 26.

PUBLICATION OF THE PROSPECTUS FOR THE TRAINING SHIP " DUFFERIN "

671. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Will Government please state whether they have issued the prospectus for the training ship as indicated in their reply to starred question No. 1141 on 23rd March 1927 re training of cadets on the training ship " Dufferin " ?

(b) If not, by what time are they expected to issue the prospectus ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : A short notice containing particulars regarding the duration of the course, age, fees, etc. and calling for applications for admission to the training ship " Dufferin " has recently been published in the newspapers of India and Burma. A fuller notice giving detailed information, which is at present under the consideration of the governing body of the training ship, will issue shortly.

PROMOTION OF DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENTS OF POLICE.

675. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that Assistant Superintendents of Police of short service are given preference over Deputy Superintendents of Police of much longer service ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not very sure what the Honourable Member has in mind. If, however, he is thinking of promotion to superior posts in the Indian Police Service, the answer is in the negative. The vacancies for which the two classes are eligible are distinct.

PROMOTION OF DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENTS OF POLICE.

676. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : (a) Is it not a fact that the Royal Commission on Superior Services in India have at page 19, paragraph 37 recommended that 20 per cent. of the Deputy Superintendents of Police should be promoted to the cadre of Superintendents of Police ?

(b) Has that recommendation been given effect to or not ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No. What the Lee Commission have recommended in paragraph 37, read with paragraph 38 of their Report, is that instead of 11 per cent. of superior posts in the Indian Police Service being reserved for members of the provincial service 20 per cent. should ultimately be so reserved.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by my predecessor to Kumar Ganganand Sinha's question on the 1st February 1927.

CIVILIAN HOSPITAL WRITERS OF THE INDIAN HOSPITAL CORPS.

677. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) If it is a fact that permanent civilian hospital writers who are not enrolled are still employed in military hospitals in India and are counted amongst Havildars and Naiks of the clerical section of each company according as they belong to the upper or lower division ? If so, will promotions to the upper division only occur in the event of a vacancy in the company of the Indian Hospital Corps ? Is it not a fact that this will be in violation of the stipulation at the time of revision of their pay under the A. I. (I.) 603 of 1923 that one-third of them will be at all times in the upper division ?

(b) The total number of such clerks employed in India in both the upper and lower divisions and the reason for any deviation from the original rules on the subject ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) On the formation of the Indian Hospital Corps, permanent civilian hospital writers then employed were permitted to remain in the service, and were counted against the establishment of the Indian Hospital Corps in the manner stated by the Honourable Member. There are only 29 of these civilian writers left. They are promoted on a general cadre and not by vacancies in a company.

(b) Of the 29 clerks, 10 are in the upper division and 19 in the lower. Actually, therefore, one-third of them are in the upper division and there has been no deviation from the rules.

GRANT OF THE KARACHI LOCAL ALLOWANCE TO CIVILIAN CLERKS EMPLOYED IN VARIOUS MILITARY DEPARTMENTS IN KARACHI.

678. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : (a) Is it a fact that Karachi local allowance is being paid to all permanent civilian clerks employed in all civil departments as well as to clerks employed in Military Accounts Department, stationed at Karachi, from 1st November 1925 but that no allowance is paid to civilian clerks employed in other Military Departments in Karachi ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the position of civilian clerks employed in various Military Departments in Karachi in this respect since all these clerks are also paid at the universal rate of pay ?

is there any apparent reason why this allowance should not be paid to them from 1st November 1925 in the same way as it is paid to the clerks of the Military Accounts Department employed in Karachi ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Certain clerks serving under Central Civil Departments at Karachi do, I believe, receive local allowances, but not all of them. Clerks in the Military Accounts Department do. Civilian clerks in the Military Department do not.

(b) The emoluments of civilian clerks in the Military Department at Karachi were fixed at rates which were considered adequate and I understand that there is no difficulty in obtaining suitable clerks at these rates. The pay and allowances of clerks in the Military Accounts Department have been fixed according to the needs of that Department. The special qualifications required make it impossible to depend upon local recruitment, with the result that clerks of the Military Accounts Department—unlike other civil departments—are liable for general service all over India or overseas, and more often than not are called upon to serve at long distances from their homes.

OPENING OF THE NEW STATION NEAR AJMER GATE, DELHI.

682. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state if the new station near Ajmere Gate, Delhi, has been opened ? (Vide Government reply to unstarred question No. 173 on the 16th March 1927 in the Council of State.)

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes.

RESULT OF THE OFFICIAL TESTS IN THE MATTER OF THE BEAM WIRELESS STATION NEAR POONA.

683. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the result of official tests in the matter of the Beam Wireless Station near Poona that were to take place in May last ? [Vide Government reply to unstarred question No. 181 (a) in the Council of State on 21st March 1927.]

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Owing to unforeseen delays the official tests were only completed last week. It is understood that the tests have been satisfactory.

PROVISION OF A TELEGRAPH CONNECTION TO THE POST OFFICE AT MANJHAUL.

684. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if they have considered the question of providing a telegraph connection to the Post Office at Manjhaul in the sub-division of Begusarai in the District of Monghyr (Bihar and Orissa) ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate their decision to the House ? [Vide Government reply to unstarred question No. 193 (b) in the Council of State on the 21st March 1927.]

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(b) Steps have been taken by the Postmaster-General, Bihar and Orissa Circle, to provide a Telegraph connection to the Post Office at Manjhaul during the current official year.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Secretary of the Council of State : 12 NOON.

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State have, at their meeting held on the 30th August, 1927, agreed without any amendments to the Bill further to amend the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909, and the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, for certain purposes, which was passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 28th March, 1927."

THE INDIAN LIGHTHOUSE BILL.

REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE LAID ON THE TABLE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, I lay on the table the Report of the Joint Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the provisions, maintenance and control of lighthouses by the Government in British India.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (COTTON YARN AMENDMENT) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India.

THE BAMBOO PAPER INDUSTRY (PROTECTION) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the Bamboo Paper Industry in British India.

THE INDIAN SECURITIES (AMENDMENT) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir I present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Securities Act, 1920, for certain purposes.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further discussion of the motion that the Report of the Joint Committee on the Bill to establish a gold standard currency for India and to constitute a Reserve Bank be taken into consideration.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, we are at the second stage of what is called the reform of the Indian currency system. In reality it is to my mind a forced adjustment of India's currency system, at least in one direction, to what the India Office and the Government of India have been after since 1919. That of course refers to what the Assembly considered and passed last March, and I am afraid, Sir, that regarding this second stage also, unless this measure is carried through this House with the general good will of all concerned—and when I say that I mean the principal popular parties in the House—this measure also will be a forced adjustment of the Indian currency system to what the Government of India require.

Before I proceed further, I, Sir, with your permission, would like to say a word about the very kind remarks that my ex-colleague Sir Alexander Murray made about me on the floor of the House yesterday. For fear that you, Sir, may remind me that, that is not the question before the House, I refrain from saying anything about Sir Alexander Murray's work on the Royal Commission. If I did not know the honesty of purpose and the sincerity and genuineness of Sir Alexander Murray, I would say that his remarks regarding me were almost flattering ; but I cannot help expressing my sincere gratitude to him for the very kind words in which he has referred to my little work on the Royal Commission. And this is specially necessary in view of the certificate which I earned in the other House from an Indian colleague of mine, who thought it his duty to say that I was the wrong man in the wrong place, when the Government of India nominated me to the Royal Commission. (Several Honourable Members : " Shame.") I, Sir, have not a word to say in defence. All that I say is that human as I am, I cannot but feel touched by the kind terms in which Sir Alexander Murray referred to me, bearing in mind that he and I differed very widely on some of the most vital issues on the Royal Commission and we fought it out without any fear of each other and without expecting favour from either side.

Sir Alexander Murray, Sir, referred to paragraph 62 of my minute of dissent. He said that I devoted only four paragraphs in that minute of dissent to the question of the Reserve Bank. Sir Alexander Murray will remember how anxious all my colleagues, including himself, were that I must not put on a longer tail to the report than the report itself. As it is, my minute of dissent went into 153 paragraphs, and my only excuse for referring to the Central Reserve Bank in a few paragraphs was that I did not then have as strong views about the Reserve Bank as I had about the question of the ratio. But since I signed my minute of dissent much water has flowed under the bridge. I have no hesitation in repeating what I said in my minute of dissent on the Royal Commission. I stand for every word of what I said in those four paragraphs in my minute of dissent, and I am prepared to justify it to-day. As I said in paragraph 61, the idea of a Reserve Bank of India is an ideal. I still think that India ought to aim at a Reserve Bank, a pure and unalloyed Reserve Bank in the strictest sense of the word ; a Reserve Bank which will compare with the Reserve Bank of any other country. The only difference between me and the views held by my esteemed friend, Sir Alexander Murray, was, and I am sorry to say, still is, that while he wants a Reserve Bank of the most unalloyed and strict type at once and immediately, I want it to be attained by stages after taking cognisance of the various handicaps and drawbacks, and the various conditions, economic, political and general, of India as a whole. I therefore feel that there is nothing inconsistent between what I said in my minute of dissent and the position which I took up either in the Joint Committee or which I now take in this House. Sir Alexander Murray reminded me of a sentence in paragraph 62 of my minute of dissent. I there stated :

"It is imperative, that the Government of India should for years to come regard the rapid extension of banking facilities as an essential and urgent part of its financial policy."

If I mistake not, my colleague said yesterday that he agreed with me fully there. May I ask him, Sir, how he has ensured it in the Bill which he is out to support ? Does he not feel that, this most essential requirement of India is not at all provided for in the Bill ? As I will presently show, I am afraid that in starting the Reserve Bank indicated in the Bill at this stage you are really going to starve India of the much-needed extension of banking facilities—the one question about which every Commission from the Herschell Committee of 1893 downwards, barring, if I may say so with all deference the Royal Commission, on which we both sat, has laid so much emphasis.

I have, Sir, here a cutting from the Bengalee which contains a letter from Sir Daniel Hamilton who refers to me in his letter and asks whether, I would help to build up the condition of the Indian agriculturist, and to that end support the Reserve Bank. Sir Daniel Hamilton who, I am told, was a great man in his days when he was in India and took a very great interest in the welfare of the Indian agriculturist, Sir, refers to the rupees 600 crores of debt of the Indian agriculturist, he refers to the necessity for irrigation, both major irrigation and well irrigation, and winds up with this : " Will Sir Purshotamdas help to set the people free ? " I maintain, Sir, that the Reserve Bank Bill which is now before the House does not help the agriculturist in this direction at all, because I venture to ask, Sir, my esteemed friend on my left, whether the one bank which has provided banking institutions and facilities in the country all these years from 1805 up to the present day has not been the Imperial Bank ? And the Imperial Bank has been able to do this only because it had the free use of Government balances. You are now taking it away from the Imperial Bank. You are now giving it to the Reserve Bank. The one condition in Schedule II of the original Bill, namely, that if the Imperial Bank opened a new branch, it may have a certain amount of free balance for a few years, has been taken away by the Joint Committee. and I venture to ask Sir Alexander Murray, who. I know is a very prominent member of the directorate of the Imperial Bank, whether he thinks that the Imperial Bank will open even ten new branches after the passing of the Reserve Bank Bill within, say, the next five years. If the reply, Sir,—and I will supply the reply myself because I am sure my Honourable colleague cannot differ from me—if the reply is to be :—All in due course of time and by slow degrees—then I venture to ask, Sir, where are you going to provide for this great necessity for which the Herschell Committee.

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

the Fowler Committee and the other Commissions in this century, all have made such substantial recommendations. I submit, Sir, that you are going to starve that great necessity and the only reason why I cannot identify myself very much with this idea of starting a new Reserve Bank de novo of the most unalloyed type, of the most strict type at once and now, is that I fear that in trying to show to the world that you are putting up institutions similar to what America and the most advanced countries have, you are really doing injustice to the masses and you are really causing a vacuum at the bottom, the effects of which will be perceived within the next 10 or 15 years.

My friend Sir Alexander Murray rather took Mr. Jamnadas Mehta mildly to task for having compared India to Ireland. Sir Alexander Murray said : " Oh, Ireland is such a small place and India is such a vast continent : why compare the two countries ? " May I ask my esteemed friend whether he would compare India to Siam ? I am sure he will say " No ". Siam is such a small place India is such a big continent. And I will then leave it, Sir, to him and the Honourable the Finance Member to decide whether on the question of the appreciation of India's currency the Finance Member was justified in saying that Siam was an instance which he could quote with any relevancy or justification. The fact, Sir, is that both the Government side and the other side quote instances when it suits them. But I have this much at least to say that, as far as India is concerned, there are many things which we would like to have from Ireland, but there are very few things which Ireland would aim at having from India at present.

Sir Alexander Murray, Sir, quoted Sir John Bell's minute, a minute on which I feel that I must congratulate the Honourable Sir John Bell. For, if anything, Sir John Bell has at least shown that he can put his views on paper candidly and without any fear of having a difference of opinion with that very important and powerful body, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. But I am afraid, Sir Alexander Murray, quite without meaning it, did Sir John Bell a little injustice He only read a part, Sir, of his outspoken and useful minute. Sir Alexander Murray referred to the first paragraph of Sir John Bell's minute of dissent, which said that Sir John Bell was not convinced that the present is an appropriate time for starting a Bank on the lines in the Bill. But he gives three reasons for it and I think the first reason could be considered a very important one. I will read, Sir, that short paragraph :

" In the first place, the Government of India have just carried through an important change in the currency system of the country, of stabilising the rupee at 1*s.* 6*d.* sterling. I consider that for some time to come Government and no other authority should be responsible for maintaining the ratio which has been adopted."

Sir John Bell, I see, did not speak in favour of the 1*s.* 6*d.* ratio in the Council of State. I am not sure whether he voted for it or not. But the apprehension which he expressed in his minute of dissent regarding that ratio is an apprehension which has its own lesson and it should not be overlooked when the House is considering this Bill. Regarding, Sir, the question of the measure before the House, namely, starting a Reserve Bank, Sir John Bell says :

" In the majority report of the Currency Commission this method is not supported, (that is, converting the Imperial Bank into a Reserve Bank)—but the chapter in which expression is given to the opinion of the Commission on the subject is, to my mind, one of the most unconvincing chapters of the Report."

I must anticipate the Finance Member who may ask me to point out again to the House that Sir John Bell definitely makes it clear in the minute of dissent that he speaks for himself and in his personal capacity, and that these views of his need not be mixed up as being the views of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

I am sure the House will agree that the Honourable Member, Sir Alexander Murray, made a very conciliatory and persuasive maiden speech yesterday. I have no doubt that speeches like this bring the differing sections of this House closer together and no abler or more capable person for that purpose could have been nominated by the Government to this House than Sir Alexander Murray. He, Sir, in conclusion showed his impatience for a Reserve Bank of some sort for India. The House, Sir, realises, everyone in the House, if I may venture to say so, Sir, realises that we ought to have a Reserve Bank, that we ought to have a Bank which is free from the control of Government and also from any influence of the Legislature, but the House wants to ensure that it should have, not, a Reserve Bank of some sort, but a Reserve Bank of the right sort. And what is that right sort, Sir ? The main attraction of this Reserve Bank, as far as this side of the House is concerned, is that it will take away the power of control of currency and dictation of it from Whitehall. I do not think any of my Honourable colleagues on my right will differ from me when I say that everyone of us supports this Bill because we feel that if it passes through the House with our consent and our good will, it will ensure to us freedom from the one thing which we have all along tried to escape—control from six thousand miles away. Sir, freedom from control from Whitehall is a very welcome thing. But then the question is, to whom is this body going to be responsible ? Is it going to be responsible only to itself ? The Finance Member says " No ". The Directors of this Bank will be responsible to their conscience, to use the Finance Member's own words. Will they be responsible to the shareholders ? Now, Sir, the responsibility of directorate of any company, at least in India, and I venture to say in any part of the world, is more or less of an eye-wash. What the House wishes to ensure is that there will be such arrangements about the directorate that in escaping from the India Office they do not place themselves in the hands of some set of persons completely irresponsible, completely ungettable at, resulting in a state of things worse than the Whitehall influence. What are these shareholders, Sir, and what will their stake in this Bank be ? A paltry 5 crores invested by them, and that too, Sir, not invested on fair and equitable terms, but invested, Sir, with a dividend ensured and secured to them cumulatively. I venture to draw the attention of the House to page 17, Appendix IV, to the Joint Committee's Report. That Appendix gives the result to the State of the Reserve Bank for the first six years. If Honourable Members will turn to that page, they will see that in the first year the loss to the State is to be Rs. 1 crore 76 lakhs, in the second year Rs. 27 lakhs and in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth years Rs. 8 lakhs each. Even taking these figures to be accurate and correct—and, I assume for the purpose of argument—that within the first six years the Indian taxpayer is to lose Rs. 2¼ crores—that is to be the loss to the Indian Budget ; and as against that, these happy shareholders will be getting a 6 per cent. dividend on their 5 crores from the very first day. 6 per cent. on 5 crores works out to Rs. 30 lakhs a year. Within six years the country will lose Rs. 2¼ crores, while these shareholders, who are supposed to have a stake in the institution, will get their one crore and 80 lakhs without the slightest doubt. Are these terms equitable ? Can it be called a Company in any sense of the word ? The only sense in which you can call this a Company is the sense in which the Indian Railways are Companies. Sir, to give an idea of what sort of a Company this Bank is likely to be, I have brought with me the Report of the Acworth Committee, and on page 99 of that Report is Appendix No. III giving a statement showing the amount paid to Railway Companies as guaranteed interest, the amount recovered from net receipts and the gain or loss to the State during the years 1858-59 to 1918-19. The amount paid as guaranteed interest during that period was £208 million. The amount recovered from net receipts was £158 million. The net loss to the State is £6,785,000. That, Sir, is the parallel, and all this to what purpose ? The only purpose is to satisfy the consciences of the Finance Member and of this Assembly that there is an independent electorate for the directorate. Sir, I am not at all surprised at the great earnestness and anxiety of Leaders in the House like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and others that this measure shall not pass on any such consideration as this. Sir, the idea of a private capital Company for this purpose is an idea which has only to be mentioned in order to be rejected. (Hear, hear.) I will not use any stronger word—I am reminded of the word " monstrosity ", but I do not think it is necessary. But, Sir, that is not an idea which can be seriously followed up. I think we ought to benefit, this Legislature and India ought to benefit, by the experience of company management of Railways, a management of which we are now happily getting free year by year, and I do not think that we can possibly think of reconciling ourselves to the idea of asking a few people, or if you like five crores of shareholders if you have one rupee shares (what does this matter ?) to put in a paltry 5 crores when the State will put in all the currency resources and reserve at the command of the State, which, depleted as they have been by the policy adopted by the Government, are to-day £40 million in the Gold Standard Reserve, the silver in it Rs. 110 crores, and some Government of India paper. For the management of all this, Sir, you are sure to ask shareholders to put in 5 crores and tell them, " Elect 9 directors and carry on. We trust you." The idea, Sir, is an impossible one, if I may say so, and the sooner the Finance Member drops the idea, the sooner shall we go on to something which will bring us nearer to a solution of the question.

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Before, Sir, I proceed any further, I wish to refer to what Mr. Jamnadas Mehta said yesterday about what he called " the conference " which His Excellency the Viceroy had a few days ago at Viceregal Lodge. Mr. Jamnadas Mehta had the frankness to admit that it was only by an accident that he did not himself go to that conference. I admire, Sir, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta for having mentioned that. However, he realizes, and I am sure he will not challenge me, both he and another esteemed friend of his had agreed to go to the conference.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Agreed, and that too on conditions.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : On no conditions at all, Mr. Jamnadas, if I may say so.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : You know more than I know about myself.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I only hope, Sir, that I may be allowed to refer to this and I do it in full cognizance of the facts which I have had from various quarters. As Mr. Jamnadas Mehta knows, I did go to that conference. I went to it because I felt that it was very good of His Excellency the Viceroy, who also is Governor General, to hear all parties on this important question and without in the slightest degree trying to influence or persuade anybody. I am sure that had Mr. Jamnadas Mehta been present at the Viceregal Lodge, he would have found that there were many points which were cleared up, and many differences brought prominently to light at that informal meeting. (Cheers.) Mr. Jamnadas Mehta thinks this a gross constitutional impropriety. I am very sorry, Sir, he used those words. Knowing, Sir, as this House does, His Excellency Lord Irwin, to hear that he could be guilty of anything which can be called " impropriety " is very sad. All that I would say is that whilst I fully recognize that the power which has the power of veto and the power which has the power of certification should be above any consultations, if that power, Sir, invites to an informal conference all the parties concerned that can hardly be called an impropriety. (Applause.) I therefore feel that I owe it to this House—it does not matter, His Excellency the Viceroy would have others abler than me to defend him if there is to be any defence—I owe it to this House to say that there was no persuasion and the only thing that we did, and I think was meant to be done at the informal meeting, was to clear up various views and find out how broad or how narrow were the differences. I have Mr. Jinnah's authority for saying that this informal meeting was not arranged on any inspiration from Viceregal Lodge but was suggested by non-official leaders. (Applause.)

Now, Sir, Sir Basil Blackett has frankly confessed to this House that he has genuine earnestness to have this Bill put on the Statute-book. He has frankly confessed that he looks upon it as one of the crowning stones to his career in India. He aims at the pure unalloyed Central Bank of the best type. I personally feel that if Sir Basil Blackett will reconcile his ideal of this Reserve Bank to the conditions prevalent in India—and there I mean conditions of every nature, economic, financial, political and others —if Sir Basil Blackett will reconcile himself and his ideal to this and will agree to mould this measure in a manner that will least disturb all these rudely, that will protect us against our various handicaps, drawbacks and, if I may say so, weaknesses, I, at any rate, can guarantee to him my support in carrying this measure. But the question is that Sir Basil Blackett aims at having an institution which will be understood by the rest of the world. What does it matter whether that is applauded by the rest of the world forthwith or not ? The question is whether the institution is suitable to India or not. Is the institution going to be an institution which is to be devised and carried on, in the interests of India, which is to serve the needs of India ? And if the rest of the world owing to their ignorance of the problem of India do not understand the raison d' être of the institution which is to serve Indian purposes and Indian needs, is Sir Basil Blackett going to sacrifice that part of our necessity to the attraction that the rest of the world will at least applaud his ideal ? We, at any rate, Sir, cannot be a party to what may be approved of in England, America, Germany, France or Russia. What we want is what will suit us, what we can approve of and what we can see clearly, will serve our best interests and the best of our needs. We have been told, Sir, that this measure will bring us financial Swaraj. There are few in this House who believe that we can have financial Swaraj before we have political Swaraj, because both finances and military power are most important to political supremacy. I, therefore, Sir, am not prepared to expect financial Swaraj in this measure ; but I take the Finance Member at his word and I am prepared to look at this measure with the utmost good will, and, as I said in my minute of dissent, I will give the best in me to mould it in the manner which I think will suit the country. And to that end, Sir, what is it that is now the difference between the Finance Member and Members on this side of the House ? All that we say is that there should be no private capital brought in in order to have, what I may call, a nominal electorate—I will not call it a sham electorate—nominal electorate, to see that we have independent directors ; we will not have private capital in this bank under any consideration. The next point is directors and an electorate or electorates which will ensure to us that the bank will be carried on from the point of view of serving India first and serving anybody else afterwards ; when I say serving India first, I mean, serving the needs of India, serving the requirements of India first and foremost and the requirements of anybody else, including, if I may say so, with all respect but with the fullest emphasis at my command, even the requirements of England, after India's best needs are served. (Applause.) Let the Finance Member put before us a scheme of directorate which will ensure us this and every Member on this side of the House will acclaim it and will support it. He says, Sir, that we should not have an electorate where, as he says, there may be political influence. Now, Sir, nobody, not even my esteemed friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, is anxious to have a political electorate if anybody in this House is frightened of it. Pandit Malaviya has explained at full length his reasons for insisting on the Legislature as electors. What is it that is urged from the other side ? " No, we will not have anything which will tend to political influence." May I, Sir, venture to submit this ? It is admitted that political influence is one which should be avoided in every country which has full democratic institutions. There the party in power has all the patronage at its command, and therefore anything which may leave open political influence means the influence of the party which has the patronage at its command. Sir, in this country if there is any person or institution which has that patronage, it certainly is not this side of the House. It is the Government that have the patronage, it is the Government that can exercise political influence. The only difference is that my friends on this side of the House will not call that " political ". Sir, the way in which I personally saw canvassing done by the Government in Delhi last March, bearing in mind that even Members of the Executive Council forgot their position and condescended to canvassing to a point not known before, shows that the influence that is to be guarded against is not the influence of this side of the House but the influence of that side of the House (pointing to the Treasury Benches), the influence of the executive side, not the influence on the non-official Benches. Sir, I submit to those who talk of political influence from those Benches that the boot is on the other leg.

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Whilst I am on this question of directorate, I wish, Sir, to refer to the remarks made by my friend Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya who represents the banking interests of Madras. He asked why the Joint Committee did not recommend as directors bankers. There is a very good summary in a local paper, and I wish just to read one short paragraph from it which gives the reply to Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya in very concise and, I think, convincing terms. It says :

"Joint stock banks not represented on the Reserve Bank Board would be naturally suspicious that the Reserve Bank in the matter of credit facilities would be likely to favour the banks whose representatives are on the Reserve Bank Board to the detriment of those not represented."

And Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya will admit that you cannot put on the directorate directors of all the joint stock banks in India.

"The presence of representatives of joint stock banks would, moreover, be likely to impair that unfettered judgment by the Reserve Bank Board which it must necessarily exercise in its credit policy, if it is to fulfil its functions properly. The joint stock banker is directly involved in the credit situation which the Reserve Bank is there to control. He is an interested party and cannot therefore be regarded as an unbiassed counsellor.

The experience of South Africa is very instructive in this connection. It was thought when the Bank there was first started that joint stock banks should have representation on the Reserve Bank management, but hardly two years had elapsed before it became evident that for the reasons stated above their presence on the Board was inadvisable and an amending Act was therefore passed excluding them from the Bank Board."

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : What about England and America ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I have heard reference being made to the Bank of England on the floor of this House. Pandit Vidya Sagar Pandya, who is a great student of financial literature, should only bear this in mind that the Bank of England is an institution of its own kind in the world. It was founded 200 years ago by private enterprise and to-day that institution is looked upon, although it is owned by the proprietors of 200 years back, as a national institution. It is convention that has made the Bank of England what it is and not legislation or any rules or regulations. It will be a long day before we can aspire to anything like the Bank of England as our Reserve Bank. It is certainly a good ideal to aim at, but if Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya thinks that what is good enough for the Bank of England can even be feasible in India, all I can say is that he must read over again the history of the Bank of England.

Sir, the Finance Member said that he is quite prepared that the directorate of the Bank should be predominantly Indian. Whilst he has said that, I notice that there is no amendment on the paper from him to that effect. I do not know what he said when my Honourable friend Mr. Shanmukham Chetty was speaking—I could not hear him very clearly at this end of the Hall—but I believe Mr. Chetty referred to the same thing. While the Finance Member says that he is agreeable—I have taken down his actual words—that the Board should be predominantly Indian, may I ask him why he has left over to provide for that in his amendment ? How does he provide for a predominantly Indian Board ? Perhaps this part of the House wants that it should be so by election and not by nomination. But there is no difference of opinion between him and us on the main ground. He also said that he is in accord with the Assembly that the Board should be Indian in character and outlook. But why does not the Finance Member provide for it in his amendment ? Let him bring up the necessary amendment. In the amendments that he has so far put forward—and I see he has put forward a very large number of them—there is no provision for any of these. Therefore, I wish to ask whether these are mere hopes which he has expressed or whether he will put these very good and high sentiments of his into actual practice by putting before us relevant amendments.

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Now, Sir, I wish to point out that in trying to institute a Reserve Bank for India by this Statute, it may well be said that we are building the structure of the Indian finance and currency policy from the top instead of from the bottom. How many indigenous banks are there to-day in India that you really want a Reserve Bank on the top of them all ? The House may have heard the figures last time when there was a discussion in Delhi that in America they thought of having a Federal Reserve Bank only on the top of 36,000 banking branches all over the country. In Canada there are 4,000 of these and, at any rate, last year when we were on the Royal Commission we were told that Canada was still considering the idea of having a Reserve Bank. In India, Sir, the Schedule to the Bill will show that there are in all barely 60 banks which have a capital of 3 lakhs and over. Of these 60, there are a number which are known to Government and to some of us as being in a moribund condition and almost awaiting liquidation. If you deduct these and also deduct the powerful British or foreign banks, how many banks are there left ? Hardly a dozen, Sir, with a capital of something like Rs. 25 lakhs and over. And, Sir, for the sake of these few banks you want a Reserve Bank, a Reserve Bank which will compel these banks to put in 7½ per cent. of their current account deposit with the Reserve Bank without interest, and 3 per cent. of their period deposits without interest. The opinions that have been circulated to the Members of this House contain the opinions of at least four or five leading indigenous banks who point out that if these provisions of 7½ per cent. and 3 per cent. compulsory deposits are approved of by the Assembly, the only result which could follow would be that the indigenous banks will either have to lend at dearer rates than they do at present or they will have to close down. To-day these banks are just able to carry on ; anyway, they are not multiplying very fast when there is no compulsory deposit out of their current accounts or period deposits. You now propose to handicap these indigenous banks by compelling them to deposit 7½ per cent. of every hundred rupees with the Reserve Bank. Sir, this may be an ideal which may be achieved after 10, 15 or 20 years, but to-day I am sure it will work as a millstone round the necks of the indigenous banks of which we have very few indeed. My point, therefore, is that you are really building the Reserve Bank from the top. Whilst I know that many things have been done in India from the top, coming down, instead of going up from the bottom in the natural process of things, in financial and monetary matters this procedure is most dangerous and I submit that it involves such risks that it is only right for a person like myself who sees the risk that he should at least sound a note of warning to this House.

Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member said that this measure will revolutionise the Indian currency system. I have no doubt that, if this measure is carried through by stages with the greatest caution and with an eye only to the requirements of India and not to the approval of countries outside India, at least for the first few years, such a measure will bring us a good deal of relief and will in course of time revolutionise the Indian currency system. But at the moment we happen to be under a revolution—I can say without fear of any contradiction that the economic fabric, though it may not be aggressively perceived, is certainly upset. I wish to put before the House the conditions that have been developed since the first of these measures revolutionising the Indian currency system was passed last March. What has happened, Sir, since the 1st April 1927 ? All the gold reserves that were left in the currency reserve of India have gone. Since the 1st April 1926, 29½ millions pounds of our gold reserve have disappeared. There were about 5 to 6 millions left on 1st April 1927 and that has gone. Silver belonging to India is melting away slowly but surely. I wish to ask the Honourable the Finance Member whether it is his intention to sell only the English bar silver which is with the Government of India or to sell all bar silver, whether English or country bar silver, because I know that he definitely gave us an undertaking in the Joint Committee....

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Hear, hear.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I am afraid I cannot confirm what my Honourable friend Mr. Mehta said. I hope the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett will confirm what I say. I was saying, Sir, that the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett definitely gave an undertaking in the Joint Committee that he will not sell the rupee coin. I make that assertion, Sir, and if the Honourable the Finance Member wants to contradict it, let him do so here and now.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : I am afraid I must contradict it at once.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Hear, hear.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Then, I venture to say that there was the grossest misunderstanding in the Joint Committee. The Honourable the Finance Member definitely and unequivocally, Sir, gave an undertaking....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not entitled to refer to any undertaking given by the Government except in so far as such undertaking is embodied in the Report of the Joint Committee.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : It is referred to in the Report of the Joint Committee. With due deference to you, Sir, I submit that the policy of selling silver is a subject which is very pertinent to the motion now before the House.

Mr. President : The Chair does not suggest that this is not a matter pertinent to the discussion before the House. What the Chair suggests is that if the undertaking is not embodied in the Report of the Joint Committee, the Honourable Member is not entitled to refer to it.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Hear, hear.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I will put it in another way. I wish to ask the Honourable the Finance Member to state in his reply to this discussion whether it is the intention of the Government of India to melt India's rupees in the currency reserve and sell them in the Indian market or not. I wish to say only this, that we can quite understand the Government of India selling the surplus English bar silver there. One can understand it. But here I must not be misinterpreted or misunderstood as approving that. I would not even think of the Government of India selling the locally made bar silver. But when the Honourable the Finance Member says that there was no talk in the Joint Committee of his not selling rupees by melting them, all that I can say is that some of us at any rate must have been entirely dreaming there. (Laughter.) Sir, your silver is slowly melting. The loan of the Government of India, a thing on which the Honourable the Finance Member was, year after year, congratulated as being successively successful, has this year been a failure. He has had to resort to borrowing in London. He has already borrowed to the extent of £5 millions. He has had to resort to short period borrowing in India. He has already borrowed four crores of rupees by selling Treasury Bills here. (An Honourable Member : "The ratio.") The ratio also is a question under this Bill. Now, I wish to ask whether all this is in the best interest of India and of the masses of India ? I wish to ask whether all these can be said to be what the Assembly was prepared to reconcile itself to. Whilst on this topic, I will not quote any paper from Bombay because that has a certain prejudice on the minds of Honourable Members on the other side. I am now quoting from a Calcutta paper, a paper by which the Honourable the Finance Member at times swears here. What does that paper say ? It says :

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

"Apparently the Mussolinis of finance, entrenched behind their official wall, can ignore these, but not so the banks and merchants who have to pay their way".

The paper says this in referring to the recent attack in the Press on the Exchange Bank for their alleged demand to force the Government of India to buy sterling at a rate less than 1*s.* 5$\frac{1}{32}$d. net. This is from the Englishman, dated 29th July 1927. This Mussolini, Sir, that is the Honourable the Finance Member, entrenched behind his official walls—if the Honourable the Finance Member feels proud at this comparison I wish him joy of it—can ignore this, but not so the banks and merchants. India shudders at the result of the policy followed by the Honourable Member. He would not listen to the warnings given to him. He deliberately misunderstood us. He misconstrued us. He got the Assembly to approve of an avoidable disturbance to India's financial equilibrium. But this is not all. Here is an extract from a paper in which my friend Mr. Moore has a hand. The Statesman of the 25th August 1927 refers to how the second lot of two crores of Treasury Bills had to be sold at a higher rate than the first one, that is by about six annas. The paper goes on to say :

"Inter-bank call money is still quoted at the same rate."

That is the same rate as when the previous Treasury Bills were put up.

"The higher rate, which the Government have had to pay for this week's Treasury Bills, is to be rather accounted for by apprehensions of prospective stringency".

Last year, the Finance Member congratulated himself that owing to his policy money was not in demand at all in India in August. Within 12 months, by his policy which was conceived in the best interests of India, he has changed the whole thing to such an extent that not only are private banks fair borrowers, but the Government of India happen to be the best borrowers to-day with their short period borrowings, six-month Treasury Bills. The paper also indicates that in order to relieve the stringency in the money market in India during the next busy season, the Honourable the Finance Member may have to borrow in London and issue currency against those sterling borrowings in India. This is indicated in this cutting. I wish to ask the Honourable the Finance Member if the Government of India are thinking of any such device for relieving the financial stringency brought about by the policy which the Honourable the Finance Member himself strongly recommended this Assembly to pass last March.

In conclusion, I have only to refer to a very pertinent article in the Statist of 6th August 1927, page 217. With your permission, Sir, I wish to read a paragraph from this article which I think is quite useful at this juncture when this Bill is being considered. The article says :

"The age of secret diplomacy may have passed away in the sphere of international politics, but it would seem to live on in that of international finance, if we are to judge from the extreme reticence of the authorities attending the recent Bankers' conference at New York. There seems no reason why discussions of this sort should be surrounded by an air of mystery. It is not suggested that the public should always be kept fully informed as to the progress of delicate negotiations relating to high finance. The disadvantages of such a course are obvious. The authorities and experts concerned would have to consider not only what was best for the digestion of the financial world, but also what was more pleasing to an undiscriminating popular palate. At the same time, complete secrecy on the part of the international central bankers would appear to be unjustified. The problems under discussion at New York, for instance, touch profoundly the interests of production, trade, and social life the world over. It is difficult to see how the bankers could have injured themselves by greater frankness, taking the public partly into their confidence. They might indeed derive help in the conduct of their very responsible and delicate tasks from a statement as to the general course of the discussions setting forth any decisions reached in matters of principle."

1 P.M. Then, Sir, the article goes on and says :

"The position of London itself is a particularly difficult one. Though sterling is at a high record in the gold Exchange as a whole yet London has little prospect of receiving gold. Those centres where our currency is at a premium are not free gold markets ; they take all the gold they can get, but give out none when the Exchanges move against them, whereas London is liable to lose gold to any country whose currency happens to be at a premium.

This position constitutes one of the major problems of the past-war gold standard. Its only immediate solution is the difficult and delicate one of persuading the lesser gold standard countries to renounce definitely all attempts to accumulate gold reserves of their own and to be content with the more humble, but less expensive and equally secure, system of the gold Exchange standard. The situation could be greatly relieved, too, by the establishment of more or less free gold markets in Paris and Madrid. France holds the largest gold reserve in Europe, and Spain the third largest, but their huge stocks of the metal are at present effectively outside the world's monetary system."

To this, Sir, I wish to add only one sentence from a letter again by Sir Daniel Hamilton to the Editor of the Statesman. It appeared in the Statesman of 4th January last. Sir Daniel Hamilton says :

"Is it not humiliating that the great Bank of England should have to go down on its knees to the Federal Bank of America when it runs short of gold while India's agricultural industry only waits to be organised to provide India's Reserve Bank with all the gold the Empire needs ?"

Now, Sir, this statement of fact from a paper of the standing of the Statist and this appeal from a person of the standing of Sir Daniel Hamilton have very great significance. If England needs gold in order to preserve her position in the world, and if the Government of India will, instead of beating about the bush, only take this country and this Assembly into their confidence, I have not the least doubt that India approached in this straight direct manner will agree to stand by England even at this juncture. In my minute of dissent, under the head of "The importance of the free inflow of Gold" I said—and I wish to repeat those few sentences here :

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

"It has however been claimed that for the speedy reconstruction of the currency systems of other important countries disturbed by the War the greatest possible economy should be exercised in drawing on the world's stock of gold. The co-operation of these other countries in this connection, either with each other, or with India, is, however, neither assured, nor within sight, so far as I am aware ; each is pursuing its individualistic national policy. If at any stage an international agreement should be framed for the economical distribution of the world's gold supplies, I am confident that India would be prepared to exercise self-denial in her gold requirements in proportion to that of other countries whose currency reserves were parallel to her own. But it is of paramount importance that any regulation of the inflow of gold should never be attempted by executive action, or by the currency authority. The main principles of the gold standard should be embodied in statutes, and varied, if necessary, only by amendment to such statutes,, i.e., with the fullest publicity and the concurrence of the Legislature."

Sir, a financially and economically strong India would be as much of an asset to England as India was as far as physical power is concerned during the last War. I appeal, Sir, to the Government of India and also to the British Cabinet not to disturb deliberately the normality of India's financial and economic conditions. If my appeal be not heeded, I have not the slightest doubt that England will live to regret the day when the normality of India's financial and economic conditions, poor as she is, were so deliberately disturbed. I wish therefore to appeal for frankness and mutual trust. Take this country and the Assembly into your confidence. Do nothing with the nominal assent of this Assembly by a snatch vote either here or there. If England has only the statesmanship and the imagination to realise that, constituted as this Assembly is, she could still appeal to this Assembly under the circumstances which have been described in the quotation from the Statist, I, Sir, at any rate feel that this Assembly will rise to the occasion if properly approached. Any short cuts, any other methods, must, I am afraid, engender distrust and want of mutual confidence, and that would be most suicidal in any measure regarding finance and currency. With this appeal, I support the motion.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not propose to take up the time of the House by indulging in metaphorical descriptions, often very mixed, of the Reserve Bank Bill as it started, as it developed and as it may develop hereafter. I am neither a banker nor have a banking clientele ; nor am I a currency expert. But I am a student of public finance and public affairs and from the point of view of such a student I desire to state why I came to the conclusion that in all the circumstances we are in, the institution of a national Central Reserve Bank is a measure of distinct benefit to the country. As I conceive it, a Central Bank subserves three distinct public purposes. They therefore involve the discharge of public functions, and, as I shall presently show, they can only be discharged by a public authority—not controlled by the Government on the one hand and certainly responsible to the public on the other. It cannot be carried out by any private agency, however eminent, and as the question of a shareholders' bank has been discussed threadbare, I do not want again to say how a shareholders' bank is wholly unsuitable for this purpose.

Sir, in the first place a Central Reserve Bank is what is known as a Bank of Issue. It seeks to control and to regulate the issue of paper currency in this country and, so far as we are concerned, in this unfortunate country a Central Bank will have the duty of maintaining the stability of the token currency in this country, namely, the rupee, the note printed on silver. These two duties, as we all know, have been till now discharged by the Government. That they have been discharged with disastrous consequences to India's economic interests in the past has been admitted on all hands ; and I therefore think on that simple ground it is necessary that this duty should be taken away from the hands of the Government which is acting under the leading strings of the India Office and the London money market all along and that it should be entrusted to the hands of an authority in India responsible to and representative of public opinion. That, I think, Sir, is the first important ground upon which we as laymen think that a Central Bank in India ought to be established to take charge of the issue and the regulation of currency notes and to maintain the stability of the rupee. My Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas was pleading eloquently for some more light, some more publicity, in regard to the transactions by which the Government have been manipulating the currency since the day in March last when this House, in spite of the unanimous protest of public opinion, fixed the ratio at 1*s.* 6*d.* If these disastrous consequences have fallen from the fact that the Government has been in charge of these operations, I submit that that furnishes the one solid reason why this thing should be taken out of the hands of Government and lodged in the hands of a body who will be responsible to the public. And that is the reason, Sir, why I again say that we should support this Bank. We feel, Sir, that in the next place this Central Bank, in regard to its second function—a function which has been till now entrusted to the Imperial Bank of India—will act as the Government's bankers. The attempt to make the Imperial Bank act as the Government's bankers has been made for ten years now. But the fact remains that the Imperial bank has no control over the currency and could only control the expansion of credit in an extremely limited way by having what Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas rightly condemned as a kind of secret alliance with the Government of India and Whitehall. This difficulty, it seems to me, furnishes the second reason why an independent banking corporation should be established to act as the Government's bankers. Sir, so far as this country is concerned, the Government's bankers ought to be put in a perfectly independent position. I certainly object to a private shareholders' bank like the Imperial Bank, however eminently it may be officered at the present time, taking charge of the duty of acting as the Government's bankers. The system which prevailed in this country prior to the time when the functions of the Imperial Bank were expanded to enable it to act as the Government's bankers, is one which may be compared to what is called in the United States of America as the independent treasury system. And even to-day, except for the few branches which the Imperial Bank of India has established in many parts of the country, so far as the manipulation and movement of Government's resources are concerned, the treasury system continues to be the main channel by which the Government moves its finances. That I say, Sir, is in the first place economically not beneficial to the country, and in the second place it is also injurious to the financial interests of the country.

[Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar.]

At a season when it is most important for the agriculturists of this country to have fluid currency in large quantities, the Government rigorously collect their taxes from the tax-payers of this country. When the agriculturist wants to move his crop, the Government collects taxes in cash and puts it into their treasury vaults. By doing that they are withdrawing a huge quantity of currency from circulation at the very time when the agriculturist badly wants that currency in circulation. That is an evil for which we ought to find a remedy. The best way would be, I think, for all the Government's money to be deposited with a Central Bank of acknowledged eminence, which would put this money again into circulation in the course of its operations with its creditors, other banks and producers. Therefore, Sir, I consider that from the point of view of the peculiar conditions of this country, namely, the fact that the agriculturists have got to pay their taxes in the busy season, that currency ought not to be tied up but an agency should exist which can use and expand the currency during the busy season. And that agency should not be merely a Government agency. Government, we know, has been managing this thing not in the interest of the agriculturists who want this currency, but in the interests of British financiers, of the India Office and others. Therefore we say that this duty of regulating the currency to the requirements of trade at the time when trade requires it, should be entrusted to an independent central authority. We know, Sir, that so far as the Government is concerned, they have often merely abstracted all this money and put it into their vaults. The next thing that happens is that huge quantities of this money find their way by transfer to the Secretary of State's treasury in London. If this money were at least to remain in this country we know that some people here would get the benefit of it. But these large quantities which are sent to the Secretary of State's treasury are ultimately lent out to the London money market on very easy terms. That is the system which now exists, and the establishment of a Central Bank will get rid of that system. So in the point of view that a Central Bank established in this country and acting as the Government's banker would use the monies which Government gets into its hands for the purpose of benefiting Indian trade only and not European trade and London financiers, lies the second reason which has influenced me in agreeing to the establishment of a Central Bank. The third reason is that this Central Bank is expected to discharge the duties of a banker's bank. The Imperial Bank at the present time accommodates bankers from time to time ; but it is solely at its sweet will and pleasure, and my friend Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya has exposed the manner in which the Imperial Bank has been discharging the duties to the public whose monies it has in such profusion locked up in its various operations. Sir, we think that so far as any bank can function as a bankers' bank, it ought not to be a shareholders' bank. It ought to be a bank which is subject to the legislative control of this Assembly. It should be a bank wholly Indian, acting wholly in the interests of India, and it should be able to help bankers in the difficult times ahead of us. My friend, Sir Purshotamdas, very properly said that in this country banking is in its infancy and he expressed the fear that the establishment of a Central Bank with the Imperial Bank may have the effect of crippling the activities of these banks. But, Sir, between the alternative of having the Government's monies abstracted to London, between the alternative of having those monies put into the hands of a private corporation like the Imperial Bank of India and the alternative of having it put into the hands of a Central Bank whose Directors will consist of a majority of Indian elected representatives, I consider the House can have no difficulty whatever in coming to a proper conclusion. Sir, so far as the Central Bank is concerned the necessity for having directors outside of the run of commercial corporations, whether they are Chambers of Commerce or Federations of Chambers of Commerce or the Imperial Bank and others, seems to me to be self-evident. Because even in London, the Bank of England has long since ceased to be a kind of private corporation. The Governors and Directors there do not deem themselves to be persons who are there to earn dividends. They deem themselves to be public servants owing a duty to the public as trustees. It was not so in earlier times. Walter Bagehot long ago said that the duty of a Central Bank like the Bank of England should be to conserve the resources which come into their hands for the banking and commercial operations of the country and that the Directors are trustees for the public, to keep a banking reserve on their behalf. In so far as a Central Bank has to perform those public functions, such a Bank cannot be a mere shareholders' bank, but a group of persons acting as trustees for the public. That is why we in this country say that such a bank ought not to be put into the hands of a group of financiers and shareholders who may elect the directors. We look upon the Directors of the Central Bank as trustees and custodians of Government monies who have a public duty to perform in the use of that money. For this reason, I feel it my duty to support the principle of a Central Bank. As for the question of the Directorate, I am not at all enamoured of indulging in figurative descriptions. I do hope, Sir, that as practical business men here, we shall be able to find a solution for this, so that this Bank shall have at its head a group of Directors who will represent the Indian public, who will be predominantly Indian, who will be elected by Indian constituencies and who will mould this Bank to be an instrument for the economic uplift of this country.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, so this is the Reserve Bank after all. It is the enfant terrible that made so much noise throughout the Indian world. A child naturally cries immediately it is born. But its cries are drowned in this case by a chorus of congratulations from far and near. Conceived by the Finance Member, it was licked into shape by the Royal Commission on Currency. It has the features of cross-bred parentage. Its lineaments are partly American and partly African. It has Indian blood in its veins. But it shows the sparkle of Indo-British interest in its eyes. It gives evident signs of precociousness. So a playmate and a companion has been provided for it in the Imperial Bank, and among its playthings will be Currency, note issue and financial credit. Its swaddling-clothes will be of gold. The indispensable Indian ayah will be provided among its caretakers in the form of some Indian Directors. But while its nominal guardianship will be entrusted to the Governor

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

General in Council, its apron strings will be in the hands of the Indian Finance Member, to be pulled through a complicated mechanism, whose working will be mysteriously concealed. The Indian Legislature is now called upon to witness its baptism, and to give it a charter along with other blessings.

I shall not, however, pursue the simile any further and come to close quarters with the merits of the Bank. The first claim on its behalf is that it is a measure of liberalism in Indian finance. I must frankly admit that there is some truth in that claim ; for the immediate apparent effect of the Reserve Bank will be to liberate India from the tight control of the State Secretary upon Indian finances—a control which that authority never exercised with uniform wisdom and very often exercised in the interest of the London financiers and London money market in general. It was not only a suspicion but a mere hard fact. As between the State Secretary and the Indian Finance Member, however, there is a definite choice, and I prefer the Indian Finance Member, notwithstanding the fact that his training, his connections and his outlook are deeply coloured with a British bias. I prefer the Indian Finance Member to the State Secretary, because the former after all has his actual work and his official responsibilities cut out in direct Indian affairs, and he must be in the nature of things more amenable to Indian public opinion as expressed through the legislature or outside. Every Finance Member has a certain sense of Indian responsibility, and the past record shows that many a Finance Member has struggled and fought with the State Secretary in the Indian interests, though the domestic quarrel had to be carefully concealed behind the purdah of official discipline. I say, therefore, with conviction and deliberate purpose, that the Reserve Bank is in theory at least a measure of financial liberalism to this extent, that much of the real control of finance, currency and credit will be transferred from the State Secretary to the Government of India. This is a part of our large scheme of Indianization in a broad sense, though there may be years before an Indian is actually appointed to the office of the Finance Member. But now the Secretary of State being eliminated from the scheme, the Government of India should be prepared to share that transferred control on the Reserve Bank with us, the Legislature. Then again, the Reserve Bank is certainly a progressive step in the direction of the financial organization of this country. For, though every Indian problem has a special lining of circumstances to it, India cannot keep itself completely detached from the developments of financial theory and practice that is going on in the entire civilized world.

But having said this much for the idea of the Reserve Bank, I must also point out that the Reserve Bank, such as is envisaged in the present Bill, is not going either to give us all the benefits that accrue from such an institution in the advanced countries, or free us entirely from some of the evils which are inherent in the currency system and financial organization in India. There is nothing in the Reserve Bank which will temper, much less eliminate, the defects of a system of managed currency and credit. There is an attempt in the scheme of the Reserve Bank to bring us in line with the up-to-date theory and practice accepted by these advanced countries. But count is not being taken of the fact that in none of those countries, there is such a system of debased silver currency as has been obtaining in India. And secondly, that the Indian public has not had the benefit of the training, through which those countries passed, in making their way up to an ideal scheme of currency in which metallic currency is eliminated. It is amusing enough to see that whereas in political matters, India is not regarded as fit to touch even the fringe of the system of self-government, owing to her social and educational backwardness, she is regarded in this banking sphere alone to be ready to adopt a financial regimen, whose merits are still contested in the advanced countries themselves. The return to the Gold Standard in England was itself contested, though I know it has ultimately been adopted. But there is still uncertainty as to whether the countries will or will not return to the system which prevailed before the War, and resort to the use of gold coin, and the free convertibility of currency.

As regards the ban put upon the circulation of gold coin by the Parliament Act of 1925, there are people who hold that this bar is not a wise one, and cannot be maintained for ever. On the other hand, Prof. Flux of America thinks that "the time will come soon again when perfect convertibility will be established and specie payments will again be resumed in some European countries ; and that many of the European countries will rather choose, instead of facing a further considerable change in domestic price levels, to re-establish gold convertibility at some new parity. In America, some kind of bank notes even to-day do bear on their face a promise to pay in gold coin, and the promise is also redeemed". My point is that opinion about the present system of gold standard and the elimination of convertibility is not unanimous. But unfortunately that system is being foisted upon India through the present Act and the Reserve Bank. The root evil of the system of a debased currency in India is not eradicated, and we shall be left at the mercy of the financiers who try to maintain prices and credit by endless manipulation. The silver rupee in India is admittedly a note on silver, and it cannot be converted into gold, though its relation to gold is theoretically fixed by Statute. But as Mr. Benjamin Anderson of America says :

"Irredeemable paper money is diseased money. It is cured only by gold redemption accompanied by balanced budgets and sound public finance."

He says further :

"You cannot stabilize irredeemable paper money by money market policy. Gold payments alone will stabilize paper money."

The proposed Reserve Bank is intended not to cure the unsound currency system in India, but somehow to bring it in a line, for other purposes, with foreign nations, who propose simply to manipulate the quantity of money and the bank credit, by various devices, namely, variations in the discount rates, open market operations on the part of Central Banks and the co-ordinated policy on the part of public treasury—in borrowing and repaying. Some simple-minded people seemed to think that in itself, the Reserve Bank is an Avatar of salvation for India. But they will soon be disillusioned when the Bank will begin to operate. No doubt, a high authority has said that in a well-governed community, all political power should be wielded by bankers. But this situation will be arrived at only when civilization reaches the apex of its achievement. The banking system of England was for a century an object of legitimate pride for that nation. But it was discovered in the time of the war that the banks succumbed to the wills and the pressure of the British Cabinet. If that can happen to English banks with their tradition of strength and independence, one can easily imagine what can happen to the Reserve Bank, at the hands of the Government, though the Finance Member over and over again assures us that his object in treating a Reserve Bank is to create an institution which will be free from Government control. If the English money market could be made by Government an instrument of war, the Indian money market can conceivably be made by the Government of India an instrument of controlling currency, credit and prices to the disadvantage of the Indian people, and in the interests of foreign nations and foreign money markets. From this point of view, we cannot but closely scrutinize the provisions in this Bill on the subject of the gold reserves of the Bank and its uses. But though, apparently, there is an attempt to free the Reserve Bank from the Government control, it can easily be seen that that control actually comes in in a number of ways. The pretence is really funny that while the least touch of the Legislature with the proposed Bank spoils it by political influence and pressure, the combined nominees of the Government and the British commercial community in India will save the Bank from that influence and pressure. The Bank is a hybrid both in respect of its constitution and the agency of its control. And I have no hesitation in endorsing the suspicion which some people have expressed, that the Reserve Bank is a device to transfer the financial power from England to India, simply for the purpose of saving the State Secretary from odium and screening the operations of selfish British interests. Then, again, it is not clearly seen why the co-existence of two banks like the Reserve Bank and the Imperial Bank is necessary in India, when the Imperial Bank is not being invested with powers of note-issue, and the Reserve Bank is being allowed to do commercial operations. Even for the purpose of a central financial and banking authority, the two might have been amalgamated into one, and the existing machinery of the Imperial Bank might have been adapted to the needs of the case. There is nothing in the scheme of the Reserve Bank to guarantee the hope that adequate banking facilities will be created in this great country where they do not already exist, or that banking habits will be taught to the people whose financial interests are going to be controlled, in the light of the latest theory and practice of the money market. There is no guarantee that gold would be sedulously conserved in India and not frittered away abroad. There is no guarantee that the gold reserve will be used only in improving the internal material condition of the people of this country. There is no guarantee that the gold standard will be brought home to the people by the introduction of gold coinage and the establishment of convertibility. There is no guarantee that the gold resources of India will not be wasted for the maintenance of exchange ratios in the interests of Government. More convincing proof will, therefore, be required before the Indian people can be persuaded to welcome the Reserve Bank as a saviour, and I for one shall not regard it as a calamity if it happens for any reason that Government withdraw the Bill or the Bank does not come into existence till the present agreement with the Imperial Bank terminates, so that we may get more time to consider the position with a larger experience.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

I would conclude by just referring to one quotation from an expert, because that will show that these suspicions are not entertained merely by laymen like myself, but they have been held by people who know more of these things. He puts the questions and answers thus :

"Why does England want India to establish such a Bank ? The answer is :— To get hold of India's Gold Reserves to manipulate them as it thought best. The lay reader will say this is mere prejudice on my part, but fortunately for us Sir Earnest Harvey let the cat out of the bag in Australia. When he failed to get them to agree to the kind of Bank that he wanted, he advised the private Banks to hand over their Gold to the Commonwealth Bank (to be sent by it to London to be invested) or to themselves to send it to London, and we learn from Sir Hilton Young's paper of 28th May 1927, that the suggestion was not viewed with favour by the Australian Banks. His recommendation to Australia may be summed up—Establish a Central Bank. If you don't like to do so, don't; but give us your Gold in any case."

One is naturally afraid that that may happen in the case of India also.

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla (Bombay Central Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, so much has been said against Bombay since the ratio question came into being that it was refreshing to hear from the lips of Sir Alexander Murray the praise of a Bombay man. That a Bombay man should have been the outstanding feature and the outstanding member in the Royal Commission is a great satisfaction to those who represent the Presidency here, and let us hope that by having a Bombay man in the Executive Council in the Honourable Mr. Crerar that Bombay will receive the attention which is due to it. (Applause.) Sir, when the ratio question came up for discussion I criticised the Honourable the Finance Member for bringing forward a policy which suited England; but on this occasion, Sir, I must admit that the Honourable the Finance Member is very sincere in giving the best in the Reserve Bank for the benefit of this country. I may quote the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member which he delivered before the Delhi University on 23rd November, 1926, in which he says :

"At one stroke control of Indian currency and finance will be transferred from a centre situated at some point between Whitehall and Delhi into the sole control of India."

I may be permitted to mention here, Sir, that the Honourable the Finance Member's experience in the question of ratio must have been very bitter in order to arrive at the conclusion that the whole policy of credit and finance must be governed in India. But, Sir, while giving him this praise, I must sound a note of warning. He must be aware that he is anxious to give what is best for India. But in his anxiety to do the best, he must not be in a hurry or show impatience. I may, Sir, quote the instance of the Governor of Bombay. We had in Sir George Lloyd one of the cleverest Governors of Bombay and in his anxiety to do the best for Bombay, to relieve the congestion, he introduced the Development Department. He did not take heed of the representatives of the people that he should go slow, that he should see for himself whether the Development Department would be a success and should be undertaken by Government ; and in his hurry, Sir, as soon as he left the shores of India....

Mr. President : Order, order. These remarks are not at all relevant to the question before the House.

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : With due respect to you, Sir, I am only comparing with the position of the Development.....

Mr. President : Order order.

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : I am only showing the parallel in order to avoid its repetition.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not in order in referring to this matter.

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : I was only going to compare the position with the Development Department and sound a note of warning Sir, I would tell the Honourable the Finance Member that if he feels that what this side of the House is prepared to accept is not what is best for India, then the better course for him would be to withdraw the Bill rather than to have a compromise of a character which would make his name not spoken of in a manner which it deserves not only in this House but throughout the country regarding the Reserve Bank.

I wish to take one exception, Sir, to the remark of my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas has already dealt with it, and I think it was very unwise of him to have mentioned the informal discussion.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member need not take the trouble to defend His Excellency the Viceroy. The Treasury Benches are there to undertake that task.

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : Sir, I was not going to defend His Excellency but I was pointing it out to Mr. Jamnadas Mehta that the argument advanced by him was out of order and unjustifiable ; that if the Bill was to be carried through, and if the Bill was not suited to the popular view of the House, then he would ask the Viceroy not to give his consent. If that is so, is it not the duty of the Governor General to be acquainted with all the views before he comes to a conclusion on a momentous Bill of this character ? I would advise my friend Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya not to press his amendment for eliciting further opinion on the Bill as amended by the Joint Select Committee. I would tell him that as the banking people all over the country are put to very great inconvenience due to uncertainty, he will realise that it is not in the interests of India to prolong this discussion. We should either accept it as amended by the Joint Committee or reject it. The only question on which the existence of the Reserve Bank depends is the question of the constitution. The Joint Committee has mentioned the question of the Legislature having the right to elect three Directors. I for my part do not think that it should be supported if we can devise a convenient scheme by which, as the Honourable the Finance Member pointed out, a predominantly Indian Directorate could be secured. But by securing this as a compromise, we must see that it is a compromise which would stand pre-eminently supported by the unanimity of this House. We should not carry the passage of the Bill clause by clause in a heated mood as we did in the case of the Ratio Bill in Delhi.

In conclusion, I would like to remind the Honourable the Finance Member of his speech which he delivered before the Delhi University in which he said that he was anxious to give his best for India, and I hope he will carry out his resolution irrespective of any other considerations :

"Its merits, will, I know, be recognised ever more and more as knowledge and understanding of it increase. Do not be content merely to listen to or repeat what I or others say about it. Read it and read it again, so that when finally the recommendations it contains are incorporated into legislative form and presented to the Legislature, the discussion may proceed in the light of intelligent appreciation, free from hearsay criticism or biased controversy, and India may drain from it every drop of virtue in it, and thereby be enabled to rebuild her currency system and practice on sound and durable foundations."

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Sir, this discussion has now gone on for a considerable time. We have listened to some very long and very interesting speeches, and I presume we are going to take this Bill into consideration and that the motion will be accepted. But, Sir, that in itself will not help us very much unless we can get over some difficulties we are up against. I believe it is generally appreciated that the Reserve Bank will be a good thing for India. As Sir Alexander Murray told us yesterday, the idea has been put off in the past and it appears to me that if we do not get it through on this occasion, it may be very many years before India has the opportunity of having another Bill by which a Reserve Bank can be established. Therefore, I suggest to this House that it should consider very seriously the particular points of difference before it runs the risk of losing this Bill. The Honourable the Finance Member has given to this subject his considerable knowledge and we have had the benefit of his advice throughout. Although the Government is unable to accept the Bill as it has emerged from the Joint Committee, I trust that with the help of the Finance Member and the scholarship and learning of this House, it may be possible to get the Bill into some shape which will be acceptable to the House. But, Sir, that is admittedly very difficult. Many Members have spoken in favour of the non-shareholders' bank as compared to the shareholders' bank. While many of the arguments which have been adduced are very pertinent, it is well to remind the House that all big corporations, banking, insurance or otherwise, are run by Boards of Directors in which it may be said the shareholders have very little voice. In my opinion, in the case of the Reserve Bank, there would not be the same aloofness of the Board from the shareholders because, I take it, there will be no objection to including a provision in this Bill by which the amount of shares which any member can hold is limited, provided the limit is reasonable. Suppose, for instance, a limit of Rs. 15,000 or Rs. 20,000 were accepted by this House as the limit of an individual shareholding, the capital of the Bank would be very widely spread. And in the event of your Board, which is originally nominated, not being satisfactory to the majority of the members, it would not be a very difficult thing to get a number of shareholders together with a considerable amount of capital and agitate for a different Board. I merely point that out to the many Members who have inferred that, once you get your Board in the first instance as nominated for the shareholders' bank, you have got to put up with it for ever, and the shareholders are not in a position to alter it. I do not think that would necessarily be the case in practice. If you take a mill with Managing Agents, it is very likely that the Directors and the Managing agents together may hold something like 70 or 80 per cent. of the shares. In that case admittedly the shareholders are in a very difficult position if they want to upset the policy of the Board. But this does not necessarily follow in this case. I suggest to the Members of this House, in view of the deadlock which is being reached in connection with the formation of the Board for a so-called State Bank, that they might take seriously into consideration again the question of the shareholders' bank. It is perfectly true that Mr. Jamnadas Mehta's tailor or somebody else's chauffeur might hold shares. But in practice there is bound to be a very large number of influential business men and financiers who will hold shares up to the maximum limit of Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 20,000, whatever it may be. In practice, surely it will be possible to get a Board which is practically entirely Indian because admittedly of this 5 crores a very large amount must be subscribed by Indians. I submit that it will be possible to get a Board which, however difficult it may seem in theory, will, in practice, be possible for India to accept as an Indian Board. Mr. Shanmukham Chetty yesterday made remarks which were taken exception to on these Benches, and he explained in defence that he merely wished that there should be Indian control. He did not object to European assistance on the Board or in the direction of the Bank. With that explanation, the matter dropped. There can be no doubt that in a bank of this sort a certain amount of European support and assistance is required and expected, but no one suggests for a moment that there is going to be anything but Indian control. I suggest that the best way to get Indian control effectively is to revert to the shareholders' bank.

[Mr. H. G. Cocke.]

3 P.M.

If we are not going to have a shareholders' bank, if that is quite impossible, the question then arises, how you are going to get a Board which will meet the case of the so-called State Bank? In all the speeches that have been made, I do not think I have heard one constructive proposition. My Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas this morning found fault with the Honourable the Finance Member because he did not put constructive amendments down on the paper. Well, everybody knows that a considerable body of Members of this House have been for the last few days racking their brains to find a suitable alternative. As far as I can ascertain, up to this moment, no very acceptable alternative has been found (An Honourable Member "Question?") Well, if one can be found or if one has been found, let us have it out. No one has produced anything which is really acceptable. The amendment I see on the paper for electoral colleges is one which, in the opinion of many Honourable Members of this House, will be extremely difficult to work. If the proposers of this amendment will in due course satisfy the House that it will be possible to work it out in a satisfactory way, then so far as these Benches are concerned, I do not expect that they would stand in their way. But we must be satisfied, and naturally everybody must be satisfied, that their suggestion of adopting these electoral colleges would produce the best results and would be workable in a satisfactory way.

There are various other provisions in the Bill which we shall be discussing in due course. They have been touched upon to-day. But I want to confine myself to the big issue, or rather I should say, the big issues which are also difficult issues. The more important questions in the Report will come up for discussion and in my opinion one appendix is a very important one. I hope everybody has read the appendix to the Report which deals with questions of gold coinage and currency. Here, I should like to read to the House, if I may, a short extract from a financial paper called The Investors' Chronicle, dated the 2nd July, 1927, which deals with the world gold situation. It says :

"Professor Gustav Cassel, in the quarterly report of the 'Skandinaviska Kreditaktiebolaget', seeks an answer to the question 'Are we faced with the continuous fall of prices?' His views deserve careful consideration, as he can claim for them partial confirmation in the actual price history of the last two years. His main point is that the world's production of gold is too scanty to cover normal requirements and that unless large economies are effected in the use of gold, a further and perhaps a continuous fall in commodity prices must occur. He claims to have information which places it beyond doubt that in fifteen years the South African gold mines will be so far exhausted as to cease to be the world's principal source of gold supplies. He estimates that the annual requirements of new gold about 1940 will be close on £150 millions and that in all probability it will not be possible to supply half that amount. He therefore emphasises the need for the systematic limitation of the monetary demand for gold. He notes the apparent tendency in the United States is to recede from the position of willingness to part with her superfluous gold, and rather to accumulate more gold, and that there is a tendency in other countries to endeavour to secure gold in the belief that this is necessary to enable them to secure a more solid basis for their monetary system. Professor Cassel fears that if matters develop upon these lines a general scramble for gold may result, and consequently a continuous fall in gold commodity prices. He urges, therefore, that all central banks should manage with a lower percentage of gold covering than has hitherto been usual, and that they should adopt the practice of holding reserves in London and New York, instead of accumulating gold stocks of their own ".

There is a very natural sentimental desire on the part of Members of this House and in the country for a gold coin. I trust that so far as this Assembly is concerned it will not cherish that wish, for it is bound to be disappointed. I realise, as I think most people do, that the time is not ripe for that to be practical politics.

I should just like to say one word on the question of the Imperial Bank and the indigenous bank. My Honourable friend Sir Alexander Murray referred yesterday to the question of the Imperial Bank, if it ceased to do commercial business, being in the skies and the exchange and the indigenous banks right below with nothing in between. Well, I do feel in connection with this Bill that we have got to consider the question of indigenous and exchange banks very carefully, particularly when we come to the clause dealing with deposits, because the effect in years to come will be that the Imperial Bank, which is being benefited by holding the Government cash balances, would be more or less in competition with the indigenous and the exchange banks. I do not think we have more than one or two bankers in this House. I think they would be prepared—I think bankers generally would be prepared—to agree with Sir Alexander Murray's remarks to the extent that they wish the Imperial Bank would go up the sky so that they would have the whole earth to themselves. (Laughter.) Personally, I am rather inclined to agree with them and disagree with my Honourable friend Sir Alexander Murray that the country would accustom itself to the indigenous banks and the exchange banks without the help of the Imperial Bank. That, however, I realise is not practical politics for the moment. We have got this Bill before us and we have got to do our best, and I do appeal to the Honourable Members of this House that if this difficulty about fixing a suitable directorate for the State Bank is not possible of solution—I have very great doubt about it myself—they should again go over to the question of a shareholders' bank and consider the few remarks I have made on that subject. I do not believe that all the objections which have been raised to the shareholders' bank in theory would actually weigh in practice. I believe you will have the best brains in this country amongst the shareholders of that bank. You will have your capital very widely spread and there will be no difficulty whatever in getting your Board. I do not think that once you have a proper Board constituted, there will be great difficulty in removing a Director and getting another in his place. (Cheers.)

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I want to make a few observations on the principal contents of this measure. The points that interest me very much at this stage are two, the nature of this bank and the character of the directorate that is going to manage the affairs of the bank. I understood till now (before Mr. Cocke's speech) that non-official opinion, both European and Indian, was inclined to agree that this bank should be a State Bank and not a shareholders' bank. I know that Sir Alexander Murray and Sir Victor Sassoon both said that they were originally inclined in favour of the idea of a shareholders' bank, but in deference to the opinion of this side of the House they were prepared to accept a State Bank in place of a shareholders' bank. To-day again, the plea has been raised by Mr. Cocke that they are in favour of a shareholders' bank. Sir, I may take the opportunity of stating on behalf of this side of the House that under no circumstances are we prepared to accept a shareholders' bank. (Hear, hear.) This Bill might be passed over our heads. The scheme might be put into operation against our will, but under no circumstances shall we agree to a shareholders' bank. The arguments against the shareholders' bank have been advanced pretty fully by Honourable gentlemen who have discussed the matter yesterday and to-day. But I will just refer to one or two more points. It is claimed on behalf of the shareholders' bank that a shareholders' bank will completely divest the Secretary of State and the Government of India at least of a great measure of the control of this Bank. I, Sir, do not accept that point of view. This Bank is not an ordinary corporation or company. The facts that in future it is going to control and manage the currency of the country, and that on many occasions it requires the sanction of Government and has to submit to Government control, show conclusively that to compare it with an ordinary corporation or company, whether it be a railway company or any other company, is entirely absurd. On every page of this Bill, Government control and Government sanction is practically written. This Bank when established is going to control the currency policy of the Government of India which will affect practically the interests of every inhabitant of India, whether he is represented on this Bank or not. Therefore, I submit, Sir, that to compare this Bank with such ordinary corporations or companies that are exclusively owned by shareholders and managed by directorates elected by the shareholders without any interference from or reference to the Government does not hold good at all. Then, Sir, it has also been pointed out by several speakers that the shareholders' control over this Bank, as we know from past experience of banks and corporations of this kind, will be practically imaginary, that it will not be real. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya yesterday showed to you from figures gathered from the proceedings of the general meetings of the Imperial Bank what interest the shareholders of the Imperial Bank have been taking in the affairs of the Imperial Bank for the last 5 years. This morning I received a letter from an Indian shareholder of the Imperial Bank at Calcutta, showing that at the last general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank only 3 per cent. out of the total voting strength of the Bank took part in the proceedings, in spite of the extensive canvassing that was done by the directors and officials of the Bank, and that the point of view of the Indian section was entirely neglected. This fact, although the majority of the shares are held by Indians shows the dangers of a shareholders' bank. That conclusively establishes that under no circumstances can we accept the plea that a shareholders' bank will give a real representation to the shareholders. I may say at once that there is no desire on the part of the House to exclude the European mercantile community, who have mercantile, commercial or other interests in this country, from the management of this Bank ; but one point is absolutely clear and I want to make it more clear, if possible—that we shall not be a party to any measure for the establishment of a Reserve Bank which does not secure to the Indian population a majority of the elected representatives on the directorate of the Bank. If that is assured to us by any scheme whatsoever we shall agree to it ; otherwise we shall not agree to it whatever the Government might pass over our heads. That is the test by which we are going to look at this measure. I share in full, Sir, the apprehensions that have been expressed so eloquently by my friend Pandit Malaviya and by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas about this Bank and the Imperial Bank practically starving and strangling the indigenous banks of this country. I have been connected with indigenous banking in this country for the last 30 years of my life and I know what they have suffered at the hands of the Imperial Bank with all the credit balances it gets from Government. Therefore, with two such Banks running in competition with indigenous banks, really the desire of the Government to develop indigenous banks and to provide more banking facilities for the country people becomes almost nominal, a farce. The Imperial Bank will still be financed with Government balances. I do not agree with Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas that the Imperial Bank is no longer going to have any help from the Indian Treasury. The Bill as passed by the Joint Committee still provides for large sums of money being given to the Imperial Bank for the next 20 years to come, free of all interest. Well, that gives them a substantial advantage over the indigenous banks. That advantage when coupled with the provision that all indigenous banks shall have to place a certain amount of their deposits in this Reserve Bank, will show how completely the indigenous banks will be hard hit in competition with these two Banks. The Imperial Bank is still going to be the favourite child of the Government for 20 years to come in the matter of having a large amount of Government money at its disposal without any interest and also large amounts on very very small interest. I therefore share the apprehensions of my Honourable friends Pandit Malaviya and Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas that indigenous banks will suffer a great deal in competition with these two Banks. I also share with them the view that perhaps it would have been better if, to start with, the new Central Bank had not been proposed. I share to a certain extent the view of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas and Sir John Bell that perhaps it might have been a better scheme if the Reserve Bank had come in the course of natural evolution. This opinion was also expressed by such an expert journal as the Statist of England quoted by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas and also in another article which appeared in one of the November issues of the Statist. But, Sir, perhaps we have passed beyond that stage. The Government is committed and we do not want to stand in the way of Government establishing this Bank as a Reserve Bank. We will take all these risks which have been pointed out but only subject to one condition, that the management of this Bank is going to be in the hands of a Directorate upon which there is not only a majority of Indians but a majority of elected Indians and a substantial one too, so that the Directorate may represent the people of this country in a real sense. This Bank is going to deal with Government balances. This Bank is going to deal with the currency policy of Government. This Bank is going practically to affect everyone in this country. I want to ask, Sir, if the management and control of this Bank is going to be put in the hands of the capitalists only, either Indian or foreign ? I think, Sir, it would be entirely wrong to do so. The general tax-payer, the general people of the country, must get some real representation on this Bank and a substantial representation in order to make this Bank acceptable to the people of this country.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Sir, I do not see any reason why the proposal of the Joint Committee should not be acceptable to the Government or to the other side. Some facts were stated by Pandit Malaviya relating to the banks of other countries in Europe, and the reply given by my Honourable friend Sir Alexander Murray was that there was no comparison between these countries and this country. I admit that, but the fact that those countries have responsible self-government and this country has not, makes it all the more incumbent that the popular representatives of the people in the Legislatures of this country ought to have a voice in making the Directorate of this Bank. It makes it still more necessary in the case of a perfectly irresponsible Government, and, considering that that Government at least in our judgment does not always represent the best interests of the country though they may think they do perfectly honestly, I submit that the wish on this side of the House to have a voice in the management of this Bank is perfectly reasonable and legitimate ; I think the best way of satisfying the aspirations of the people in this respect is that provided by the Joint Committee. At the same time, I may at once say that if the only alternative is either to have that scheme or the Bank at all, and if the Honourable the Finance Member is going to carry out his threat that if that " monstrosity " (in inverted commas) is perpetrated he would rather withdraw the Bill, we do not want to go to that extreme. We shall be prepared to accept any scheme which will give a substantial voice to a decent number of the people of this country who are interested in commerce or otherwise in the affairs of this Bank in selecting representatives for the Directorate of this Bank. We shall be perfectly willing to agree to any such scheme. My Honourable friend Mr. Cocke said that no constructive scheme had been proposed. A constructive scheme has been put on the amendment paper but it may not be acceptable to him. I may tell him that if he or anybody else proposes any scheme which satisfies the fundamental principle I have laid down, namely, that it should give substantial representation to the people of this country, it will be acceptable to us as a compromise. We still think that the scheme adumbrated by the Joint Committee is the best. We stick to it for the present. But if any alternative scheme is suggested and agreed to we are prepared to accept it. I can say on behalf of the Members on this side that we are not going to wreck this Bill simply because the Government are not prepared to accept the scheme agreed to by the Joint Committee. I may say one thing quite boldly. If our views are going to be set aside and our point of view is not going to be considered in regard to the Directorate of this Bank, no one on this side will be a party to the passing of the Bill. You can pass it over our heads but we shall not agree to it and we shall make a point of carrying on this agitation as long as our views are not accepted. Therefore it is best to accept the scheme which has already been accepted by the Joint Committee. It does not make any national or racial distinctions which are not acceptable to everybody. It places all on an equal footing by providing a general electorate on general principles. There seems therefore to be absolutely no reason why that scheme should not be acceptable. If on the other hand it is insisted that the places of these people who were to be elected by the Legislatures according to the Joint Committee's Report are going to be filled up by nomination or by some other device which is not acceptable to this part of the House, then I assert that this will not be acceptable to us. This is the fundamental principle to which we on this side of the House adhere. The rest is not so important. You can change it as you wish by agreement with us ; but on this point we shall not accept any compromise short of what I have stated. That is what I wanted to make quite clear.

I just want to add one thing more. I understood from Sir Alexander Murray's speech yesterday that in Australia there was no Government Bank. I do not know whether that was a slip in his argument. I have before me a complete statement of the history of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia given in the Statist of November. This history shows that from its very inception it has been a Government Bank.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : As Sir Alexander Murray is not present may I interrupt on his behalf and say that he did not say that it was not a Government Bank ; he said that the Commonwealth Bank has not been a Central Bank.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Well, Sir, I may say that the crucial test for a comparison of these Banks with that in the measure before us is their power of issuing bank notes and the conduct of Government business. Both those tests are complied with in the case of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, which has been in existence for a number of years. All its profits go to the Government. There are no shareholders and in fact it is stated that it was the first Government Bank to be established in the British Empire. So, as against the arguments based on the Bank of England, we have here a bank in existence in an important part of the British Empire conducted by Government with Government money the profits of which go entirely to the national exchequer. So it is not correct to say that it is not a Government Bank. Under these circumstances I hope the Honourable the Finance Member will not force us to the extremity of voting against him. We are perfectly willing to meet him as much as we can, and I appeal to him not to raise on a measure like this the great deal of excitement and discontent that was created by the heated controversy over the ratio. In regard to this measure we must come to some agreement by which these points of difference may be satisfactorily settled, so that the most important and fundamental points may be carried out by mutual agreement. Otherwise, Sir, he is perfectly at liberty with his majority to carry any measure he likes ; but if it is not acceptable to us it shall be our bounden duty to carry on an agitation against the measure as long as our requirements in that direction are not satisfied. This is not a small measure. It has been said by several Members that it is a very important measure affecting the economic prosperity of this country very materially. We have so far had no share in the development of the economic and fiscal policy of the Government of India. From time to time the Government of India itself has been fighting with the Secretary of State, and, as Mr. Kelkar has said, we welcome this measure simply because we think that after the Secretary of State is divested of some of his power the centre of gravity will shift to the Government of India. But we do not even want to have the Government of India fully independent of the popular control in the economic and currency policy of the country. On other points I do not want to take up the time of the House because when they come to be discussed there will be plenty of people capable of dealing with them. But on these two points I want to make it absolutely clear that we shall not under any circumstances accept the shareholders' bank, and under no circumstances can we agree to any scheme which does not give a majority of elected Indian Members on the Directorate of the Bank.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : It is rather difficult to speak on this motion under the circumstances in which the motion has been discussed in this House. I am extremely sorry that there is practically no unanimity whatever in regard to any express provision of the Bill, except it be that there is practical unanimity on this side of the House in regard to the Bank to be inaugurated, being a State Bank. But, as an honest student of economics and finances, taking a detached view of the provisions of the Bill, I am forced to submit that there is very little of the State in the alleged State Bank adumbrated in the Bill. So much so that it gave a handle to the Honourable the Finance Member to remark the other day that there is very little difference between a shareholders' bank that he was contending for and the State Bank provided for in the Bill, and that the difference was really unreal I would submit to him in all seriousness that if really the difference between a shareholders' bank and a State Bank as he finds it in the Bill is unreal, then I would implore and request him in the interests of the country to drop his amendments and not to press them, with due deference to the almost unanimous wishes of this section of the House.

Sir, I support the Joint Committee's Bill so far as it goes ; but I am not unconscious of the fact that it is capable of being improved in very many essentials. I shall with your leave submit to the House only three essential points in regard to which the Joint Committee's Bill must be improved upon in the best interests of the country. Now, the Honourable the Finance Member put it in the forefront of his opening speech that an honest, pure and simple gold standard backed by a gold currency was a far-off dream, that he would not be a party to that and that he would see that no gold coin is minted in India for a long time to come. He was enabled to make these observations because, with due deference to the members of the Joint Committee, very halting proposals have been made in the Joint Committee's Report in respect of this matter. In paragraph 4 of the Joint Committee's Report they said :—

> "We prefer the phrase " A Gold Standard " to the phrase " A Gold Standard Currency " as the Bill does not in fact purport to set up a gold currency, and a phrase which included that word might be liable to misconstruction."

I may assure the Honourable the Finance Member, who unfortunately is not in his place just now, that nothing short of a pure, honest gold standard with a real gold currency will satisfy the Indian public. That has been our theme all through. That is the only thing upon which we have been concentrating our attention all these 34 years, since 1893 ; and the Government have been holding out hopes in that direction. But unfortunately, all that is to be shattered because of the Report of the Currency Commission ; because, in paragraph 54 of the Currency Commission's Report, they reach the conclusion that gold must not be allowed to circulate in the beginning and it need not circulate for ever. That is the central idea, Sir, which goaded the Currency Commissioners to come to the conclusion that India ought not to have gold currency. Unfortunately, the Honourable the Finance Member, who himself submitted a scheme for gold currency, had to abandon it in favour of the present position of his. I do not know if he was forced to assume that attitude because of the dictates of Whitehall. But whatever that might be, he stated also that clause 18 of the Joint Committee Bill, which makes currency notes expressible in mohurs, and clause 48 of the Bill which says that the Governor General in Council might, at his option, order the minting of a few coins, were incompatible with the gold bullion standard which is provided for in the Bill. I submit, Sir, that is a half-way house. Why should we have a gold bullion standard ? I am afraid the mistake I may be pardoned for the language if at all that underlay the Joint Committee's Report was this. They thought that this provision, halting as I submit it is, in clause 48 that a gold mohur may be coined in such quantity as the Governor General in Council might feel inclined to direct, was a great advance which they had made in the Report. But I am afraid there is no half-way house in these matters at all. It is this half-way house provided for the Bill that has given the handle to the Honourable the Finance Member to say openly the day before yesterday that this is incompatible with the gold bullion standard. We never wanted a gold bullion standard. It satisfies neither principles nor expediency. All that India has been wanting is a gold standard backed by gold currency. I submit that that is the thing on which we must concentrate our attention, and, come what may, we must put up a strong and strenous fight to reach that goal. I think that the Bill in this particular must be improved upon.

The next point I wish to submit is this. The Honourable Mr. Jamnadas Mehta alluded yesterday to the fact that he was not in favour of what is called the proportional reserve issue system but was in favour of the fixed fiduciary system. The proportional reserve system that is given in the Bill has the demerit that it will enable the authorities that be to inflate and deflate as they please them and thus indulge in currency manipulation. We have suffered under this manipulation at the hands of Whitehall for the past 34 years. All our currency ills are due to the persistent manipulation of our currency from Whitehall. If this is going to be perpetrated in this Bill also, there is no hope for India. Therefore, it was that my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta insisted upon the fixed fiduciary system which obtains in England, being adopted in this Bill also. He also stated that the Cunliffe Committee's Report was entirely in favour of that principle being adopted. I may add that a later Committee which sat in 1925 also endorsed and confirmed the opinion of the Cunliffe Committee. Therefore, while the one system has the demerit of giving power to the powers that be to manipulate currency, the other has at least the merit of being fool proof, so to say. Therefore, I submit that the fixed fiduciary system must find favour in this House. When the amendment respecting this is taken into consideration I shall have more to say upon it.

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

The third point in which this Bill is capable of improvement is this. It will be in the recollection of this House that when I moved clause 5 in the Currency Act, IV of 1927, the Honourable the Finance Member conceded my position and stated that any mention of gold exchange and gold standard countries need not find a place in the Bill. He conceded that position to me and wanted me to withdraw my amendment, promising that he would do it himself, which he eventually did. I do not know what has enabled the Honourable the Finance Member and the members of the Joint Committee to revert to the old position again and make provision in a few clauses in the present Bill about the gold exchange and gold standard countries, and about having our reserves kept in gold standard countries. I submit this is a pernicious doctrine to be adopted, which would enable a portion of our reserves to be kept in foreign countries. It does not help at all. I would submit for the consideration of the House that in no foreign country, excepting Britain with which we have to deal—and even there I would limit the reserve that must be kept there to the extent of the Home charges of the Secretary of State which he is bound to maintain—excepting that, I submit that in no other foreign country, not even in America, should any portion of our reserve be kept. I submit for the consideration of the House that the clauses relating to this also will have to be deleted. These are the three essential points on which the Bill must be improved upon in the best interests of the country.

One word more. If eventually, as the Honourable Member threatens to do, for any reason he is inclined to drop this Bill, I for one would not be sorry for it, because by dropping the Bill, we would be saved from this costly superfluity, and we would be saved from a standing menace to our indigenous banks, because that is what the Reserve Bank Bill, with its auxilliary the Imperial Bank, proposes to do under the present conditions.

Mr. Dhirendra Kanta Lahiri Chaudhury (Bengal : Landholders) : Sir, I rise to support the Bill as amended by the Joint Committee. In the beginning I wish to state what is the aim of the Central Bank. The aim of the Central Bank is stability in finance, by absorbing shocks to the various economic structures in the country, and that the Bank should be the spring from which water of life wells up. The commercial banks are the pipes and channels by which it is conducted to a thirsty economic system. Sir, this has also been adopted by the Hilton Young Commission, and we must not forget this main principle in discussing the matter which lies before us to-day. The first thing that strikes me to support the Honourable the Finance Member is how the Honourable the Leader of the House is going to solve the question of profit in a shareholders' bank. Sir, it has been generally agreed that stability in currency and credit is and end in itself, and that the Central Bank should not be charged with making profits. Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member might know that Governor Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank of America recently observed in a Congressional Committee that the federal reserve system is not run to-day with a view to earning money. That notion has entirely disappeared. If, as I hope, these are the circumstances which have necessitated the creation of such an institution as the proposed Reserve Bank, then those only will prevent the Honourable the Finance Member from devising a shareholders' bank. The abstract theory that is embodied in Governor Strong's utterances cannot be carried out in toto in practice. The shareholders must expect a certain return on their investments, however small it might be. Some are of opinion that State ownership will bring political issues into an organisation which should be entirely free to carry out its important functions of control of currency and credit policies solely on lines of prudent finance. Sir, I do admit there are certain difficulties in supporting a State Bank. But, Sir, is it the fault of the people of a subject nation to demand the financial help of the State when they find themselves helpless before private concerns ? Is it not common knowledge that the Imperial Bank has not been for the furtherance of any Indian enterprise ? All that it has done is to stand sponsor to foreign commercial ventures in India. Sir, if I am to believe what a journalist says then I cannot in any way support the shareholders' bank. That journalist says :

"It is well known in Madras that the Imperial Bank has given to two European firms over drafts for more than a crore of rupees and the Imperial Bank has been and will be a veritable Upas tree under whose shadow no Indian commercial enterprise will rear up into prosperity."

Sir, if our commercial enterprise be so low under a shareholders' bank with partial Government support, then I cannot in any way support the Honourable the Finance Member in a shareholders' bank.

Now, Sir, I do not want to prolong the discussion any further as I do not wish to waste the time of the House. I must look to the constitution of the proposed bank as it has been amended by the Joint Committee. Sir, it said that there are to be 6 members elected from the Provincial and Central Legislatures, and of the 3 members who are to be elected from the Central Legislature one shall represent the interests of commerce and industry and from the Provincial Legislature 2 shall represent agriculture and one commerce and industry. Now, Sir, the first thing is that when they select these men they are to possess the following qualifications :

"Finally, we have added a clause (d) on the lines of clauses contained in certain other enactments establishing Central Banks, providing that no person shall be eligible either for nomination or election to the Board, unless he is or has at some time been actively engaged in agriculture, commerce, finance or industry. We are of opinion that a clause of this kind, though possibly somewhat vague, is essential and we have endeavoured by an Explanation to make it clear that a person who is or has been a director of any company or corporation shall be deemed eligible under the clause."

Sir, under this clause I can say that there is no fear of political interference in this matter. Those Members who will be elected from those Legislatures will be experts in commerce and industry and of course in agriculture. I do not understand what they mean when they say that by electing Members from these Legislatures political influence will intervene. So this is my point and I shall support the amendment of the Joint Committee.

Mr. Arthur Moore (Bengal : European) : Sir, we seem to have arrived at a complete deadlock. As far as I understand it, every side in the House is willing to agree to something which the others will not accept.

[Mr. Arthur Moore.]

The Opposition insist on a State Bank and I think we may now take it that that is the one point that definitely can be got through. We are all agreed upon a State Bank I will not say that it is the solution that we should prefer, but we all recognise that the House wants it, and that it will be extremely difficult to get through any other form of bank with that proper measure of support that a national institution of this kind should have at the moment when it is passed. Now, Sir, the whole question boils down to this one point of an electorate. What we have really got to do in order to save the Bill is to find something which will in practice give us a majority of Indian directors, with at the same time proper representation of European mercantile interests. I think my friend Lala Lajpat Rai put the situation extremely clearly. One solution has been put forward from the opposite bench, this solution of electoral colleges. I regret to say that that is a solution which I think we in the centre of the House are not prepared to accept. Everybody arrives at a point where they are prepared to see the whole Bill go rather than accept a certain compromise, and I think that the majority who sit in the centre feel in that way about this particular proposal for electoral colleges. We regard it as totally unworkable and impracticable, and unlikely to produce satisfactory results of any kind. Well, Sir, I put down on the order paper to-day an amendment. With your permission I should like to refer to it at this stage, after the speech of my friend Lala Lajpat Rai. It suffers from this handicap, that I believe I know in advance that the Government will not accept it. But I wish to submit it to the attention of the House, and I think that if the House as a whole could arrive at some agreement in regard to it we should be in a strong position to ask the Finance Member, who has I think throughout the discussions on this Bill shown a disposition to strain every point to secure an agreement—we should be in a strong position to ask him once again to reconsider the whole matter. Sir, my proposal is this—that instead of those directors being nominated by this scheme of electoral colleges, a plan which we regard as unworkable, they should be nominated respectively by the Governors of 6 provinces on the advice of their Ministers, responsible to their Legislative Councils, the provinces to be selected in rotation. Now, I know exactly the argument that is going to be brought up by my Honourable friends opposite. They are going to say that this is nomination over again. Sir, I submit that it is not. I submit that this is more truly entitled to be called election than the scheme of electoral colleges. To begin with, I do not myself believe that, once this Bill is through in any form, you are going to get the slightest interest on the part of the general electorate in the Bill. I believe that the elections will fall into the hands of a few people who will manipulate them entirely for their own purposes quite forgetful of the national interests, simply because it is a natural tendency of the public to be very apathetic in matters of high finance and things which they do not understand. Now, you get your supposed electorate of 10 or 20 thousand people sending in postcards—I understand it is to be a postal election—and nominating a further body which will then nominate directors. Sir, what real democracy, what real electoral control is there in that? The franchise, I understand, is to be an income-tax franchise, and one idea is that it should be the Council of State franchise. Compare that, Sir, with this other scheme. To begin with, the Government of India which is the controlling body that we are referring to throughout in these discussions does not come into it at all. We are dealing with Provincial Governments—a very different matter—and it is extremely likely that in the future of India it will become a still more different matter. Now, Sir, you have 6 out of 9 provinces at a time nominating. One province can nominate only one director. But that director is to be found by responsible Ministers who have themselves been elected on a democratic franchise and who are directly responsible to a Legislative Council elected on that franchise. I submit, Sir, that as far as democracy goes, as far as electoral control goes, it is far superior to this absurd and highly complicated scheme of creating an entirely brand new constituency of electoral colleges. And I do think that it is very important for us to consider the future. Gentlemen opposite are not always friendly to Ministers. It is their desire to get dyarchy removed. That is entirely a comprehensible aim. I have always thought that the best way to get rid of dyarchy was to get rid of the irremovable members and not of the removable Ministers. Surely, Sir, it is the duty of responsible Members opposite to think of the future, to think of the day when you may have provincial autonomy, to think of the day when you will not have the other half. Is it not our duty to see whether we can give the power to a responsible Government ? I shall be told, from this side, perhaps that if we adopt this scheme we are bringing in politics again, we are bringing in Legislative Councils. Sir, I do not think that that is so. I think it is perfectly easy to arrange the matter so that the responsibility of the provincial Legislative Councils will be entirely and solely concerned with the personnel of the director chosen, that is to say, they shall not be entitled to interfere with the internal affairs of the bank, but they shall be entitled to call the Provincial Government of the day to account for the appointment which it makes. I wish, Sir, to submit this alternative proposition to my friend Lala Lajpat Rai.

Rai Bahadur S. N. Singh (Bihar and Orissa : Nominated Official) : I move that the question be now put.

Munshi Iswar Saran (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am very glad that the last speaker has put the issue very clearly before us. It is to be admitted that there is a great deal to be said in favour of a State Bank as well as in favour of a shareholders' bank. It is no good pretending that the advantages are all one way and one can summarily dismiss the view opposite to one's own. But the last speaker has said, and I hope correctly—it may be that he is in the know—that the idea of a State Bank is acceptable to Government. If that be so, one need not spend any time or energy over the discussion of the question of a State Bank versus a shareholders' bank.

Sir, some friends have grown poetical over this financial measure It has been called a child of Sir Basil Blackett which was born very ugly and deformed, but which the nurses or the step-mothers have so beautified that it has caught their fancy and has come to possess considerable fascination for them. I wish to speak in a purely prosaic manner. If this measure is carried in an atmosphere of good will and sympathy by the whole House, Sir Basil Blackett will be perfectly entitled to claim it as one of his triumphs, and I do not suppose there is one single Member present in this House who will grudge him the distinction that will most certainly attach to him. Sir, the only serious point of controversy, as I understand it, is, will this Assembly and the Council of State have the right of sending three directors to the Reserve Bank ? It appears that we, the Members of this Central Legislature, have been born with a double dose of original sin, and Sir Basil Blackett will have nothing to do with us. He says " Oh, you are so hopeless that I would much rather drop this Bill than let you send up three directors to the Reserve Bank. " It is supposed that we shall carry political opinions and bias into the affairs of the Bank. Sir, I have been thinking, I assure you, for the last three days what political influence really means. I submit, you cannot get rid of politics in modern times. Politics enter into every department of our life, even in religion. Government will send up their nominees. Are Government—I put it straight—are Government a non-political body ? Well, I do not care whether it is a bureaucratic Government to-day or whether it is a Swarajist Government to-morrow, Government is and will be a political body ; Government will be influenced by political considerations and will be swayed by political motives. What is the good of saying " If you send your men, your men will be swayed by politics ". What about Government ? They will be as much swayed by politics as the non-official Members of the Indian Legislature. Sir, if you read the original draft of the Bill, you will find that, according to it, not only should we not have the right of sending directors to the Reserve Bank, but that we should not be entitled to be elected. Take Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas for instance, because he has the misfortune of being a Member of this Legislature ; he would be ineligible for election as a director of the Reserve Bank. Let us hope, may I hope, that Sir Basil Blackett after retirement will settle down in this country and also, let us hope, that we elect him to this House ; we shall not then be able to send him as a director of the Reserve Bank because he has committed the sin of having allowed himself to be elected a Member of this House. I remember, Sir, having read somewhere that our ways in India are mysterious. I can honestly assure you that I am unable to comprehend the reluctance of the Finance Member or the Government of India, or some other power behind the Finance Member, to agree to our electing three directors of the Reserve Bank. Sir, I do feel, and I do agree with the last speaker, that there is much difficulty about alternative proposals. Speaking for myself—I have not got the authority, I wish I had, of speaking for anybody else ; being a backbencher I can speak only for myself, subject of course, to the control of the Party to which I belong—I can say that I shall be prepared to accept a scheme which is better than the scheme that has been put forward by the Joint Committee. Look at the scheme which has been suggested by the last speaker. What he said was that the Governor of a Province on the advice of the Ministers will nominate a director of the Reserve Bank. Now, here are these serious difficulties to face. If the advice is offered and if the advice is not accepted, what happens then ? Again, are you quite sure that the Governor in making the nomination will go through the process of most distinctly and clearly separating his personality from all politics and that he will only select a man who is purely a business man, who has no politics, and who has had nothing to do with politics ?

[Munshi Iswar Saran.]

Mr. Arthur Moore : The Ministers make the selection.

Munshi Iswar Saran : The Ministers may. It comes to this that, instead of our selecting here, you let one man whom we have elected to make the selection. I ask in all fairness where is the difference between these two positions ? Instead of having an electoral college now consisting of about 100 or 150 men you are constituting an electoral college consisting of one man or two or three men. Now, I put it to the House, which is better ? Is the judgment of 150 politicians better than the judgment of one politician ? You will have to admit that the Minister of a province is a politician. He is elected on account of his politics and not on account of any religious merit that he might possess ; and in rare cases he is a pure financer. You strive as much as you will, but you cannot get away from the fact that politics does enter into the consideration and settlement of all these questions. I wish to assure the House in all sincerity that I am not speaking on this question from any party point of view. I really beg the House to consider it from a detached point of view. There is no doubt that this House will be as much influenced by politics as any other constituency that you may create. Now, take an example. Suppose you put forward the name of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. I am not going to forget his politics. But if you put forward in opposition to him a man who is purely a financier but who has not given proof of his honesty, of his courage, of his sincerity and of his patriotism, then every time I shall give my vote to Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas in preference to the other man, and so will many people. It is politics ; you cannot get away from it.

4 P.M.

Sir, there are only one or two submissions more which I wish to make. I may tell the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, and I hope he will not mind my saying to his face, that it was an admirable speech that he delivered, but at the end of it he reminded us of the highway robber we used to read of in novels, who would go with a loaded pistol to an unhappy man and say : " Your purse or your life." At the end of his speech Sir Basil Blackett said : " Either this provision goes or the Bill goes ", and I got frightened. I must frankly confess I got frightened. I said : Let this provision drop but let us save the Bill. I do feel—I must confess, and I do not mind confessing it quite publicly—that I am not an expert in financial matters, but I do honestly feel that if this measure is adopted, it will prove beneficial to the best interests of India if it is worked in the proper and the right spirit. Therefore, my submission is that it ought to be the endeavour of everyone of us to save the Bill if we possibly can.

But let me say clearly that as far as I am concerned this suggestion of Mr. Moore will not be acceptable, and it is much better that we should be very frank about it. Nomination in such cases and circumstances stinks. Perhaps we are misguided, perhaps we are mistaken, perhaps these gentlemen who suggest it have got a better idea of nomination, but we fight shy of it. If you ask me, I would much rather go through the throes of an election than get myself nominated by Government. So far as this suggestion is concerned, I may tell my friend in anticipation that it has very little chance of being accepted, perhaps on account of our prejudice. We know how nominations are made.

There is only one other point which I should like to touch. My friend Sir Alexander Murray took to task Mr. Shanmukham Chetty and Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. His speech was so admirable in tone and so excellent in spirit that I think I should explain the position which these two friends took up yesterday. He said, why do you bring in racial consideration, and he said it feelingly. I shall say a word on this question as I share their views in regard to it. Let me be perfectly plain. I am one of those who do honestly believe that it is in the interests of India as well as of England that they should be together. If I did not hold this view, I should not hesitate for a moment to declare my views from the house tops. But, Sir, let me say this : As long as the world will be under the sway of nationalism, as it is to-day, every country will be perfectly justified in saying that its own nationals will have preference over foreigners. That is the real principle underlying all our demands. The Englishman will be perfectly justified in saying to us in England : " Yes, you are our fellow-subjects, true enough ; but in England Englishmen will have preference over you." Sir Alexander Murray put that question very feelingly and perfectly sincerely. I regret he is not here, otherwise I would have asked him to look at those Benches there and to tell us if the occupants of those Benches look like the members of the Government of India or like the members of some Government in which India plays a very subordinate and insignificant part. I do feel that if you brought a man who did not know Indian conditions, say, by an aeroplane, and put him in this Assembly and told him " Here is the Government of the country ", he would not be able to say whether it was the Government of England or the Government of India I would ask Sir Alexander Murray in all sincerity : Is there not a real conflict of interests in certain matters between Englishmen and Indians in India ? Is there not a competition going on between the two ? Let us not shut our eyes to the truth. Let me declare my own faith and my own principle. I am prepared to accord a welcome to an Englishman as an equal, as a co-worker, as a friend and as a brother, but I am not prepared—and I hope no self-respecting Indian is prepared—to accept an Englishman as a master, and as one to whom we should always look up to in reverence and with submission. If Sir Alexander Murray would have only listened to the speeches that were made on the day that the Indian Sandhurst Committee Resolution was before the House, he would have felt the justification of the position taken up by these two gentlemen, namely, Mr. Shanmukham Chetty and Mr. Jamnadas Mehta.

[Munshi Iswar Saran.]

One or two more remarks, Sir, and I shall sit down. I am glad that Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas spoke out his mind in regard to the conference held at the Viceregal Lodge and I shall also do the same, because I feel rather strongly about it. Mr. Jamnadas Mehta criticised this conference. I call his criticism " political fire-works ".

Here, was this gentleman who was himself invited and who would have gone ; but as for certain reasons he could not go, the very next day he turned round and said that there was a constitutional impropriety in convening this conference.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member leave His Excellency the Viceroy to take care of himself. Perhaps the Leader of the House will explain the constitutional position.

Munshi Iswar Saran : I am obliged for your suggestion, Sir. I was only going to say that our criticisms either of Government or of any measure should be fair, should be just and should be impartial. I do hope, Sir, as you have been pleased to suggest, the Members of Government will give a fitting reply.

I wish only to make one further observation before I sit down. I hope that the Honourable the Finance Member will discuss the matter with the leaders of various parties and come to an understanding, and if he feels that the suggestions put forward by the Joint Select Committee are not so bad as at one time they appeared to him to be, he will accept them. If he does not agree to them, I hope he will himself devise some plan which will be acceptable to this side of the House. I am sure it will be to the credit of the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett if this measure will be passed in an atmosphere of good will, harmony and sympathy.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I am sure the whole House will join with me in congratulating the last speaker who has just made, I think, his maiden speech in this Assembly, but not the first speech that I have had the pleasure of hearing in this building. To see him get up and with his usual facility of language address this House reminded me forcibly of those years, now getting very far away, when I first arrived in India as a Member of the first Assembly. The last speaker referred to what has been said in regard to His Excellency the Viceroy's happy initiative in this matter. I should like, Sir, with your permission just to say one word about this. One Honourable Member—I am glad to say one Member only—made an attack upon the action of His Excellency the Viceroy on the ground that it was entirely unconstitutional, and that it was a partisan act that he should call a conference of that sort. The speaker added that it was only by a happy accident that he was not there. I am content to leave it at that. But, I must say a word in regard to the constitutional position. The constitutional position of His Excellency the Governor General in the constitution of India is not the same as the position of His Majesty the King in the constitution of Great Britain, or of the Governor General in the constitution of Ireland or Canada, and so on. Even, in their cases, it is not unknown that when party feeling is running high, or when danger seems to attach to differences of opinion that arise, special action is often taken on their initiative and an attempt is made under their aegis to come to an agreement on a question that seems to divide the nation unduly. But the position in India is not the same. His Excellency the Governor General, besides being an essential part of the Indian Legislature, is the administrative head of every department of the Central Government ; and as such he has the indubitable right, if he thinks fit, to take part personally in any administrative problem or any problem affecting the administration that may arise. I am glad to remember that the speaker who raised this objection recognised that it was in no partisan spirit, but with a view to trying to hear both sides and to secure, if he could, a solution, that His Excellency the Viceroy intervened. He tried to secure a solution because no doubt he felt that although there seemed to be very acute differences of opinion on matters of detail there was fundamental agreement as regards principles, I am sure that I shall have the sense of the whole House with me when I say that, should, in the future, an analogous occasion suggest the desirability of the analogous action, the success—as I hope it will have proved to have been—of the action taken in this case will be a precedent that would be very useful to follow. (Applause.)

Perhaps my first task should be to deal with the amendment moved by Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya in favour of a recirculation of this measure.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

As has already been well said by one speaker, the objections to recirculation are very grave from the point of view of business. Now, it is nearly two years, I think perhaps quite two years, since the announcement was first made of the appointment of a Royal Commission on Indian Currency, and the continuance of uncertainty affecting business over the next busy season owing to the fact that this Bill is not either finally on the Statute-book or finally settled is a contingency which I should not like to have to face. It is most undesirable from the point of view of business that disturbance owing to the legislative discussion of this measure should be continued any longer. It is therefore, I think, quite obviously time that we should come to a conclusion. Moreover, I do not think the sense of the House is with Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya in his desire for recirculation. Most of the arguments that were used by Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya were not in favour of recirculation, but in favour of rejection and as the House obviously desires, if we can accommodate our views on certain essential points, that this Bill should reach the Statute-book almost unanimously, I think I may take it that the motion for consideration will probably be passed. If that is the case, most of the subjects which have been dealt with in the speeches to which I have listened for the last three days will come up again for discussion on the clauses and I do not want to duplicate debate by going deeply into many of them.

There are, however, one or two points which I should like to deal with.

First of all, I have a complaint to make. My architectural metaphor in my speech on the introduction of this measure has been very much mishandled. No one, I think, recognised that it was architectural. They found it easier to deal with it as if I had used a parental metaphor. I deliberately avoided the parental metaphor for two reasons. First of all I was aware of the fact that it was a metaphor to which effective retorts could be made, and that is why I avoided it. The course of the debate shows that I was justified in avoiding it. My second reason was that I am too modest to claim that I am the " sole and onlie begetter " of this measure. It has a considerable number of authors (laughter) not one. I can imagine a body of architects working together to produce a single model. It is inappropriate and almost indecent to use a parental metaphor in that connection. However, during the last few days, I have been somewhat consoled for this abuse of my metaphor, for I think that we have really made progress in the course of this discussion. It is quite clear that all of us are anxious, if we possibly can do so, to translate the model into a completed edifice and we all want it to be as beautiful an edifice as possible. There is little difference of opinion among the architects, as far as I can see, with regard to the internal structure of the building. We have some differences as to the extent to which the dome should be gilded and possibly also some differences as to the exact measures to be taken to prevent loose tiles from falling from the golden ceiling (laughter) ; but as regards the external structure there are more differences. At first we seemed to differ altogether as to what the elevation plans should be and we even differed as regards engineering questions such as the nature of the buttresses ; but as time has gone on I think we have discovered that we have really reduced our differences not to a question of what the nature of the buttresses should be, whether they should be of the Classical shareholders' style or of the Romantic State style, but we really differed solely as regards the nature of the ornaments—I will not say the gargoyles—which are to surmount the buttresses,—are they to represent shareholders or legislators ? I think that we have very nearly come to an agreement that if we follow the electoral design we shall meet all our difficulties.

It is time, however, to leave metaphor. The Government, in spite of all that has been said, are strongly of opinion that the shareholder plan is the one which is most suited to the solution of our difficulties and best calculated to serve India's interests in this matter. In spite of the fact that, like my Honourable friend Mr. Kikabhai Premchand, I have a mind that is open to educative influence and can learn from wise teachers, I still remain convinced that the shareholder plan is the best ; but it is quite evident that there are strong feelings on the other side and the question remains : Can we arrive at a solution if the Government of India on their part are willing to give up the shareholder plan ? In doing so, remember, they are giving up something which they honestly regard as being the best thing in this matter. And it is not only the Government that are giving up this view but probably a majority, or at any rate very nearly a majority, but certainly not a large majority of the House, who are in favour of the whole of the shareholders' scheme. If, therefore, in these circumstances the Government give up the shareholders' scheme, it must be quite clearly in circumstances in which there is every hope that by a concession on this point alone they will secure that the Bill will finally reach the Statute-book in a shape acceptable to them. The concession that is asked is a big one and it ought to be met in a corresponding manner. Our difficulty all through has been not that it has not been known that the Government were willing in the last instance to scrap the shareholders' plan, but our difficulty has been to find a satisfactory method of forming a directorate without shareholders. I do not want to spend time to-day in singing the praises of shareholders because we are about, I hope, to pass beyond that phase of the discussion, and I think it is quite unnecessary that I should deal at any length with the Government's objections, on the other hand, to election by Members of the Legislature. However, I should like to say one thing. It is not any suspicion of the Legislatures or any disbelief in their value. It is that the Government feel that in the first place it is not the proper constitutional path for Legislatures to take part in making appointments to special posts ; they are thereby definitely overstepping the functions of the legislative and usurping those of the executive ; but also that Members of this Assembly and of the other Legislatures are elected by their electorates for definite political purposes and to serve definite political ends. If they were elected by the same electorates for the special purpose of electing the Directors of this Bank, I have no doubt that they would prove an admirable electorate ; but as they are not, it is mixing up business and politics at the risk of both suffering. It is not desirable to use the elected Legislatures simply and just by chance for something for which they were not intended, namely, the election of the Directorate of the Reserve Bank. Now the Government, as I have said, are willing, in spite of their strong feelings in the matter, to make a concession in the matter of shareholders if we can and another solution. There is an amendment on the paper for electoral colleges which was put down after it had been discussed with me and which, I must confess, appeals very strongly to me personally. It seems to me to be a better solution than any that has hitherto been put forward, and the Government are willing to accept that solution in principle. They do not desire at this stage to tie themselves down to particular details because they are very anxious that the solution that is found should be one which is acceptable very nearly unanimously to every quarter of this House. I have a good deal of sympathy with what was said by Mr. Cocke when he expressed the fear that these electoral colleges might prove unwieldy and unworkable. I do not however believe that is necessarily the case, and I believe it ought to be in the power of the Government to make them workable. As regards the exact numbers I think that I should like to keep an open mind and in particular I think that before the amendment went down I expressed the view that the Government would desire more than the two nominated posts that were left to them. That is not because the Government want to nominate persons to look after their interests but because it is the Government's duty to see that this Board is, as far as possible, representative of India and that it is well balanced, and that capable people who are fit for the work and who are likely to do the work in an expert way will be on the Board. I desire at this point to refer to one thing which was said by Lala Lajpat Rai. The Government have no objection—in fact, they are in favour of the principle which he suggested that a majority of the members of the Board should be Indian elected members. That being so, I do not think that we ought to have any difficulty in coming to a final conclusion on this matter. I do not want to commit the Government at this point to the exact details of the amendment that is down, though, as I say, it is one that appeals to the Government and that they themselves would be prepared to accept. But we desire that it should be accepted with the approval of as large a majority of the House as possible, and therefore I think it is wise to keep open the details in order to make workable a scheme which at any rate is on the face of it attractive to a large body of this House. I do not know whether I should be regarded as doing an injury to my Honourable friend the Leader of the Congress Party if I were to thank him on behalf of the Government for the assistance he has given to us. (Laughter.) One of his followers gave me the advice that discretion is the better part of valour. I thought at once of another adage ; but I was unwilling to apply it as it was not quite appropriate. It was, "Needs must when the devil drives". Perhaps it would be safer to take refuge in scripture and say, "Agree with thine adversary quickly while thou art in the way with him". At any rate I am sure it is a good augury for this Reserve Bank that it should start its career in this Session of the Assembly in a spirit of co-operation such as has appeared in this case. I do quite sincerely on behalf of the Government desire to thank those who have laboured to try and find a solution for this difficult problem. I myself am still not quite convinced that a really workable solution is possible without shareholders. But I have accepted in faith because I think even faith may be better than shareholdings in some circumstances.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

There are just one or two other points which have arisen in the course of the debate to which I should like to refer. The question of what took place in the Joint Committee is not open to discussion here, but I do feel that I owe it to myself to repudiate as best I can the charge that I have committed some breach of faith, or that I intentionally misled the members of the Committee or the public in regard to the question of the sale of silver. It will be within the recollection of a considerable number of members of this House when I say that before agreeing to anything whatsoever appearing in the report on the subject I made it clear that if I agreed to such words as were put in, namely, that sales should be resorted to only with extreme caution, I desired to clear myself in advance of any charge of bad faith if at any time sales took place. I carefully guarded myself with those words against this charge, and I am very sorry it should have been made by Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. As regards the misunderstanding on the question of the extent to which the Government intend to deal with sales of silver, undoubtedly I did at one time explain that our silver was divided into three categories, silver rupees, rupees melted down into rupee silver, and fine silver ; and I did say that.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is referring to the conversations that took place in the Joint Committee. I have allowed him to go far enough and he should not go any further.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I recognize, Sir, that you have been very generous to me and that I have possibly been straying a little too far. I only want to add that beyond explaining the three different categories. I made and can make no kind of announcement either now or, so far as I can see at any time, in regard to the Government's policy in the matter of the sale of silver. That policy is, and must be, to sell a certain amount, provided it is clearly surplus, cautiously. They have up to date sold only what has been announced in the papers. Whether any more sales will take place is a matter on which I cannot prophesy and I cannot be expected to make any statement. I should like to say one or two words more about Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas's speech. I hope he will forgive me for saying that ever since the Report of the Currency Commission came out I have found it difficult to discover whether or not he was in favour of a Reserve Bank. He seemed to me to be, if I may use the phrase, without offence, sitting on the fence, and I think he is still sitting on the fence. At any rate that was the impression that his speech left with me. He expressed himself very strongly to-day on the subject of shareholders. He said that the idea was an impossible one and had only to be mentioned to be rejected. I could not help reflecting that it was mentioned in the report of which he was a signatory more than a year ago, and it is only recently that it has been rejected by him with contumely. Sir Purshotamdas devoted a considerable part of his speech to an attack on the actions of Government since the passage of the Ratio Bill. If Members will cast their minds back to the prophecies of dire disasters that were going to happen immediately as the result of the passage of that Bill in March, I think they will recognize that the charges in regard to what has happened in the 5 months since are rather small beer. But as Sir Purshotamdas quoted at considerable length from newspapers in regard to it, I should like to read to the House one short passage also from one of the papers

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

he mentioned, the Statesman. This is what is said in the paper of August 26th, Exchange and Money Market column

"It may on the whole be said that a great deal of useful spade-work has been done during the last three months of intensified strain and stress, intensified because of the extraordinary abnormality of commerce and trade in 1926-27. There were complicated problems arising from the final statutory enthronement of eighteen pence in a year of lean favourable balance of trade. The complications had their repercussions in the exchange and money markets and the Government's remittance and loan programmes. These problems have now been solved ; what seemed a hopeless tangle has been more or less set right and the future career of the rupee-rate should be comparatively simple.

What time the Finance Member was busy devising and applying remedies, he was assailed by impatient criticism from certain quarters. Was it cancellation of ad hoc securities ? It mattered little if even Indian economists consider 'createds' as pariah securities ; but that Sir Basil cancelled them was sufficient reason for condemning the operation. Was it sale of sterling securities ? It was conveniently forgotten that sterling and rupee securities are, in essence, shift-weights in the balance of exchange; and protests were raised against the alleged frittering of India's gold resources. Was it sale of marketable securities ? Sir Basil was roundly taxed for wrecking India's credit, though curiously enough he never got any credit for enhancing it beyond the wildest dreams. Was it sale of silver ? The bogey of untold losses to the dumb millions was trotted forth ; and even the ludicrous inconsistency in the demand for gold currency with the demand for maintaining the present level of silver prices caused no abatement in the fury of the tirade. Was it sterling loan ? Pontific advice was tendered against long term external borrowing. Was it short term sterling Bills ? It was immediately put down as the final and conclusive evidence of the failure of the rupee Loan. Was it rupee Bills ? Evidence Number Two of failure. Was it deflation ? Crime of crimes ! No words were adequate to express its heinousness. And imagination ran riot in the facile pastime of conjuring dark pictures of monetary stringency, strangling of industries and trade panic. Faced with tremendous odds and exposed to unending cavil, the Finance Member's course has been, in Kipling's words 'to keep on keeping on'. And the reward for patience and faith cannot now be postponed for long."

I would not have ventured to express such a panegyric on my actions as I have found readymade for me in a newspaper. But I do not at all desire to stand in a white sheet in regard to anything that has happened, I am really rather proud of the great success with which the Finance Department have dealt with a difficult period. (Applause.)

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Must India suffer more before the Finance Member will see that we are passing through an unnecessary crisis which could have been avoided ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have no doubt India will suffer many more darts of the sort mentioned here, but that India herself will greatly benefit by the fixation of the rupee..... (An Honourable Member "By articles in the Statesman.") I was only quoting, Sir, from a paper on which Sir Purshotamdas had pinned his faith.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I have no objection, Sir, to the Finance Member quoting all that suits him, and I wish that all of it may come out true. At present.....

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would draw his attention to the fact that I have been dealing with things which have occurred in the last few months. However, we are, I am glad to say, out of the atmosphere of last March on the Ratio Bill, and we are dealing now with a Bill on which I think there is every prospect of a real adjustment of views all round amongst most of the Members of this House. I cannot hope to meet the views of those who like my friend Sir John Bell are afraid of the effect on particular interests or particular banks of the passing of this Bill. I believe him to be completely wrong. I believe this Bill to be one of enormous promise for the existing indigenous banks and for their extension. It will, by concentrating the reserves, to which they themselves will quite naturally and rightly contribute a part, in the hands of the Reserve Bank enable them to be relent to them and to others in order to facilitate credit, to prevent undue stringency, and in general to make fruitful much of the capital which is now to be found in India, and though in certain directions particular institutions, the exchange banks or the indigenous banks, may find their profits on individual transactions slightly reduced, they will, I am sure, get back ten fold that amount in the extra business they will be able to do. Small profit and larger turnover will, I am sure, be of more value to them. Sir, I have nothing more to say at this stage except to hope that the Bill will be unanimously taken into consideration now.

Mr. President : Does the Mover of the amendment wish to withdraw his amendment ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I do not wish to press it.

Mr. President : Does he ask for leave to withdraw his amendment ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I ask for leave to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill to establish a gold standard currency for British India and constitute a Reserve Bank of India, as reported by the Joint Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : We will begin with clause 3.

The question is :

" That clause 3 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 4 do stand part of the Bill."

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, this is the clause on which the question of share capital comes up. As I have said, the Government of India are willing, as a contribution to the spirit of harmony, not to press their amendments with regard to share capital provided that they make their position clearly understood. They do not resile from their position that a shareholders' capital is the method most suited for solving the difficulties which have to be faced in the creation of a Reserve Bank, but if they do not press at this stage for the introduction of a share capital, it must be on the understanding that the Bill will clearly have to live or die according to our success in coming to a conclusion on clause 8 in finding a satisfactory directorate. The concession is one which Government make with a view to secure that the Bill might pass amid what my friend Munshi Iswar Saran spoke of as universal good will and that the Bank might come into being in that spirit. It must clearly be understood that in yielding on this point on which they have very strong opinions, the Government are doing so in the hope, not yet absolutely in sight, that a satisfactory solution will be found on clauses 7 and 8 and the other points still in question.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I have given notice of another amendment even on clause 3.

Mr. President : Clause 3 is passed. The Honourable Member must know how to protect his own interests. Clause 3 is passed and no amendment can now be moved to that clause. We are now discussing clause 4. If the Honourable Member wishes to move any amendment on clause 4, he is entitled to do so.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I beg to move my amendment :

"That clause 4 be omitted."

My object is that there is no necessity of a share capital of the small amount of 5 crores.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : There is no share capital.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I mean subscribed by the State. There is no necessity for the State to subscribe any capital because all the resources of the State are always at the disposal of the Bank. I do not see any necessity for having any share capital subscribed to the Bank.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I have an amendment to clause 4. If you are not adjourning, I should like to.....

Mr. President : There is no question of adjourning. We are considering the amendment of Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya. That amendment must be disposed of before we get on to another amendment.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I cordially congratulate the Finance Member on the decision he has arrived at to accept the proposal of a State Bank and to give up this idea of a share capital bank. I congratulate him, Sir, because this is a matter of such supreme importance to the country that I think it is a matter of congratulation that he should have done so at this stage. With regard to the proposal of Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, I wish to say this much only, that many of us in the Select Committee and even outside still think that no capital need be provided for this Bank, and that like the Commonwealth of Australia Bank, this

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Bank might start without any capital. Towards this end Mr. Madon had suggested the omission of the whole of the present clause 4 and the substitution of the following clause therefor :

"The Bank shall have no share capital but shall have power to issue with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council debentures to the extent of Rupees Ten Crores " and more if necessary.

I venture to think, Sir, that this provision would have been quite sufficient for the purposes of the Bank, and if the House agrees to adopt Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya's amendment, I certainly think that there will be no harm done to the interests of the country, but, if, on the other hand, the desire is to leave the provision as it stands, I do not feel any difficulty in supporting that proposal either.

Mr. V. K. Aravamudha Ayangar (Finance Department : Nominated Official) : Sir, there has been a good deal of misapprehension in regard to the Commonwealth Bank of Australia. The Commonwealth Bank of Australia ten years ago, whose working has been quoted as a model, had an understanding with Government that Government should not reduce its funds with the Bank below a certain amount. That, Sir, supplied the working capital of the Bank and there is no point in the Honourable Members of the House saying that the Commonwealth Bank has no capital. Ten years elapsed and then an attempt was made to make the Commonwealth Bank of Australia into a Central Bank of issue. At the time that this change was made it had a capital of £4 millions (the result of capitalising the accumulated reserves) in addition to over one million of Reserve Fund. Therefore, these five millions were quite sufficient for the working of the Commonwealth Bank as the Central Bank of issue. Secondly, Sir, if the Honourable the Finance Member has agreed to drop the provision regarding private share capital, he made it clear that it was under the pressure of certain very special circumstances, but he thought that a capital was necessary. The capital of a bank fulfils two purposes. The first is to allow the bank to carry on its ordinary banking operations, to purchase its furniture, its house properties, and then what is more important, during the period when it has not built up any reserve fund to shoulder any losses that may happen during the initial period. Secondly, Sir, though it is not perhaps pertinent on this occasion to press that point, the shareholders' capital provides an initial fund of private money which gives a guarantee of good Government and good management of the bank. Every rupee of the private shareholders' capital has to be lost before one pie of the public money can be lost. I therefore think, Sir, that there is no point in objecting to the capital of the Bank which Government has now agreed to subscribe. I therefore oppose the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 4 be omitted"

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Sir, I move the amendment which stands in my name :

"That to sub-clause (1) of clause 4 the following words be added at the end, namely:

' and shall be called up from time to time as may be thought necessary or advisable by the Board of Directors of the Bank '."

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

Sir, now that the sword of Damocles of the shareholders' bank has been removed from over our heads, we can breathe freely and consider each clause on its merits. We had agreed in the Joint Committee to have a capital of 5 crores to be subscribed by Government. That amount might remain but it is quite clear that from the very begining, this Bank will not need many crores of capital for its operation. From the day on which this Bank will come into existence it will have crores of rupees of deposits from Government and therefore it is not necessary that it should have the whole of the 5 crores immediately paid up. The only object for which capital may be needed in the beginning would be to build a house for the Bank for furniture and installations, without which it would be impossible to start work, such initial expenditure is necessary even if it is going to be a State Bank and it would not be quite congruous to have all this expenditure incurred from the deposits to start with. Therefore we agreed that there may be some capital. But I do not see why the whole of the 5 crores, the whole of which may not be needed. If it is needed, by all means let the Board call it up. I am not preventing the Board of Directors from calling up the whole capital if they think it necessary, but at the initial stage I do not see why they should have the whole amount paid up on the opening day of the Bank and therefore I think the Finance Member should have no objection to accepting this amendment which does not run counter to any object he has in view. And if at all the time comes—which I hope it will never—when, as Mr. Ayangar says, the Bank will make a loss—I am very sorry that it should ever start with such an unhappy augury—but if it ever comes this Board is empowered to call the whole amount up. But why impose an unnecessary burden on the tax-payer to start with, when you may not need the money ? You will have to seek investments for the many crores of deposits in the Imperial Bank, and before these are used why should we go on paying interest on the huge capital. For these reasons I hope this House will agree that, although the capital may be 5 crores, it need not be called up all at once.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I hope, Sir, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta will not press this amendment. I do not think that it is necessary. There is nothing in the Bill which requires the Government to subscribe the whole capital at once. That is left open and it is perfectly possible for the Government and the Bank to come to an agreement as to the time and amount at which the payment should be made. It is, however, I think desirable that the Government should fairly early in the proceedings get clear of any obligations on the Bank by paying over the whole amount and making a clear cut between the Government balance and the Bank's capital. It will be perfectly competent for the Government and the Bank between them to come to an arrangement as to the time and methods of payment over, and I think it is better that it should be open to arrangement between the two rather than that it should be at the sole option of the Board of Directors. There will be no fear of loss to the tax-payer because, if you come to consider it, it will be perfectly simple for the Bank to relend more than it wants at the moment to the Government and it will be merely a bookkeeping transaction and as the whole of the profits are going to the Government, it makes no particular difference if the Government is paying 4½ per cent. and getting 4½ per cent.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : It might not get it. I will not withdraw.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That to sub-clause (1) of clause 4 the following words be added at the end, namely :—

'and shall be called up from time to time as may be thought necessary or advisable by the Board of Directors of the Bank '."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I beg to move my amendment which runs as follows :

"For sub-clause (2) of clause 4 of the Bill the following be substituted :—

'(2) The capital of the Bank may, with the previous sanction of the Indian Legislature, be increased or decreased in such manner and to such extent as may be necessary from time to time; and any such increase of capital shall be subscribed by the Governor General in Council '."

The object of my amendment is, as the Legislature have sanctioned the original capital, they must have the right to decide whether a further capital is required or whether it is to be decreased. If the Board makes a very good case for the increase or decrease of the capital, it will be certainly considered by this House and it is not necessary that the whole thing should be left to a body of Directors but it should be left to the Legislature to decide in the matter. I do not want to inflict any more speeches on the House, and I would request the House to adopt my amendment.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 4 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

That clause 5 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I have an amendment, Sir.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I have an amendment on this clause, amendment No. 13 :

"That in clause 5 for the word 'branches' in both places where it occurs, the words 'branch offices' be substituted."

This is purely a drafting amendment and does not need any long explanation. I move the amendment.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in clause 5 of the Bill after the word 'Rangoon' insert the words 'Lahore, Cawnpore and Karachi '."

[Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.]

The object of my amendment is that we have already got centres for currency issue at all these places and the public should not be inconvenienced by the removal of those currency offices from those centres. We know how the Imperial Bank gives facilities for conversion of currency notes. It may be said that the Imperial Bank, being the agents of the Reserve Bank, will give facilities, but in actual practice we find a lot of difficulty in the matter. It is with this object that the public may not be put to inconvenience that I propose that in all the centres from which currency notes are now issued the Reserve Bank should have branches.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I desire to oppose this amendment. It is most undesirable that we should saddle the Reserve Bank in the initial stages with the expense of opening and keeping open a large number of branches unnecessarily. It is proposed that outside the three Presidency towns and Rangoon the Bank should use as its agents in the first instance the Imperial Bank which will give all the facilities that could be given by the Reserve Bank if it had its own branches and will give them at very much less cost to the Reserve Bank than would be involved if the Reserve Bank were to open its own branches in those places. There is no question of additional convenience to the public such as is suggested by Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.

While I am on this point, I may point out that there is an amendment to omit Rangoon. May I with your permission move that amendment ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is entitled to move it.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I move it ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member may move it.

The question is :

"That in clause 5 of the Bill after the word 'Rangoon' insert the words 'Lahore, Cawnpore and Karachi'."

The motion was negatived.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I move the amendment that stands in the name of Mr. W. S. Lamb ?

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member not here ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : He does not seem to be here.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : There is an amendment standing in my name under clause 5.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I should like with your permission, Sir, to move the following amendment :

"That in clause 5 of the Bill the word 'Rangoon' be omitted."

I gather that the inclusion of Rangoon is not desired by the Burma commercial community. It was put in with my agreement in the Joint Committee on the ground that the Burma commercial community desired it. It was thought desirable that we should show the unity of India and Burma by having a branch at Rangoon at an early date. But if it is not desired by the commercial community it is an expense with which it is not necessary to saddle the Reserve Bank.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask on what authority the Finance Member says that the commercial community of Burma does not want a branch to be established at Rangoon ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : On the authority of Mr. Lamb, who unfortunately is not here now.

U. Tok Kyi (Burma : Non-European) : As far as I know from the printed opinions, the Burma Chamber of Commerce has said nothing about this matter ; and I personally, as a representative of Burma, should like to have a branch office in Burma. (Applause).

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : In the absence of the prime mover, I do not wish to press it.

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. President : Does any Honourable Member wish to move any other amendment to clause 5 ?

Haji Abdoola Haroon (Sind : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

" That in clause 5 after the word ' Rangoon ' the word ' Karachi ' be inserted."

Karachi is a rising port and I hope the Government Benches will not oppose my amendment. I trust that this advantage will be given to Karachi.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, what I said before applies in this case. It is undesirable to saddle the Reserve Bank in the initial stages with any further expense than is necessary. It will be an additional expense which in the present condition will fall directly on the tax-payer if a branch is opened at Karachi at once. I have not the least doubt that in the fairly early stages of its existence the Reserve Bank will open branches at Karachi and at several other places, but I submit it is undesirable to lay an obligation upon it to start it right away and incur an expense that will be unnecessary and may strain its resources in the matter of personnel at the first start off.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I beg to move :

" That in clause 5, the words ' or with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, elsewhere ' be omitted."

My only point is that agencies outside India, except London, are quite unnecessary and may even prove dangerous, for that would involve a storage of reserves in those countries. Even England and Germany are not keen about that. I do not know why India should assume a different attitude. With these words, I move my amendment.

Mr. V. K. Aravamudha Ayangar : Sir, if the Reserve Bank has to discharge its functions and take its proper place among the Central Banks of the world, it has to open branches outside India, of course with the approval of the Governor General in Council. I can quote a number of instances of statutes of Central Banks where such provision is made. The Chilean Bank may establish agencies and correspondents abroad. The Czecho-Slovakian Bank may maintain offices at any place where the interests of the State demand. The South African Bank may, with the consent of the Treasury, establish branches outside the Union. The Austrian Bank may establish branches subject to the approval of the Minister of Finance. This provision appears in every Bank statue and I would therefore oppose the amendment.

[Mr. V. K. Aravamudha Ayangar.]

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 5 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 5 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 6 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : My clause runs like this :

" The management of the business and the control of the Bank....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must read his amendment.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya :

" shall be vested in the Board who may exercise all such powers....

Mr. President : What is the Honourable Member's amendment ? Will he read the amendment ? He is reading something which is not the amendment. Will he say : " That for clause 6 of the Bill the following be substituted ? "

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I beg to move :

" That for clause 6 of the Bill the following be substituted :

' 6. The management of the business and the control of the Bank shall be vested in the Board who may exercise all such powers and do all such acts and things as may be exercised or done by the Bank under the Act or any Regulations made thereunder '."

If you will turn, Sir, to the articles of the Banks on whose model our articles are drawn up, you will find, that every where the management and the control of the Bank is vested in the Board and not merely a general superintendence. It would be very harmful to leave the whole thing entirely to the Governor or the Deputy Governor. It is the Board of Directors who should be held responsible for all their actions. I will read to the House section 11 of the Act for the Commonwealth Bank of Australia. It runs as follows :

" The Bank shall be managed by a Board of Directors composed of the Governor and seven other Directors."

Further up it is said that the Governor shall be the executive officer of the Bank and the Deputy Governor shall perform the duties as directed by the Board. It is with a view to see that the management of the Bank be conducted properly and that the Board of Directors do feel their responsibility in the matter that I have brought forward this amendment for the consideration of the House.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya seems to prefer himself as draftsman as against the Government draftsman. I have every confidence in the Government draftsman and therefore I suggest that his amendment be not passed. I cannot see that there is any point of substance in the redraft.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That for clause 6 of the Bill substitute the following :

'6. The management of the business and the control of the Bank shall be vested in the Board who may exercise all such powers and do all such acts and things as may be exercised or done by the Bank under the Act or any Regulations made thereunder '."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 6 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 6 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 7 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, in view of the fact that we have sat long, may I request you to please adjourn the House ?

Mr. President : Is it for the Honourable Member's convenience or does the House want it ?

(Several Honourable Members also requested Mr. President to adjourn the House.)

Mr. President : Then the House stands adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 1st September.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 1st September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 1st September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

APPOINTMENT OF OFFICERS OF THE WATCH AND WARD DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS ACQUAINTED WITH THE VERNACULARS.

731. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Have Government considered the desirability or otherwise of appointing such suitable officers in the Watch and Ward Department of the railway system situated in a province as are acquainted with the vernaculars of the province ? If so, with what results ? If not, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Of the officers available those are selected who are considered most suitable on all grounds including linguistic attainments, though this is not one of the most important qualifications ; I must also point out to the Honourable Member that the two railways—the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways on which most of these offices serve run through several provinces with different vernaculars.

NAMES OF OFFICERS APPOINTED IN THE WATCH AND WARD DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS.

732. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state the names of the various officers in the Watch and Ward Department in the superior posts and the provinces from which they have been deputed and the railways on which they serve at present ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am sending the Honourable Member a statement giving the information required.

INSTITUTION OF A WATCH AND WARD DEPARTMENT ON THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA AND SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAYS, THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY AND THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

733. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Do Government propose recommending the organisation of a Watch and Ward Department on the Madras and Southern Mahratta and the South Indian Railways, the Bengal and North Western Railway and the Assam Bengal Railway and any other railway that has not got it yet ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : All the four Railways mentioned have a Watch and Ward organisation under the Traffic Department. Compensation claims on these Railways are comparatively small and it is not necessary to organise the Watch and Ward Department as a separate unit.

DISTRICT MEDICAL OFFICERS ON THE DIFFERENT RAILWAYS.

734. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha: (a) How many District Medical Officers are there on the different Railways?

(b) How many of them are Indians? How many vacancies have occurred since the adoption of Lee Report and how many Indians have been appointed accordingly?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: The information asked for in (a) and the first part of (b) can be obtained from the Railway Board's Classified list a copy of which is in the Library.

As regards the latter portion of (b) there have been 6 vacancies on State-managed Railways, 5 of which have been filled by Indians.

STOPPAGE OF THE RECRUITMENT OF EUROPEAN MEDICAL OFFICERS ON RAILWAYS.

735. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha: Have Government made any representation, recommendation, or suggestion or the like to the Railway Board and Company-managed Railways to stop recruitment of European medical officers till the proper percentage of Indian officers has been reached? If not, why?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. I would point out to the Honourable Member that the Lee Commission's recommendation was that recruitment in India should be advanced as soon as practicable up to 75 per cent. of the total vacancies in the Railway Departments as a whole, and not in any particular branch.

BENEFIT TO INDIA BY THE ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN AND OTHER ACTIVITIES OF THE EMPIRE MARKETING BOARD.

736. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will Government be pleased to state whether, and in what respects, India benefits by the advertisement campaign and other activities of the Empire Marketing Board?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: The function of the Empire Marketing Board is to advise His Majesty's Government on the expenditure of the annual grant of one million pounds which is made by Parliament, in order to encourage the consumption in the United Kingdom of Empire food products in preference to imports from foreign countries. The object of the grant is to give some reciprocal benefit to other parts of the Empire in return for the tariff preference which they give to British goods. India gives no such preference and strictly speaking, therefore, should have no claim to the benefit of the grant. Nevertheless she is not excluded. It is understood, for instance, that Indian rice, tea, tobacco and condiments are now being largely advertised in the United Kingdom under the direction of the Board, on which the High Commissioner for India is represented.

In addition to advertising, the activities of the Board and of the Imperial Economic Committee, by which it is guided, are directed towards the investigation of better methods of marketing and technical research for the improvement of Empire agricultural products. Subjects of recent enquiries in which India is particularly interested, include the food value of ground-nuts and other oilseeds, and the improvement of the quality of Indian tobacco which, with the assistance of the preferential tariff granted by His Majesty's Government to all Empire tobacco, is now being increasingly imported into the United Kingdom.

THE PROPOSED INDIA HOUSE, LONDON.

737. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : With reference to the construction of India House, London, will Government be pleased to state whether its architecture is to be of the Indian style, and how far the Indian School of Art will be utilised for purposes of its decoration ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The London County Council requires that the exterior should be in harmony with the neighbouring buildings, and apart from small decorative features it will not be possible to make it representative of any Indian style. The Architect however, is endeavouring to give the interior a marked Indian character. It is also proposed to decorate the main hall with frescoes painted by Indian artists and, if funds permit, the dome also and the ceilings of the important rooms. Indian timber will be used, as far as possible, for panelling, flooring and furniture. Indian marble will also be used, and will be worked in India before shipment to England. During the past few months the High Commissioner and the Architect have been assisted by an Advisory Committee of Members of the Indian Legislature in England, and I understand that this Committee has examined and approved all the plans and has given much valuable advice.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire, Sir, what is the name of the architect who is going to design this building ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir Herbert Baker.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The same gentleman who designed the Secretariat and the Assembly Building ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Yes.

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I ask, Sir, if the Advisory Committee that has been appointed is going to meet in London or in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Advisory Committee was formed in London from amongst those members of the Indian Legislature who happened to be in London last summer.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire if there is any reason for appointing the person who designed the Assembly building and the Secretariat to design this building on behalf of the Government of India in London ? Does Sir Herbert possess any special qualifications for designing. Have we not had enough experience of him in Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Sir Herbert Baker's qualifications are obvious.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : They are too obvious.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Are the Indian members of the Committee who happen to be in India at present going to be taken to London to attend the meetings of the Advisory Committee when they are required, on payment of travelling allowances ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Mr. President, that at the early stages when important decisions had to be taken which would determine all that was to be done in future, the existence of an Advisory Committee was most desirable. Obvioulsy, in the nature of the case, a permanent Advisory Committee representative of Indian opinion could hardly be established in London. I have no doubt, however, that the High Commissioner will, as occasion offers, avail himself of opportunities of consulting Members of the Indian Legislature who may happen to be in London on any important matters that may have to be decided.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, would the Honourable Member consider whether it would not be very advisable to get a copy of the plans and to show them to the Members of this House here in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : There might be difficulty about holding everything up until plans could be approved out here. That would involve considerable waste of time, and delay in these cases always means more expenditure. But I understand, Sir—I have not yet myself seen the detailed plans—I understand they are likely to be sent out soon, and whether they could be put in the Library for the scrutiny of Members of the Legislature would, I think, depend upon whether the Legislature was sitting at the time. It might not be possible to hold the thing up to give them an opportunity of seeing them.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : But assuming that the plans are received and that there is no immediate hurry about them, would the Honourable Member consider the advisability of placing them in the Library with a view to enable Members of this House to see them ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I could not give any pledge on that point, Mr. President, because, as I have pointed out, delay in these cases means additional expenditure.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Is there any particular reason why Sir Herbert Baker should have a monopoly of the architectural designs of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am not aware that Sir Herbert Baker has the monopoly. I have heard of Sir Edwin Lutyens in connection with New Delhi.

Mr. B. Das : May I inquire whether the High Commissioner and the Government of India consulted Mr. Havell and Mr. Percy Brown who are great authorities on Indian art and whether these two gentlemen are members of the Advisory Committee to the Architect in London ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have no information on that point.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member kindly convey this suggestion of the House to the High Commissioner and the Architect ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I could not accept an individual opinion, expressed by one Honourable Member, as necessarily the opinion of the House.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire what is the remuneration settled and paid or payable to Sir Herbert Baker ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The remuneration, I understand, is more or less regulated by the scale of fees prescribed by the Royal Institute of British Architects.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire what it will amount to ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid the Honourable Member must give notice of that question.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Will it run into five figures or six figures ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think it would amount to five figures.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask, Sir, if it is not possible for a better architect to be employed for the construction of the India House considering that it is going to cost India a huge sum of money ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am unable to agree to the assumption on which the Honourable Member's questions appear to be based.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Why is it, Sir, that it has not been found possible to construct the building in any Indian style ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think I gave the explanation in answer to the original question. As regards the exterior, we are necessarily bound by the opinion of the London County Council as to the harmony of the building with the other buildings in the vicinity. There would also be a further difficulty I think, in constructing in London any building of a marked Indian character which was also intended for practical use, because, deeply verandahed buildings are apt to be very dark, and the one thing you must have in London, especially with buildings with a northern exterior, is as much light as you can possibly get. That would be one of the practical difficulties.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire if the Honourable Member will consider the advisability of associating Indian architects even as subordinates in the construction of this building in London ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : At the stage to which the scheme has reached I do not think that is a practical suggestion.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Are there not competent Indians in England who can be associated ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I have no information on that subject. I should have notice of that question.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What stage has the scheme reached ? I understood the Honourable Member to say a minute ago that he had not even seen a copy of the plan.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The stage has been reached, to use Indian terminology, when administrative approval has been given and the vote for the first year's expenditure was passed by the Assembly after the scheme had been approved by the Standing Finance Committee. We are now at the stage of the preparation of detailed plans and estimates.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Who has given administrative sanction to this scheme ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The High Commissioner, Sir, is the administrative officer responsible for the scheme.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Is he in communication with the Government of India, and have the Government of India any voice in determining the scheme and giving administrative sanction to it ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have already pointed out that administrative sanction has already been given.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : By whom, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : By the Government of India who are responsible for the scheme.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Was the administrative sanction given by the High Commissioner without the previous sanction of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No, Sir. I have already told the Honourable Member it was given by the Government of India after the Standing Finance Committee had approved and the Assembly had voted the money.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Am I to presume that the Government of India sanctioned the scheme without even looking at the plans ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No, Sir. They looked at the plans which were prepared for the purpose of administrative approval. They could not look at the detailed plans which were not then in existence.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Were the plans submitted to the Standing Finance Committee for approval ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, such plans as we had showing the general arrangement of the building and the various plans....

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are you quite sure ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think they were put before the Standing Finance Committee, and I myself brought that case before that Committee. I am speaking from recollection.....

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I am also speaking from recollection as a member of the Standing Finance Committee.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think arrangements were made to let members see them.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What reason has the Honourable Member for saying that it is now too late to associate Indians in the construction of this building ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I gave that as my impression. I am quite willing to consider the matter if the Honourable Member will write to me on the subject. All I was anxious to do was not to give a false impression to the House that I was clear that the thing could be done. I am not sure it could be done, but I am quite willing to consider it.

SELECTION OF CANDIDATES FOR PERMANENT COMMISSIONS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

738. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Was a selection test held in Simla recently of the candidates for permanent commissions in the Indian Medical Service, and about 60 candidates were required to be present at their own cost from all parts of India for oral examination ?

(b) Is it a fact that all those candidates who possessed Indian medical qualifications were declared unfit for permanent commissions, while those who possessed some kind of English medical degree were selected en bloc ?

(c) Is it a fact that out of those who possess Indian medical qualifications, but who have been rejected, there are at least three who are already holding temporary commissions in the Indian Medical Service ? If so, what will become of them ?

(d) Was the Selection Board given any sort of directions by the Secretary of State for India, or the Government, to follow certain lines of procedure in the selection of candidates ; and will the Government be pleased to lay a copy of the directions on the table ? Or were the members of the Selection Board left to their unfettered discretion in the selection of candidates ?

(e) Will Government kindly state how many candidates possessing Indian medical qualifications have been selected, and how many refused ? If none have been selected, why were those candidates invited to appear from all over the country ?

(f) Will Government kindly give the total cost of holding this meeting of the Selection Board, and the names of the members ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes. The papers of 54 candidates were considered. Forty of these candidates appeared in person before the Board. The remaining 14 were either out of India or could not come to Simla for some other reason, but their papers were duly considered by the Board. Of the 40 who came to Simla, 21 already held temporary commissions in the Indian Medical Service, and 3 were military assistant surgeons, and they travelled under the rules governing their services. 16 candidates had to travel at their own expense.

(b) No, Sir, of the 34 candidates who were not recommended by the Board, 25 possessed professional qualifications obtained in the United Kingdom.

(c) 15 out of the 34 rejected candidates are still holding temporary commissions in the Indian Medical Service. Of these 6 possess only medical qualifications obtained in India. These officers will continue to be employed on the terms they have already accepted.

(d) No instructions have been drawn up either by the Secretary of State or by the Government of India for the guidance of the Selection Board in India. The Board is expected to select those applicants whom it considers the best qualified in every respect for permanent commissions.

(e) No applicant was selected who possessed only Indian medical qualifications, but of the 20 whose names are being recommended to the Secretary of State for permanent commissions, 12 possess Indian medical qualifications in addition to professional qualifications obtained elsewhere. Six applicants with Indian qualifications only were asked to attend because of their records and the good reports they had received whilst holding temporary commissions in the Indian Medical Service. These officers received the usual travelling allowances. In addition, two candidates who possessed Indian qualifications only, and were not holding temporary commissions, were invited to appear because their academic record was good and it was considered that they should be given a chance of competing at a personal interview with the others whose applications were under consideration.

(f) The total cost is estimated at Rs. 11,000. The members of the Board were :

President.

The Honourable Major-General Hooton, Officiating Director General, Indian Medical Service.

Members.

Colonel W. R. Blackwell, Deputy Director of Medical Services in India,

Colonel C. R. Bakhle, Inspector General of Civil Hospitals, Punjab.

Colonel Bhola Nauth, I.M.S., (retired).

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask, Sir, how many candidates possessing only English qualifications, were selected ? I do not know whether the Honourable Member has given that information in his reply.

Mr. G. M. Young : It is not in my answer. I must ask for notice.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly inform me whether it is a fact or not that it is the studied policy of Government, as represented by the Selection Committee, that no one with an Indian qualification will be permanently admitted into the Indian Medical Service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am not aware, Sir, of any studied policy of the Government of India which is carried out by the Selection Board as its representative.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Arising out of that answer, will the Honourable Member kindly inform me, whether any candidate with an Indian qualification only has been admitted into the Indian Medical Service by the Selection Board ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already stated that no applicant was selected who possessed only Indian medical qualifications.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why was he not selected ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I know whether the applications of all the temporary officers were submitted to the Selection Board, or only a few selected men were called up to interview the Board, and whether there had been any preliminary weeding out in the office of the Director-General of the Indian Medical Service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I must ask for notice of that question. All I know is that the papers of 54 candidates were considered by the Selection Board. Whether there have been others I do not know.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Was any consideration given for active war service of those men who did not possess European qualifications ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Selection Board, so far as I am aware, selected the best candidates. They gave no special consideration to any one except the consideration of merit.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it not a fact that out of the temporary officers who have been turned out after several years of service there are about half a dozen men who held the position of officer commanding and were in charge of station hospitals ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I must ask for notice of that question. That does not arise, in my opinion, out of the present answer. We are at present dealing with those who were selected for permanent commissions, or rather whose names have been recommended to the Secretary of State for permanent commissions. The Honourable Member is asking about the temporary officers whose commissions have been terminated. I made a statement about them the other day.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : It arises out of question (c).

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member has asked for notice of that question.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that there was a special order from the Secretary of State that no candidates with Indian qualifications should be selected for the I. M. S. ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No.

AGGREGATE TONNAGE OF COAL CONSUMED BY THE MAJOR INDIAN RAILWAYS.

739. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will the Government be pleased to state what is the aggregate tonnage of coal consumed by the major Indian Railways, for the purposes indicated below the figures for each railway being shown separately :

(a) running of mails and fast expresses ;

(b) running of passenger trains ;

(c) running of goods trains ;

(d) shunting ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have sent a statement to the Honourable Member giving such information as is available.

COAL SUITABLE FOR USE ON THE MAJOR INDIAN RAILWAYS.

740. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the coals, described with reference to the collieries in which they are mined, which meet the requirements of each of the major Indian Railways under each of the following heads :

(a) running of mails and fast expresses ;

(b) running of ordinary passenger trains ;

(c) running of goods trains ; and

(d) shunting ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given on the 29th instant to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 54.

USE OF COAL RAISED IN THE COLLIERY OF ONE STATE RAILWAY BY OTHER RAILWAYS.

741. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that the coal raised in the colliery of one State Railway is used for another ? If so, will the Government furnish full particulars of all such recent instances in point ? Will the Government be pleased to state how the quota of each railway is determined when a colliery is jointly owned by two or three railway owners ?

(b) Is it a fact that the coal raised in collieries owned by State Railways are used on the Company-managed Railways ? If so, will the Government furnish full particulars of such instances in point occurring within the last two years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 55 on 29th August 1927.

CONSTRUCTION BY THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY OF SPECIAL ENGINES TO SUIT THE CONSUMPTION OF SECOND CLASS COAL.

742. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway constructed some special engines three or four years back to suit the consumption of second class coal thereon ? If so, will the Government please state wherein exactly lies the speciality of such locomotives ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given on 29th August 1927 to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 56.

ELECTRIFICATION OF RAILWAYS.

743. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Have the Government now under contemplation any scheme of electrification of any section of any Indian Railway ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the full particulars of such scheme ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. N. C. Kelkar's question No. 614.

AMOUNT OF CAPITAL OUTLAY MADE BY THE PROPOSED RAILWAY COLLIERY IN THE TALCHUR FIELD AND IN RELIGARI-DARI.

744. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will the Government be pleased to say what is the amount of capital outlay so far made by the proposed railway colliery in the Talchur field and in Religari-dari ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member when ready.

AVERAGE PRICE PER TON OF COAL PURCHASED FOR THE RAILWAYS FOR EACH YEAR FROM 1906-07 TO 1926-27.

745. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will the Government be pleased to state what average price per ton was paid for coal purchased for the Railways, the figure being worked out for each year from 1906-07 to 1926-27 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given on 29th August 1927 to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 58.

ADMISSION OF NON-RAILWAY PATIENTS INTO THE BURLINGTON HOSPITAL AT ASANSOL.

746. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Out of what revenues is the Burlington Hospital at Asansol maintained ?

(b) Is the Hospital maintained for the use of railway servants only or are private (non-railway) patients of the District Medical Officer entitled to be treated and nursed in the Hospital ?

(c) If the latter be the case under what terms and conditions are such private patients admitted for nursing and treatment and to whom are the fees for such (i) nursing and (ii) treatment payable ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are making enquiries and will communicate with the Honourable Member in due course.

THE DISTRICT MEDICAL OFFICER, ASANSOL.

747. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is the District Medical Officer, Asansol, a whole time servant of the Railway Administration ? If so, is he permitted to accept contract practice with the various coal companies situated in the district ; if so under whose authority ?

(b) Are all railway medical officers liable to be transferred like all other Government officers in the East Indian Railway ? If not why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are making enquiries and will communicate with the Honourable Member in due course.

†748*—753*.

CONSTITUTION OF THE DIFFERENT COMMITTEES OF THE COUNCIL OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

754. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Have Government any information as to the constitution of the different Committees of the Council of the Secretary of State for India ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Military Committee, the Political Committee and the Services Committee do not include any Indian member ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As the Honourable Member is doubtless aware, section 10 of the Government of India Act gives discretion to the Secretary of State as regards the constitution of Committees of Council. The Government of India have no information as to the constitution of these Committees.

ALLOCATION OF NON-JUDICIAL STAMP DUTIES AS A CENTRAL SOURCE OF REVENUE.

755. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) With reference to the proposed allocation of non-judicial stamp duties as a Central source of revenue, what progress has been made in the consideration of the matter ?

† Not put, as the Honourable Member, Sardar Gulab Singh, has not yet taken the oath of office.

GRANT OF CONCESSIONS TO THE SWEDISH MATCH COMBINE.

760. *Mr. B. Das : With reference to starred question No. 18, answered on the 18th August 1927, will Government be pleased to state if the Swedish Match Combine have received or have applied for any concessions from the Government of India or from any of the Local Governments in any shape or form ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Information on the subject has been called for and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

Mr. B. Das : May I request that it may be communicated to the House ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The usual practice nowadays is to send the reply to the Honourable Member. I believe the object of that arrangement is to save a certain amount of expense to the tax-payer on printing charges. If, however, there is any general demand on the part of the House for the information, and if I find that the information does not lead to a lengthy document, I should be quite ready to place it on the table of the House. Otherwise, I shall place the information in the Library.

SELECTION OF CANDIDATES FOR PERMANENT COMMISSIONS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

761. *Mr. B. Das : (a) With reference to the Press report regarding the last selection of candidates for the permanent I. M. S. will Government be pleased to state if sixty candidates appeared for the test and that only fifteen of them were selected ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what are the qualifications for the permanent I. M. S. ?

(c) Is it a fact that no candidate was selected who possessed merely Indian medical degrees ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state what are the degrees of European or British Medical Universities necessary for selection to the I. M. S. ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Selection Board which sat in Simla recently were guided by certain instructions from Whitehall ?

(f) If the answer to (e) be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to lay the said instructions on the table ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 738.

(b) Candidates must possess a qualification registrable in Great Britain and Ireland under the Medical Acts in force at the time of their appointment.

(c) Yes. But I would refer the Honourable Member to clause (b) of my reply to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 738.

(d) Details of the Indian and British medical qualifications that are registrable in the United Kingdom are given in the " Medical Register " issued every year by the General Council of Medical Education and Registration of the United Kingdom.

(e) and (f). I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to clause (d) of the reply I gave to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 738.

Mr. B. Das : May I enquire if it is the decision of the Government of India that Indian University medical degreees are not qualifying degrees for the I. M. S. ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already said that that is not the case.

Mr. B. Das : May I also enquire if the Indian University degrees are not qualifying degrees for the I. M. S., will the Government see their way to abolish Indian medical colleges ?

(At this stage an Honourable Member crossed the Chamber between the Chair and the speaker.)

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask why no one possessing merely Indian medical degrees was selected ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already explained that the Selection Board, as far as I know, selected candidates according to merit. The qualifications are considered by the Selection Board. The Selection Board have no instructions with regard to purely Indian medical qualifications, and there is no policy of the Government of India, so far as I am aware, with regard to purely Indian medical qualifications.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it the contention of Government that candidates possessing merely Indian qualifications are inferior to those possessing purely European qualifications ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have alrealy said that there is no decision and no policy on that point of the Government of India.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask how the Government explain the wonderful phenomenon of the exclusion of those candidates who possessed only Indian qualifications ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Government have made no attempt to explain it, nor do they consider it a very wonderful phenomenon.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Is it not more straight and honest to put the preference on the ground of racial discrimination ?

Mr. G. M. Young : All the candidates that we are discussing were Indians.

Mr. Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member if there has been any case in which Indians with Indian qualifications only have been given permanent commissions ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Past or this time ? This time—No.

Mr. Chaman Lall : Recently.

Mr. G. M. Young : I will find out and let the Honourable Member know.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I repeat my question as to whether any special consideration is shown to an Indian officer holding a temporary commission for active war service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already answered that question. There is no special consideration shown except consideration of merit and qualifications.

APPOINTMENT OF E. J. MACKAY AS AN ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT OF THE ARCHAEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

762. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. E. J. Mackay has been appointed as an Assistant Superintendent of the Archæological Survey and deputed to work at Mahenjo Daro ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the date of his appointment, his pay and allowances and the nature of his work at Mahenjo Daro ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the post was advertised and if so, in what manner ?

(d) How many applications were received from Indians, what were their qualifications and why were they not appointed ?

(e) Is it a fact that one of the chief works to be done at Mahenjo Daro is to read script ?

(f) If so, what is the special qualification of Mr. Mackay so far as the reading of ancient scripts is concerned ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(b) 18th November 1926 ; pay Rs. 1,000 per mensem ; overseas pay £30 per mensem ; officer in charge of the excavations at Mohenjo Daro.

(c) The post was not advertised. For the conduct of excavations at Mohenjo Daro a practical excavator with an intimtae knowledge of Mesopotamian antiquities was required and there was no Indian archaeologist who possessed the requisite qualifications.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) No. The script found at Mohenjo Daro is illegible. It has not yet been deciphered.

(f) Does not arise.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : How did the Government come to the conclusion that there was no one in India possessing the requisite qualifications when they did not advertise the post ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Because, Sir, the officer required was one with large experience of excavations at Mesopotamia and also with some knowledge of Sumerian antiquities, and it was not at all likely that an Indian possessed of those qualifications would have been found.

Diwan Chaman Lall : How can the Honourable Member say it is not likely that any Indian would have been found with those qualifications ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : We were guided by our experts in the Archæological Department, and I do not think it is very difficult to imagine that no Indian possessing knowledge of Sumerian antiquities and Mesopotamian excavations could have been found.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : And even outside India Mr. Mackay was the only gentleman who was found qualified ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal . Mr. Mackay was regarded by the Director General of Archæology as very well qualified, and as his services would not have been available to us long, if we had advertised all the world over, he was appointed.

U. Tok Kyi : What are Mr. Mackay's qualifications ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Mr. Mackay has had 25 years' experience of excavations in Mesopotamia.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : What is the connection between Sumerian antiquities and the antiquities excavated at Mohenja Daro ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : That is a very learned question, but I understand that it was originally anticipated that there would be some kind of connection between these very difficult and illegible script and antiquities and Sumerian antiquities.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Has Mr. Mackay been able to read it ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : No one has been able to read the script.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : When did the Government discover any connection between the excavations at Mohenjo Daro and Sumerian architecture ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I did not say that any connection has yet been proved.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Then why it is that a knowledge of Sumerian antiquities was considered as sine qua non for the appointment ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I did not say that knowledge of Sumerian architecture was considered as a sine qua non, but a knowledge of Mesopotamian excavations was considered a very necessary qualification.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Are not Mesopotamian excavations closely connected with Sumerian activities ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am afraid, Sir, we are going beyond our depth—at least I am going beyond my depth. (Laughter.)

Reservation of the Bungalow at Mahenjo Daro for Europeans.

763. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Is it a fact that Indians living in European style are not allowed to occupy the bungalow at Mahenjo Daro which is reserved for [illegible] when it is unoccupied and the visitor wants to occupy it ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state its reason ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The bungalow at Mohenjo Daro is not a rest house but a departmental bungalow. It is intended for the use of Archæological officers stationed there and is occupied by European and Indian officers alike without distinction.

Resolution of the Government of India regarding Archæological Policy.

764. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the Resolution of the Government of India regarding their Archæological policy published soon after the appointment of Sir John Marshall as the head of the Department and fully indicate how far action has been taken in pursuance of the Resolution up to date ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : A copy of the resolution is laid on the table.

The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Annual Published Reports of the Archæological Department which show the action taken in pursuance of the policy laid down in the Resolution.

Resolution.

The conservation of the ancient buildings which provide so splendid a record of Indian history and so interesting an illustration of the artistic and religious feelings of the past is a task that should appeal powerfully to the sympathy of the Government of this country, and that must be regarded as a responsibility for the due discharge of which it will properly be held to account. For some time past the attention of the Governor General in Council has been directed to the question of securing the recognition of a liberal policy in this matter, and of increasing the efficiency of the organization which exists for carrying it into effect. Under a scheme which was introduced in 1898 the provinces of British India were grouped into five circles to each of which an Archæological Surveyor was appointed, to be paid from the Imperial revenues but to be controlled by the Local Government within whose jurisdiction his headquarters were situated. He was charged with the duties of cataloguing archæological remains, of advising the Local Government concerning the preservation of such of these remains as merited care, and, generally, with the prosecution of archæological research. Responsibility for the effective conservation of such monuments as it was decided to maintain was left with Local Governments, which were to employ the agency of the Provincial Public Works Departments in carrying out necessary measures of construction and repair. This responsibility has led in some provinces to a liberal and welljudged expenditure, and the Governor General in Council recognizes that the local interest and pride in the public monuments of a province which are thereby developed should furnish the most effective security against their neglect. But the organization has been shown to be imperfect in so far as it has left the Archæological Department without an expert Head, who could assist local effort with authoritative advice and guidance, and maintain a continuous record of the archæological needs of the various provinces and of the action taken to meet them. In the absence of such a central authority the attention that is given to the conservation of the ancient monuments of the country, and to archæological questions in general, must depend partly upon the attractiveness which these subjects may possess for particular Heads of Local Governments and Administrations, partly upon the sufficiency of available funds. With a view to introducing greater uniformity as well as greater liberality of treatment, the Governor General in Council has determined, with the approval of the Secretary of State, to appoint tentatively, for a term of five years, a Director General of Archæology; and Mr. J. H. Marshall has been selected for the post. In name, the appointment will be a revival of that held by Major General Cunningham and Dr. Burges between the years 1871 and 1889. But the duties of the incumbent will extend considerably beyond the direction and control of archæological research to which these officers mainly directed their attention. It will be the most important of his functions to secure that the ancient monuments of the country are properly cared for, that they are not utilized for purposes which are inappropriate or unseemly, that repairs are executed when required, and that any restorations which may be attempted are conducted on artistic lines. In this respect his position will be generally similar to that occupied by the Curator of Ancient Monuments who held office from 1880 to 1883. But his duties will extend to the exercise of a general supervision over all the archæological work of the country, whether it be that of excavation, or preservation, or repair, or of the registration and description of monuments and ancient remains, or of antiquarian research ; he will assist the Provincial Surveyors in ascertaining and formulating the special requirements of each province ; and he will advise the Government of India as to the operations for which special subsidies may be allotted from Imperial funds. He should visit all the circles in succession, and the more important ones, so far as is possible, in each year, succinctly reporting the general results of his tour to the Local Government of each province visited and offering any suggestion that he may have to make in connection with the buildings which he has inspected. He should co-ordinate and bring up to date the local surveys and reports; and he will be expected to submit annually to the Government of India a brief report on the progress effected during each official year.

2. The Governor General in Council desires to make it known that the creation of this appointment is in no way intended to weaken the responsibility of Local Governments for the care of the ancient monuments of their provinces. Their duty in this respect will remain unimpaired ; but it is hoped that a stimulus may be lent to its continuous and effective discharge by the offer of expert advice and, where required, of practical assistance. The present arrangements under which repairs and restorations are carried out by the Provincial Departments of Public Works will remain unaltered ; and the Government of India are indeed of opinion that in the interests of continuity of administration it is desirable that each Local Government should fix an annual minimum sum to be expended on these purposes. The Governor General in Council is prepared to emphasize his own responsibility in the matter and to facilitate the prompt undertaking of necessary works by reserving annually a sum of one lakh of rupees to be distributed for particular objects demanding early execution and shown to be beyond the financial capacity of Local Governments. It is further in contemplation to take powers by legislation for the more efficacious protection and repair of ancient buildings, in which case these subsidies will prove of special assistance to those administrations whose archæological responsibilities will thereby be enhanced.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be forwarded to the Local Governments and Administrations noted below for information and guidance and to the several Departments of the Government of India, for information.

Ordered also that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be forwarded to the Director General of Archæology for information and guidance.

Ordered, also, that the Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India for general information.

Government of Madras.
Government of Bombay.
Government of Bengal.
Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.
Government of Punjab.
Government of Burma.
The Honourable the Chief Commissioner of the C. P.
The Honourable the Chief Commissioner of Assam.
The Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara.
The Chief Commissioner, Coorg.
The Honourable the Resident at Hyderabad.
The Honourable the Agent to the Governor General and Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province.

(True Extract.)
J. B. FULLER,
Secretary to the Government of India.

Refusal of Permission to Mr. Ram Narayan Singh, M.L.A., to visit the Detenus in the Hazaribagh Jail.

765. Kumar Ganganand Sinha: Will the Government be pleased to inquire and state what were the causes that prevailed upon the Governments of Bihar and Orissa and Bengal to refuse permission to Mr. Ram Narayan Singh, an Honourable Member of the House, to visit the Hazaribagh jail with the object of inducing the detenus to put an end to the hunger strike that they were observing ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Government of India have not received any information.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government be pleased to ask the Government of Bengal and the Government of Bihar and Orissa to give their reasons for refusing to allow a Member of this House to visit the detenus in Hazaribagh Jail.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Questions relating to the internal administration of jails are entirely within the competence of Local Governments and the Government of India would not be prepared to call for reports on matters which are so distinctly within their competence.

HUNGER STRIKE OF THE BENGAL DETENUS IN THE HAZARIBAGH JAIL.

766. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state fully the reasons for the hunger strike observed by the Bengal detenus at Hazaribagh, its origin and its end ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am making enquiries on the subject.

PROVISION OF LATRINES IN THIRD CLASS CARRIAGES ON THE BARSI LIGHT RAILWAY.

767. Khan Bahadur Haji Abdullah Haji Kasim : (a) Are the Government aware of the inconveniences caused to the third class passengers owing to there being no latrines in the third class carriages on the Barsi Light Railway between Pandarpur and Lathur a distance of 110 miles ?

(b) If so, what steps have the Government taken to remove this inconvenience to the third class passengers ?

(c) If not, will the Government enquire into the matter and do the needful ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not aware of the inconvenience complained of but are bringing the matter to the notice of the Company concerned.

PROVISION OF LATRINES IN RAILWAY CARRIAGES RUNNING BETWEEN PANDHARPUR AND MIRAJ.

768. Khan Bhahadur Haji Abdullah Haji Kasim : (a) Are railway carriages ready for the proposed line between Pandarpur and Miraj a distance of about 84 miles ?

(b) If so, are latrines provided in the third class carriages ?

(c) If not, will the Government provide latrines in the third class carriages ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Only in the compartments for women.

(c) Government are bringing the matter to the notice of the Railway Company concerned.

RECRUITMENT OF MOPLAHS FOR THE INDIAN TERRITORIAL FORCE.

769. *Khan Bahadur Haji Abdullah Haji Kasim : (a) Is it a fact that recruitment is going on at Cannanore in the District of Malabar for the Territorial Force ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that only Nairs and Tiyyas are being recruited ?

(c) Do Government intend recruiting Moplahs also for the Territorial Force ?

(d) If so, when, and in what number ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Government have no detailed information, but recruiting to replace vacancies in the establishment of the 12th and 13th Battalions of the 3rd Madras Regiment, located at Cannanore is most probably proceeding as usual.

(b) The 12th and 13th Battalions of the 3rd Madras Regiment consist of 2 companies each of Nairs, 1¾ companies of Thiyyas and a ¼ company of Christians.

(c) The answer is in the negative.

(d) Does not arise.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

APPOINTMENT OF SOME MUHAMMADANS IN THE SUPERIOR GRADES ON RAILWAYS.

770. *Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the respective numbers and proportions of Europeans and Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) employed in the Railways, owned by the Government, in the superior grades of from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,000 ?

(b) Will the Government be further pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the number of Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) and Europeans respectively, now employed in the Railway administration, carrying salaries of Rs. 1,000 and upwards ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the respective number of Muhammadans and non-Muhammadans employed in the Railway administration with salaries starting from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,000 and from Rs. 1,000 and upwards ?

(d) Do Government propose to consider the desirability of appointing more Muhammadans representing the different provinces in the superior grades of the Railway administration, specially in the grades of Rs. 500 and upwards ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state the respective number of such Muhammadans belonging to the various provinces of India ?

(f) Are Government prepared to take early steps to make such appointments in future in a way so as to ensure an equitable representation of the different provinces in the service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix F of Railway Board's Report on Indian Railways for 1925-26, Volume I. No other information is available.

I may mention that this Appendix does not at present show the number of Anglo-Indians separately ; but in response to a suggestion made by Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru during the debate on the last Railway Budget we intend to give separate figures for Anglo-Indians in this Appendix, in future.

(d) and (f). I would refer the Honourable Member to the Regulations for the recruitment for certain Superior Railway Services published in the Gazette of India of the 17th July, 1926, and 9th July, 1927, in which provision has been made for the redress of communal inequalities. Those Regulations also provide that the number of candidates to be nominated from the various provinces should be fixed in a certain proportion.

(e) Government have no information.

PROGRESS MADE IN CONNECTION WITH THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE SINGHJANI TANGAIL-PINGNA RAILWAY IN THE MYMENSINGH DISTRICT.

771. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the progress made with regard to the Singhjani-Tangail-Pingna Railway scheme in the District of Mymensingh in Bengal ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the survey with regard to the said scheme has been completed ? If not, when is the said survey expected to be completed ? If yes, will the Government be further pleased to state the approximate date when the work of construction would be started ?

(c) Is it not the fact that the said scheme has been under contemplation for a long time now ? And do Government propose to push on the said scheme with expedition so that the Railway might be opened by 1929 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). It is proposed to make a traffic survey of the project during the coming working season After consideration of the Report on the traffic survey, it will be decided whether construction should be undertaken.

(c) Yes. If the survey shows satisfactory results, no time will be lost in commencing construction.

APPOINTMENT OF AN INDIAN AS MEMBER OF THE RAILWAY BOARD.

772. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have taken any steps to carry out their promise made to the Indian Legislative Assembly of appointing an Indian Member of the Railway Board ?

(b) If nothing has been done in that direction, will the Government be pleased to give the reason why they have not yet given effect to the said promise ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state when an Indian Member would be appointed on the Railway Board ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a), (b) and (c). I would draw the Honourable Member's attention to the remarks made by the Honourable Sir Charles Innes in his speech on the motion of Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar on the Railway Budget on the 23rd February 1927. (Page 1241 of Volume IX, No. 22.)

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to forests, the transit of forest produce and the duty leviable on timber and other forest produce.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume consideration of the Bill to establish a gold standard for British India and constitute a Reserve Bank of India, clause by clause.

The question is :

"That clause 7 do stand part of the Bill."

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move the amendment, No. 26 on the order paper, which stands in my name, namely :

"That in clause 7, after sub-clause (a), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely :

'(b) is a member of the Indian or a local Legislature, or ; and sub-clauses (b), (c) and (d) be re-lettered (c), (d) and (e), respectively, and for the letter '(d)' in the Explanation the letter '(e)' be substituted.'"

Sir, this is one of the amendments to which the Government of India attach special importance. The provision that Members of the Legislatures as such should not be eligible for membership of the Directorate of the Reserve Bank was among the unanimous recommendations of the Currency Commission. It is a provision that is found in a considerable number of statutes of the Central Banks throughout the world, and the reasons for this are fairly simple. It is obviously desirable that there should neither be a definite intermixture of politics in the business of controlling currency and credit, nor should there be any room for suspicion of such intermixture. This is perhaps even more important now that this Bank is to be not a shareholders' bank but what is called a State Bank. The provision allowing Members of the Legislatures to be members of the Directorate was reinserted by the Joint Committee. I think there is a certain amount of misapprehension on this matter. I am quite prepared to admit that there are always likely to be a considerable number of Members of the Legislatures who are well qualified to serve as Directors of the Reserve Bank. But it is desirable that they should make a definite choice between the two. If they desire to serve as members of the Directorate of the Reserve Bank, they ought in the first place to be readily available for meetings of the Board. If they are going to spend a considerable portion of the year in attendance at Delhi or in Simla at the Sessions of the Assembly and the Council of State, or at Sessions of their local Legislatures, they will not really have the time and energy properly required for the performance of their duties as members of the Reserve Bank Board. It is not proposed that they should be disqualified for election, but if they are elected they must choose either that they should be Reserve Bank Board Members or that they should be Members of the Legislature. The functions of the Reserve Bank Board will be very important and difficult, and it is desirable that the members of that Board should be permitted to devote as much as possible of their energies to the work involved. I think it is clearly quite impracticable for them, if they take an active part in the life of this Assembly or the Council of State or of a local Legislature, to be taking an active part at the same time in performing the functions of membership of the Reserve Bank Board. The objections to Members of the Legislatures being also members of the Board are I think present to the mind of anybody who begins seriously to consider the subject. Obviously, there is a certain amount of difficulty in this Assembly in arguing that Members of the Assembly should not be members of the Board. I desire to make it perfectly clear that that means no reflection on Members of this Assembly. It is undesirable that they should be combining either their politics or their business in such a way as to be mixing up their duties as members of the Reserve Bank Board with their duties as active Members of this Legislature. I would ask this House to remember that in voting on this amendment, it is considering to some extent a self-denying ordinance (Laughter), and I think that in considering that as a self-denying ordinance, it should give the benefit of the doubt, if it possesses any in its mind, to the virtues of self-denial. I know that this matter has been considered and that there is considerable objection on the part of some Members to this proposal ; but I would ask the House, in consideration of the concord at which we are in process of arriving at on the whole question of the Directorate of the Reserve Bank, to think twice and three times before committing itself to the view that membership of the Legislatures and membership of the Reserve Bank can properly be combined, and to remember that the Government have been trying very hard to make those concessions that are in their power with a view to securing that the Bill may rest safely on the Statute-book. Sir, I move.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, if I rise to oppose the amendment which Sir Basil Blackett has moved, it is because I desire the Honourable Member to consider certain criteria which I am sure he himself at many times stated before the House. We have been told that in this country banking is undeveloped, business is undeveloped, commercial men are all too few, and that the extent of interest that commercial men take in public and financial affairs is far too limited ; and I am sure Sir Basil Blackett will be the last man to deny the fact that, if he is going to place a limitation on Members of the Legislative Assembly electing to the directorate of the Central Bank, he will be extremely narrowing the choice of those who will have the right to elect or nominate directors and will thereby cripple the efficiency of the Board of Directors. Sir, it has been admitted on all hands that the number of business men available for the discharge of public duties, whether it be in the Legislature or in such a public institution as the Central Bank, is none too great in our country. We hope that it will increase ; and we are sure, when that situation arrives, it will not be necessary to impose any limitations and that there will be, in the process of nature, a proper division of functions between business men who would like to take part in the public duties of a Legislature and business men who would like to take part in the business duties which appertain to a Central Bank. Sir, that time has not arrived admittedly. Until that time arrives, I say, from the point of view of the efficiency of the Central Bank, it is obvious that to impose a limitation of this character is certainly a most undesirable thing. It will defeat the very object which the Honourable the Finance Member has in view. In the next place, Sir, yesterday the Government as well as we on this side agreed to the definite principle that so far as the Central Bank is concerned, it should be a representative body ; it should contain a majority of Indian elected Members. Sir, when that principle has been conceded, I say it is a denial of that principle if you deny to the electorate the right to choose those whom it considers best qualified to discharge the duties of a Director on the Central Board. The limitation that is sought to be imposed is a limitation which it is well within the power of the electorate itself to consider and judge. It is not right that a limitation of this character should be imposed on the electorate, and I say it is a deprivation of the fundamental rights of the electorate to restrict its choice in the manner proposed. In the next place, Sir, I desire to state that so far as this disqualification is concerned, the Government originally wanted to couple it with the proposal that Members of the Legislature should not constitute themselves into an electorate and that Members of the Legislature should not get elected to the Central Bank. Sir Basil preached the virtues of self-denial on the part of the Legislature. Sir, if my friend, Sir Basil had conceded the right to the Legislature (as the Joint Committee had proposed), here and to the Legislatures in the provinces to elect Directors, I could understand what he now says, namely, that the Legislatures, when they possess the power to elect, should practise the virtue of self-denial and should not elect one among themselves. Sir, when proposals are now under consideration to constitute electorates outside of the Legislature from the public, people who will represent wide interests, who will bring up a proper Directorate to the Central Bank, I say, Sir, that when the Legislature itself is not going to have a hand in the elections, it is wrong to tie the hands of such electorates and say " You shall not take anybody from the Legislature." After all, Sir, in what sense can you say that a Member of the Legislature cannot properly discharge the duties of a Central Bank ? It is not as if he will bring politics into the affairs of the Central Bank. They cannot go by political considerations ; they are only dealing with business there. Will the Member bring the financial affairs of the Central Bank into this House ? I say, Sir, that if he does so and thereby commits any breach of the principles of business which Directors are expected to conform to, that is a reflection upon the Member who will be elected to the Central Directorate, and I refuse to believe that any Director of the Central Directorate as such would so use his position as a member of the Central Bank's Directorate as to come into this House and make political capital of what is essentially a business function. I do not think our past experience in this respect has been in any respect wrong. We have here in this Legislature Members who are members of the Directorate of the Imperial Bank. Have we found Imperial Bank politics trotted out by these Directors in this House ? I do not think any instance can be cited of that case. Therefore I refuse to believe that the Members of the Legislature by the mere reason that they are Members of this Legislature would be prejudiced either in the discharge of the duties of the Central Bank or of the Legislatures. If, as a matter of fact, a Member of the Legislature finds that the duties of the Central Bank Directorate as well as of the Legislature are too arduous for him to undertake, he will be the first man to give one up. The whole question is this. You are giving this power to the electorate. Is it not our duty to leave it to the electorate to find out whether its nominee is a proper man, whether he will discharge his duties, whether he will find time to do those duties, whether he will be impartial, whether he will keep all the traditions of honour and of business methods both in the Central Bank and in the Legislature ? I therefore think that the imposition of this disqualification is wholly unnecessary and, is also opposed to the fundamental principles of election, and I oppose the amendment.

[Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar.]

*Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I have already spoken on this question when I moved my amendment. I simply rise to make one correction in the remark made by the Honourable the Finance Member that in no leading banks any Member of the Legislature is found. I have got with me a list of the Bank of England Directors, in which I find the name of a member of Parliament.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I point out, Sir, that I did not say that in no leading banks any Member of the Legislature was found. What I said was that this provision finds a place in very many of the statutes of Reserve Banks.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I simply want to draw the attention of the House to the fact that in the Bank of England members of Parliament are not debarred from sitting as Directors and actually we find one or two members of Parliament on the Directorate. I merely want to give this information to the House and support the contention of my friend Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment of Sir Basil Blackett. I do so with very great pleasure. But I am very sorry to differ from my esteemed friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar. He has been a lifelong friend of mine both in the profession as well as in politics. But, Sir, I believe he is not right. What is the choice that Sir Basil Blackett has given us ? He says " Choose politics or choose finance and commerce." I think, Sir, he is for once right. (Laughter.) I have often believed that the shoemaker should keep to his last. Now, Sir,.....

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Why should a newspaper man be in the Assembly ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : A newspaper man is both a politician and a journalist.

Now, Sir, I come to the proposition of Sir Basil Blackett. What does he say ? If he says that no legislator is eligible for appointment on the Central Board of the Bank as a Director, I shall certainly oppose his motion. I am not going to write down once for all that Members of this House are ineligible for the bank directorship. What he has told us is a question of choice. As there are bankers, business men and economists, growing all over the country and there are men really who are anxious to pursue banking as a profession, let us not restrict their choice, but let us practise the self-denying ordinance and let us restrict our own choice and let us be once for all either legislators or bankers. I therefore, Sir, have very great pleasure in supporting the amendment of Sir Basil Blackett.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

*Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Sir, I think this proposal is a very healthy recommendation of the Royal Commission. This is merely accepting the proposition of the Royal Commission. As regards the practical point of view, as set forth by Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar and as we say in our minute of dissent, it is quite true that the number of men available for the Legislatures and for the Reserve Bank is not too great. But that is a different thing to saying that you cannot get men. I do not know very much about Madras, but I am not quite certain that it will be impossible for Madras to produce a good Director or good Directors for the Reserve Bank without encroaching on the field of the Legislature, the local Council and the Assembly. Certainly so far as Bombay is concerned, I do not think it will be difficult at all ; there are plenty of able men in Bombay.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : We want the best men.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : I see no practical difficulty in accepting the amendment and one cannot but regard it as a most healthy principle recommended by the Royal Commission.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I am very sorry that I have to oppose the amendment moved by the Honourable the Finance Member, and I do hope that in consistency with the salutary spirit which he showed yesterday and which on this side of the House we very much approved, he will not insist upon this amendment going through. I did not take part in the early discussion on this Bill, Sir, but I am bound to say that there is always a sort of obsession of fear and distrust on the part of some Members on the opposite Benches wherever the Legislatures are concerned. The Honourable the Finance Member indulged in a very striking analogy in comparing this Bill with a pet child. But he reminds me, Sir, of a legend in Greek history which is more appropriate, namely, that a celebrated Greek sculptor prepared a female statue with which he eventually fell in love and the feeling became such a great obsession, Sir, that a kind friend destroyed the statue and thus enabled the sculptor to get rid of his obsession and acquire the free working of his natural faculties. I do hope, Sir, that the Government Benches in supporting this amendment will not be prompted by this kind of obsession ; my hope has become more pertinent having regard to the fact that the popular benches are showing a desire for and I am told are already in sight of a compromise under which they will not insist upon the Legislature electing its Members to the Directorate. There are negotiations going on at the present moment between the Government Benches and this side of the House by which a satisfactory compromise is likely to be arrived at, under which this side of the House will give up its contention that the Legislature ought to have direct representation on this Directorate. Under these circumstances, Sir, I beg of the Honourable the Finance Member not to insist upon this amendment going through ; that will be in consonance with the spirit of the compromise which we are likely to arrive at. He talks of self-denial, an admirable virtue in these days ; but let the Government of India make the beginning in this matter, by restraining their distrust of their Colleagues in the Legislature.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

12 NOON.

This amendment, Sir, is bound to be regarded by a large section of the Members on this side as a slight put upon the Members of this Legislature. Apart from other considerations connected with this question, one cannot avoid the feeling that by reason of being a Member of this Legislature one is being denied the membership of the Board, in spite of one's possessing all the requisite qualifications, business talent and experience, etc., of which this Bill speaks. The mere fact that one happens to be a Member of this House ipso facto constitutes a ban that is bound to be regarded as humiliating, whatever the Government may say in justification of it. I do hope, therefore, that the Honourable the Finance Member will not insist upon this amendment going through.

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I take it that the Honourable the Finance Member's point is, firstly, that it is undesirable for a member of a political body to be a Director of the Bank and, secondly, that his duties as a Member of the Legislature would interfere with his duties as a Director.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Is it undesirable in any part of the British Empire ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : If I may take the second point first, I do feel that that argument is not a very strong one. If your point is that a legislator who looks after his business of legislating efficiently will not have the time to give to his duties as a Director of the Bank, why not also say that nobody who is in any form of business, which will interfere with his duties as a Director of the Bank, should be eligible to be a Director. Frankly, I do not think that your Directors need be whole-time Directors. It is true that, apart from their monthly meetings, there will be a daily committee which may take up part of their time, but I think in practice you will find that the Directors will be able to spare time for either their business or the local legislative work which they may desire to pursue. Secondly, we must remember that the Director of the Bank may prefer to neglect his duties as a legislator rather than neglect his duties as a Director. From that point of view, I think it would be invidious to pick out legislators and say that they must not be Directors merely from the standpoint that their time is too fully occupied.

With regard to the first point, I do realise the force of the argument that no political complexion should be attached to the Directorate of the Bank and from that point of view I do see a certain amount of force in the statement that a Member of the Legislature should not be a Director. I do not, however, personally attach a very great deal of force to it if my point of view were accepted that Directors would be elected first because of their business capacity. And I, therefore, take it that if a man is elected as a Director because of his business capacity, he would not allow the political side of his temperament to interfere with the business side. Still, the Honourable the Finance Member feels very strongly in this matter and if it is going to interfere with the solution, may I offer very respectfully a small suggestion. Why not say that we will insist on this clause but that we will defer making it operative for a certain number of years ? During that period it would be known to everybody whether those Directors who were Members of the Legislatures were or were not efficient in their task as Directors of the Reserve Bank, and then the clause could either be withdrawn or allowed to become operative at the future date, say, five years hence.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I do not know why I should interfere in these matters, but something or other strikes me every now and then and I can hardly avoid the temptation of saying a few words and that is my excuse. I understand, Sir, that the Bank is going to be a State Bank and as such this Assembly will have to do a good deal in shaping its policy, etc. (Honourable Member : "No no.") If we have a Member of this Assembly as a member of the Directorate of the Bank, and that member disagrees with the views of the majority of the Directors on any matter connected with the Bank, he will have the advantage of pressing his personal views more effectively in this House than those who are not Members of this House. He will be in a particularly advantageous position in the Directorate as against those Directors who are not Members of this House. This disadvantage of the others might go against the interests of the Bank or at least against the views of the majority. If there is this likelihood of a member of the Directorate claiming to be speaking from personal knowledge and with similar other advantages about the Bank's affairs in this House, I think it will not be fair and just to his other colleagues. That is all I wanted to say on this amendment.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment moved by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett. One point ...

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member support the amendment ?

Mr. M. S. Aney : I am opposing it. There were two points which the Honourable the Finance Member tried to make out in support of the amendment. One point has already been replied to very satisfactorily by Sir Victor Sassoon. The other point is this that there is an apprehension that a Member of this Legislature may not find sufficient time to devote himself to the work of the Bank. In this connection I warn the House to remember that in all the Legislatures, including the Central as well as Provincial Legislatures, we have definitely got certain constituencies to represent the commercial and industrial interests. The object of creating these constituencies is to secure the best possible men from those constituencies to give us advice on these matters. If the amendment moved be passed, the result will be that either the Legislature will have the benefit of the best possible men in the industrial and commercial circles or the Reserve Bank will have the benefit of them. One of the two bodies, namely, the Legislature or the Reserve Bank, must be robbed of the best possible commercial or industrial advice that is available in the country. That will be the net result. Is it advantageous to us ? Can we afford to put up with it ? I think it is desirable that neither the Central Legislature nor the Provincial Legislatures should be denied the advantage of getting the best possible advice from these men nor should the Reserve Bank be robbed of their advice. That being the case, it will decidedly be to the disadvantage of one of these bodies if the proposed amendment is carried. So, there is no reason why we should accept the amendment and deny the privilege to the Members of the Legislatures of becoming Directors of the Reserve Bank.

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

As regards the Members of this Assembly who are to be Directors, I will say one thing. We have got in this Assembly Members who represent the commercial constituencies and do their work in the Legislature very satisfactorily. (Hear, hear.) We also actually find that they have been able to do their work in the various commercial bodies which they represent, and of which they are members, in the most satisfactory way, in fact in as satisfactory a way as they were doing before they were Members of the Legislature. Their membership of this Assembly has not in any way impaired their capacity to look up with ability and vigilance to their other commercial activities. I am sure that the fact that they are Members of this Legislature will not in any way stand in the way of the discharge of their duties as Directors of the Reserve Bank. As regards the time that is necessary for them to do their work, we have heard Sir Victor Sassoon say that it will not be impossible for him to do his duties in both places properly. He can devote his undivided attention to both duties ; the one will not come into conflict with the other. That being the case, I do not see any reason for this House to accept the amendment. Particularly in view of the appeal which has been made by my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar, and in consistency with the spirit of conciliation which the Leader of the House has shown yesterday, I submit that it will not be proper for him to press his amendment.

Mr. V. K. Aravamudha Ayangar (Finance Department : Nominated Official) : Sir, the question whether Members of the Legislature should be excluded from the directorate of the Reserve Bank came up for consideration before the Currency Commission at a very early stage of their deliberations. It was definitely put to them that the number of men in India who are versed in public affairs and finance was so small that if we made a provision of this sort, it would exclude a number of most desirable men. The Commission gave very careful consideration to this proposal and came to the deliberate conclusion that so far as the Central Board of the Reserve Bank is concerned, their main function was to regulate the general credit and currency policy of the country and that the exclusion of the Members of the Legislature from a seat on the Board was most desirable in the interests of India. They, moreover, thought that such a provision would be the best and easiest means of increasing the number of people who were versed in public affairs and finance. They, however, made a concession that in regard to the Local Boards which were only intended to carry out the policy laid down by the Central Board, there was no such strong objection to the Members of the Legislature being on that Board. It has been suggested in some quarters that that provision giving the concession to Members of the Legislature of a seat on the local Boards of the Reserve Bank has been rendered nugatory by the omission of any provision for local Boards in the Reserve Bank as it stands. In the first place, I would point out, the Commission had only one aim, one business and one endeavour. It was to give India a currency system which was based upon the modern practice and theory in other most advanced countries. Its main object was to give to India a currency machinery which was capable of being worked to the lasting and permanent benefit of India. It was not the intention of the Currency Commission to devise appointments for Members of the Legislature. Secondly, if you take into consideration the fact that the number of men versed in public affairs and finance in India is very small, then why do you object to the Local Boards being taken away ? It only gets rid of the difficulty of the number of posts to be filled up by public men being too great and the supply of men being too small.

Some of the Honourable Members referred to certain Central Bank statutes which do not place a ban on Members of the Legislature being on the Board. I think the Bank of Belgium was referred to. May I point out, Sir, that in the National Bank of Belgium there is a provision that no Member of the Legislative Chambers can be Governor, Director, Regent or Censor. Some other charters were referred to by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and I think he must have been referring to certain pre-historic statutes. I can quote a certain number of other statutes of other countries which specifically debar Members of the Legislature from the Directorate. In Hungary, Members of the National Assembly are not eligible as members of the Board of Directors. In Austria, there is a similar provision debarring Members of the National Assembly. In Czecho-slovakia the members of the Bank may not, during the term of office, be Members of the legislative bodies. In the Federal Reserve System no Senator or representative in Congress can be a Governor of the Federal Reserve Board or a Director of the Federal Reserve Bank. Granted this in regard to the Federal Reserve System, it is argued that the chief executive of the Federal Reserve Board is appointed by the President. Why all this bogey of political control raised only in the case of India ? We are not the persons, Sir, that are fitted to pass judgment on the working of the Federal Reserve System. Mr. Parker Willis, who was Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board for a long time and who is most competent to criticise the American system, says that the American method of constitution of the Board is unsatisfactory. In his own words, " it has fallen constantly under the supervision of politicians and even when not under their influence has been constantly fearful that it will be obliged to yield to them."

May I add one further reason why the Commission thought that Members of the Legislature should be excluded from the Directorate. The work of a Director will be a serious charge on his time and energy. It is very important that a Director should ever reserve practically the whole of his spare time and energy to this great national institution and he should not try to combine it with an active part in politics. Politics in India is more and more engrossing and Members have to be away for three or four months from their headquarters during the Assembly meetings. It is impossible for them to give their exclusive attention to the meetings of the Central Board while they are also Members of the Legislature. If there is a Central Board meeting at Bombay simultaneously with an Assembly meeting at Delhi or Simla, Members will never care to leave their seats in the Assembly and go to Bombay to attend the more pressing affairs of the Bank at Bombay. A really sound financial genius has more scope for useful and noble service to the country by serving on the Board of the Reserve Bank.

[Mr. V. K. Aravamudha Ayangar.]

It has been mentioned that the members nominated by the Governor General to the Central Board of the Imperial Bank are all Members of the Legislature. The membership of the Reserve Bank is something different from the membership of the Central Board. The Reserve Bank will be the currency authority of the country with an enormous responsibility to the public. But the Imperial Bank of India is not a Central Bank of issue. It does not control credit and currency of the country. It is imperatively necessary in the case of Central Bank of issue that it should, like Caesar's wife, be above suspicion. (Hear, hear.) My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar quoted a Greek legend. May I quote an Indian legend. There was a goddess in Nepal. The goddess took a baby in her lap and behold ! the goddess was not and the baby was !. Here is an institution given by the Currency Commission calculated to give inestimable benefit to India. Superimpose on this institution a political Board as now suggested ; I say, Sir, it will kill the Reserve Bank and the political Board itself will not last for a day. (Cheers.)

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am surprised to hear the arguments advanced by my co-Aiyangar (Laughter) supporting the amendment brought forward by the Honourable the Finance Member. He began quoting from his Scripture, the Report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance and tried to point out that there were very valid and sound reasons why Members of the Legislature should be excluded from standing as candidates for directorship. I am unable to understand his arguments. He went so far as to try to convince this Assembly that there was no substance in the argument that Members of the Legislature should be eligible for membership on the directorate. My Honourable friend has been quoting a number of countries in which there is a rule that Members of the Legislature should not be on the Board of Directors in a bank. On the other hand I have not seen how it has been placed on the basis of political complexion existing in those countries. It is only in this country that politics are operating as a red rag to the eyes of Government. They often want to put everything on the ground that it is to be debarred on account of its political complexion. If only the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett would see a bit, he would find that according to his own proposal, it is only those politicians who come into such Legislatures that will be debarred from going in as Directors. There are worse politicians outside the Legislature and they will not be debarred from the Directorate. You will find for instance, my Honourable friend Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar, the President of the Congress, if he had not come into this Assembly would have been eligible for membership on the Directorate. Now, for the simple sin of his having come into this Assembly, he will be debarred from entering this Directorate. Sir, I find absolutely no logic or reason in such a distinction being drawn between a politician who is outside the Legislature and a politician who is inside the Legislature. Perhaps the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett himself will realise that the politicians within the Legislature are much calmer than the politicians outside the Legislature at present and will be glad if those who have been tamed in the Legislature are allowed to go into the Directorate rather than politicians outside the Legislature who have not yet been tamed !

Now, Sir, my friend Mr. Ayyangar says the Skeen Committee discussion will be coming on here as well as other discussions, and all the Directors will be inclined rather to sit in the Assembly here and take part in those discussions than attend to the business of the Bank Directorate. But I am surprised to hear from Mr. Ayyangar that he anticipates that these discussions on the Skeen Committee's Report and such matters will be a lifelong struggle between the Government and this part of the House and never come to an end. He probably expects that the Skeen Committee's Report will be a hardy annual or a hardy sessional ! I for one hope that a better situation will soon prevail, so that all matters of such great controversy between us will soon be settled and we shall be able to sit down to do such business as is required of this Assembly and also attend to any other business which we may be called upon to do on the Directorate of the Bank. I ask if the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett who is entrusted with much of the financial work in the Government of India is prevented from doing all that work by reason of the fact that he has been made the Leader of the House and has to sit in this Assembly day after day ? Does his work suffer ? And if he is competent to do both the legislatve work as well as his work as Finance Member of the Government of India, then, Sir, I feel that Members of the Legislature here will have much more time than Sir Basil Blackett himself has for attending to both functions, both responsibilities, and discharging them to the satisfaction of the electorate. Sir, the people who select Members to represent them in the Legislature do not take only politics into consideration but also various other aspects of their representatives, and primarily also the way in which they are able to control the finances of the Government of India. If those capacities are also required on the part of those who are asked to represent the constituencies in this Assembly, and particularly, as my friend Mr. Aney pointed out, the commercial representatives here, the banking representatives here, then I submit, Sir, there seems to be absolutely no reason why there should be this distinction drawn and a ban put upon the Members of the Legislature for the simple reason that they have come here to represent their constituencies.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I have heard both sides of the House and I frankly admit that I am convinced by the views advanced in favour of the amendment. I believe that every Member of the Legislature here belongs to a certain party and he is under a certain amount of influence of his own Party. If he is allowed to act as a Director of a Bank then the influence of the Party is sure to work on his mind and that will be injurious to the interests of India. I do not think that the Bank which has got the capital of the State should be in any way influenced by party politics. If party politics prevail then the interests of the peasants are sure to suffer. Honourable Members have been very anxious to support the cause of the peasantry of India, but I think when they will be working under the influence of their Parties they are sure to neglect the interests of the peasantry in favour of the interests of their own party. With this view I support the amendment and think it is a very sound amendment which has been made in this clause.

Mr. Miles Irving (Punjab : Nominated Official) : Sir, I do not think that the Honourable Member who spoke first in opposing this amendment realised that his argument was of a somewhat double-edged nature. He said it was an unjustifiable restriction on the powers of the electorate when they are not to be allowed to choose members of this Directorate ; but it is also a restriction on the powers of the electorate that they should not be allowed to choose officials, and we have known electorates which would naturally have chosen officials if they had been allowed to do so. But, as a matter of fact, in this case I am in favour of both restrictions and for very similar reasons. Neither officials nor Members of this Legislature who are elected to it are altogether free men. An official in the long run has to be guided by the policy of Government ; and elected Members of this Legislature, as has just been stated by the Honourable Member on my right, have to be influenced by the decisions of their party. I do not wish to elaborate the argument that has just been raised but it struck me from the first to be the strongest. Party ties in this country are very strong. (An Honourable Member : " Are they any stronger than in England ? "). They are stronger than in England because I can say, perhaps looking at it as an outsider, that they have a quasi-religious sanction here. They seem to occupy not merely the sphere of politics but almost every sphere of life, and I feel it would be extraordinarily dangerous to allow Members who are thus tied and may be bound—if I may use the expression—to non-co-operate in every sphere of political activity to take their places in a body which has to exercise functions of a quasi-judicial character. Finally, Sir, how is this system to work ? In my own province of the Punjab, if arrangements for electorates are made as seems most likely, there will be at least 3,000 agriculturist electors and a considerably larger number of non-agriculturists. I do not think these electors will know very much about banking. If the names placed before them are going to be those of leaders of party politics, the banker, the financier, the professor of economics, the man who really could do good work is not going to have the ghost of a chance. The election, if it does not—as I greatly fear—take place on communal lines, will certainly take place on the lines of party politics. The party man has got his election agency, he has got his agents, and every arrangement made through the party for securing votes. The unfortunate—shall I say ? professor of economics in the university or the unfortunate banker who is outside party politics, will simply not have a look in. For these reasons—first of all, the reason of party politics and secondly in order to enable our simple ill-instructed electors to choose the best man,—I am strongly in favour of the amendment.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. Miles Irving.]

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I think Government have sought to raise a bogey to the level of a principle, and I cannot, I am afraid, accept either the principle underlying the suggestion of the amendment proposed by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, nor can I agree with the practical considerations that have been urged in support of his amendment. I have never seen the tyrannny of deductive logic so rampant as it has been this morning. We have been told that people in the Assembly or in any other Legislature are swayed by party considerations, by religious considerations. I think a Director on the Reserve Bank would be a very inconsiderable person if he had no views on political questions. If you have views and if you are capable of independent judgment on political questions, you must have a certain amount of political bias ; and any reasonable and thoughtful man, as I hope every Director of the Reserve Bank will be, would, therefore, necessarily have his own views and leanings on political questions.

Being a Director of the Reserve Bank he does not on that account forefeit his citizenship ; he still continues to be a citizen of India and he still has got to think, if he is worth anything, if his brains are worth anything, if his judgment is worth anything, on every question that affects the destiny of his country. We have been told by the last speaker that the Directors on the Reserve Bank Board would sit in a judicial capacity.....

Mr. Miles Irving : Quasi-judicial.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Or in a quasi-judicial capacity. That is a proposition which I hope no one on any side of the House will accept ; because I cannot understand how the Board of Directors have any judicial functions to perform ; and even if they had judicial functions to perform, are not politicians elevated to the bench of the High Courts ? And when they are elevated to the bench, are their judgments swayed by the political views they held before they were elevated to the bench ?

Then, Sir, as regards the practical considerations that have been mentioned. It is true, Mr.. President, that you have tried to make us perfect legislators, you have tried by your rulings to see that we are in our seats all the time the House is sitting ; but as a matter of fact I do not think anybody really expects a Member of the Assembly to be present every day that the Assembly is sitting. And if we have in the Assembly business men, if we have lawyers, if we have people who have other work to do besides sitting in the Assembly, and who efficiently discharge their duties as legislators and also look after their own work effectively, efficiently, I think it will be possible for a Director on the Reserve Bank who is also a member of the Assembly to discharge his duties as a Director of the Reserve Bank efficiently and well. Sir, Sir Basil Blackett does not exclude membership of the European Association. You have only to look round and see whether members of the European Association are not politicians. Would you have a provision, for instance, in your Bill that any candidate for the directorship should not be a member of any political body—say, of the Indian National Congress or of the European Association ? Would the precept of self-denial be accepted by, say, the European Association ? I want to know that ; and I do not know that members of the European Association or members of the Indian National Congress who do not happen to be in any Legislature are any the less political persons than Members who happen to be elected to a Legislature. I think these are considerations which ought to weigh with Sir Basil Blackett, and I hope he will not press his amendment.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I wish to draw attention to a special point in this discussion a point which so far as I can see, has not been touched upon I understand the objection to a member of the Legislature being a Director of the Bank is two-fold, namely, first political contagion and political influence and second, incompatibility or conflict of duties on the Legislature and on the Board of the Bank. The Finance Member has somewhat narrowed down the ground of objection by laying stress rather on the incompatibility of duties than on the contagion of political influence ; and on that assumption I shall proceed. We have now to consider the case under this amendment of a person who is already sitting as a Member of the Legislature—not of a man who is not in the Legislature. Supposing the election for the Bank and the election for the Legislature happen to come at the same time, then I could conceive that a man would rather make a choice then and there and decide for himself to stand for one election rather than the other. But that is not the case we are concerned with here. Here it is the case of a man who is actually a Member of the Legislature and is sitting in the Assembly or the Council of State. Let us assume that during his period of three years, the election to the Bank comes round. He has also then to make a choice, as in the other case, but in this case you will see that the choice is very difficult. Here it is a positive prohibition laid upon the Member at the very point of his nomination for the election, and it follows therefore in my opinion that he has got to make up his mind at the time of nomination whether he should remain a member of the Legislature or should seek election to the bank. Now, what has he got to do ? Supposing he is more inclined to be a Director of the Bank, he has positively once and for all to resign his seat in the Legislature. Now, what happens ? He may either be elected or he may not be elected. If he is elected, then of course it is all right. But supposing he is not elected, then he deliberately leaves the one and loses the other ; it is rather a hard case ; if he resigns his seat, how could he come in again ? The vacancy may be already filled in the Legislature ; so he leaves the one and loses the other in case of failure. That is rather hard lines on the man who has got to make a choice.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

I come now to the second case (the man who is already sitting in the Legislature and is elected as a Bank Director) from the point of view of alleged incompatibility of duties. Now, if the work of the Director of the Bank is really realised by the member to be so engrossing that it is incompatible with his duties as a Member of the Legislature—and I will assume in most cases that the man is a conscientious man—he will naturally make his choice and resign the Legislature ; then it will not be hard lines on him because he will deliberately make his choice and keep the directorship and leave the Legislature. But the choice in the former case is rather hard on him. I can quite see that the business of the Director on this Bank may be perhaps engrossing but during the first stages, at any rate for some time, it is not going to be so engrossing. That is my view. But on the other hand, are there not people in this Legislature who besides doing their other business also can attend successfully to the business of the Legislature ? For instance, there is Sir Victor Sassoon ; I think his stake in business is larger than we can conceive of for anybody else in the Legislature, and yet I suppose he is not certainly going to spoil his business by coming to the Legislature and on the other hand we can see that he is not spoiling the business of the Legislature because he is a business man. The same thing can be said of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. Coming now to the lawyers, they do not permanently leave their practice because they come to the Legislature and they are not disqualified from practising in courts because they are Members of the Legislature. Taking all these factors therefore into consideration, what does it matter if a man is a business man or a lawyer ? If he is a capable man and a capable business man he certainly can attend to both businesses. It will be found there are many lawyers here in this Assembly who enjoy a very big practice at home, and yet I do not find that any of them complains that he finds he loses his practice. I admit that there is some scope for self-sacrifiece : all credit to these people who undergo that limited amount of sacrifice and put themselves in a position to attend to both these kinds of business successfully. But that argument of sacrifice is certainly not to be used against them. You must assume that they are able to carry on both the businesses successfully.

Then with regard to the Sessions of the Assembly. Let us take the Simla Session. It is after all a small Session and lasts for 20 days or so. And even within these 20 days on some days we have half week holidays. Therefore, if a business man really wants to go away from the Legislature, I think he can certainly do so without prejudice to his work in the Legislature, attend to his business and come back. Of course, the Sessions in Delhi are longer, but even there some business men go away early and some people come late and some go and come in the middle of the Sessions. There are also some Members who take advantage of the rules and run away from the Assembly for a week or so and attend to their business. My point is, whether at the beginning, or in the middle or at the end of the Sessions, they can attend the meetings of the Legislature and attend their business as well. They take their Secretaries with them to Simla and Delhi, and they find no difficulty whatever in attending the Sessions of the Legislature without prejudice to their own business.

Then again the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett is doing his duty as Finance Member, as Leader of the House, as a Member of the Legislature as well as a Member of the Executive Government. Similarly, he should be charitable enough to suppose that there are other people also who are capable of attending to a number of businesses at one and the same time.

Therefore, my point is specially about the positive prohibition which, as I take it, is laid upon a Member of the Legislature at the very point of nomination. I could have understood it if at the time of entering upon his duties this prohibition had been enforced. But, as I see the wording of the amendment, the disqualification comes in at the very beginning. That is the reason why I am opposed to this amendment.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I submit that there is a certain amount of misapprehension about the amendment which has been moved by my Honourable colleague Sir Basil Blackett. My Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar made a great point of the argument that a non-official gentleman who wants to be a Director of the Bank must at an early stage make a choice between election to the Legislature and election to the Directorate of the Bank. Now, Sir, the amendment certainly does not contemplate that. All that it contemplates is that, if a Member of the Legislature wants to be elected to the Board of management of the Bank, after he has been elected, he must cease to be a Member of the Legislature.

An Honourable Member : Where is the provision for it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : This is the provision. " Save as expressly provided in this Act, no person may be a Director who is an officer of Government to be or who is a Member of the Indian or local Legislature ". The provision of the Bill with the amendment proposed by my Honourable colleague does not contemplate that no man shall be eligible for election to the Board of the Reserve Bank who is a Member of the Indian or local Legislature. It follows, therefore, that he may even be a sitting Member of the local or the Central Legislature, and he may offer himself for election to the Board of the Reserve Bank. It is when he is elected to be a member of the Board of the Reserve Bank that he will have to give up his seat on the Legislature. That meets the first point of my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar.

Then the other argument which my Honourable friend used, Sir, is to my mind, an argument in support of the amendment of my Honourable colleague. Let us for argument's sake take my friend Sir Victor Sassoon. He has got large interests in Bombay. That undoubtedly takes away a good deal of his time. He is also a Member of the Legislature and as such he devotes a considerable amount of his time to the work of the Legislature. (An Honourable Member ; " He does not complain of it, does he ?). If we throw on him again the work connected with the Board of management of the Bank that would mean putting a further burden on him, and I submit, Sir, that it would be hardly fair to expect him to attend to all these duties simultaneously. Mr. Kelkar assumed that in the earlier stages of the Reserve Bank the work connected with the Bank will not be heavy. I join issue with him on that point. I should have thought that the early stages of this Bank would require a considerable amount of work on the part of the Directors to put it on a proper footing. If the work of the Bank is more or less neglected in the initial stages, we will never be able to put the Bank on a proper footing.

Now, Sir, I am quite prepared to admit that there is something in the views urged by my Honourable friends opposite ; but at the same time it is a question of choosing the best arrangement, and as has already been pointed out by my young friend Mr. A. Ayyangar, it is a question of Caesar's wife being above suspicion. This Bank will be newly created, and must take some time to inspire confidence among the public. We must therefore take steps to have the Directors absolutely free from suspicion. It is for that reason. (Several Honourable Members ; " Suspicion of what ?"). Suspicion of all sorts of influences.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Please name some of them

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : If Honourable Members will listen to me patiently, they will find that I am going to develop my argument. It is for that reason that the clause as it stands, begins by saying that no person may be a Director who is an officer of Government. Now, among officers of Government, I am pretty sure there will be found plenty of capable men who will be able to fill the appointment of Director of that Bank with credit. Look at my young friend Mr. A. Ayangar over there.....

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Government servants are prohibited from trading.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Please allow me to pursue my point. As Government wants that the Directors of this Bank should be absolutely free from any sort of influence, well, the clause provides to start with, that the Director should not be an officer of Government. Next it goes on to say that that Director should not be a Director of any other Bank, not being a registered society, etc. Now, there again it will be possible to find plenty of men from among the Directors of existing Banks who would be quite capable of filling the appointment of Director of the State Bank without giving up their present jobs. But still simply because Government want that these Directors should be free from influence of any sort, they too are excluded and the Joint Committee have already accepted both these exceptions.

Now, Sir, my point is this. After very careful consideration, Government came to the conclusion, with that cardinal object in view, that the sitting Members of the Legislature should not be allowed to be members of the Board of the Reserve Bank. That from the point of view of Government is a matter of great importance, and Government are not in a position to give up that point.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Unless it is lost.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I would implore my friends opposite to try and see eye to eye with Government in this matter. They are aware that Government have already made a great concession ; they have dropped their idea of the shareholders' bank. They have yielded to what they understood to be a genuine demand on the part of the Members of this House on the other side for a State Bank, while their own preference was for a shareholders' bank. I would implore my Honourable friends opposite there to concede to Government on this particular matter which Government at least considers to be a matter of very considerable importance in connection with the constitution of this Bank.

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla (Bombay Central Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment that has been moved by the Honourable the Finance Member. Sir, I was very sorry to find the argument of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra that, if he is a Director, selected or elected, a Director of the Reserve Bank, that he should cease to be a Member of the local or Indian Legislature. I think, Sir, his argument would be quite correct if the choice were to be left to the individual. I beg to submit to this House, Sir, for their serious consideration that the choice is left to the constituency from which that person comes. If the constituency thinks that that person is the best man available for the job why should this Legislature by an enactment prohibit that constituency from sending up the best man. I shall, Sir, cite one recent instance. Mr. P. B. Haigh is a Member of the Legislative Assembly. His services were required by the Bombay Government and what do we find, Sir ? We find that he tendered his resignation in the Legislative Assembly and was nominated a Member of the Bombay Legislative Council. I wish we had such an instrument as Government have to suit their requirements and choose their best men available.

[Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla.]

Sir, as regards the other two arguments put forward by the speakers, I think they are most astounding. One is that it would be a serious charge on the time of a person who wants to be a Director. Sir, if you develop that argument further, it amounts to this that no business man can become a Director of a Bank because it is a serious charge on a business man and I hope the Honourable the Finance Member knows what the duties and functions of business men in Bombay and Calcutta are. He will find that this argument will not stand in favour of the amendment which he has proposed.

The second point, Sir, is the argument that a man who comes from the Legislature is a man who would be influenced by politics. Politics in the management of business, in the management of a directorate of a Bank is an unheard of thing, and I think, Sir, to say the least it shows absolute ignorance on the part of a Member who says that politics will play a part in the management of a bank. Sir, the Reserve Bank has not come into being. At present the Government balances are being managed by the Imperial Bank of India. And what do we find, Sir, again ? That Government have nominated two of the governors of the Imperial Bank on the Council of State—Sir Dinshaw Wacha and Sir Maneckji Dadabhoy. Why, Sir ? Because their services Government think are very useful on both these bodies. (Hear, hear.) Again, Sir, if I were to go further, take the instance of Sir Alexander Murray who made here on the floor of this House the other day one of the best speeches that we have heard during this Session. What do we again find ? He is a Director of the Central Board of the Imperial Bank and he has been nominated here on behalf of Government to come here, because his expert knowledge, Government think, would be useful in guiding the destinies of the Reserve Bank of India. I think, Sir, to carry this argument a little further, do the Government mean to say that, because Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas is a Member of the Legislature or Sir Maneckji Dadabhoy or Sir Dinshaw Wacha is a Member of the Legislature, that the work of the Imperial Bank has in any way suffered ? Is it because of the experience that they have derived that the work of the Imperial Bank has suffered that they are coming forward with an amendment which may, if I may put it in the words of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra, create suspicion on the other side ? Is it because Government wish to deprive us of the services of the best men available on this side of the House that they want to put forward this amendment ? I hope, Sir, Government will not allow this amendment to be pressed to a division but will withdraw it and will allow the best men, who are Members of this Legislature, to be put on this body.

One last word and I have finished. In the general constituencies, you find that in the local and Central Legislatures, you have constituencies like the European Chamber, the Bengal Chamber and the Indian Merchants' Chamber.

Why do business people come into politics, and why do Government provide seats for them. If the Honourable the Finance Member says that politics and business should not be mixed, they should not get this right of sending a representative. Why do you want business men from the business constituencies to come here and advise you on business matters ? If that is so, then we want our best men, who are on this and the local Legislatures, to be also Directors on the Reserve Bank.

(An Honourable Member moved that the question be now put).

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

(After putting the question Mr. President ordered a division.)

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : The point is not quite clearly understood. Will you kindly explain it ?

Mr. President : Members will have another opportunity.

(After the ringing of the Division Bell.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 7, after sub-clause (a), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely :

(b) is a member of the Indian or a local Legislature, or ';

and sub-clauses (b), (c) and (d) be re-lettered (c), (d) and (e), respectively, and for the letter '(d)' in the Explanation the letter '(e)' be substituted."

The Assembly divided :

AYES—51.

Abdul Qaiyum, Nawab Sir Sahibzada.
Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nasir-ud-din.
Alexander, Mr. William.
Anwar-ul-Azim, Mr.
Ashrafuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nawabzada Sayid.
Ayangar, Mr. V. K. Aravamudha.
Ayyangar, Rao Bahadur Narasimha Gopalaswami.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Blackett, The Honourable Sir Basil.
Bray, Sir Denys.
Coatman, Mr. J.
Cocke, Mr. H. G.
Cosgrave, Mr. W. A.
Courtenay, Mr. R. H.
Crawford, Colonel J. D.
Crerar, The Honourable Mr. J.
Crofton, Mr. R. M.
Dakhan, Mr. W. M. P. Ghulam Kadir Khan.
Dalal, Mr. A. R.
Dalal, Sardar Sir Bomanji.
Donovan, Mr. J. T.
Dunnett, Mr. J. M.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J.
Haigh, Mr. P. B.
Hussain Shah, Sayyed.
Irving, Mr. Miles.
Jowahir Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Kabul Singh Bahadur, Captain.
Keane, Mr. M.
Kikabbai Premchand, Mr.
Kirk, Mr. R. T. F.
Lamb, Mr. W. S.
Mitra, The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath.
Mohammad Ismail Khan, Haji Chaudhury.
Moore, Mr. Arthur.
Mukherjee, Mr. S. C.
Murray, Sir Alexander.
Parsons, Mr. A. A. L.
Rainy, The Honourable Sir George.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Roy, Mr. K. C.
Sams, Mr. H. A.
Shah Nawaz, Mian Mohammad.
Singh, Rai Bahadur S. N.
Suhrawardy, Dr. A.
Sykes, Mr. E. F.
Tonkinson, Mr. H.
Wright, Mr. W. T. M.
Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad.
Young, Mr. G. M.

NOES—70.

Abdoola Haroon, Haji.
Abdul Haye, Mr.
Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Maulvi.
Abdullah Haji Kasim, Khan Bahadur Haji.
Acharya, Mr. M. K.
Aiyangar, Mr. C. Duraiswamy.
Aney, Mr. M. S.
Ayyangar, Mr. K. V. Rangaswami.
Ayyangar, Mr. M. S. Sesha.
Belvi, Mr. D. V.
Bhargava, Pandit Thakur Das.
Bhuto, Mr. W. W. Illahibakhsh.
Chaman Lall, Diwan.
Chetty, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham.
Chunder, Mr. Nirmal Chunder.
Das, Mr. B.
Das, Pandit Nilakantha.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
Dutta, Mr. Srish Chandra.
Farookhi, Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb.
Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Raja.
Goswami, Mr. T. C.
Gour, Sir Hari Singh.
Haji, Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand.
Hla Tun Pru, U.
Ismail Khan, Mr.
Iswar Saran, Munshi.
Iyengar, Mr. A. Rangaswami.
Iyengar, Mr. S. Srinivasa.
Jamnadas, Seth.
Jayakar, Mr. M. R.
Jinnah, Mr. M. A.
Jogiah, Mr. Varahagiri Venkata.
Joshi, Mr. N. M.
Kelkar, Mr. N. C.
Kidwai, Mr. Rafi Ahmad.
Kunzru, Pandit Hirday Nath.
Lahri Chaudhury, Mr. Dhirendra Kanta.
Lajpat Rai, Lala.
Malaviya, Pandit Madan Mohan.
Mehta, Mr. Jamnadas M.
Misra, Mr. Dwarka Prasad.
Mitra, Mr. Satyendra Chandra.
Moonjee, Dr. B. S.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi Sayyid.
Naidu, Mr. B. P.
Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Pandya, Mr. Vidya Sagar.
Phookun, Srijut Tarun Ram.
Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir.
Rahimtulla, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim.
Rajan Bakhsh Shah, Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed.
Rang Behari Lal, Lala.
Rao, Mr. G. Sarvotham.
Roy, Mr. Bhabendra Chandra.
Sarda, Rai Sahib Harbilas.
Sassoon, Sir Victor.
Shafee, Maulvi Mohammad.
Siddiqi, Mr. Abdul Qadir.
Singh, Kumar Rananjaya.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Narayan Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Ram Narayan.
Sinha, Kumar Ganganand.
Sinha, Mr. R. P.
Sinha, Mr. Siddheswar.
Tirloki Nath, Lala.
Tok Kyi, U.
Yakub, Maulvi Muhammad.
Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Sir, I rise to move the amendment that stands in my name. The amendment is :

"That in clause 7, (a) in sub-clause (c), omit the word 'or'.

(b) Omit sub-clause (d) and the Explanation."

Mr. President : The Honourable Member knows that there are two " ors " in that sub-clause. I hope the Honourable Member will be more accurate in the drafting of his amendments.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : I hope everybody understands.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member mean, " in sub-clause (c), omit the word ' or ' at the end " ?

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Yes. Sir. Before giving my reasons for this amendment, I would like in the first place to remove an apparent prejudice which is likely to arise from the mere appearance of the amendment as I have put it. The original clause which I wanted to delete read thus :

" No person may be a Director who is not or has not at some time been actively engaged in agriculture, commerce, finance or industry."

The proposed deletion of that clause may to some minds mean that I am against business men, real business men, being employed on the Directorate of the Bank or that experience in this direction is not a sine qua non of the knowlege required for doing the business of a Director of that Bank ; but I at once hasten to assure the House that that is far from my intention. On the other hand, I do assert and earnestly assert and expect that only business men should join this Bank as Directors, and not only business men but first-class business men as far as possible. My objection, therefore, is not based on the ground that business men need not go as Directors on the Bank, but my objection is merely directed to the wording of the clause as it is there ; and I shall soon prove in a moment that that clause as it is will not carry us any further in the direction we want to go in securing able business men as Directors of the Bank. In the first place, I would like to point out this, that this clause (a) was not originally there, so far as I know, in the original Bill, not at least in that form It is an innovation made by the Joint Committee, and though it is part of the work of the Joint Committee on which I was sitting, I think I did not myself vote for it at the time and therefore I have stuck to my amendment in that form in this Assembly also. My objection to this clause is, in the first place, that it is a sort of hindrance, not a help, for it is admittedly so framed that you may practically make anything out of it or even nothing out of it. I will at once show that the clause can be reduced to a reductio ad absurdum by a very little argument. In the first place it will be observed that no point of time is mentioned here in respect of the actual engagement there must be in the case of a member seeking to become a Director of the Bank. Now is it possible that a point of contact with any business concern say 20 years ago should be regarded as sufficient for our present purposes ? The words " is not or has not been " cover all possible periods of time. Supposing a man in his early days were a Director of some small body, why should that suffice as a qualification to be a Director of the Bank at the end of his life when he is ripe and not doing any kind of business ? Then again I should have expected that if you really wanted business men to come as Directors of the bank, you should have by some effort put in a minimum measure of active engagement or point of contact with any particular business or interest. Here, therefore, just as no period of time is mentioned during which that qualification may have been possessed, similarly there is no definite measure or minimum point of contact or active engagement mentioned. I can give one or two instances which will at once prove that without this positive statement of some measure of qualification or knowledge of business this clause is going to land us in absurdity. I will take the case of a member of a rural co-operative society with a working capital of Rs. 1,000. I am not saying that a man like that, who is a member of such a small concern, will aspire to stand as a candidate for election. But supposing he chooses to stand, this particular clause will not rid you of him ; that is the point. Ultimately we shall see that we shall have to leave this whole business to the common sense of the people to see whether the nominees possess the required qualification. You are now legislating in definite terms about the disqualification pertaining to a member seeking election for a Director of this Bank, and it is my business to point out that it can be reduced to an absurdity like this that a member of a managing committee of a small rural co-operative bank can stand for election because he is covered by the words " he has been actively engaged in some business, agricultural business ". Then, I will give another instance. There is nothing in this clause that can prevent any agricultural labourer, or industrial labourer from standing as a candidate. Again I repeat that I am not expecting that he will stand as a candidate. But supposing some person chooses to offer himself as a candidate, the clause does not save you ; my real point is that the clause does not really save you. You are here legislating for a particular disqualification and you have put it in such loose terms that you can get nothing out of it. My point is that any agricultural labourer, any industrial labourer, may be a candidate for election as Director of this Bank, because the wording of the clause is " actively engaged in agricultural business ". The same may be said, I suppose, of a small shopkeeper who deals in bidis or bananas. Therefore, the real difficulty about making the assertion or affirming the qualifications required has been avoided and the thing has been negatively put. There the real difficulty arises. This is the negative way of securing the required qualifications. But if a positive statement of the qualifications really does not help you, if you cannot find words suitable enough to express what you mean, then let the attempt be dropped ; let this negative clause also be dropped. I can at once imagine how a crop of litigation is likely to arise under this clause. When it comes to litigation, I would ask my lawyer friends here how difficult it will be to prove the negative in this case because the thing has been negatively put and the scope of the clause, as I have already pointed out, is so very large. You will see, again, that in the rule-making powers of this Bill there is no provision for making rules and making it more definite than it is here. Ultimately, I suppose, in case of litigation the case will have to be decided with reference to the wording of this Bill itself and not with reference to any other rules under this Bill. If you will look at the rule-making section, you will find that it does not provide for any rules in other directions. So, ultimately the case will be decided strictly with reference to the wording of this Bill and this particular clause. Therefore, in that case it will be very difficult to prove the negative.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

Now, I will turn to another point, which is briefly this. In any other elections have Government or anybody followed this particular parallel of negativing the nomination on the ground that certain qualifications have not been possessed by the candidate ? Take the whole scheme of the new Reforms and the new Legislatures. What do we find there ? The business of the elected Member is to take part intelligently in legislation and for that purpose I think he must be taken to be ordinarily acquainted with the constitution, the general working of the constitution, the principles of law, and so on. Now, on the analogy of the present Bill you might as well have stated in the rules governing the elections to the Legislature that no man can offer himself as a candidate for the election to the Legislature unless he possesses some modicum of knowledge of those matters which are mentioned, namely, the principles of law, principles of justice and the principles of administration. He has got to deal here practically with a hundred departments. But what is the qualification laid down ? I think an attempt must have been made and the matter must have been investigated when the election rules were made and the Government must have come to the present conclusion deliberately. It is certainly a very difficult task actually to name certain qualifications which may be taken as essential for the election of a man. Therefore, ultimately what is the result ? What is the real and effective operative qualification for a man to be elected to the Legislature, even the Supreme Legislature ? There is only the rate qualification ; and, if in this case also you devise some electorate based on this rate qualification for at least part of the Directorate, then, of course, we can easily see that the man will be in a position, first of all, to become a member of the electorate and then as a member of the electorate to be a candidate for election to the Board. That is a natural process and it has been followed in the matter of elections to the Central and local Legislative Councils. I say this expressly that if a man in the case of this House pays a land revenue assessment in my province of Rs. 75 or is an income-tax payer, he can come to this Legislature and do the business as a legislator. Now, in the case of such a man what qualifications have you ordinarily assured ? On the other hand, you cannot deny that certain qualifications, though they may not be put down on the paper, are necessarily required and which are assumed to be possessed by the man before he is allowed to be nominated if he is a sensible man or is elected by the Legislature which is generally sensible in these matters. I would also like to mention before this House the municipal and the local board laws. Even there you will find only a rate-paying qualification and nothing else. Now, an illiterate man can come into this Assembly. In fact, an illiterate man did come into this Assembly and sat on these Benches and did his business. Of course, he could not do the real business, as we have had an instance of that. In the last Assembly there was a gentlemen who did not understand a word of English and he was literate in this sense that he could only read speeches in Urdu.

I think my Honourable friend read one speech in Urdu because he did not happen to know English. His want of knowledge of English did not stand in his way of winning the confidence of his electorate. His lack of knowledge of English was not regarded as a disqualification by his electors, so far as the business of voting in this Assembly was concerned. Therefore, I say that neither in municipal laws, nor in laws governing local boards nor in the laws governing elections to the local Councils, nor in the rules governing the election to this supreme legislative body does any regulation exist making it a disqualification not to know how to read and write English. But, I say it is simply absurd that you should insist on this qualification about a knowledge of English. If you put in a clause like that, it would amount to putting it in, in a negative form because you failed to put it in in a positive form. It is calculated to create a lot of difficulties in the working of the rules. The first difficulty would be that it would give rise to a crop of litigation and it would be an unnecessary waste of time and energy. Ultimately, I think, the whole matter must be left to the common sense of both the nominee and the elector. Let them settle it among themselves. In the case of election you must not assume certain things. I do not want to assume that the electorate in this case would be so foolish as to stand for election or to elect people when they do not possess these ordinary qualifications that are expected of them. To pass this clause would be casting a slur upon the common sense of the people and I therefore positively object to this clause.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly then re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar. Sir, I do not know what the object of sub-clause (d) of clause 7 is. Whom does that sub-clause intend to exclude. The clause says those who are not actively engaged in agriculture shall be disqualified. Does the clause intend to disqualify absentee landlords of whom there may be many here in this House and there may be a large number outside. But, Sir, I do not think that that is the intention of this sub-clause because I am told that the Government and the leader of the Swaraj Party have come to an agreement by which absentee landlords are going to be the electors of the Directors. I therefore feel that although absentee landlords may not be actively engaged in agriculture it is not the intention of Government to exclude them. Then whom does it exclude ? Does it exclude those landlords who do not drive the plough with their own hands but engage others to cultivate their fields ? Sir, I do not think that either is the intention of Government. But how will they be qualified if you say " actively engaged in agriculture " ? Sir, here again I feel that although it is not the intention of Government to exclude them, perhaps the working of the clause as it is, may exclude them. Then, Sir, are the ordinary labourers in the fields going to be excluded or are they to be considered as actively engaged in agriculture ? If there is any class of people which is actively engaged in agriculture, it is the labourer in the field who is more actively engaged in agriculture than the landlord, either the absentee landlord or the landlord who stays on his field but does not cultivate it. I want to know what is the intention of Government. Whom do they want to exclude by disqualifying those people who are not actively engaged in agriculture ? Are the tenants actively engaged in agriculture ?

A man who cultivates a bigha of land taking it on lease, is he supposed to be actively engaged in agriculture ? Then, Sir, there is the disqualification of a man who is not actively engaged in industry ? Is a worker who is working in the mills of Bombay to be considered as actively engaged in industry ? Sir, it is difficult to find whether he is to be considered as actively engaged in industry or not. In my view if there is anyone who is more actively engaged in industry, it is the worker in the mills who is actively engaged in industry. But, Sir, from the explanation given it seems to me that it is the intention of the Joint Committee only to qualify those people who are directors of joint stock companies. Sir, if those people who work in the fields as ordinary labourers, if those people who are landlords but do not cultivate their lands, are to be considered as qualified for being Directors of the Reserve Bank, I do not know, Sir, why those people should be disqualified who have not the good fortune of possessing land simply because under the present laws the land is not properly and equitably divided among the citizens of this country. Is it a sin on their part that they do not possess a piece of land, is it a sin on their part that they are not directors of companies ? And moreover, I should like to know, Sir, how does a man become specially qualified to become a Director of the Reserve Bank simply because he possesses a piece of land ? (The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : " He does not."). Simply because—if I may use the actual wording of the sub-clause—simply because he is actively engaged in agriculture or industry, how does he become specially fit to be a Director of the Reserve Bank ?

And how does a man who does not cultivate land or may not be engaged in trade or industry become specially disqualified to become a Director of the Reserve Bank ? Sir, this Bank is not a shareholders' bank. The money which the Bank is going to have for its business is the money belonging to the people of this country. To that amount every man in the country will contribute his mite. If the man who is actively engaged in agriculture will contribute his mite for the money required for the Reserve Bank, if the man who is actively engaged in industry will contribute his mite to the amount necessary for the Reserve Bank, the man who is neither actively engaged in agriculture nor actively engaged in industry also contributes his mite to the amount which the Reserve Bank will have for its business. On what ground, then, does Government disqualify that man ? There may be hundreds of thousands of people who are neither actively engaged in industry nor actively engaged in agriculture, and they may be very well qualified even in the opinion of the Honourable the Finance Member to become Directors of the Reserve Bank if the question is to be decided by merit. Sir, an Honourable Member sitting behind me was very anxious only a few minutes ago that eminent professors from colleges should have at least a chance of being Directors of the Reserve Bank because they many know finance, they may know economics well. Now, Sir, an eminent professor of economics who may have studied finance, who may have studied economics, who may have studied the administration of all the Reserve Banks will be disqualified to become a Director if he is not actively engaged in agriculture, and if he is not actively engaged in industry. Is it right, Sir, that such an eminent professor should be disqualified to become a Director of the Reserve Bank while any one who is engaged in agriculture or in industry, who may be illiterate, who may not know anything whatever, who may not have any public spirit, who may even be dishonest, may become a Director of the Reserve Bank ? What is there to disqualify those who are illiterate, who know nothing of economics, who know nothing of finance, who have no public spirit, from becoming Directors of the Reserve Bank, while you are disqualifying those people who may have knowledge, who may have public spirit and who may have contributed very largely to the fund which is going to be used by the Reserve Bank? Sir, I fail to understand the justification for this disqualification. I have been thinking over this matter for a long time and I am trying within my mind to find out what is the reason which led or inspired Government to disqualify people who are engaged neither in agriculture nor in industry. Sir, I claim that at least on some occasions and in some moments of my life I am disinterested ; but, Sir, I am also sometimes inclined to be selfish ; and I asked myself the question : Why should I be disqualified from becoming a Director of the Reserve Bank? It is not my good fortune to possess a piece of land and I am wondering whether I am actively engaged in industry or not. I am at present engaged in the industry of law-making. I do not know, Sir, what judgment a judge before whom my case may go may give—whether I am actively engaged in industry or not.

[Mr. N. M. Joshi.]

But, Sir, there are other grounds why I should be considered qualified. I am connected as an office bearer with a trade union, and a trade union is an essential part of an industrial organization. Therefore, am I going to be disqualified or qualified? If the matter goes before a bench of judges, I am quite sure some of them at least will decide in my favour that a trade union is an essential part of the industrial organization ; but, Sir, I do not wish to leave that point in doubt. I therefore think that the amendment proposed by my friend Mr. Kelkar should be passed by this House unanimously, and I hope that at least those parties which stand for the people of this country and which call themselves popular will support this unanimously, and that they will not be tempted or frightened away by the threat that if an amendment like this is passed, the Bill may be in peril. If the Bill is in peril simply because you want to do justice to those people who do not possess land and are not engaged in industry, Sir, you will not be doing anything wrong, but you will certainly be doing justice to them. I hope, Sir, the amendment will be passed.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I am sorry to disappoint my friend Mr. Joshi, but I am going to do my best to persuade the House to oppose this amendment. My friend Mr. Joshi, I think, said that he has been spending a good deal of time in trying to understand the meaning of this amendment and that he could not do so. I wish I had known it earlier, because I really think I could have explained to him the exact meaning and object of the amendment. He asked questions about an absentee landlord. The question whether an absentee landlord may be excluded is a question of fact. If the landlord was an absentee and did not actively engage himself in the pursuit of agriculture, he would not be qualified as actively engaged in agriculture. He also stated that a professor of economics will not be qualified. I submit, Sir, that a professor of economics may be an extremely good acquisition to the Bank in the position of a financial adviser, but he will be of little use to the Bank as a Director if he has never taken any active part in business of some sort, and in such a case I think there is some reason for excluding him.

Now, Sir, I think there is some misunderstanding about the whole position. I would first of all point out to the House the position we are in. The House has just rejected an amendment moved by Government to restore a clause that was defeated in the Joint Committee. The House is now being asked by Mr. Kelkar to reject an amendment that was made in the Joint Committee by a majority of the Committee. If the House is going to reject both the Government amendment to restore a clause and the additions made the Joint Committee, we are obviously not getting any nearer the agreement we all wish. Sir, the gynesis of this clause is as follows. When the Joint Committee decided that instead of a shareholders' bank they would have a State Bank, there ceased to be that check on the choice of Directors which the existence of shareholders implied. A shareholder will normally not choose as a director a man who knows nothing whatever about the business of the Bank. In the present case, we have got rid of the direct personal interest of the shareholder in the election of the director. We are substituting a general electorate. Now, I submit that you do want to give some guidance to the general electorate as to the nature of the directors that should be chosen. Mr. Kelkar said that there was no such guidance given to the electors for the Legislative Assembly. That is so, I believe. But in the case of the Council of State there is a very definite qualification necessary before you can be eligible for the Council of State. That is a money qualification and that qualification I did not think myself was entirely suitable for this case. You do not want to say that only people with a certain amount of wealth shall be eligible as directors, but you do want a general indication and guide to the elector as to what sort of director will be suitable. Now, this clause does not go really very far beyond giving that guidance. I do not think that it is open to the objection which Mr. Kelkar raised that it would give rise to litigation. I think he has overlooked the provision for giving powers to Government to make regulations and so on in regard to this matter. But this clause is one which has been taken from several of the existing statutes. The Commonwealth Bank of Australia has been frequently held up as a model to the Government in cases where it suited the views of those who held it up. The Commonwealth Bank provides that the Directorate shall include 6 other persons who are, or have been, actively engaged in agriculture, commerce, finance or industry. The Federal Reserve Board Bank Act of the United States divides the Board of Directors into various clauses, 3 representing the stock-holding banks—that of course is a different proposition—clause (b) shall consist of 3 members who at the time of election shall be actively engaged in their district in commerce, agriculture or some other industrial pursuits. You will notice that is a much more definite disqualification. They have to be at the time of their election actively engaged in their district. The Government feel therefore.....

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : That is not a disqualification : it is a positive qualification that they should possess. Here you have provided a disqualification.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : If you say that 3 members must at the time of their election be actively engaged in doing certain things, is it on any way different from saying that at the time of their election none of these 3 members shall not be actively engaged ? There is nothing in the question of positive or negative whatsoever. It is merely the method of the draftsman in expressing the subject. He would not have the least difficulty in expressing it positively and it has exactly the same meaning whichever way it is expressed. Now, that is the position. We have no longer the check on the character of the directorate which is implied in the pecuniary interests of shareholders and the directorate. We want to give some general guidance to the electors as to the sort of director that is required. This clause was agreed to in the Joint Committee and it is admittedly not a clause that has any very wide disqualifying effect. But it certainly has a very definite effect in indicating the nature of the qualifications that ought normally to be required in a Director. I am glad to say that in this matter I have the entire agreement of the Mover of the amendment himself. He said quite definitely that we were all agreed that the people who should become Directors ought to be business men. But his objection was, I think, that this clause did not secure that entirely. I admit that this clause is a very moderate, modest clause ; it does not go very far. But it is, I think, a very important clause and really I think that the House ought to pause and consider whether it is not essential that, if you are going to submit the choice of directors for this Bank to an electorate which is not directly interested in the affair, you must give some guidance and put some check on the nature of their choice and I hope that in these circumstances the Mover will not press this amendment and if he does that the House will not accept it.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : May I ask a question, Sir ? Does industry include labour ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Yes, certainly.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support this amendment. There is no satisfactory reason given for restricting the Directorate to those actively engaged in agriculture, commerce, finance or industry. Such a restriction does not obtain in any of the rules framed in connection with elections for any other public body. For instance, in the rules framed for election to legislative bodies there is no such restriction ; nor do we find any such restriction in the rules framed for elections to municipal or local boards. No such provision obtains in enactments establishing Central Banks in this country. There is therefore no reason why, in this Bill alone, such a restriction should be particularly introduced. The result of such a restriction will be to keep out men of eminence in public affairs, such as those who are engaged in law, teaching and such like professions. Supposing there are men, as referred to by my friend Mr. Joshi, who make a special study of banking and finance, there is no reason why such men should be excluded from the Directorate. It is admitted that these men will prove to be very good advisers to the Bank, and if it is so, there is no reason why they should not be admitted as qualified to stand for the Directorship. Again, why should absentee landlords and industrialists, who are sleeping partners, be admitted ? There is no reason given why the discretion of the electorate should be restricted like this. When once you constitute an electorate, there is no reason why you should not leave it to the good sense of the constituency as to who should be their candidate. For these reasons, Sir, I support the amendment of Mr. Kelkar.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member has told us that the self-interest which would have guided the shareholders in a shareholders' bank being absent, we have now to provide some guidance to the electorate who will be required to choose a number of directors in the form of positive rules, and he thinks that it is necessary, therefore, that they should be told that only those men should be chosen who are actively engaged in agriculture, commerce, finance or industry. According to the definition of what active interest in commerce, finance or industry implies, we might have any man who is or has been a director of any company. Now, in the first place we know perfectly well that during the last 20 years, a number of companies have been started in this country, the directorate of which has not been noted for its business qualities. Many men have been appointed as directors who are not known particularly for their grasp of economic principles or for their knowledge of business methods. The companies of which they were directors might have failed on account of inefficiency or mismanagement or even for worse reasons, but so long as no criminal conviction stands against them, they are absolutely free to offer themselves for election to the Directorate of the Reserve Bank. In the second place, there is no guarantee that a man who has not been a director of a company does not possess an adequate knowledge of finance, industry or commerce. We know that in this country there are large private firms which are actively engaged in commerce, finance and industry. Nevertheless, the definition, as drafted here, would summarily exclude such men, although they may be highly qualified to assist in the business which the Directorate of the Bank will be called upon to deal with. (Some Honourable Members : " No, no ".) In the third place, it does not seem to me, in spite of what the Honourable the Finance Member has said, that there is any good reason why a man with a sound grasp of economic principles should be excluded. Such a man may be an elector for his salary may be more than Rs. 10,000 a year, and yet he will be debarred from offering himself for election to the Directorate. Take a man like Professor Coyajee. I am sure there is no one in this House... (Sir Bomanji Dalal : " Why not you " ?) I am much too modest to mention my name. I am partial to Honourable Members opposite and they may be perfectly certain that I am not likely to trench upon their preserves. Take a man like Professor Coyajee. I am sure nobody in this House will deny that he is possessed of an excellent grasp of economic principles. I am sure that Honourable Members on the other side at least will not dispute that. Yet, if this provision is accepted by the House, such a man who has been regarded as competent to advise on the constitution of the Bank will be prevented from serving on the Directorate and giving the benefit of his wide knowledge to his colleagues, who, whatever their competence might be in other respects, may not be as well grounded in theory....

Mr. V. K. Aravamudha Ayangar : Professor Coyajee is already disqualified because he is a Government servant.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I know that. I was merely taking him as an example. I may take another example of another gentleman who happens to be a Government servant. Take the Honourable Sir

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

Basil Blackett himself. I wonder if he has ever been a director of a company.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Yes, I have.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : It is his particular good fortune that he has been a director.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : Take the Law Member.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : But it is possible that a man with that wide and sound knowledge, if I may say so, of economics that the Honourable the Finance Member possesses may not have had the good fortune of being a director of a company. Is there any reason why we should not have the benefit of his knowledge on the Directorate ? An Honourable Member suggests one or two other names. I need not mention them, for it is not my business here to canvas for any particular individual. All that I want to do is to establish a particular principle. Now, this provision, as I have pointed out, does not exclude undesirable persons. On the other hand it excludes desirable persons inasmuch as it prevents members of private firms and persons having an exceedingly good general knowledge of economics, particularly of currency and banking and possessing wide and deep familiarity with the money market, from being elected to the Directorate. I submit for these reasons that the House should accept the amendment placed before us by my Honourable friend, Mr. Kelkar.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, in this clause we find some negative definition and some negative qualifications of what a director ought not to be. It is rather difficult to find any common formula sufficient to indicate as to what are the desirable qualities of a director. Among ordinary disqualifications, Sir, you will find that a previous convict, a badmash, an insolvent or a public servant dismissed for some heinous offence are generally the persons who are disqualified from being a director. With regard to the particular case before you, may I give an illustration, Sir. Supposing a director of some agricultural institute is dismissed for criminal breach of trust. What would happen to him ? Would that be taken to be a necessary disqualification or not ? My humble submission is that he will be taken to have been actively engaged at some time or other of his life in agriculture, etc., and though according to ordinary principles such a man is one of the most undesirable persons who ought to be directors, this disqualification by itself, I submit will not stand in his way. Again, Sir, an ordinary cultivator, a petty village shopkeeper, and illiterate and ignorant person, an ironsmith or carpenter, a tailor, an insolvent, possibly an idiot or perhaps a person not in his own senses is not debarred from being a director (An Honourable Member : "Will he be elected "?), but who are the persons who are debarred from being directors ? Lawyers, professors of economy (laughter) and all men, if the interpretation of the Honourable the Finance Member is going to be accepted, possessing no other qualifications except those of a director. Lawyers and professors will be rigorously excluded—those persons who by virtue of their position in life, breadth of vision, knowledge of affairs of banking institutions are the best fitted to be on the Directorate of the Bank. Now, Sir, the question arises as to the exact significance of the words "at some time". I will illustrate my point. Take the example of a person who is a student in a college while he is 17 or 18 years of age ; he goes to his house in the vacations and is actively engaged with his parents in agriculture. After that he qualifies himself at the Bar and practises for 25 years and then wants to be a director. What would happen to him ? I contend that he will be quite fit so far as this qualification embodied in this clause goes. Similarly take the case of a member of a joint Hindu trading family ? Will it be said of him that he has not been engaged in any agriculture, commerce, trade, etc. ? Then, Sir, all those qualities which go to make a good director have not been indicated. I can quite see the significance of the remarks of the Honourable the Finance Member when he says that this clause is in the nature of a guidance. I have understood this clause as a sort of ban on particular people. Even by way of guidance I would rather leave this question to the particular candidate who wants to be elected : it will be his duty to educate his electors ; but in a Statute I have never seen that rules of guidance or the qualifications of candidates are sought to be told to the people who have to elect the candidates. Before we put on the Statute Book a disqualification of this sort, my humble submission is that we ought to be quite clear in our minds as to what the words convey, whether the words convey the particular meaning which are sought to be put on them. As I understand the words, Sir, it is clear to me that they mean absolutely nothing, or they may have a meaning which is not present to-day to the minds of the legislators sitting here. I would submit that they do not define the length of time during which a person standing as a candidate is to be engaged in agriculture, etc. Suppose, Sir, a person who wishes to go on the Directorate of this Bank gets himself nominated, and as soon as he is nominated he takes to business or to agriculture, my humble submission is, so far as the provision goes, he will be perfectly within his rights to be brought on the Directorate of this Bank, because it is some time that he has been actively engaged in agriculture or trade. Moreover, why take the case of an absentee landlord ? Take the case of any landlord. I contend that it can be predicted of every landlord that he is not actively engaged in agriculture, so that all these electors who are qualified to elect go away. It is an ordinary principle that those persons who elect, namely, the voters, can become candidates. If the suggestion of the Swaraj Party, namely, that any person who has got an income of so much, is accepted by the House, it would come to this that any person who pays an income-tax on an income of more than Rs. 10,000 will be an elector. I beg to ask, Sir, why this disqualification should be attached to him. If he is a good voter, why should he not be a good candidate even supposing he is not actively engaged in agriculture, but he has got villages ? We cannot at this stage know what the exact interpretation of the words " actively engaged " will be. Apart from that, Sir, I would submit that the word " industry " is a word which is too vague and illusory. What is industry, as my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi put it ? Is it not the industry of law-making in which the Legislature is indulging ? Every industry, unless it is defined, would come under this definition. My humble submission is that even if what the Honourable the Finance Member has in mind is to be brought about, it will never be brought about by a provision like this, so that this provision is condemned on the principle that no such disqualification should attach to any director, and secondly, from this point of view that even if it goes on the Statute-book it will not achieve the object which it seeks to encompass.

3 P.M.

Mr. B. Das : I move that the question may now be put.

(Several other Honourable Members also moved that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 7—

(a) In sub-clause (c), omit the word 'or' at the end ;

(b) Omit sub-clause (d) and the Explanation."

The Assembly divided :

AYES—29.

Aiyangar, Mr. C. Duraiswamy.	Kelkar, Mr. N. C.
Aney, Mr. M. S.	Kunzru, Pandit Hirday Nath.
Ayyangar, Mr. K. V. Rangaswami.	Lajpat Rai, Lala.
Ayyangar, Mr. M. S. Sesha.	Mehta, Mr. Jamnadas M.
Belvi, Mr. D. V.	Misra, Mr. Dwarka Prasad.
Bhargava, Pandit Thakur Das.	Mitra, Mr. Satyendra Chandra.
Chunder, Mr. Nirmal Chunder.	Moonje, Dr. B. S.
Das, Mr. B.	Naidu, Mr. B. P.
Das, Pandit Nilakantha.	Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.	Phookun, Srijut Tarun Ram.
Dutta, Mr. Srish Chandra.	Sarda, Rai Sahib Harbilas.
Iswar Saran, Munshi.	Singh, Kunar Ranan jaya.
Jamnadass, Seth.	Sinha, Mr. Siddheswar.
Jogiah, Mr Varahagiri Venkata.	Tok Kyi, U.
Joshi, Mr. N. M.

NOES—57.

Abdul Haye, Mr.	Irving, Mr. Miles.
Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Maulvi.	Jowahir Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Abdul Qaiyum, Nawab Sir Sahibzada.	Kabul Singh Bahadur, Captain.
Abdullah Haji Kasim, Khan Bahadur Haji.	Keane, Mr. M.
Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nasir-ud-din.	Kikabhai Premchand, Mr.
Alexander, Mr. William.	Kirk, Mr. R. T. F.
Anwar-ul-Azim, Mr.	Lamb, Mr. W. S.
Ashrafuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nawabzada Sayid.	Moore, Mr. Arthur.
Ayangar, Mr. V. K. Aravamudha.	Muhammad Nawaz Khan, Lieut. Sardar.
Ayyangar, Rao Bahadur Narasimha Gopalaswami.	Mukherjee, Mr. S. C.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.	Murray, Sir Alexander.
Blackett, The Honourable Sir Basil.	Parsons, Mr. A. A. L.
Bray, Sir Denys.	Rahimtulla, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim.
Coatman, Mr. J.	Rainy, The Honourable Sir George.
Cocke, Mr. H. G.	Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Cosgrave, Mr. W. A.	Rajan Bakhsh Shah, Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed.
Courtenay, Mr. R. H.	Rao, Mr. G. Sarvotham.
Crawford, Colonel J. D.	Roy, Mr. K. C.
Crerar, The Honourable Mr. J.	Ruthnaswamy, Mr. M.
Crofton, Mr. R. M.	Sams, Mr. H. A.
Dalal, Mr. A. R.	Shah Nawaz, Mian Mohammad.
Dalal, Sardar Sir Bomanji.	Singh, Rai Bahadur S. N.
Donovan, Mr. J. T.	Suhrawardy, Dr. A.
Dumett, Mr. J. M.	Sykes, Mr. E. F.
Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Raja.	Tonkinson, Mr. H.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.	Wright, Mr. W. T. M.
Haigh, Mr. P. B.	Yakub, Maulvi Muhammad.
Hussain Shah, Sayyed.	Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad.
	Young, Mr. G. M.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Does any Honourable Member wish to move amendments to clause 7 ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I beg to move :

" That after clause 7 of the Bill insert a new clause 7A as under :

' 7A. The Governor, the Deputy Governor or a Director.....' ".

Mr. President : Order, order. We have not yet appointed Governors and Deputy Governors. The Honourable Member is not in order in moving his amendment at this stage. We must first appoint Governors and Deputy Governors before we can talk of their resignations. Does the Honourable Member wish to move his amendment which stands as No. 32 in the agenda ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : No, Sir.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 7 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 8.

(Both Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya and Mr. Joshi stood up to move their respective amendments.)

Mr. President : If any Honourable Member has an amendment which is next in order, is not present or does not rise to move it at the appropriate time, he will lose his chance

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I was out in the interests of expedition of business.

Sir, I beg to move :

" That in clause 8 in clause (a) of sub-clause (1), the words ' of whom one shall be an Indian and ' "

be omitted.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : According to the list, Sir, I must be first allowed to move my amendment.

Mr. President : The list is not necessarily the guide. The Chair has to see which amendment fits in where. The Honourable Member is not entitled to priority because his amendment is entered first in the list or because he has given prior notice.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, there are some difficulties in dealing with this clause. Clause 8 (1) is one of those clauses which it is difficult to deal with under separate heads. If therefore I deal with my amendment solely in reference to clause (a), I hope you will excuse me if I stray a little bit beyond that clause in my explanation of its purpose. The purpose of my amendment is to omit the words " of whom one shall be an Indian and " which were inserted in the Joint Committee. Sir, I yield to no one in my desire to see the Reserve Bank a Bank Indian in character. I think I have given proof of my desire that it should be Indian in character in what I said in regard to being perfectly willing to see a majority of elected Indians on the Board and indeed in the whole of my dealings in this matter. But I do very strongly deprecate the introduction of racial or communal questions and, in particular, racial or communal clauses into a Bill of this sort. I do not think that it is desirable that at the very outset of this Bank we should restrict the choice of the Governor and the Deputy Governor on racial lines. I submit that it is not even fair to the Indian who, if this clause were carried and the Bill became an Act, would be chosen as Deputy Governor. Everybody would say—they could not help saying—that he had been chosen not necessarily because he was the best available Deputy Governor for the Bank, but because he was an Indian. His position in relation to the Governor, if the Governor were a European and he were an Indian, would not be what it ought to be. If you leave it to the free choice of the Government in the first instance, and the Government on the recommendation of the Board thereafter, to decide who is the best man to be chosen as Governor or Deputy Governor, then that it will not be long before Governors and Deputy Governors of the Reserve Bank are normally Indians is a belief that I am perfectly willing to admit that I hold ; but I do not think it is desirable, in the first instance, to tie down the choice without reference to the efficient working of an institution which is admittedly going to be a very difficult thing to start,—to tie the hands of those who have to be responsible for the work of that Bank in the racial characteristics of the Governor or Deputy Governor whom they are to choose. I do hope that the House will recognise that on this point the Government have gone a very long way already in the matter of admitting the desirability of assisting in the creation of a Bank that shall be Indian in domicile, character and outlook, and will leave the matter at that and not attempt to introduce a racial distinction into the working of this clause. Sir, I move.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I oppose this amendment. It is not because we are communal in outlook or sectional in our views that I do so, but long years of experience have convinced us that unless an Indian is definitely provided for in the Statute, there is no possibility for years and years to come of an Indian being appointed either as Governor or Deputy Governor. In the first instance we have no Reserve Bank in India and therefore no qualified man in the technical sense will exist ; and unless some one is appointed now, nobody will ever be qualified in future ; and whenever the question crops up the plea will be advanced that Government are looking far and wide, but are disappointed that no competent Indian is available ; and this painful process will go on as it has gone on in the case of the Railway Board, and many other cases that may be mentioned. Sir, there is no provision in the Government of India Act that the Governors of Provinces shall be only Europeans ; but except in one unfortunate experiment or exception—whatever you may call it—not a single Indian has ever been appointed Governor of a province, although we have 9 provinces, and this is the seventh year since the Government of India Act has been in force. The bona fides of the Government have been tested over and over again and they have always proved wanting.

Then, again, it is not peculiar to this country only that we want the Directors to be Indians ; the Finance Member maintains that in such a measure there should be no racial question. Sir, I said the other day that in some countries statutory provision is made that only those who are nationals of those countries shall be directors of Reserve Banks, and I quoted the case of Germany where it was laid down by law that all the Directors must be German nationals. My Honourable friend Sir Alexander

Murray challenged my statement and proceeded to correct me ; the Finance Member supported him stating that I was referring to the old constitution and everybody else thought I had made a mistake. Since then, Sir, I have referred to the authorities and I find that these distinguished financiers and infallible authorities are utterly wrong. In Germany the directors must be all German nationals. The very book which Sir Basil Blackett threw at my face the other day showed that all the directors and the Chairman must be German nationals.

Sir Alexander Murray : Of what ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Of this Bank ; of the German Central Bank.

Sir Victor Sassoon : The managing committee or the governing bodies ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I am coming to the distinction which was not present to the minds of those gentlemen the other day. I have now their own authority in my hands, and, Sir, this is what it says. Since the Dawes Settlement this Board of Directors must be all German nationals. There is no question about it ; they are appointed with the approval of the President and of the General Council and it is on this General Council—not the Board of Directors which is elected by the shareholders—that there must be 7 Germans and 7 must be foreigners, one from each country which participates under the Dawes Settlement. But not one of these 7 foreigners are directors. I got this authority for my friend, Sir Alexander Murray ; the Associated Press was in a hurry to wire all over the country that Mr. Jamnadas Mehta was corrected. I hope it will now have the fairness to wire that the Finance Member was corrected and that Sir Alexander Murray was corrected and that all the gentlemen who came down upon me were all corrected. Sir, in the face of the fact now established why should the Finance Member object to Indians being statutorily provided for ? The Dawes Scheme is like the appointment of a receiver for Germany. The General Council is a council of receivers for insolvent Germany. But even in insolvent Germany on its National Bank the Chairman and all the directors must be German nationals. I hope we are not going to be treated even worse than Germany ; and yet the Finance Member has the hardihood to oppose this simple provision that one at least of the Governor or Deputy Governor should be an Indian. It is desirable that both should be Indians ; but if you cannot have both, I do not see any harm in providing that one at least shall be an Indian, and I hope that this House will see that this amendment is not carried and that the original proposition remains.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : Sir, with your permission, I want to move an amendment to this amendment, to the effect that in clause (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 8, for the words " a Deputy Governor of whom one shall be an Indian ", the words " two Deputy Governors ", and in the proviso to the same clause for the words " Deputy Governor ", the words " Deputy Governors " be substituted.

Mr. President : Honourable Members desiring to move important amendment to an amendment must give intimation to the Chair of their intention and supply a copy of it to the Chair in time. It is not fair to the Chair that an Honourable Member should rise from his seat and read his amendment without any notice whatsoever.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. President.]

(The amendment was then handed to the Chair.)

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Sir, will you kindly read out the amendment so that we may know what it is.

Mr. President : The amendment is that in clause (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 8, for the words ' a Deputy Governor of whom one shall be an Indian ', the words ' two Deputy Governors ', and in the proviso to the same clause for the words " Deputy Governor ", the words " Deputy Governors " be substituted.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Does the Honourable Member mean to cut out the words " of whom one shall be an Indian ".

An Honourable Member : Yes.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : Sir, I desire to move this amendment, because it may meet the wishes of the other side of the House, and in moving it I want to ask Government if they can give an assurance that one of these three, the Governor or the Deputy Governors, shall be an Indian.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Sir, I oppose both the amendment moved by the Honourable the Finance Member and the one moved by Mr. Cocke. The Honourable the Finance Member said that he was against introducing any racial discrimination in a Bill of this character. I entirely agree with him that it is a great pity that racial discrimination should be introduced into the Statute-book. But, it is the unfortunate position in which this country is placed that drives us to this necessity that we must statutorily provide for what we are entitled to by right. Sir, we are not by making this proviso, perpetuating any racial discrimination, but we want by this proviso to ensure that no racial discrimination shall be observed by Government in this matter. This proviso, I maintain, is a protest against the racial discrimination that is being practised by this Government. My Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta drew the attention of the House to the sad experience that we have had in the matter of our claim for the appointment of an Indian to the Railway Board ; and though, if not promises, at least hopes, have been held out to us on the floor of this House from time to time, those hopes and promises yet remain to be fulfilled. And, Sir, what is the argument that is advanced every time when we ask that an Indian should be appointed to the Railway Board ? The Indian to be qualified to sit on the Railway Board must necessarily pass through a certain amount of technical training which must necessarily take time. Now, I ask, Sir, if at least the Deputy Governor in the first instance is not to be an Indian, what opportunity is there for an Indian to qualify himself for this post at all? Are we to go to some other country and become Deputy Governors of the Central Bank there and thereby qualify ourselves ? Certainly not. In the speech that I made on the motion for consideration, I drew the attention of the House to the fact that if the first Deputy Governor is not an Indian, then at least for ten or fifteen years to come we cannot have an Indian either as a Governor or as a Deputy Governor. Though technically it might be provided that the period of office of the Governor and Deputy Governor is only 5 years, yet I believe there will be continuity in the tenure of this office. The Governor that would be appointed in the first instance would not be asked to go about his business at the end of the 5-year period. He would certainly remain for some considerable time, we will say for 10 years. The Governor of the Bank who has already been brought to this country in anticipation of the passing of this measure is, I believe, a young man who will remain in this country as Governor of the Central Bank for at least 10 years, if not more ; and when he retires what happens ? The Deputy Governor would naturally be promoted, and if the Deputy Governor also happens to be an Englishman then, for another 10 or 12 years thereafter the next Governor will be an Englishman. Sir, I am sure we might be excused if we protest against the perpetuation of this sort of system. My Honourable friend, Mr. Cocke, brings forward an amendment that there might be two Deputy Governors and even then he is not prepared to make a statutory provision that one of these two Deputy Governors shall be an Indian. But what is the hope that he gives us ? He says that Government might probably give a promise on the floor of this House that one of these two Deputy Governors would be an Indian. Well, Sir, if Government is prepared to make a declaration on the floor of this House in advance that one of the two Deputy Governors shall be an Indian, I cannot understand why they ought not to have a statutory provision of this nature, and why the Government should not find the best Indian available for this purpose without having two Deputy Governors. I do hope, Sir, that, as a result of the sad experience this House has had in matters of this kind, they will unanimously oppose the amendments moved by the Honourable the Finance Member and Mr. Cocke.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member has deprecated the introduction of racial distinctions in a Bill of the Legislative Assembly. May I remind him of the provisions of the Government of India Act ? What does it say as regards the High Court, the Executive Council and in various other clauses there ? Are there not racial distinctions there ? How is the Finance Member justified then in what he says ? And as my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar reminds me, take the case of the I. M. S. this morning. Now, Sir, we deprecate the introduction of racial distinctions into Indian Statutes. But unfortunately the Government have led the way, and if they will purge the Statutes of these racial distinctions which are as galling to this side of the House as to the Honourable the Finance Member, we shall then certainly follow suit and eliminate from the present Bill the racial distinctions which have been recommended by the Joint Committee. The Honourable the Finance Member gives us an assurance. We take that assurance, but the Honourable the Finance Member remembers that he wanted to weigh the scales in favour of an Indian in the next appointment that was made to a membership of the Railway Board. And how often have we not reminded him of that undertaking—at any rate an understanding—and how often have we not been told that there is no such man forthcoming ? I am perfectly certain that the Leader of the future House will get up and say that the assurance stands good, but no Indian competent to discharge the onerous duties of Deputy Governor is available in this country. And what reply shall we then give ? We shall have thrown away the advantage which we have now got of placing our views on the Statute-book. I therefore, think, Sir, that we shall be well advised in voting with the Joint Committee for the retention of this clause. As regards the Honourable Mr. Cocke's amendment, I have no doubt that it is inspired by good feeling because he wants that out of two Deputy Governors one should be an Indian. But it is not made clear to me why there should be now two Deputies when the Bill provides only for one. Has he considered the cost ?

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

There again the matter is left to the tacit understanding and assurance which the Honourable the Finance Member has given in the existing clause as it stands, namely, that out of two Governors, one principal Governor and one Deputy Governor, one shall be an Indian. Therefore, I submit that the amendment of the Honourable Mr. Cocke is even worse than the amendment moved from the Treasury Benches. We therefore, Sir, oppose both these amendments.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I desire to speak in regard to the amendment moved by the Honourable Mr. Cocke. As the House knows, this is one of the questions on which it is absolutely necessary that the two sides of the House should come to an agreement, if we are to get this Bill in a form we all want. I have already explained that in the opinion of the Government it is most undesirable and objectionable that a Statute of this nature should contain clauses of a racial or communal character.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must confine himself to the amendment moved by Mr. Cocke.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That was exactly the reason why I was making the statement. Mr. Cocke's amendment excludes any such racial or communal clause. His amendment is that there should be two Deputy Governors. Now, there are quite important arguments for having two Deputy Governors instead of one in this Bank. It is a matter that has been considered on merits for some time, and I am not sure that on balance, if the Bill had been originally introduced with two Deputy Governors instead of one, I should not have favoured that amendment for its own sake. But this amendment has one further very definite advantage. It offers what I hope every Member of this House will recognise as a sincere effort on the part of the Government to find a way through a difficulty so that we may, instead of being up against a blank wall on each side, be able to walk together quite comfortably in the green meadow beyond. I am perfectly prepared on behalf of the Government to give an undertaking that one out of the first three members appointed Governor or Deputy Governors, supposing there are two Deputy Governors, that is, either the first Governor or one of the first two Deputy Governors, shall be an Indian. I am authorised to make that declaration on behalf of Government. With that declaration I am sure Honourable Members will see that Mr. Chetty's point is completely met—that the question of the succession to the position of Governor is met. Beyond that Government are not prepared to go. They are not prepared to put into this Bill a clause requiring that one member of the Board shall be of a particular race or of a particular religion. They are prepared to agree to this proposal on the understanding that it is a compromise that will meet all that is really asked for on the other side, and will at the same time make for increased efficiency in the Bank. I do hope and I do appeal very earnestly to this House to accept this olive branch and to agree to the amendment as proposed by Mr. Cocke.

If we are really in a spirit of compromise, and I am sure that I have done my best on behalf of Government to show that we are in a spirit of compromise, here is an opportunity to show it. Instead of developing a debate which cannot be altogether pleasant—it never is when we get debating on this question of race—instead of developing such a debate, I do appeal to the leaders of the various parties who have done so much to assist in arriving at an amicable solution of our difficulties—to Mr. Jinnah, in particular, to whose assistance in the matter I desire to pay a special tribute. It is, I think, very largely due to his initiative that His Excellency the Viceroy called a conference and that, instead of being in the position of quarrelling, we are now in the position of trying to find an amicable solution for all our difficulties. To Pandit Malaviyaji I appeal to come in and accept this olive branch. I have already had the very happy experience of the willingness of Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar (Laughter) to assist in putting this Bill on the Statute-book, and if Honourable Members are going to jeer because other Honourable Members are trying to do their best for India in this matter, I am sure they are making a mistake. I make this appeal in the confident hope that the fruit of our hard work is not going to be thrown away in this matter.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I ask the Honourable the Finance Member.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The amendment proposed by Mr. Cocke is, he says, an amendment to the amendment moved by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett. I do not think it is an amendment to the amendment, but it is a substantive amendment. I will therefore consider it as such, and ask Government, if they support Mr. Cocke's amendment, to withdraw their own amendment.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Yes, Sir, I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. President : Is it the pleasure of the House that leave be given to the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett to withdraw his amendment ?

As no one objects, the amendment is, by leave, withdrawn.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I ask the Honourable the Finance Member one question ? The Honourable the Finance Member says that he will give an undertaking on behalf of the Government that in the first appointments either the Governor or the Deputy Governor will be an Indian. May we beg to know what will become of the later appointments ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I answer ? The position is, after the first appointment, the appointments are made by the Government after considering the recommendations of the Board. The majority of this Board will, according to the concordat on which we are approaching an agreement, consist of elected Indians. It will be in the competence of the Board to recommend. I admit at once that that does not bind the Government to accept, but at the same time, if one of the first three is an Indian, and if the Board is Indian in majority, while I cannot bind the Government or the Board after 5 or 10 years with a promise in this matter, I do not think that Sir Hari Singh Gour need be of such little faith as to doubt that the question will before long be, not whether one of the three is to be an Indian, but whether any of them is to be anything but Indian.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Munshi Iswar Saran (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : After the appeal of the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett addressed to the leaders of the various parties, I should feel very sorry to make any submissions which would stand in the way of the Finance Member and these distinguished gentlemen coming to an understanding. But I must confess that even after the undertaking given by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett my doubt remains unremoved. I shall put before him for his consideration a hypothetical case. Now, suppose that a Governor and two Deputy Governors are appointed to-day, one of whom is an Indian. Let us further suppose that for some reason that the Indian Deputy Governor or Indian Governor has to resign or has to sever his connection with the Bank. What will happen then ? Are we to understand that Government then will be free to appoint in his place a non-Indian, or are we to understand that the undertaking given by the Honourable the Finance Member on behalf of Government will hold good ? That point, I must confess, Sir, presents to my limited understanding a very serious difficulty. Sir Basil Blackett has very rightly said that Sir Hari Singh Gour should have faith in the undertaking given by Government and that we ought to hope that in future the appointment will be made in the spirit of the undertaking given. Sir, I beg to assure the House that it is a great pain to have to say this, but we must honestly and unhesitatingly say that many of our hopes in the past have been blasted ; and if the past is any guide to the future, then I must confess there is no room for much hope. When I listened the other day to the debate on the Indian Sandhurst Committee, I thought to myself, especially after one particular speech, that we Indians had not the capacity for holding King's commissions. Are we to understand now that Government cannot make up their mind as regards our capacity for filling up at least one of these two posts ? I therefore feel, Sir,—speaking for myself, without having received any mandate from anybody and without having had any consultation with anyone—my own feeling is that we shall betray our cause if we do not insist on the incorporation in the Act of the provision contained in the Report of the Joint Committee, or failing that, we do not insist on an undertaking being given in clear language by Sir Basil Blackett on behalf of the Government of India that in future out of the appointments to the Governorship and to the two Deputy Governorships, at least one must go to an Indian. (An Honourable Member : " We do not want two.) " There is one observation which I shall with your permission make for the consideration of this House. We find that according to the Report of the Joint Committee there shall be one Governor and one Deputy Governor. Now in order that one Indian should find a place in this body, the number is being increased to two. I do not know, but I venture to think that the salary which these gentlemen will get will be rather large. Why is it necessary, I ask, that this additional burden should be imposed on the tax-payer ? I submit that you have to make up your mind once for all. Take away these words " of whom one shall be an Indian ", but give us an undertaking here and now, in clear and unambiguous language, that one of the two will always be an Indian ; and as far as I am concerned, I shall be perfectly satisfied. But without such an undertaking, I personally do not find myself in agreement with the view of Sir Basil Blackett.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I have not taken any part in the progress of this Bill so far, but the few remarks that fell from the Leader of the House compel me to say a few words. As I understand Sir Basil Blackett, what he conveys to the House is this, that the Government give an undertaking not a hope, or even a promise, but an undertaking—there is a distinction between these words (An Honourable Member : " A distinction without a difference ") on the floor of this House that, if you agree to the amendment of my Honourable friend, Mr. Cocke that there shall be one Governor and two Deputy Governors, then one of them first appointed shall be an Indian. If you look at the Bill, Sir, you will find that the first appointment is to be for five years. After that clause 8, sub-clause (2) says this :

" Before appointing any Governor or Deputy Governor other than the first, the Governor General in Council shall consider any recommendation made by the Board in that behalf."

Now, my Honourable friend on my right who spoke last is rather puzzled as to what will happen when the first appointment is made and then one of the Deputy Governors, who is an Indian according to the undertaking given, resigns or dies. Surely the Government are bound by their undertaking that, if they have to substitute any one who happens to die or resign, it must be an Indian. If there is any doubt on this point, the Leader of the House ought to make it clear that the first appointed shall be an Indian and, in case of death or resignation or otherwise, the substitute shall be an Indian. Then, as to the next part, after the period of 5 years, the Governor General in Council will be guided by the recommendation of the Board. I entirely agree with the Leader of the House.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : He may be guided.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : He may be guided by the recommendation ; certainly it is not binding on him. If you have a majority of Indians on the Board, I cannot conceive why my countrymen should go out of their way to recommend anybody else than an Indian, unless they fail to get a competent man. But even if they go wrong, it is not binding on the Governor General and he may, after having given due consideration to the question, appoint an Indian. Therefore, it seems to me, Sir, that once we get an undertaking in the clearest language from the Leader of the House, one Indian will be appointed first and there is every likelihood that later on one Indian will be there.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I regret I cannot agree with the speech made either by the Honourable Mr. Cocke or by the Honourable the Finance Member. If really it is a racial question, then I can understand that there may be some force in the argument. But when we claim that the word " Indian " should be inserted and there should not be two Deputy Governors, the point of view for which we on this side stand is that we are trying to nationalise Indian institutions, nationalise legislation, nationalise every sort of Government. Therefore, there is no necessity, especially for anyone on the other side of the House to feel uncomfortable that they or we are introducing any racial distinctions. It is, on the other hand, the Honourable Mr. Cocke's amendment that introduces a racial distinction not expressly but by necessary implication. When the Honourable the Finance Member says he gives an undertaking that one shall be an Indian, it goes without saying that the other will not be an Indian in the majority of cases, and the opportunity for this Indian Deputy Governor becoming a Governor is retarded very very considerably, whereas there is every chance, if the Deputy Governor is to be an Indian by reason of statutory obligation, of his becoming, after some experience, a Governor of the Bank, and we should like to have an Indian as the Governor of the Indian Reserve Bank. I am sure that ought to please the Finance Member more than myself. We must remember that unfortunately the Indian General Clauses Act does not enact, as I would very much like it to enact, that every person means every Indian national. If that expression had been as it should in the Indian General Clauses Act, then there would not have been the slightest difficulty whatever in removing all these references to Indians in all enactments. But, as things stand at present, it is impossible for us to be content with any undertaking on behalf of the Government. This does not necessarily mean that there is any suspicion or distrust, though suspicion and distrust have been naturally engendered in the past, and there is an enormous amount of justification for it, and suspicion and distrust are likely to be engendered in the future also, with plenty of justification. But my idea is that we should insist on the reference to "Indian" as a question of principle. When you inaugurate a Bank of this important description, it should be a point of principle that either the Governor or the Deputy Governor should be an Indian. If it is the Honourable the Finance Member's happy experience to have had my assistance which, I am afraid, it may not have been my good fortune to have, then my assistance to Government will be as rare as possible. On this side I should like to add one word of congratulation which will be given only when the Government openly acknowledge that there is nothing wrong in principle in having the word "Indian" in the Statute-book. There is nothing wrong whatever in our efforts to nationalise our institutions. It is a very sound effort which is free from the remotest racial bias. In these matters it is a question of business with Indians. They want their institutions to be controlled by themselves. They want to secure their interests and they do not want the trusteeship of others. They do not want that the officers of Government should in the future be put in the awkward predicament of being pressed by the European and Indian communities. The Government ought to be thankful for being relieved from the obligation of having to choose among rival applications from the two communities. They ought to welcome a statutory provision of this description which will relieve them from all anxieties of this nature. Then, Sir, the appointment of two Deputy Governors will be far more expensive than we can afford. The Deputy Governors will not be gratuitous officers. I suppose they are going to be paid fairly well. Therefore, I consider that we are perfectly justified in opposing this amendment of the Honourable Mr. Cocke. I can assure the Members on the other side that in our legitimate aspirations to nationalise the institutions, we should like to have their support, and that they should not in season and out of season bring up the question of racialism to weaken our opposition. I hope that on this side no Indian Member will ever be weakened by being told he is racial when he is merely just to his countrymen. I have no hatred towards anybody and I have not the slightest doubt that no Indian Member of this House, be he an official or non-official, elected or nominated, harbours any such racial feelings. I want this question to be settled once for all. When we say that Indians should be here, that Indians should be there and should be everywhere, we mean that everything should be Indianized. It is our legitimate claim and it is the least of our rights and it is impossible for us to listen to the siren voice of the Honourable the Finance Member and to his eloquent appeals and to be moved by them. I regret, Sir, that I am not able to find myself in the fortunate company of my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah in this matter. I have had my own experience and I do believe that we are perfectly justified in opposing this amendment. In fact, we shall be wanting in our duty if we do not sternly oppose such an attempt as this which has been made.

[Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar.]

4 P.M.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : May I ask the Honourable the Finance Member, Sir, whether it is his intention by accepting Mr. Cocke's amendment that both the Deputy Directors will simultaneously sit on the Board and have simultaneous voting ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : With your permission, Sir, I might be allowed to speak again on this motion. In answer to Mr. Chetty's last point, I think it would certainly be desirable that, if there are two Deputy Governors, there should be provision that only one of them should vote at any one meeting.

Mr R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Only one of them should vote !

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Only one should vote. That I think would be very desirable. I should not have the least objection to both voting except that it will increase more than I desire the number of Government nominees. If there is any question between the two sides of the House as to whether there are to be two voting Deputy Governors or only one, I should follow them on that point except that I do not want to unduly increase the number of Government nominees. As regards Mr. Jinnah's point, may I say that he has missed one of the strongest points for the future. Supposing this amendment is carried, the undertaking on behalf of the Government is that of the first 3 officers, executive officers, in whose appointment Government have the sole voice, one shall be an Indian. After the first appointment, the next appointments are not appointments in which Government have the sole voice, but they must await the recommendation of the Board. This Board has a majority of Indians and the Government obviously cannot very well say in advance that one shall be an Indian until they have heard the recommendation of the Board, whether he is to be an Indian or not. But it may be said that Government need not follow the advice of the Board. Now, Sir, if you will read clause 8 (1) (a) there is a proviso to the following effect :

" Provided that the salaries and allowances of the first Governor and Deputy Governor shall be such as may be fixed by the Governor General in Council ".

After that the salaries and allowances respectively are to be such as may be determined upon by the Board. It is obvious, therefore, that the Board have a very strong voice in the matter and it can put pressure on the Government so as not to ignore their recommendations. Under those circumstances, I do submit that the Government have given all the undertaking that they possibly could in this matter, short of having a provision inserted in the Statute. It is quite impossible to conceive circumstances in which unless the Board—which be it remembered has a majority of elected Indians—recommends a non-Indian, there would not be one at least of the three officers an Indian. Then, Sir, in regard to what Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar has said, I have to say that the Government do attach very great importance to not multiplying racial provisions in the Statute-book. I would point out that there are dangers in it. It has been said that the Bank of England would not put an Indian on its Board. As a matter of fact the Bank of England is extraordinarily cosmopolitan in the matter of its directors. I can mention a large number of directors of the Bank of England who are or were either themselves naturalised Englishmen, born out of England or the sons of naturalised Englishmen born as foreign subjects. There is no bar whatsoever to a British subject, be he an Indian, or British or Canadian, being a member of the Board of the Bank of England. I have no doubt that if it so happens that an Indian were to leave the shores of India and settle down and become a business man in London, it would be quite within the bounds of possibility and easily conceivable not a wild idea that there should be an Indian member of the Board of the Bank of England. I do think there are dangers in putting racial provisions in the Statute-book. I am sorry that my Honourable friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, in spite of the compliment that he paid me in saying that I would be more glad than he if an Indian were the Governor—I hope he and I will be equally glad, but I thank him for the compliment—I am sorry that he is unable to follow up that compliment by agreeing in this matter. But he says that it is a matter of principle and that he would not be doing justice to India. I do ask him to say whether there is not the possibility, even so, for the sake of having a Governor and a Deputy Governor at all to agree to what I think is a very reasonable offer that is made by the Government in this matter.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 2nd September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, 2nd September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

AMOUNT OF INCOME-TAX AND SUPER-TAX PAID BY BRITISH AND OTHER NON-INDIAN COMPANIES CARRYING ON BANKING, SHIPPING AND INSURANCE BUSINESS IN INDIA.

773. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to give separately the amount of income-tax and super-tax paid

(1) By British Companies,

(2) By other non-Indian Companies, carrying on business in India in (a) Banking, (b) Shipping, and (c) Insurance ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Statistics distinguishing between (1) Indian, (2) British, and (3) other non-Indian Companies are not maintained.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it true that income-tax was levied on the British shipping companies only after I had drawn the attention of the Government in the first reformed Assembly ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am sorry I did not hear the question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it true that the income-tax was levied on the British shipping companies who never paid before the year 1922 any tax to the Honourable the Finance Member's Department, and after I drew their attention to this in this House in the year 1921 taxes were levied on them ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have heard the question, but I am afraid I do not understand it.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that since the year 1922 the British shipping companies are paying income-tax and that they did not pay a single pice before 1922 when I drew the attention of the Government to the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I give it up.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What is the amount that the Indian exchequer has suffered owing to the negligence of the Government of India in exempting the British shipping companies from payment of income-tax prior to 1922 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I hope the Indian Exchequer never suffers in that way.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Government be good enough to let us know if it is a fact that income-tax was levied on the British shipping companies operating in this country after attention was drawn to their not paying income-tax by an Honourable Member of this House in 1922 ? Is it a fact or is it not ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am afraid I do not know.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will you kindly make inquiries ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Did the Honourable Member just before his arrival in India have a mind to look to the interests of India, and does he do so as far as the finances of India are concerned ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the importance of the figures for which I have asked in my question, will the Government be good enough to collect the necessary figures and present a statement to the Assembly at a later date ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer is in the negative.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE BOARD OF TRADE OR OTHER SHIPPING INTERESTS IN ENGLAND IN CONNECTION WITH THE REPORT OF THE MERCANTILE MARINE COMMITTEE.

774. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have received any communication from the Board of Trade or from any shipping interests in England in connection with the Report of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay a copy of such communication on the table ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India received a memorandum from the Board of Trade on the reservation of the Indian coasting trade, in connection with the question whether legislation for this purpose, on the lines proposed by the Committee, was intra vires of the Indian Legislature. The Government of India are enquiring from the Secretary of State whether there is any objection to laying this memorandum on the table of this House.

The only other correspondence that the Government of India have had with the Board of Trade in connection with this Report, related to the training ship, which, as the Honourable Member is aware, the Board of Trade have agreed to recognise, on the same footing as the nautical colleges in England, for the purpose of certificates of competency.

No shipping interests in England have addressed the Government of India in connection with the Report.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Are the contents of this statement so dangerous that it is necessary to get the consent of the Secretary of State before its publication in this country ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : It is clearly necessary, Sir, that when a communication has been received by the Government of India from the British Government with nothing stipulated as to publication, that the consent of that Government should be obtained to the publication.

Mr. K. Ahmed : How long will the Government of India wait for the sanction of the Secretary of State to publish this Mercantile Marine Committee's Report ? Is it not a long time since the Report was submitted by the Committee ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I cannot admit the assumptions upon which the Honourable Member's question appears to be based.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I inquire if there is any mention in that statement to the effect that it should not be published until the consent of the Secretary of State is obtained ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No, Sir, there is no such statement ; but it is in accordance with the usual official procedure and the usual considerations of courtesy to another Government.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Then what is the period for waiting for the Government of India for the usual courtesy which they want to show to the Secretary of State's office ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Government be good enough to get a telegraphic communication from England in this connection ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No, Sir, I do not think there is any necessity to telegraph about it.

RESERVATION OF THE COASTING TRADE OF INDIA TO INDIAN SHIPPING.

775. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state when they propose to give legislative effect to the recommendations of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee in connection with the reservation of the coasting trade of India to Indian shipping ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would refer the Honourable Member to the debate in this House in March 1926 on Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer's Resolution regarding the training of Indians for nautical careers and other recommendations of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE INDIAN MERCANTILE MARINE COMMITTEE REGARDING THE TRAINING OF ENGINEER OFFICERS.

776. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state the steps if any that they may have taken in carrying out the recommendation of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee in connection with the training of engineer officers ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government expect to reach a decision in the near future.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the fact that a very long time has elapsed since the Mercantile Marine Committee made recommendations in connection with the training of engineer officers, will the Government be kind enough to state how much longer will they take to provide facilities for such training ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I hope, Sir, it will not take much longer ; but I am indebted to the Honourable Member for calling my attention to the matter.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF SHIP-BUILDING IN INDIA.

777. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state if they have taken or propose to take any steps in connection with the recommendation of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee regarding the encouragement of ship-building in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government are not yet satisfied that steps should be taken for the development of ship-building in India. Apart from that I may remind the Honourable Member that the recommendations of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee for the encouragement of ship-building in India were subject to the condition that a ship-building yard should be projected by an Indian company. Until such a project is proposed, the question of the assistance that might properly be given by the Government does not arise.

TRAINING ON THE INDIAN MERCANTILE MARINE TRAINING SHIP OF DECK OR EXECUTIVE OFFICERS FOR THE PROPOSED ROYAL INDIAN NAVY.

778. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state what arrangements they have made or propose to make regarding the training ship for giving preliminary training for the purpose of recruiting deck or executive officers for the proposed Royal Indian Navy ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No special arrangements are being made on the Indian mercantile marine training ship for giving preliminary training for the purpose of recruiting Deck or Executive Officers for the proposed Royal Indian Navy.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the fact that the country is going to spend considerable sums of money on the training ship, will the Government consider the advisability of utilising this training ship for naval requirements as well ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think my friend Mr. Young is in a better position than I am to answer that question.

Mr. G. M. Young : It is quite possible, Sir, that if the Indian mercantile marine training ship proves a success, officers will be recruited from it into the executive of the Royal Indian Marine, but naval training will not take place in the mercantile marine ship ; it will take place in the Indian Royal Navy after the candidates have been recruited to it.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Honourable Member kindly make clear the meaning of the words " if the training in the Indian mercantile marine ship proves a success " ? What does he mean by that ?

Mr. G. M. Young : From the point of view of the Navy, Sir, turning out suitable material for officers' ranks in the Navy.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member state how long it will take before the training commences ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Is my Honourable friend referring to the training on the mercantile marine ship or training in the Royal Indian Navy ?

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : The training ship.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : It is hoped that by December next the training ship will be ready and the first term will start.

RECRUITMENT OF INDIAN CREW, INDIAN DECK AND ENGINEER OFFICERS AND OTHER RATINGS FOR THE PROPOSED ROYAL INDIAN NAVY.

779. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the recommendation of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee that the services in the proposed Indian Navy should be Indianised, will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken or propose to take for recruiting

(a) Indian crew,

(b) Indian deck officers,

(c) Indian engineer officers, and (d) Other ratings,

for the proposed Royal Indian Navy ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Indian ratings are already recruited. As I have explained on another occasion the new Navy will carry on with the same ratings as have hitherto been employed in the Royal Indian Marine.

(b) Indian deck officers will be recruited in the proportion of one-third of the total number. Arrangements for holding the first entrance examination have not yet been concluded, but I hope that they will be shortly.

(c) Indian engineer officers also are being recruited in the proportion of one-third. Applications for appointment have been received and are under consideration.

(d) The only other ratings are, I think, the few British warrant officers still left in the service. These will serve out their time and be replaced in due course by Indian warrant officers.

Mr. B. Das : May I inquire, Sir, what was the channel through which the Government invited applications for recruitment of Indian engineer officers ? The Honourable Member just told us that applications for recruitment of Indian engineer officers have been received. May I inquire what was the channel through which Government invited those applications ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Government did not actually invite applications, but they were received.

Mr. B. Das : Through what channel were they received ? Were they received through the Public Service Commission or through the principals of engineering colleges ?

Mr. G. M. Young : It was not through any channel. The Report of the Departmental Committee contains the qualifications required, and on that, applications were received.

Mr. B. Das : Why was not the Public Service Commission asked to call for applications from Indian engineers for recruitment to this service ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : A supplementary question, Sir. With reference to the proportion of one-third reserved for Indian recruitment, will the Government kindly state the accepted total number of officers to be recruited every year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : At present the accepted total number is three on each side ; three executive officers and three engineer officers.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the smallness of that figure, is there any particular reason why only one Indian should be taken every year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Both figures are small. The decision was to recruit in the proportion of one-third, which is considered to be a sufficiently high proportion.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly state whether his Department is receiving or will receive applications for such appointments as engineers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : As I have already stated, applications have been received.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Has the Honourable Member heard the story of the boy who stood first in the class because he was the only boy ?

RECRUITMENT OF RATINGS FOR THE PROPOSED ROYAL INDIAN NAVY.

780. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any ratings for the proposed Royal Indian Navy have been already recruited by them ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that all the ratings already recruited for the ships of the proposed Royal Indian Navy come from one particular community and from one particular part of India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir, as I have explained in my answer to the previous question the personnel is being transferred into the new Navy.

(b) Yes, Sir. I would invite attention to the replies given to Mr. M. S. Aney's questions Nos. 321—324.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Are we to understand, Sir, that, in future, recruitment will take place without the ancient prejudices with regard to castes and communities ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already explained the matter fully in my answer to Mr. Aney's question. While the Indian Navy remains at its present strength, it is not proposed to go outside the community which at present supplies recruits. When the time comes for the expansion of the Indian Navy, we do propose to go outside that field of recruitment.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Is the Honourable Member aware that it will practically keep out the seafaring Moslems of Chittagong in Bengal from service in the Royal Navy ?

Mr. G. M. Young : It is not a question of practically keeping them out. For the last 40 or 50 years we have only had one class coming forward to serve in the Royal Indian Marine, and we have not even yet had any applications from outside those classes.

RECRUITMENT FROM THE BHANDARI COMMUNITY FOR THE PROPOSED ROYAL INDIAN NAVY.

781. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have received any petition from the Bhandari community requesting the Government to recruit their crew for the proposed Royal Indian Navy from that community ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the action which they have taken or propose to take in connection with that petition ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I would refer my Honourable friend to my reply to Mr. Aney's question No. 324.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : With reference to this habit of referring the questioner to earlier replies, will the Government be good enough to repeat those replies here so that this House may exercise its constitutional right of asking supplementary questions ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir ; I do not think it is advisable nor necessary.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What is the practice followed in the House of Commons, Sir ? May we know ?

NUMBER OF INDIAN LASCARS AND FIREMEN SHIPPED AT EACH MAJOR PORT IN INDIA DURING THE LAST THREE YEARS.

782. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving particulars of Indian lascars and firemen shipped at each of the major ports of India for :

(a) the coasting trade, and

(b) the overseas trade, in the last three years ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Local Governments have been asked to supply the information asked for, if available, and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member on receipt.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether the information will be laid on the table of the House ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : If the Local Governments have the information and give it to us, I should be prepared to lay it on the table of the House, unless the information was so voluminous that it might be sufficient to place a copy in the Library.

UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG INDIAN DECK, SALOON AND ENGINE ROOM CREWS.

783. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that a large number of Indian deck, saloon and engine room crews remains without employment for a long period ?

(b) Have Government received any representation in connection with such unemployment from the Indian deck, saloon and engine room crews ?

(c) If the answer to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state the steps they have taken or propose to take to relieve such unemployment ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Government are aware that there is some unemployment among Indian seamen, but they have no reason to suppose that it is abnormal.

(b) The Government of India have from time to time received copies of resolutions passed at meetings of Seamen's Unions, but they have received no direct representation on the subject from Indian deck, saloon or engine room crews.

(c) The unemployment of seamen depends upon the number of ships that require crews, over which the Government can have no control.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, what Government propose to do to relieve the distress caused by unemployment among Indian seamen ? Do they propose to introduce some form of unemployment insurance or any other form of relief ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Sir, that this is a matter which was raised at the Geneva Conference in 1920, and the view then taken was that unemployment insurance for seamen was unnecessary in India. This view was accepted by the Legislature in a Resolution adopted on the 26th September, 1921.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, why Government came to the conclusion that unemployment insurance was unnecessary in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I must ask for notice of that question ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What percentage of seamen are at present unemployed ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have no information on that point.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Even approximately ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has no information.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have no information from which I could give any figure at all.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that in 1921 I opposed that Resolution.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

CARRIAGE OF CARGO AND STORES BY INDIAN SHIPPING COMPANIES.

784. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the Departments concerned have been regularly sending inquiries to the Indian shipping companies for the carriage of cargo and stores in pursuance of the Resolution moved by Sir Lalubhai Samaldas in the Council of State on the 15th March 1922 and accepted by the Government ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the quantity of cargo for which inquiries were addressed to Indian shipping companies, (2) the quantity of such cargo actually carried by them, and (3) the amount of freight paid to them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information is being collected and the High Commissioner for India has been addressed on the subject. It will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

CARRIAGE OF GOVERNMENT STORES COASTWISE AND IN THE FOREIGN TRADE FROM AND TO AN INDIAN PORT.

785. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving particulars of quantity of cargo and stores carried on their account as well as on account of the railways from one Indian port to another and from an Indian port to ports outside India and vice versa during the last three years and the amount of freight paid on the same to the shipping companies ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would refer the Honourable Member to Tables Nos. 10A, 16, 17 and 18 of the " Annual Statement of the Sea-borne Trade of British India with the British Empire and Foreign Countries " for the year ending the 31st March 1926, which contain information regarding the quantity and value of Government stores imported into and exported from British India. No information is, however, available regarding the quantity of cargo and stores carried on Government account and on account of the Railways coastwise, nor as regards freight paid to shipping companies for the carriage of Government and railway stores.

ACTION TAKEN ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE DECK PASSENGER COMMITTEE.

786. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state when they propose to take action on the recommendations of the Deck Passengers' Committee who submitted their report to the Government in 1921 ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given by me on the 22nd August to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question on the same subject.

Mr. Serabhai Nemchand Haji : May I refer the Honourable Member to the fact that this Committee submitted its Report as early as 1921 and that no action has been taken since ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Honourable Member not only can do so but has done so.

STARTING OF THE INDIAN MERCANTILE MARINE TRAINING SHIP.

787. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to give information on the following points :

(a) When will the proposed Indian mercantile training ship begin to work and take cadets for training ?

(b) What will be the age of admission ?

(c) What will be the period of training ?

(d) What will be the fees which each cadet will have to pay ?

(e) Will the cadets be placed on the same level as the cadets of the Training Ship "Conway" and "Worcester" as regards their entry into (1) the Bengal Pilot Service, and (2) the proposed Royal Indian Navy ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) It is hoped that the first course of the training ship will begin in November next.

(b) Candidates must be between the ages of 13 and 16.

(c) The course will consist of two terms a year and will last for three years.

(d) Fees will be Rs. 50 for each month of residence on the training ship.

(e). (1) Cadets from the training ship will be in a more favourable position than cadets from the "Worcester" and "Conway" for employment in the Bengal Pilot Service, in that appointments to that service are only made in England by the High Commissioner when no suitable applications have been received in India.

(2) The question of entry into the Royal Indian Navy from the training ship is a matter for the Army Department.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : With reference to the recruitment of the Bengal Pilot Service through the High Commissioner in London, will the Government in future kindly invite applications first in this country and then in London ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not know what the actual procedure is at present, but the procedure suggested by the Honourable Member seems to me to be in accordance with the rules.

EMPLOYMENT OF SUCCESSFUL CADETS OF THE TRAINING SHIP AS APPRENTICES BY THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.

788. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the P. and O. Company, which receives a mail subsidy from the Government of India, have given an undertaking to take as apprentices successful cadets coming out of the training ship ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state the steps that they have taken or propose to take in that connection ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The P. and O. Company are prepared to take cadets from the Indian training ship as apprentices on their steamers on the Bombay|China line.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I inquire if this undertaking was given when the Company was first approached in this connection ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I have not the information at the moment but I should be quite prepared to give the information to the Honourable Member privately.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Is it a State secret, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Apparently it is a secret from me at the present moment. That is why I have no information.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Why do the P. and O. line agree to take an Indian cadet only on the Bombay-China line ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : My recollection is that the explanation given was that these were the only ships on which they had suitable accommodation, but I should really like notice of that question.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Sir, is it or is it not a fact that the Directors of the P. and O. Company in England have issued distinct orders which are in operation to-day that, so far as their Engineering Department is concerned, unless the officer is recruited in England, he is not permitted to rise to the highest rank of Chief Engineer of any of their steamers ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think that arises from my answer, Sir, but in any case I should have to ask for notice.

COMPULSORY EMPLOYMENT BY STEAMSHIP COMPANIES ENGAGED IN THE COASTING TRADE OF SUCCESSFUL AND SUITABLE CADETS OF THE TRAINING SHIP.

789. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state when they propose to give legislative effect to the recommendations of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee making it obligatory on the ships trading on the coast of India to give employment to the successful and suitable cadets of the training ship on their obtaining the necessary Board of Trade certificates of competency ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government do not consider that the need for such legislation has arisen.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Should the necessity arise, will the Government undertake such legislation ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government will then be prepared to consider the matter.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May we know the criterion by which it will be judged whether the necessity has arisen or not ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I should think the Honourable Member would probably draw the attention of the Government of India to the matter if he thought the necessity had arisen.

APPOINTMENT OF AN INDIAN HEADMASTER AND OTHER NON-TECHNICAL INDIAN STAFF TO THE PROPOSED TRAINING SHIP.

790. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken, in view of the fact that the technical staff will be European, to appoint an Indian Headmaster and other non-technical Indian staff to the proposed training ship ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The selection of the Headmaster and other superior staff for the training ship is at present under the consideration of the Government in consultation with the members of the governing body.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Government see that racial discrimination is not exercised against Indians in connection with these appointments ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think there can be any question of racial discrimination arising in this matter. The sole question will be what is in the best interest of the training of the boys, especially when the training ship first starts.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Is it a fact, Sir, that Mr. Sayer has recommended a European as Headmaster for the training ship though there are plenty of more than eligible Indians available for the post ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I could not admit the assumption in the last words of the question. I do not think it is advisable that I should say more at present in this matter when it is under discussion.

EMPLOYMENT BY BRITISH SHIPOWNERS OF SUCCESSFUL CADETS OF THE TRAINING SHIP.

791. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have received any representation from the British shipowners trading with India to the effect that they were not prepared to give employment to the successful cadets of the training ship obtaining their certificates of competency ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state if they propose to arrange with such shipowners for giving employment as officers to the successful cadets of the training ship ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What steps do Government propose to take against shipowners not willing to take Indian cadets trained already ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think the Government will wait till that contingency arises before they decide what they will do.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that the contingency has already arisen ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that British ships or foreign ships plying on the Indian coast should be compelled to give facilities to Indian cadets ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think I have already answered that question, Sir, in one of the questions put by my Honourable friend Mr. Haji.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Have they given effect to the evidence I gave in that connection supported by many other witnesses ?

PREMIUM INCOME OF INSURANCE COMPANIES DOING BUSINESS IN INDIA.

792 Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to give particulars of the total amount of premium earned respectively by (a) the Life Department, (b) the Fire Department, and (c) the Marine Department of the Indian, the British and the other non-Indian Insurance Companies working in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The total amount of life assurance premium income last year of the Indian Companies exceeded 2½ crores. The total life assurance premium income of the Indian branches of British Companies in the same period is estimated to have been under 1 crore.

Government has no information of the corresponding amount received by other non-Indian insurance companies working in India.

(b) and (c). Government has no information regarding the fire and marine premium income in India of any of the insurance companies.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, the Government receive, I presume, income-tax upon foreign companies trading in India and receiving premium from Indian Insurance. Is that not so ? Do not the Government levy an income-tax from foreign companies trading in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think my Honourable friend the Finance Member is the proper person to answer that question.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the importance of the figures asked for in my question, will the Honourable the Commerce Member find out at a later stage the figures from the Department concerned and supply them to the House ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The income-tax figures ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : No : the figures of premia earned by non-Indian insurance companies. May I suggest that the question arises like this.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member will proceed to the next question.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the fact, Sir, that income-tax can be levied.....

Mr. President : The next question on the list.

AMOUNT OF SEA SERVICE REQUIRED OF CANDIDATES APPOINTED TO THE BENGAL PILOT SERVICE IN ENGLAND AND INDIA.

793. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Are Government aware that while no particular period of service at sea has been laid down for the candidates recruited in England for entry into the Bengal Pilot Service, a period of sea service for 4 years in a merchant vessel employed in foreign trade as a seaman or apprentice has been made obligatory on candidates recruited in India for the Bengal Pilot Service ?

(b) Are Government aware that some of the cadets from the " Conway " and the " Worcester " have received a direct entry into the Bengal Pilot Service without possessing any sea experience ?

(c) If the answer to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the grounds of such a differential treatment ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) Some relaxation of the requirements in respect of sea service was necessary during the War owing to the absence of candidates who possessed that qualification. Apart from this, so far as the Government of India are aware, no cadets from the " Conway " or " Worcester " have been received direct into the Bengal Pilot Service without possessing any sea service, but enquiries are being made and the Honourable Member will be informed of the result in due course.

(c) The differentiation of the rules as regards sea service is due to the fact that there has hitherto been no training ship in Indian waters, and a longer period of sea service has consequently been necessary for persons recruited in India. Government has under consideration the amendment of the rules so as to place cadets from the " Dufferin ", which will shortly be ready as a training ship in Bombay, on the same footing in respect of sea service as cadets from the " Conway " or " Worcester ".

REMISSION OR REDUCTION OF THE CHARGES FOR THE USE OF ARCHÆOLOGICAL MATERIAL BY VARIOUS CLASSES OF STUDENTS.

794. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : 1. Will Government be pleased to state the general policy regarding the use for public and educational purposes by serious students in India like university professors, of the photographs, maps, plans, &c., made in or by the Archæological Department of the Government of India, of the finds or monuments in charge of that Department ?

2. (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any charge is levied for the use of any such material by (1) members of the Department of all ranks for purposes of illustrating their own publications, (2) by non-Indian students of research, (3) by Indian non-official students ; and if so (1) whether they have received any complaints from any quarters about the policy or heaviness of such a charge ; and (2) what are the principles on which Government fix those charges ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what was the income from such fees in the last financial year and what is estimated to be the income for the current year and whether in the interests of historical research they are prepared to dispense with those charges or substantially reduce them ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : 1. The policy of the Government is to make archæological photographs, plans and maps, accessible to students by reproducing those which are of interest in the Archaeological reports and memoirs. Students are also allowed to purchase photographs from the departmental collections.

2. (a) (1). Members of the Archæological Department are not allowed to publish any archaeological material whatever without the sanction of the Government of India. If such sanction is given, charges for the material are not levied.

2. (a) (2) and (3). The charges levied on non-Indian and Indian non-official students are the same :

(1) Complaints have been received by the Archaeological Department regarding the heaviness of the charge for photographhs required for publication.

(2) The charges are made on the principles.

(i) that the expenditure incurred on the production of the prints should be recouped ;

(ii) that in the interest of the photographic trade, it is not desirable that the Government should supply photographs gratis to the public.

(iii) that if such charges were not made, the demands for photographs would become excessive and it would not be possible for the Archæological Department to meet them. Neither staff nor funds are provided at present for this purpose, and the Archæological Department has experienced difficulty in executing the orders placed.

(b) The income from such fees during the last financial year was Rs. 1,996-9-8 ; the estimated income for the current financial year is Rs. 2,000. It is not possible to remit or reduce the ordinary charges for photographic prints. The Government will, however, consider the question of remission of the extra charge for photographs required for publication in the case of books of scientific or educational value by authoritative writers.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, with reference to the Honourable Member's reply to part (2) of question No. 794, may I inquire, in the case of Government officials who receive free use of the photographs, plates and the rest, who receives the royalty or profit from such publications ? Is it credited to the Government or is it appropriated by the author himself ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : If the officers are allowed to publish their books with the previous sanction of the Government, the remuneration, with the previous sanction of the Government, is received by the officers themselves.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : That is a repetition of the answer given by the Honourable Member. The point I wish to make is, when Government give previous sanction for the publication of a book, and supplies the officers with plates and other plans from the Archæological Department free of charge, who receives the profits from the book ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The profits of the book are received by the officers concerned.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The point is that Government partially meets the expenses of the publication of the book, and the profits go to the author.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The only distinction is that in the case of non-officials, they have to pay fees for photographs for publication, which range from Rs. 5 to Rs. 10, whereas in the case of officers of the Archæological Department, those fees are not levied ; and here, if my Honourable friend will look at the concluding portion of the answer I gave, he will find that the question of remitting similar fees for publication from non-official writers of distinction is now under the consideration of the Government, in which case they will be put on exactly the same footing as the officers of the Department.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is the permission given by the Government or by the Director of Archæology ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : By the Government, Sir.

NUMBER OF ASSISTANT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENTS ON THE STATE RAILWAYS, ETC.

795. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) What is the number of Assistant Traffic Superintendents (now called Assistant Transportation Officers) on the Indian State Railways ?

(b) How many of them are Hindus, Muhammadans, Sikhs, Indian Christians and Anglo-Indians ?

(c) How many of them, appointed by nomination before the recent competitive examination, are not graduates of any University ?

(d) Is it true that some time after 1921 or so a " Local Traffic " branch of this service on a provincial scale was started and six or seven Indian graduates were recruited on this basis with a promise of early promotion to the Imperial Service ?

(e) Is it true that :

(i) one of them, on confirmation, was drafted to the Imperial Service ;

(ii) in 1925 the Railway Board advertised two posts on the Local Traffic side and one in the Imperial grade for competitive examination but admitted all the three successful candidates to the latter grade ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The information can be obtained from the Railway Board's Classified List, a copy of which is in the Library.

(c) Out of the officers recruited by the Railway Board by nomination 9 are not graduates.

(d) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative, to the latter part in the negative.

(e), (i) and (ii). Yes.

DISSATISFACTION OF LOCAL TRAFFIC SERVICE OFFICERS WITH THEIR POSITION AND PROSPECTS.

796. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it true that the starting pay and annual increment of the Local Traffic men mentioned in the preceding question is much smaller than those of E. A. Cs., Sub-Judges, Income-tax Officers and several other provincial services ; and even of some Railway Station Superintendents, Inspectors and Station Masters ?

(b) Is it a fact that the said Local Traffic Service men have to perform the same duties, bear the same official designation and keep up the same position as their Imperial Service colleagues ?

(c) Are Government aware that the emoluments of these Local Traffic Service men are not sufficient for keeping up their position ?

(d) Is it a fact that there is great discontent among these officers on account of the above facts ?

(e) Is it true that a proposal for abolition of the said " two year " Local Traffic Service and Imperialisation of the said Local Traffic men has long been in the air and under consideration of the Railway Board ?

(f) If the answer to part (e) is in the affirmative, when is the Government going to give practical effect to this proposal ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The pay of officers of the Local Traffic Service is Rs. 250 rising by Rs. 20 to Rs. 750, which, I believe, is the same as in some of the provincial services. Station Superintendents, Inspectors of Traffic and Station Masters who are recruited by promotion from lower ranks sometimes draw a higher starting pay than Rs. 250.

(b) The Local Traffic Service officers generally perform the same duties as junior officers of Superior Service. On the North Western and East Indian Railways they have the same designation, on the Eastern Bengal Railway the designation is different. It is not incumbent on them to live in any particular style.

(c) No.

(d) to (f). Government believe that some of the Local Traffic Service officers are dissatisfied with their position and prospects and the question of abolishing the Service is under their consideration. They wish to settle it as quickly as they can but it involves intricate questions of the organisation of railway services as a whole and it must, therefore, take some time still to come to a decision.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Sir, will the Honourable Member please state if it is a fact that promoted subordinate officers in the Local Service on many occasions lose money by being promoted and at times receive less than they get in their substantive appointments ? I understand these Local Service officers are definitely worse off than in their substantive appointments.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Not to my knowledge, Sir.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Government then be pleased to state whether the continued entertainment of subordinate officers in the Local Service is a means of economising and getting good first class labour at cheap rates and at a far lower cost than the covenanted officials whose very duties they are performing at much lower rates ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir.

NOMINATIONS TO THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA SINCE 1922.

797. *Diwan Chaman Lall : (1) What is the number of Indians so far nominated to the I. C. S. in India since 1922 when the I. C. S. competitive examination was started in this country ?

(2) How many of them are Hindus, Muhammadans, Sikhs, Indian Christians, and Anglo-Indians and what is the nationality of each nominee, that is to say, whether British Indian subject or an Indian State subject ?

(3) In this principle of communal representation what matters are taken into consideration ?

(4) What is the population in India of Anglo-Indians, Indian Christians and Sikhs respectively and how many of each have been so far nominated to the I. C. S. since 1922 ?

(5) Is it true that the Government have reserved this year seven posts to be given by nomination ?

(6) Is it true that the rule hitherto has been to take the said I. C. S annual nominees from amongst the candidates who had sat in that examination ? Has any departure from it taken place hitherto ? If so, in how many cases out of the total number and why ?

(7) Are Government prepared to observe this year the rule referred to in part (6) ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to Sardar Kartar Singh's question No. 608 on the same subject.

DEMOBILISATION WITHOUT GRATUITY OR COMPENSATION OF INDIAN TEMPORARY INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE OFFICERS IN 1926.

798. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that the Government demobilised about 23 Indian temporary I. M. S. officers in 1926 (about the month of September) and that most of these had served the military for more than ten years (9 to 12 years) ?

(b) How is it that they were retained for such a long time (9 to 12 years) and then were not confirmed (barring those who were above 45) ?

(c) Is it a fact that these officers had taken part in the Great War and other field operations (Waziristan, Mesopotamia, Persia, Kurdistan. Egypt and France) ?

(d) Is it a fact that these demobilised officers were neither given gratuity (at the end of their service because of their serving under A. I. I. 284 of 1922) nor pension nor any recompense nor were provided with any jobs ?

(e) Could the Government give an example of similar treatment to the officers of any other branch of the service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) Under the terms of their service, these officers renew their contracts from year to year. No promise of permanent employment is given them ; and permanent commissions in the Indian Medical Service can only be given as vacancies are opened. None of the officers whose contracts were terminated in 1926 was selected for a permanent commission.

(c) Yes, some of them.

(d) These officers were not demobilized : their contracts were merely terminated. None of the concessions mentioned in this part of the question is included in their terms of contract.

(e) I am not aware of any other service in which temporary officers are recruited on yearly contract terms.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it not a fact that while these temporary Indian officers are turned out after long service, new temporary Indian officers are at the same time recruited to take their place ?

Mr. G. M. Young : If my Honourable friend will wait for the next question, he will get an answer to that.

TERMINATION OF CONTRACTS OF TEMPORARY INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE AFT R 9 YEARS SERVICE.

799. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that the Government is demobilising every year temporary I. M. S. officers (Indians) who have completed 9 years and is recruiting Indians in their place ? Why are these officers being demobilised and new ones taken in their place ?

(b) How is it that these officers are fit to be retained in the military for 9 years but unfit to be taken into the permanent cadre of the service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) As I explained in the statement which I made in this House on the 29th August, instructions are in force under which the contracts of temporary Indian officers of the I. M. S. are terminated when they complete 9 years' service. I also explained on that occasion that this question would be re-examined.

(b) Generally speaking, the efficiency and qualifications required of a temporary officer are considerably lower than those required of a permanent commissioned officer.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Sir, are the duties performed by these temporary and permanent commissioned officers alike ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes, Sir.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Then why retain presumably inefficient officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : We retain them in their own interests. We had to recruit them at a time when we could not get others. It would be hard on them to get rid of them merely because they are less efficient than the officers whom we can now obtain.

SCALES OF PAY OF TEMPORARY INDIAN AND BRITISH I. M. S. OFFICERS.

800. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Are Government aware that the Indian temporary I. M. S. officers are on different scales of pay from those British temporary I. M. S. officers who get the same pay and allowances as European regular I. M. S. officers (on promotion to captaincy) ? If the answer be in the affirmative would the Government throw some light why there is such a differentiation between the two ?

(b) Is it a fact that temporary I. M. S. officers (Indians) start with Rs. 500 as Lieutenants (Europeans on Rs. 700 as Lieut.) (A. I. I. Appendix 284 of 1922) and on promotion to captaincy draw Rs. 650 after which their pay becomes stationary even if they remain in service for 9 years or more ?

(c) Is it a fact that the European temporary I. M. S. officer starts with Rs. 700 as Lieutenant and on promotion to captaincy draws the same pay as regular European I. M. S. officers ?

(d) Is it a fact that there is only one European temporary I. M. S. officer and that for him alone even Government have got a different scale of pay and allowance ?

Rank.	Basic pay.	Oversea allowance. If drawn in sterling.	Oversea allowance. If drawn in Rs.	Service.
Lieutenant	500	Nil.	150	1
			150	2
			150	3
Captain during first three years .	650	..	150	4
		15£	150	5
		15£	150	6
With more than three less than six .	750	25£	250	7
		25£	250	8
		25£	250	9
With more than six as a captain	850	25£	250	10
		25£	250	11
		30£	300	12

A. I. I. 401 of 1925.

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer is in the negative. There is only one class of temporary I. M. S. officers, which is the class recruited on annually renewable contracts. This class is open to Europeans as well as Indians, and some British temporary officers have been appointed in the past.

(b) The answer is in the affirmative, except that there is no difference between the pay of European and Indian temporary officers recruited on these terms.

(c) No, Sir ; the European temporary I. M. S. officers draw exactly the same scale of pay and allowances as temporary Indian I. M. S. officers under the same contract.

(d) I believe there is no European temporary officer now left who was recruited on the annual contract terms. There is one European officer who was recruited by the Secretary of State on special terms in 1920. He will be demobilised in about February 1928.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : In view of the fact that Government are recruiting temporary I. M. S. officers on short period contracts giving them as much as Rs. 36,000 a year, have the Government considered the scale of pay paid by the other Colonies, shipping companies, like the P. and O. and the British Indian Steam Navigation Company, and the tea companies who employ European qualified officers on much smaller salaries ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I must ask for notice of that question

RATE AT WHICH OVERSEAS ALLOWANCE AND SOME OTHER STAFF ALLOWANCES ARE CONVERTIBLE INTO STERLING.

801. Diwan Chaman Lall : How is it that the overseas allowance and some other staff allowances are convertible into sterling at the rate of Rs. 10 to a £ while the official rate is different ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Overseas pay is convertible into sterling at the rate of Rs. 10 to the £, as recommended by the Lee Commission. So far as I am aware, no other allowances are converted at this rate.

OUTFIT ALLOWANCE OF TEMPORARY I. M. S. OFFICERS.

802. Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that Indians when granted temporary commissions in the I. M. S. are given Rs. 600 as outfit allowance and that Europeans (temporary included) got or get 50£ which was equivalent to Rs. 750 before and Rs. 675 now ? Why is there such a differentiation ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Temporary commissioned officers of the I. M. S. are given Rs. 600 as outfit allowance. Any European officer engaged on these temporary terms gets the same amount of outfit allowance.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I take it that the European recruit to the temporary service does not get £50 ?

Mr G. M. Young : Not the temporary officer. As I have already explained, we have none of these European temporary officers left.

STATUS OF A TEMPORARY OFFICER IN THE I. M. S. IN RELATION TO A PERMANENT OFFICER OF THE SAME RANK.

803. Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that a regular I. M. S. officer is always senior to a temporary I. M. S. officer when holding the same rank though the temporary I. M. S. officer has got much more service, say, for example, a temporary I. M. S. Captain with 6 to 8 years' service (3 to 5 years as Captain) is junior to a regular the day he gets his captaincy (which he does after 3 years as Lieutenant). Why is it so ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes, Sir, this is in accordance with Regulations. A temporary officer's status is not equal to that of a permanent officer of the same rank.

STRENGTH OF THE I. M. S. ON THE 1ST APRIL 1927.

804. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Government state whether the strength of the I. M. S. on 1st April 1927 (as given in Army List) was as follows (if incorrect could the Government give me the correct figures) ?

Total permanent I. M. S. officers	620
Permanent I. M. S. officers employed in civil ..	378
Permanent I. M. S. officers employed in military ..	242
Temporary I. M. S. officers employed in military ..	137

Mr. G. M. Young : The figures quoted by the Honourable Member may be taken as approximately correct.

GRANT TO INDIANS OF PERMANENT COMMISSIONS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

805. *Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Could the Government state the number of permanent commissions granted in the Indian Medical Service in the last 5 years :

(1) to Indians with Indian qualifications,

(2) to Indians with European qualifications ?

(b) How is it that so many Indians are being taken into the temporary cadre and why cannot the Government fill the vacancies by giving more permanent commissions to Indians instead of demobilising old temporary I. M. S. officers and recruiting new ones in their place ?

(c) Is it a fact that so few commissions in the I. M. S. are given to Indians with Indian qualifications while they constitute nearly ⅞ths of the temporary cadre ? If so, what is the reason ?

(d) If the Indians with Indian qualifications are considered below standard why are they retained for 9 years (the limit up to which temporary officers can serve) ?

(e) Is it not a fact that these temporary I. M. S. officers are reported on yearly (confidential reports) by the various commanding officers as to their fitness to hold King's commissions and for retention in service ? If such is the case how do these officers become useless to the military after 9 years ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) (1) 12.

(2) 15.

(b) Under the orders of the Secretary of State, recruitment for the permanent cadre must be in the proportion of one Indian to two Europeans ; consequently the grant of permanent commissions to Indians is limited by the rate of European recruitment in England. That is the reason why the system of temporary contracts has to be continued.

(c) The proportion of Indians, with Indian qualifications only, appointed to permanent commissions in the I. M. S. during the last five years, is, as appears from the answer given to part (a) of this question, 44 per cent. Generally speaking, from the professional point of view, medical qualifications obtainable in the United Kingdom are rated higher than those obtainable in India.

(d) I have already replied to this in my answer to parts (a) and (b) of question No. 799.

(e) Annual confidential reports are submitted on these officers as on all other officers in the army. Those who are favourably reported on have always had their contracts renewed annually, up to the 9 years at any rate. Those who are unfavourably reported on have sometimes had their contracts renewed in spite of that fact.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member why Government will not restart the competitive examination for the I. M. S. ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I must ask for notice of that.

That is a very big question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that Government have made no distinction between officers against whom there were unfavourable reports and officers in whose favour there were good reports when they turned out the Indian temporary officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I presume my Honourable friend is referring to officers whose contracts were terminated at the end of 9 years' service ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Yes.

Mr. G. M. Young : They all went except those who were selected for permanent commissions.

SHORT SERVICE COMMISSIONS FOR EUROPEANS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

806. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that the Government advertised short service commissions for Europeans in the I. M. S. Department on the basis of 5 and 12 years service ?

If so could the Government lay on the table a statement showing separately

(i) number of Europeans granted short service commissions for 5 years ?

(ii) number of Europeans granted short service commissions for 12 years ?

(b) Is it a fact that these Europeans who are (or had to be) granted short service commissions in the I. M. S. are (or were) to be treated just like regular I. M. S. European officers as far as pay and allowances are concerned ?

(c) Is it a fact that on completion of 5 years and 12 years service (in case they like or liked to be demobilised) they are given (or were offered) gratuities of £1,000 and £2,400 respectively, i.e., £200 per annum ?

(d) How is it that Europeans granted short service commissions in the I. M. S. could be given such a handsome gratuity while the temporary Indian I. M. S. officers who have served and usually serve the military for 9 years or more do not get any gratuity ?

(e) Is it a fact that the short service commissioned (European) officers in the I. M. S. get the same privileges as far as leave (privilege, furlough and study leave) is concerned as the permanent ones ?

(f) If such be the case why are not the same privileges extended to Indian temporary I. M. S. officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). My Honourable friend is clearly alluding to the special recruitment terms offered to permanent candidates for the I. M. S. These officers are permanent commissioned officers, and are selected on exactly the same terms and qualifications as permanent officers in the past, but have in addition the option of retiring on a gratuity at the end of 6 or 12 years, instead of serving on for pension. I find that this option of retiring after 6 or 12 years with a gratuity is exercisable by Indians appointed to the permanent service equally with Europeans under the most recent terms of recruitment, i.e., those of 1926. The gratuity terms of 1922-23 were not extended to Indians.

The number of European officers who may retire after 5 years, i.e., under the terms of 1922-23, is 41 ; and the number of those who may retire after 6 or 12 years so far is 23.

(c) Yes, except that the figures are £1,000 after 6 years' service and £2,500 after 12 years' service.

(d) It is a question of the terms of contract. Officers who serve with temporary commissions renewable at their option from year to year are not offered gratuity or pension. Officers who serve with permanent commissions are offered gratuity if they do not serve on for pension.

(e) As I have already stated, the officers recruited on these special recruitment terms are permanent officers, and they receive exactly the same terms and conditions of service as permanent officers.

(f) I think I have now sufficiently explained, Sir, the difference in the conditions of service and qualifications between officers recruited on annual contracts and those recruited to the permanent service.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member state why Government refuse the same gratuity to the temporary recruited officer even after such a long period of service of 9 years ? Do Government consider this fair and equitable when compared with the generous gratuity given to I. M. S. officers recruited in England ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I did not catch the second question that my Honourable friend put. The reply to the first question is that gratuity is not included in the terms of the contract accepted by these officers, and that one of them has even asked for it.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not for the Government to see that there is no discrimination in this matter ?

Mr. G. M. Young : If my Honourable friend means racial discrimination, there is none.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that gratuity is given to European temporary officers recruited in England and not to Indian temporary recruited officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : European officers granted permanent commissions in the I. M. S. have now the option of retiring with gratuity instead of serving on for pension, and Indian officers have exactly the same option.

SCALES OF PAY OF TEMPORARY BRITISH AND INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

807. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that temporary Indian I. M. S. officers are on a different scale of pay from those of temporary British I. M. S. officers (whose services are renewed yearly). If so, why ?

(b) Is it a fact that British temporary I. M. S. officers get the same pay and three yearly increment as the permanent I. M. S. officers ? If so, why is this not the case with temporary Indian I. M. S. officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) The answer to the first part of this question is in the negative. The second part does not, therefore, arise.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member to give us a clear indication as to whether it is not a fact that temporary Indian I. M. S. officers are on a different scale of pay from temporary British I. M. S. officers whose services are renewed from year to year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already explained in my answer to a previous question that there are no temporary British I. M. S. officers left on these annual contract terms. There is one whose terms are special to himself. He was recruited by the Secretary of State in 1920 and is now serving in Iraq. He will be demobilised next February.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is that officer in Iraq, who was engaged as a temporary officer in the I. M. S., drawing the same salary as a permanent British recruited I. M. S. officer ? Has he or has he not applied for his gratuity and is not that application to-day before the Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I believe all those facts are correct.

OFFER OF SHORT SERVICE COMMISSIONS TO INDIANS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE

808. Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that the Government of India have granted short service commissions in the I. M. S. for periods of six or twelve years to Britishers ? If so, why are such short service commissions not offered to Indians ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have given the answer to this question in my answers to the previous questions.

APPLICATION OF THE ORDERS REGARDING EXAMINATION AND STUDY LEAVE TO ENGLAND AND FREE PASSAGES, ETC., TO TEMPORARY OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

809. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the orders, regarding the examination and study leave to England, and free passage, etc., recently issued by the Secretary of State and which re-appeared in the Tribune of 23rd April 1927, page 5, apply to temporary I.M.S. officers ; if not, why ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, because the conditions of service accepted by temporary officers on annual contracts do not include these concessions. It is not considered desirable to offer these concessions to officers who have the option of terminating their contracts every year.

REPLACEMENT OF A PROPORTION OF THE BRITISH MILITARY STAFF OF STOREHOLDERS BY CIVILIAN STAFF.

810. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will the Government please state as to what has so far been done to confirm the scheme of civilianization of the I. A. O. C., introduced in 1924 in accordance with the Inchcape Committee's recommendations and by which 20 candidates were entertained as Assistant Storeholders on probation for one year, subsequently extended to two years and which period expired on 31st October 1926 ?

(b) If nothing has yet been decided, will the Government please state the reasons which have been the cause of delay in arriving at a definite decision ?

(c) Do the Government intend to drop this scheme and substitute for it the scheme of " Godown Keepers " at present under trial in Ferozepore and Kirkee Arsenal in accordance with the Sturrock Committee's recommendations and if so, will the Government please state as to how far it will be a step towards the civilianization of the Corps and whether or not these " Godown Keepers " will be employed in the same capacity and on similar terms as the British military staff is at present employed ?

(d) If answer to the latter part of (c) is in the negative will the Government please state how do they intend to carry out the Inchcape Committee's recommendations, viz., the civilianization of the various departments under the Army Department, especially the I. A. O. C. ?

(e) If the answer to the first part of (c) is in the affirmative and to the latter part in the negative, will the Government please state what appointments, if any, do they intend to offer candidates who would become unemployed on account of the withdrawal of this scheme, and have in several cases become over age for entry into any other Government service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply I gave in this House to starred question No. 476 on February 18th, 1927.

(b) and (c). It has been decided to continue the scheme, but Government are considering modifications in the method of recruitment so as to secure candidates of a better educated class by suitable terms of pay, promotion and pension. The scheme has no connection with the scheme of " Godown Keepers " recommended by the Sturrock Committee. The proposals to which this answer refers aim at the replacement of a proportion of the British military staff of Storeholders by civilian staff. The proposals of the Sturrock Committee are intended to improve the existing class of Indian " Storemen " or " Godown Keepers ". Civilian " Storeholders " will be employed in the same capacity, though not precisely on the same terms, as military " Storeholders ".

(d) Does not arise.

(e) The scheme is not being withdrawn, but candidates who are not up to the requisite standard of " Storeholders " will, if they are suitable, be offered employment in the clerical cadres of the Indian Army Ordnance Corps.

WITHHOLDING OF THE PAYMENT OF GRATUITY TO INDER SAIN, A CIVILIAN OVERSEER RETRENCHED FROM THE MILITARY GRASS FARM, 4TH CIRCLE, QUETTA.

811. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that a certain civilian Indian overseer, Inder Sain, was retrenched from the Military Grass Farm, 4th Circle, Quetta, in September 1924 ?

(b) Is it a fact that many persons junior to said Inder Sain were allowed to remain in service ? Was there anything special against him which impelled the Government to mark him out for dispensing with his services ?

(c) Is it a fact that he was promised the payment of the gratuity for his temporary service from 1st April 1907 to 20th August 1915 only if his services for this period were verified according to rules ?

(d) Is it not a fact that his services were verified according to the rules and the verification was considered correct by the authorities ?

(e) Is it a fact that despite the admission of this correct verification, the payment of the gratuity for his temporary service has been withheld without assigning any reason ?

(f) Is it a fact that despite his repeated demands for the reasons that obliged the authorities to withhold his gratuity, he has not been supplied with them ?

(g) Will the Government now lay on the table the correspondence that took place between the A. C. G. F., 4th Circle, Quetta, and the Director of Military Grass Farms, Simla, regarding the withholding of the payment of gratuity to the said Inder Sain for his temporary services ?

(h) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of cancelling orders dispensing with his services and in any case of reconsidering their decision of withholding the payment of gratuity ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. As to the second part, the clerk was selected for retrenchment because he was held to be one of the most inefficient in the department.

(c) No, Sir, no promise was made. He was told that if his temporary service was approved, and his claim established the gratuity would be paid. Civilian Indian overseers were allowed under the rules to count for gratuity all services rendered by them in the Military Grass Farms subject to the proviso that the concession was not claimable as a right, but depended upon whether their services were reported as satisfactory or not.

(d) Yes, Sir.

(e) and (f). No. Sir. The reason was that the officers' services were not considered satisfactory : and he was so informed.

(g) and (h). The answer is in the negative.

Inclusion of the Expenditure on Electrical and Sanitary Installations in the Capital Cost of Residential Quarters for Government Servants.

812. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if the expenditure incurred on electric installations and sanitary installations is included in the capital cost of residential quarters for Government servants ?

(b) If so, whether rents are calculated on the capital cost of the building, less installation charges ?

(c) If the answer at (a) is in the affirmative are the Government aware that an extra installation tax is being levied on a certain class of Government officials whose condition of service entitle them to furnished rent free quarters ? What is the reason for this ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if all classes of Government servants receive equal treatment in so far as residential quarters are provided and is it a fact that a certain class of Government servants are exempt from payment of rental on capital cost on account of sanitary and electric installation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Under the provisions of paragraphs 328-330 of the Public Works Department Code, and Rule 45 of the Fundamental Rules, as it stood before the recent revision, the expenditure on electric and sanitary installations was not included in the capital cost of Government residential buildings, and the tenants (unless specially exempted by the Local Government in particular cases) had to pay adequate rent on the outlay incurred on such installations, in addition to the rent payable for the residences.

In accordance, however, with the revised Fundamental Rule 45 to which the Secretary of State's sanction was received a few days ago, the expenditure incurred on electric and sanitary installations is :

(i) included in the capital cost of Government residences occupied by officers of All-India and Central Services, who are entitled to the benefit of the rent concessions sanctioned on the recommendation of the Lee Commission, and (ii) excluded from the capital cost of Government residences occupied by other officers.

In the former cases, rents have to be calculated on the total capital cost of the residences, including the installations referred to, and are subject to the maximum limit of 6 per cent. per annum of such capital cost. In the latter cases, rents have to be calculated separately on the outlay incurred on the special services, and are payable in addition to the rents of the residences.

(c) Government do not recognise the necessity for providing these special services in all Government residences. Under paragraph 328 of the Public Works Department Code, Local Governments were authorised to sanction the provision of sanitary and electric installations in Government buildings (including those occupied by Government servants entitled to residences free of ordinary rent) provided that there was no doubt that the full prescribed rent on the outlay incurred on such installations could be continuously recovered. Local Governments were, however, empowered to sanction the entire or partial remission of rent for these extra services in very special circumstances.

The revised Fundamental Rule 45 now sanctioned by the Secretary of State also provides that Local Governments may make rules authorising, in very special circumstances and for reasons which should be recorded, the remission or reduction of the rents for the special services in residences occupied by those Government servants who are ordinarly required to pay such rents in full, in addition to the rents of the residences.

POLICY OF GOVERNMENT IN REGARD TO THE INDIANISATION OF THE IMPERIAL SECRETARIAT SERVICE.

813. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state their policy regarding the Indianisation of the Imperial Secretariat Service ?

(b) Are the Government aware that in certain departments of the Government of India there is still a growing tendency to appoint Europeans or Anglo-Indians in the grades of Assistants, Superintendents and Assistant Secretaries in preference to Indians in spite of the latter being senior in service ?

(c) If the reply to (b) above be in the affirmative, what steps do Government propose to take in the matter ? If the reply is in the negative, are Government prepared to enquire into the grievances of the men affected ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No question arises of a policy of Indianisation so far as the Imperial Secretariat Service is concerned, because the Service is already composed almost entirely of Indians and statutory natives of India.

(b) No, Sir.

(c) No such grievance has been brought to my notice.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that a practice has recently been started under which Anglo-Indian clerks when newly appointed are posted above the lowest grade ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware of any such practice.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member inquire ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I should be perfectly willing to inquire if any specific grievance of that character were brought to my notice.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member kindly look at the proceedings of this House of the last winter Session ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As I have already said, I am prepared to inquire into any specific grievance, but no case has come to my notice.

PROMOTION OF UNPASSED MEN TO THE UPPER DIVISION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

814. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that in some offices of the Government of India men are promoted from a lower to the Upper Division subject to passing the requisite test, while in other offices men who have passed the Upper Division test are awaiting their chances of promotion from year to year ?

(b) If the reply to (a) above be in the affirmative are the Government prepared to take steps to arrange for the inter transfers of men between different departments of the Government of India Secretariat ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) It is no doubt the fact that promotion, which depends on actual vacancies, is more rapid in some offices than in others at particular times, but cases in which men are conditionally promoted in anticipation of passing the test must be rare.

(b) It is open to a clerk who is dissatisfied with his position in his own department to apply for employment for which he is qualified in another department. Government do not propose to take any further steps in the matter.

GRANT OF COMPENSATORY ALLOWANCES TO OFFICIALS OF THE POST OFFICE EMPLOYED IN UNHEALTHY LOCALITIES IN THE MADRAS CIRCLE.

815. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the rates of compensatory allowances sanctioned for postal officials of the clerical cadre in the specially unhealthy localities of Wynaads and the Anaimalais in the Madras Circle are the same as those sanctioned for such officials stationed in the healthy localities on the Nilgiris ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Madras Government have sanctioned higher rates of compensatory allowances for their subordinates stationed in the unhealthy localities than those paid for the Post Office officials ?

(c) Are the Government prepared to sanction compensatory allowances to Post Office officials in unhealthy localities on a par with the Local Government rates ? If so, when ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (b) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to the replies given on the 25th August, last to parts (a), (b) and (c) of Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi's question No. 456.

NUMBER OF OFFICIALS ADVERSELY AFFECTED BY THE 50 PER CENT. LIMIT AMONG THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE SORTERS, ETC.

816. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of officials affected adversely by the 50 per cent. limit :

(1) division by division among the Railway Mail Service sorters,

(2) among the Dead Letter Office clerks,

(3) among sorters of the Calcutta Railway Mail Service, and

(4) among postal clerks stationed in the Bombay city ?

(b) Is it a fact that the percentage of sorters in the Railway Mail Service, and clerks of the Dead Letter Offices and the Calcutta Railway Mail Service adversely affected by the 5 0per cent. limit is higher than in the Post Office ?

(c) Is it not a fact that there was a general revision of pay of Post Office clerks in February 1920 ?

(d) Is it not a fact that for want of a similar revision of pay in the Railway Mail Service and Dead Letter Offices, the average pay of sorters and clerks was much lower than that of the clerks in the Post Office ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state whether for the above cause a large percentage of men were adversely affected by the 50 per cent. limit in the Railway Mail Service and Dead Letter Offices ?

(f) Do the Government propose to consider the question of relaxing the 50 per cent. limit in the case of the Railway Mail Service, the Calcutta Railway Mail Service and the Dead Letter Offices ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). The Government of India do not possess the information, nor do they propose to call for it, as its compilation from the old records of a large number of offices would entail an expenditure of labour and money wholly incommensurate with the public advantage to be gained therefrom. The Honourable Member is no doubt aware that the 50 per cent. limit referred to by him was applied in connection with a scheme of revision of pay which was introduced in 1920 with effect from 1st December, 1919.

(c) Yes.

(d) The answer is in the negative. According to the tables given in the Report of the Postal Committee of 1920, the average monthly pay of Railway Mail Service sorters and Dead Letter Office clerks, on Rs. 100 and less, in 1920 was about Rs. 47 and Rs. 49 respectively against Rs. 49 for postal clerks of the same category after the revision referred to in (c). There was a revision of pay of Railway Mail Service sorters in 1919.

(e) Government have no precise information on the point whether a larger percentage of men in the Railway Mail Service and Dead Letter Office were adversely affected than in the rest of the Post Office by the operation of the 50 per cent. limit applied in connection with the scheme of revision of pay on the time-scale basis sanctioned in 1920. But even if the fact is as stated by the Honourable Member, it is obvious from the answer to (d) that the reason is not as has been assumed by him.

(f) The answer is in the negative.

LEAVE OF INFERIOR SERVANTS OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

817. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that under the Fundamental Rules introduced by the Secretary of State for India with effect from the 1st January 1922, servants of the Central Government in inferior service were entitled to the same leave concessions as those in the superior service ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Government of India in the year 1923 restricted this concession on grounds of expenditure in such a way that extra expenditure to the State should not be more than half the minimum pay of the appointment the absentee holds ?

(c) Is it a fact that even the restricted concession was subject to the discretion of the authority sanctioning the leave ?

LEAVE OF INFERIOR SERVANTS OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

818. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Government be pleased to state if they have framed any rules according to which the sanctioning authority is to sanction leave allowances to inferior servants availing themselves of leave ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I propose to reply to the Honourable Member's questions Nos. 817 and 818 together.

12 NOON. The Honourable Member is not quite right in saying that under the Fundamental Rules servants of the Central Government in inferior service are entitled to the same leave concessions as those in the superior service. Fundamental Rule 2 confers powers on the Government of India to make rules subject to certain restrictions, modifying or replacing any of the fundamental rules, in relation to services under their administrative control other than all-India Services. Having regard to the nature of the duties performed by Government servants in the inferior grades as compared with those performed by the superior services, the Government of India, in exercise of their power under Fundamental Rule 2, have sanctioned less liberal leave terms for their inferior servants.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it not a fact that the inferior services perform more arduous work than the superior services ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I know my own work is arduous. I do not know about theirs.

COUNTING FOR INCREMENTS OF PERIODS OF SERVICE SPENT ON LEAVE WITHOUT PAY.

819. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that periods of service spent on leave without pay do not count for increments ?

(b) Does this apply to inferior servants ?

(c) Has the Auditor General ruled that even though inferior servants do not get allowances while on leave the nomenclature of the leave should be according to the kind of leave they are eligible for ?

(d) Has the ruling of the Auditor General been acted upon by the authorities sanctioning leave and permitting increments ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Deputy Accountant-General of Posts and Telegraphs, Madras, remarked in his inspection for 1925 that the ruling of the Auditor General has not been acted upon ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) No, but under Fundamental Rule 26 extraordinary leave, that is to say, leave without pay granted when other leave is not due does not ordinarily count for increments.

(b) and (c). The answer is in the affirmative.

(d) The Government have no information to the contrary.

(e) Enquiry will be made in regard to part (e).

EXPENDITURE ON NEW OFFICES, BARRACKS AND HOUSES FOR THE ARMY.

820. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Government be pleased to state the amount of money spent by the Army Headquarters since 1920 on new offices, barracks and houses for the Army ?

(b) Was this money spent in the ordinary course of normal wear and tear of buildings or for any other purpose ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The total amount spent by the Military Engineering Services from 1920 to 1926 was about 28 crores. The figures for 1926-27 are not yet available.

(b) The money was spent on the erection, repair, reconstruction and improvement of military buildings of all kinds, on electrification and water supplies and on the provision of better roads and bridges. It has not been possible in the time at my disposal to separate this total from the expenditure on the particular items mentioned by the Honourable Member, nor am I quite sure what information exactly he requires. If he would kindly give me further particulars, I will endeavour to answer his question more fully.

NUMBER OF HINDUS AND MUHAMMADANS EMPLOYED IN THE LOWER CLERICAL GRADE OF THE PUNJAB POSTAL DEPARTMENT SINCE THE 1ST MARCH, 1927.

821. Diwan Chaman Lall : With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 972 on 16th March 1927, will the Government be pleased to state the number of Hindus and Muhammadans enrolled in the service of the Punjab Postal Department since 1st March 1927 in the lower clerical grades ? And what are their academical qualifications ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

PURCHASE OF STORES.

822. Diwan Chaman Lall : With reference to the answer given on 13th June 1927 to my starred question No. 414, dated the 15th February 1927, re purchase of stores, will the Government be pleased to state the full particulars of the 13 cases and the amounts involved in respect to the cases mentioned in the reply ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A statement giving the information is being supplied to the Honourable Member.

HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCE OF TELEGRAPH PEONS IN NEW DELHI.

823. Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that the telegraph peons at New Delhi are paid Rs. 2 per mensem as house rent since their arrival at Raisina, while the sanctioned rate is Rs. 2 to Rs. 8-8-0 per mensem ? If so, why, when the accommodation is inadequate ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : No. The sanctioned rate of house rent allowance for all telegraph peons in Delhi and New Delhi is Rs. 2 a month.

RE-EMPLOYMENT OF STRIKERS BY THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

824. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Are Government aware that since the North Western Railway strike of 1925, in spite of the promise held out by the Agent, North Western Railway, that the strikers will be provided for, no sooner vacancies occur, the strikers in spite of repeatedly applying for jobs have been refused the same on the plea that their services are not required even though the vacancies for which they applied did exist and were filled by either new men or by promoting junior hands ?

(b) Are Government also aware that a good number of senior drivers who went on strike are still out of work and their posts have been filled by promoting shunters as drivers. If so, do Government propose to ask the Agent, North Western Railway, to fulfill his words regarding the appointment of strikers in preference to outsiders and by stopping promotions to junior hands and issue clear instructions to Divisional officers to carry out his instructions strictly ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No promise in these terms was ever given by the Agent, North Western Railway, but in filling vacancies he is giving consideration to men who lost their posts in the strike and who have applied for re-employment. The Agent must, however, naturally exercise his discretion in individual cases.

(b) No case has yet come to the Agent's notice in which in filling vacancies new men have been taken on in preference to ex-strikers who were good and efficient employees and who applied for appointment.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Do I take it, Sir, that it is the policy of the Railway Board to give re-employment to those strikers if they happen to be efficient ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : So far as the North Western Railway is concerned, I can say that the action of the Agent is in accordance with the policy of the Railway Board.

LONG HOURS OF WORK OF THE CARRIAGE AND WAGON STAFF AT LYALLPUR AND SOME OTHER STATIONS OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

825. Diwan Chaman Lall : Are Government aware that the Carriage and Wagon staff at Lyallpur and some other stations of the North Western Railway is still performing 12 hours continuous duty against the conventions of the Geneva Conference accepted by the Government of India ? Do Government propose to see that the staff on the North Western Railway is not made to work more than 8 hours a day as per convention of the Geneva Conference ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to an identical question asked by Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally on the 24th of August 1926, and with regard to the action taken for the purpose of the Geneva Convention to the reply given to Mr. Joshi's question No. 150, on the 23rd August 1927.

DATE OF THE COMING INTO FORCE OF THE INDIAN TRADE UNIONS ACT.

826. Diwan Chaman Lall : Since the assent has been given by His Excellency the Viceroy to the Trade Unions Act, will the Government let the House know why its operation is being delayed and when do the Government propose to bring it into operation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Indian Trade Unions Act came into force on the 1st June 1927.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is aware that when applications are made in certain provinces for the registration of unions the office says they have no documents or forms with which to register these unions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am not aware of that. If that was my Honourable friend's point and he had put down that question on paper, I would by this time have made inquiries on the subject.

GRIEVANCES OF THE EUROPEAN GUARDS OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY STATIONED AT RAWALPINDI.

827. Diwan Chaman Lall : Are Government aware that the European guards at Rawalpindi submitted a memorial to the Agent, North Western Railway, which has not been attended to as yet ? When will the Agent, North Western Railway, go into the grievances of the memorialists ? Is it a fact that Mr. Barlow, guard, Rawalpindi, was transferred from Rawalpindi because he was considered to be the ringleader of the Rawalpindi guards in this case ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A memorial has been received and acknowledged by the Agent, North Western Railway, and the grievances are receiving attention. The reply to the last portion of the question is in the negative.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I take it, Sir, that it is not correct that Mr. Barlow, guard, was transferred from Rawalpindi because he was considered a ringleader in the strike ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I said the reply was in the negative.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Do I take it, the Railway Board are considering the memorial sent up by those European guards ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : So far as I am aware, we have not yet been consulted ; I shall have to ask for notice. I am not at all sure that the alleged grievances are not such as can be remedied by the Agent himself.

GRANT OF GRATUITIES BY THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY TO STRIKERS WHO OFFERED FOR DUTY AND WERE NOT RE-EMPLOYED.

828. Diwan Chaman Lall : Are Government aware that the North Western Railway strikers offered for duty and many of them were not taken back for want of vacancies and were discharged from service ; that such strikers who are under 15 years of service have been refused gratuity while the gratuity rules provide that it will be paid to men who are not wanted by the Railway ? Do Government intend to consider the question of paying gratuity to such employees as it was paid during retrenchment ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given to the question No. 219, dated the 27th August 1926 in identical terms asked by Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally.

SHADOWING OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY AND INTERCEPTION AND CENSORSHIP OF THEIR CORRESPONDENCES.

829. Diwan Chaman Lall : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state the names of the Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly whose (a) correspondence is in some cases or in all cases opened and read under instructions of the C. I. D. before delivery, (b) whose movements always from time to time are watched under the instructions of the C. I. D. ?

(2) Will Government kindly obtain the necessary information from the C. I. D. in regard to these matters ?

(3) Will Government state the grounds for the action taken by the C. I. D. in regard to these matters ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answers on the subject given by my predecessor to his questions of the 25th January 1926 and the 9th June 1924.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he has read those answers ? They are absolutely unsatisfactory and do not give a reply to my question.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I certainly have read the answers and I cannot admit that they were unsatisfactory. I may remind the Honourable Member that my predecessor said that if any Honourable Member suffered any inconvenience of the character referred to in the question he would, on the Honourable Member bringing the facts to his notice, make inquiries in the matter. I myself am quite prepared to do the same.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether, in view of the question which I have put down, he has not been in a position to make inquiries already in regard to this matter ?

(No answer.)

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that the correspondence of certain Members of this House is being opened by the C. I. D. ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information on that subject.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member kindly make inquiries ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think I substantially replied to that question. I said that if any Honourable Member suffering inconvenience of the character referred to will bring the facts personally to my notice I will inquire into the matter.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that my question is whether the Government will make inquiries in regard to this matter and let Honourable Members know, and that it is not a question of Honourable Members placing their grievances before the Government ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I cannot add to the reply I have already read to the Honourable Member.

APPOINTMENT AND TERMS OF REFERENCE AND PERSONNEL OF THE STATUTORY COMMISSION.

830. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state whether any decision has been arrived at in regard to the time of appointment and the terms of reference and personnel of the Statutory Commission ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Governmnet are unable to make any statement on the subject.

Diwan Chaman Lall : With your permission, Sir, I beg to withdraw question No. 831 and will not put it.

TRIAL OF INDIANS IN CHINA FOR POLITICAL OFFENCES.

832. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state the names, numbers and description of Indians tried by the British authorities in China for political offences and the sentence awarded in each case or cases and place the copies of the proceedings in each case or cases on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer that I gave on the 22nd August last to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh. The names of those who pleaded guilty and were sentenced are Dasaundha Singh, Gajjan Singh and Gainda Singh. The names of the other two men referred to are not known.

Government do not propose to lay copies of the proceedings on the table.

SUBJECTION TO POLICE SURVEILLANCE OF GAUHAR RAHMAN SINCE HIS RELEASE FROM THE PESHAWAR JAIL.

833. Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that one Gauhar Rahman was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment in 1923 at Peshawar under section 121-A and was released from the Peshawar Jail on the 3rd January 1925 ? Is it a fact that since his release he is under police surveillance ? If so, why and under whose orders ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The answer to the two first parts of the question is in the affirmative. The action was taken by the District authorities on account of his association with local criminals.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he will give us the correct facts about the association of this gentleman with local criminals ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I cannot add to the reply I have already given.

Diwan Chaman Lall : By local criminals does he mean people sentenced for political offences ?

(No answer.)

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether action has been taken against this gentleman under section 110 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I must have notice of that question.

INTERNMENT OF MOHAMMAD SAFIQ IN AKORA VILLAGE.

834. Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it a fact that the Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province on 28th August 1926 commanded the internment of one Mohammad Safiq in Akora village ? If so, will the Government state (a) the reasons of such an order being passed to take effect on the day following his release from the Jail on expiry of his sentence, (b) the means of his livelihood in the said village, and (c) why the orders do not indicate the period of internment, and will the Government lay on the table the correspondence on the subject ?

Sir Denys Bray : Enquiry is being made from the local Administration and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

835. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that the T. T. Examiners who sat in the examination have not been told so far whether they passed the examination or failed ? Is it also a fact that marks were allotted to the questions and, if so, whether the examiners have been informed of the number of the marks obtained by them. If not why ?

(b) Is it a fact that the superseded T. T. Es. who were not appointed as special T. T. Es. on the result of the examination had all failed in the said examination, and was it that only those promoted had passed the examination ?

(c) Will the Government state the reasons why this information should be withheld in the case of T. T. Es. ?

(d) Has the attention of the Government been also drawn to the articles which appeared in the Railway Weekly Herald, Lahore, dated 16th and 24th March, 1927, respectively, and in the Tribune, dated 13th May, 1927 in which some serious disclosures have been made regarding the administration of I. C. Gs. and T. T. Es. of the North-Western Railway Audit Department and what steps do they propose to take to eradicate the evil and improve the present state of affairs ?

(e) Will Government say whether Nazir Ahmad Khan and Mohamad Husain, T. T. Es. who were supposed to be headquartered at Rawalpindi in 1923 and at Mooltan 1921 and 1922 respectively, have actually performed their duties from these headquarters or do their travelling allowance bills show that they had been actually working from and taking their rest in Lahore.

(f) If the reply to the above is in the negative will the Government state how many times these men have stayed for more than six hours in a day as per their travelling allowance bills at Rawalpindi and Mooltan in each year to show whether these headquarters were actual or paper ones ?

TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

836. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) With reference to the list of names supplied in reply to question No. 1250-A is it a fact that the Europeans, Anglo-Indians and most of the Hindus mentioned therein simply happened to be working the trains carrying Mr. G. Z. Khan, the sectional officer, by a mere coincidence ? If so, will the Government give the names of those T. T. Es. only who were usually with him on tour eliminating those of the above nature and those who were casually utilized for special check within their own district limit ?

(b) Will the Government give the names of the T. T. Es. who accompanied the sectional officer outside their district limit on the pretence of special checking and if these gentlemen are mostly Muhammadans, will Government state the reasons for eliminating Europeans, Anglo-Indians, Parsees, Hindus, and Sikhs, etc. ?

LOSS INCURRED BY GOVERNMENT OWING TO THE VISIT PAID TO LAHORE BY CERTAIN TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS OF THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY IN JUNE 1925.

837. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will the Government place on the table for the information of the House a statement giving names of the T. T. Es. and I. C. Gs. stationed outside of Lahore who came to Lahore and were present there on 5th, 6th and 7th June, 1925 and the purport of their visits as recorded on their travelling allowance bills ?

(b) Is it a fact that the T. T. Es. coming to Lahore on official business are issued certificates of office attendance with the business files No. recorded thereon and whether these certificates are required to be submitted with the travelling allowance bills to enable the allowance being passed ? If so, were the T. T. Es. stationed outside of Lahore and present in Lahore on 5th, 6th and 7th June, 1925 issued any certificates of office attendance ? If not, how was their travelling allowance passed for these dates ?

(c) Is it a fact that the T. T. Es. and I. C. Gs. are not supposed to depart from their programmes and forecasts with good reasons in the interest of the Railway, and if so, were these men who left their districts to reach Lahore called by official telegrams or did they come of their own accord ? In the latter case what reasons were given by them for departing from their allotted duties and what other action was taken against them ? Were they allowed to draw their allowances in the absence of certificates referred to in the question above ?

(d) Is it a fact that staff coming from outside the station for the party on the 5th, 6th June, 1925 also remained behind on 7th June, 1925 for the photo group and were allowed to draw their allowances for doing no official work when the office was closed on Sunday, the 7th June, 1925 ?

(e) Will Government state how many T. T. Es. received their card passes stationery, and excess fare books on Sunday, the 7th June, 1925 as per office record ?

(f) Is it a fact that a special man was appointed in the T. T. E. Branch to distribute the stationery forms, etc., and there was a rule to the effect that no member of the staff should come to Lahore for receiving these things and average mileage allowance is not admissible for such visits ? If so, did any T. T. E. attend office on the 5th, 6th or 7th June, 1925 to receive stationery card passes, uniform, etc., and was he allowed to draw average mileage and if so under what rules ? Will Government state whether the T. T. Es.' office was opened on Sunday the 7th June, 1925 and if any T. T. E. received his excess fare books, etc., on that day and was granted average allowance ? If so, will the Government state the necessity for entailing the double financial loss on account of their average allowances when these T. T. Es. were present on the previous day the 6th June, 1925 ?

(g) Will Government place on the table a statement showing the earnings of the T. T. Es. who came to Lahore on 5th, 6th and 7th June, 1925 as compared to their earnings on these dates in the previous month (May 1925) and succeeding month (July 1925) and state the financial loss incurred by the Government on account of this function ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I propose, Sir, with your permission, to reply to questions Nos. 835, 836 and 837 together.

Government are not in possession of information to enable them to reply to the Honourable Member, and as they are convinced that an inordinate amount of time and labour would be spent in collecting information in regard to matters of very small, if of any importance, they do not propose to issue instructions for the collection of the information.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is not aware that this question was asked in a previous Session also and that it is a matter of very great public importance ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am aware that I was asked a question about one of the gentlemen mentioned in this question last Session and gave a reply ; as I have said, I do not consider the matter of any public importance. In regard to certain allegations against one gentleman mentioned in the Honourable Member's question I may say that the Accountant General, under whom and the Chief Auditor these men are employed, has looked into the matter and has assured me that there is no truth in the allegations.

MANUFACTURE OF ENGINES AT THE WORKSHOPS OWNED BY THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA AND RAJPUTANA MALWA RAILWAYS IN AJMER.

838. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are Government aware that the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and Rajputana Malwa Railway own large workshops at Ajmer ?

(b) Is it a fact that the locomotive shops are the only workshops in India where railway engines are manufactured, and is it not a fact that the engines made at Ajmer cost less than those imported from England, while they are as good as the latter ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Railway Board are taking steps to put a stop to the making of these engines at Ajmer ? If so, will Government state the reasons for doing so ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway have workshops at Ajmer.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. It is not at present possible to say whether the locomotives manufactured at Ajmer are more or less expensive than those of similar design imported from England.

(c) The question whether the manufacture of locomotives should be continued at Ajmer will be considered when we have received the report of Sir Arthur Dickinson who was asked to go into the question of the cost of manufacture there.

MILITARY SERVICES RENDERED BY THE MERS (RAWATS) AND MERATS OF AJMER-MERWARA.

839. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (1) Are Government aware that Merwara, a hilly sub-district of the province of Ajmer is inhabited by a hardy and warlike people known as Mers (Rawats) and Merats ?

(2) Are Government aware that a battalion of this hardy people, called the Merwara Battalion was first raised in 1822, A. D., by Colonel Hall at Beawar ?

(3) Are Government aware that this force of Mers and Merats of Ajmer-Merwara has loyally served the British Government for over a century and has rendered useful military service and fought in :

(a) the Sepoy Rebellion of 1857, when it marched 33 miles in 6 hours and saved the Ajmer Magazine from falling into the hands of the rebels, and later, won the battles of Sambhalia and Allwa (Marwar) ;

(b) the Afghan War of 1878-79 when the good work it did was publicly recognized and the Victoria Cross was conferred on its Commander, Colonel O'Moore Creagh, who later rose to be Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army ;

(c) the battle of Bidasar in 1883-84 ;

(d) the Chitral Campaign of 1901-02 ;

(e) the war with China in 1902 ; and (f) the world war in various places in Mesopotamia ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The information contained in my Honourable friend's question is substantially correct.

STOPPAGE OF RECRUITMENT OF THE MERS AND MERATS OF AJMER-MERWARA FOR THE INDIAN ARMY.

840. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (1) Are Government also aware that a part of the 44th Merwara Infantry into which the original Merwara Battalion was converted, the Mers and Merats of Ajmer-Merwara fought in the world war in :

the 28th Punjabees,

the 2nd|42nd Deoli Regiment,

the 43rd, 2nd|43rd Erinpura Regiment.

the 72nd Punjabees,

the 122nd Infantry,

the 2nd|119th Infantry,

the 3|150th Infantry, the J. and K. Companies of 122nd Infantry and served in the Transport and Hospital Corps, and Garrison Companies stationed at Meiktila (Burma) and Sumerpur for duty with the Turkish prisoners of war ; and in 1921, A. D., took part in the operations in North Persia against the Bolsheviks in the 122nd Regiment and furnished large numbers of fighting men in the Third Afghan War of 1919-21 ?

(2) Are Government aware that the Mers and Merats have earned a name in musketry ?

(3) Are Government aware that Merwara furnished the highest percentage of recruits in India for the world war and that the Commissioner of Ajmer declared in a public meeting in 1917, A. D., that in his tour in Merwara wherever he went he only found old men and children, all men capable of bearing arms having gone to the front ?

(4) Are Government aware that great dissatisfaction prevails in Merwara owing to the disbanding of the 44th Merwara Infantry and the issue of the Army Order No. 728, dated the 11th of October 1926 which directs that " the Class Composition of the 4th Bombay Grenadiers as laid down in annexure of the India Army Order No. 846 of 1924 is altered ", " Eastern Punjabi Jats being recruited as vacancies occur among Mers and Merats "?

(5) Are Government aware that this order means the total elimination of the Mers and Merats from the Indian Army in spite of the fact that these people have rendered useful military service for over a century in various battlefields in India and outside it ?

(6) Will Government be pleased to state its reasons for barring the Mers and Merats from military service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The information contained in paragraphs 1—5 of my Honourable friend's question is substantially correct.

(6) In recent years the fighting material furnished by these classes has been considered inferior to that furnished by others : and with the reduction of the army since the Great War it has no longer been possible to find a place for them.

MUSLIM REPRESENTATION IN THE ROYAL AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS.

841. Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : 1. What is the total number of Indian clerks in the Royal Air Force units in India, and how many of them are Muslims ?

2. What is the total number of Indian clerks in the Royal Air Force Headquarters Office and how many of them are Muslims ?

3. Is it a fact that in 1924, two Muslim and five non-Muslim clerks were retrenched from the Royal Air Force Headquarters Office and that all these men were provided with appointments in the Royal Air Force units ?

4. Is it a fact that of the five non-Muslim clerks, three have since been retransferred to the Royal Air Force Headquarters Office and restored to their status quo ante without passing the necessary examinations of the Public Service Commission ?

5. Is it a fact that of the remaining two non-Muslim retrenched clerks, one asked for employment in the Army or the Royal Air Force Headquarters Offices because he was unwilling to go out of Simla and having failed to secure such employment the clerk resigned his appointment in the Royal Air Force unit ?

6. Is it a fact that the Royal Air Force Headquarters have, after three years of the clerk's resignation now recommended his re-employment in those Headquarters without passing the necessary examinations of the Public Service Commission ?

7. Is it a fact that all the four clerks referred to above who have been accorded special consideration, have not passed even the Matriculation Examination of the Indian Universities, the lowest examination prescribed for the tests of the Public Service Commission ?

8. Is it a fact that neither of the two Muslim clerks retrenched in 1924, has been given any consideration for retransfer to the Royal Air Force Headquarters ?

9. Will Government please state the reasons which have led to preferential treatment being accorded to the non-Muslim clerks of the Royal Air Force Headquarters ?

10. Is it a fact that eight permanent vacancies recently occurred in the Royal Air Force Headquarters, and that out of these only one has been given to a Muslim clerk, the remaining seven having been filled by non-Muslims ?

11. Is it a fact that one Muslim candidate served in the Royal Air Force Headquarters for fourteen months in the hope of getting one of the eight appointments refered to above, but was declared inefficient after 14 months and the vacancy held by him was given to a non-Muslim ?

12. Is it a fact that a Muslim candidate was offered an appointment in the Royal Air Force Headquarters for a period of six months in the first instance, but had to make room for a non-Muslim clerk after he had been in that office for only three months ?

13. Is it a fact that the non-Muslim clerk brought in replacement of the Muslim candidate, is a relative of the Superintendent of the Establishment Branch in the Royal Air Force Headquarters ?

14. Is it a fact that the non-Muslim clerk under reference has been given a definite promise of being given preference over his seniors on the occurrence of a permanent vacancy, thus creating dissatisfaction and discontent among the temporary clerks already working in those Headquarters ?

15. If so, will Government very kindly say what steps they propose to take to safeguard the interests, and ensure proper representation, of the Muslim community in the Royal Air Force Headquarters ?

Mr. G. M. Young : 1. 88 (including 7 munshis and 3 draughtsmen). Of this number 30 are Muslims.

2. 38 as on 27th August 1927 (including 1 draughtsman). Of this number 8 are Muslims.

3. Yes.

4. Yes. They were exempted by the Home Department from passing the necessary examination of the Public Service Commission on the ground that they would not have been required to do so had they not been retrenched.

5. Yes.

6. Yes. The grounds for the recommendation are the same as those stated in my answer to part 4.

7. One is a matriculate, and the other three are not.

8. One of these 2 clerks secured employment in the office of the Judge Advocate General and is now understood to be serving in the Home Department. The other is not considered to be up to the standard required for the Royal Air Force Headquarters and has therefore not been re-employed at those headquarters.

9. No preferential treatment has been accorded.

10. Yes. 2 vacancies were however originally given to Muslims but one was subsequently found unsuitable and his services were dispensed with. His appointment was then filled by a non-Muslim retrenched clerk.

11. Yes. This is the clerk to whom I have just referred in my answer to part 10.

12. I understand that the non-Muslim clerk referred to was holding at the time an appointment in the office of the Master General of Supply. In view of the fact he had 6 years' clerical experience with Royal Air Force units, and a very efficient record, an exchange was effected, at the instance of the Royal Air Force Headquarters, between this clerk and the Muslim clerk holding a temporary appointment at Royal Air Force Headquarters.

13. I understand that the clerk in question is married to the daughter of the Superintendent's wife's maternal uncle, (Laughter), but this circumstance was not the reason of his appointment. I have given the reasons in my answer to part 12.

14. No such promise has been given.

15. Full consideration is given to the interests of the Muslim community in the Royal Air Force Headquarters. The Indian establishment of those Headquarters is at present composed as follows—majority community 60 per cent. : and minority communities about 40 per cent.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : May I inquire how many of these minority communities are Mussalmans out of this 40 per cent. ?

Mr G. M. Young : If my Honourable friend will refer to my reply to part 2 of the 15 parts of his question, he will find the answer to that supplementary question.

DISTRIBUTION BY THE MILITARY AUTHORITIES OF LAND IN THE NILI BAR COLONY.

842. Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : 1. Is it a fact that land on Nili Bar Colony has been distributed by the military authorities among the clerks serving at Army Headquarters ?

2. If so, what is the total number of grantees and how many of them are Muslims ?

3. Is it a fact that non-Muslim clerks, who are not agriculturists, have been liberally granted land on the said Colony, while Muslims clerks, who are generally agriculturists by profession, have been ignored ?

4. What is the total number of non-agriculturist non-Muslim clerks who have been granted land ?

5. Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of granting land on the basis of (agricultural) efficiency and competency ?

6. What reasons had the Government to grant land to non-agriculturist non-Muslim clerks in preference to agriculturist Muslims serving at Army Headquarters ?

7. What is the total area granted to non-Muslims and Muslims respectively ?

8. Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons which led the Government to make these grants to the non-combatant class in preference to the combatant class ?

9. Are there any disabled soldiers who have not been granted any land ?

10. How many families are there who lost their bread earner in the war and to whom no land has been granted ?

Mr. G. M. Young : 1—8. I propose, Sir, to reply to the first eight parts of this question together. The distribution of land in the Nili Bar Military Colony is carried out under the personal direction of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who has taken the greatest care to see that it is equitably done. Out of a total of 2,300 grants made so far, about 1,000 have been made to Muslims, and out of 3,000 squares available in the Nili Bar Colony 2,750 have been allotted so far to combatants and only 110 to non-combatants. As a special favour, a very few grants were made to deserving clerks at Army Headquarters. 17 grants were made in all : of the recipients, 16 happened to be non-Muslims, and one a Muslim. Another large area of Colony land has been placed at the disposal of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for military grants. In considering whether it is desirable to offer any grants in this area as a special concession to Muslim clerks, this question and answer will be borne in mind.

9 and 10. I cannot give a categorical reply to these parts of the question : but the claims of disabled soldiers and of the families of those who fell in the War have always been given special consideration not only in the Nili Bar Colony grants but in any other scheme for the grant of land that has been sanctioned by the Government of India or by a Local Government since the War.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Will Government be pleased to make an inquiry if there are any such disabled soldiers as I have asked about in part 9 of my question, and let the House know, and also if any consideration is going to be shown to these disabled soldiers or not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already explained, Sir, that disabled soldiers have always been given special consideration ; they are now being given special consideration. Applications from disabled soldiers are being invited for these grants.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PENSION OF MR. BHAGWAN DASS SURI, LATE ACCOUNTANT, MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

94. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Are Government aware that Mr. Bhagwan Dass Suri, late accountant, Military Accounts Department (Rawalpindi), who proceeded on field service overseas in October 1914 in connection with the last Great War, was invalided out of service on account of diseases contracted on field service ?

(b) Is it a fact that he was not allowed to avail himself of the full amount of leave (privilege, medical and furlough), due to him and at his credit, before being invalided ?

(c) Is it a fact that he has been a loser in service pension in comparison with his juniors who did not proceed on field service but remained in India, as he was deprived of his acting and sub-protem promotions in India and the field and deputation allowances drawn by him in the field were not counted towards pension ?

(d) If so, what action was taken, or what action do Government now propose to take, in the matter ?

COUNTING TOWARDS PENSION OF THE DEPUTATION ALLOWANCES DRAWN BY MR. BHAGWAN DASS SURI.

95. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Are Government aware that the civilian clerks deputed to the Military Accounts Department during the last Great War were allowed to count their deputation allowances towards pension under Finance Department letter No. 1231, dated 27th July 1917 ?

(b) If so, are Government prepared to extend this concession in the case of Mr. Suri who was deputed to field service and the Field Controller's Office at Poona, in order to increase his pension ?

PENSION OF MR. BHAGWAN DASS SURI, LATE ACCOUNTANT, MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

96. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will Government please state whether any special pensions were sanctioned by them since 1914 under the authority of Article 924 (b), Civil Service Regulations (Edition 1918) ?

(b) Were any applications for pensions in excess of the amounts admissible under the Civil Service Regulations or involving any relaxation of the rules submitted for the sanction of the Secretary of State for India since 1914 under Article 924 (a)-C.S.R. (Edition 1918) ?

(c) If so, under what circumstances were they sanctioned and submitted ?

(d) Are Government prepared to deal with the case of Mr. Suri under these rules ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The full particulars of the case of Mr. Bhagwan Dass Suri are not yet available. Replies to the Honourable Member's questions will be given as early as possible.

DISCHARGE OF JAI CHAND, SUB WAY INSPECTOR, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

97. Diwan Chaman Lall : 1. Is it a fact that one Jai Chand, Sub Way Inspector, after having two years' approved service with the I. E. F. " D " in Mesopotamia was engaged by the North Western Railway and after having served there for 9 years was discharged by the Divisional Superintendent, Ferozepore, in April 1926 ?

2. Is it a fact that no charge sheet was ever served on him nor any defence taken and a certificate without entry of abilities or character granted ?

3. Is it a fact that the Railway Administration intended to debar him from further service by granting such a certificate which amounts to dismissal ?

4. Is it a fact that in answer to a question put by Khan Bahadur W. M. Hassanally in the Legislative Assembly last November, Jai Chand was advised by the Government Member to appeal to the Railway Board ?

5. Is it a fact that the Railway Board refused to consider his case on his representation, saying that the Agent of the Railway was solely empowered to deal with it ?

6. Is it a fact that on his representation to the Agent of the Railway no attention was paid to his grievances ?

7. Is it a fact that the man has thus been deprived of his right to appeal to British justice on dismissal by an officer of the Division for no fault of his ?

8. If so, do Government propose to take steps to have the case inquired into, and ask the railway authorities to serve him with a charge sheet and obtain his defence before discharging him if necessary ?

Mr A. A. L. Parsons : (1) Yes.

(2) Yes ; no charge sheet was necessary as Jai Chand was discharged in terms of his agreement.

(3) There was no such intention on the part of the North Western Railway Administration.

(4) No. The question was not put in November last but in August 1926 and I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the exact terms of my reply to question No. 213 to Khan Bahadur W. M. Hassanally on the 24th August 1926.

(5) As Jai Chand was discharged in accordance with the terms of his agreement no appeal lies to the Railway Board against such discharge.

(6) On representation to the Agent full consideration was given to his grievances and replies were given to him on two occasions, namely, on 30th May 1926 and 11th September 1926.

(7) and (8). As already stated Jai Chand was not dismissed and his grievances were considered.

Extension of the Lee Concessions to Covenanted Subordinates in Railways.

98. Diwan Chaman Lall : (1) When were the Lee concessions granted to the covenanted officers in Railways and why were they not extended to the covenanted subordinates ?

(2) Why have the repeated appeals for recognition for the Lee concessions from the covenanted subordinates been evaded ?

(3) Are Government aware that there are several of the covenanted subordinates who, due to their financial position, are unable to proceed to England for periods of ten to twelve years ?

(4) For what reason was the overseas allowance granted to the Superior Services and not to the subordinates where officers of both branches are recruited from the same country ?

(5) Why were the free passages granted to the Superior Services and not to the non-gazetted officials ?

(6) Are Government aware that a large percentage of the covenanted subordinates are compelled to borrow money when they wish to visit England ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (1) and (2). I presume the Honourable Member is referring to certain concessions granted by Government to the Superior Railway Services on the recommendation of Lord Lee's Commission. The conditions of service of covenanted subordinates rest on a different basis from those of the Superior Services in that they are generally determined by individual contracts made for a period of years at the time of appointment. It has not been considered necessary, therefore, to grant concessions of the nature given to the Superior Services.

(3) Government have no information to this effect.

(4) and (5). I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer I have given to parts (1) and (2) of his question.

(6) Government have no information to this effect.

THE CHILDREN'S PROTECTION BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PETITIONS.

Mr. Deputy President : Sir, I beg to lay on the table the Report of the Committee on Petitions relating to the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : With your permission, Sir, I desire to make a statement regarding Government business for the forthcoming week. The House will sit for the disposal of Government business on Monday, the 5th, Tuesday, the 6th, Wednesday, the 7th, and Thursday, the 8th. It is proposed to put down on the list of business the continued consideration of the Gold Standard and the Reserve Bank of India Bill and motions for the taking into consideration and passing of the Imperial Bank of India (Amendment) Bill. This business will be placed last in the List but, in certain circumstances, Government may decide not to make the other motions but to proceed with this business first. The other business which we propose to put down on the paper is as follows :

(1) a Resolution to be moved regarding the Draft Convention and Recommendation of the International Labour Conference relating to inspection of emigrants on board ship and, if that Resolution is carried, a motion for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1922, to give effect to the Convention ;

(2) a motion to refer the Criminal Law Amendment Bill to a Select Committee ;

(3) a motion suggesting the appointment of a Committee to consider the question of the residence and accommodation of Members in New Delhi (Hear, hear) ;

(4) a motion for leave to introduce a Bill to amend section 59 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 ;

(5) motions to take into consideration and, if these motions are passed, to pass the Indian Tariff (Cotton Yarn Amendment) Bill and the other two Indian Tariff (Amendment) Bills, as reported by their Select Committees ;

(6) a motion to refer to a Select Committee the Indian Income-tax (Amendment) Bill which was introduced during the Delhi Session ;

(7) if time permits, motions for Supplementary Demands for 1927-1928 ; and, finally,

(8) a motion to refer the Volunteer Police Bill to a Select Committee, the discussion of which was adjourned on the 18th August.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the clauses of the Bill to establish a Gold Standard for British India, and constitute a Reserve Bank of India.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, with your permission I should like to submit a proposal to you that the debate should be adjourned for to-day. We have got into a rather difficult position in regard to this Bill. When on Wednesday the Government agreed not to press further their " shareholders " plan, it was in the belief that a solution of the difficult problem of an elected directorate without shareholders was very nearly, if not quite, attained. It was in the belief that an agreement had been attained that an amendment was put down in the name of my Honourable friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, for a directorate elected by electoral colleges. Unfortunately it has not proved that we can see any agreement as we thought. There seems to be a danger of the Reserve Bank of India Bill, a purely business measure, foundering in the whirlpool of communal trouble. I said that the Government were unwilling to include any clause in this Bill on racial or communal lines. An amendment is down to Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar's amendment which raises a difficult problem of that nature. I think that it will be very much better in the interests of all that the Government and the leaders of the Parties should have a period over the week-end to consider whether this seemingly threatening cloud can be dispersed without an undue storm. If so, the Government will hope to continue with this business on Monday, that is, if there is a real prospect of a settlement being reached which will satisfy a large majority of the Members of the House. When the Government agreed not to proceed with their shareholders' scheme they stated that they withdrew it because they did not desire to put this Bill on the Statute-book against the wishes of any large section of the House. The same position seems to be arising in regard to the alternative, but I hope that between now and Monday the opportunity of a Sabbath rest may give us occasion to find means to solve this difficulty so that the Bill may be proceeded with in an atmosphere that really does promise general agreement all round. I would, therefore, Sir, ask you in these circumstances to adjourn the debate for to-day, and if that is agreed to by you, Sir, the Government do not propose to-day to proceed with the other business that is put down on the list.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I gladly support this motion for the adjournment of the debate. It is a matter of supreme importance that we should be able to come to an agreement on the question of the Directorate, which would be acceptable to the great bulk of this House, and in the hope that we will be able to arrive at such a conclusion I support the motion before the House.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I really cannot understand the Leader of the House suggesting that communal trouble has arisen in any particular quarter of the House. Communal trouble has arisen because of the proposal contained in the amendment of Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. Therefore, if that proposal is to be considered, the other question must necessarily crop up. But, Sir, I do not wish to say anything more for the moment, and I entirely agree that the House should adjourn, and I hope that we shall be able to find a solution.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I say that I did not suggest that communal trouble has arisen in any particular quarter of the House ? I quite recognise that the question of electoral colleges must necessarily raise difficult questions.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I have no objection, Sir, to this course. I think it is on the whole the most convenient course to adopt because it is not a question of obliging the Government ; it is a question of discovering unity among the non-official Members of the House—a unity which I should very much like to see on such a constructive proposal as the Reserve Bank Bill ; and if such a Bill as this is to be passed by this House, I quite agree that it must have the largest possible majority and as great a consensus of opinion as it is possible to attain. In these circumstances I certainly support the motion for adjournment.

Sir Alexander Murray (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, speaking for myself I heartily support the motion of the Leader of the House that we should adjourn consideration of this Bill till Monday to enable an agreement to be arrived at, if possible.

Mr. President : I thank the House for giving me a holiday.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 5th September, 1927.

---

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 5th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PROHIBITION AGAINST GOVERNMENT SERVANTS WEARING KHADDAR, ETC.

843. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state if they have in any way prohibited Government servants from wearing Khaddar or subscribing to the Funds of the All-India Spinners Association ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given on the 8th September 1924, by Sir Alexander Muddiman to a question by Mr. Harkaran Misra. The Government of India have issued no orders regarding subscription to the All-India Spinners' Association, this being a matter within the discretion of the Local Governments concerned.

RULES FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF CANDIDATES TO THE BENGAL PILOT SERVICE.

844. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what is exactly the intention of the expression " Served at sea for four years in a Merchant Vessel employed in foreign trade " as a seaman or apprentice referred to in the rules for the appointment of candidates to the Bengal Pilot Service under Notification of the Bengal Government Marine Department, No. 8-T. of the 7th May, 1927 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if a foreign-going ship trading between any port in India and Ceylon would be classified as a ship employed in foreign trade ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The expression referred to means service in a foreign-going ship as defined in section 2 (2) of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923.

(b) A ship trading between a port in India and a port in Ceylon would be within home-trade limits as defined in section 2 (3) of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923.

ADMISSION OF MASTERS OF HOME-TRADING SHIPS WITH THE PILOT SERVICE AT MADRAS, CHITTAGONG, BOMBAY, KARACHI, ADEN AND RANGOON.

845. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Is it a fact that Masters of home-trading ships are debarred from entering the Pilot Service at Madras, Chittagong, Bombay, Karachi, Aden and Rangoon ? If so, why ?

QUALIFICATIONS OF CANDIDATES FOR THE PILOT SERVICE AT MADRAS, CHITTAGONG, BOMBAY, KARACHI, ADEN AND RANGOON.

846. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Is it obligatory on those who desire to enter the Pilot Service at Madras, Chittagong, Bombay, Karachi, Aden and Rangoon that they should hold certificates as Masters of foreign-going ships ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : With your permission, Sir, I will reply to questions Nos. 845 and 846 together.

The Pilot Services at Madras, Chittagong, Bombay, Karachi, Aden and Rangoon are under the control of Port Trusts. The information asked for is being obtained from the Local Governments and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt. The Honourable Member is doubtless aware that a foreign-going certificate denotes a higher standard of competency.

MUSLIM TEACHERS OF THE GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, AJMER.

847. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to furnish the information as to how many Muhammadan teachers, other than Persian and Urdu Maulvis and the Drill Instructor, were on the staff of the Government High School, Ajmer, on 1st April 1917 and on 1st April 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that there has been no permanent Muhammadan teacher other than the Maulvis and the Drill Instructor on the staff of the Government High School, Ajmer, since September 1925 ?

(c) Is it a fact that ever since the appointment of the present Assistant Head Master of the Government High School, Ajmer, the number of Muslim teachers, other than Maulvis and the Drill Instructor, has been gradually decreasing till it has been reduced to nil, and the number of Mahratta teachers has been steadily increasing till it has risen to five ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Information has been called for and will be supplied when received.

STAFF OF THE GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, AJMER.

848. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that the present Assistant Headmaster of the Government High School, Ajmer, has his own son-in-law under him as teacher of Commerce, and that another Mahratta Assistant Drawing Master of the same school has his son-in-law over him as Head Drawing Master? Is it also a fact that none of the Mahratta teachers belong to Ajmer-Merwara and three of them came on the staff after the appointment of the present Assistant Headmaster of the same community ? If the reply be in the affirmative, do Government propose to consider the desirability of not keeping so many of such close relations in a Government institution of about 17 assistant masters ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Information has been called for and will be supplied when received.

OPENING OF PRIMARY SCHOOLS FOR MUSLIMS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

849. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that in view of the comparative fall in the number of Muslim pupils in the primary schools of Ajmer-Merwara the Provincial Muslim League, Rajputana submitted a memorandum to the Government of India in 1925 in which among other suggestions certain centres of Muslim population were pointed out as fit places where primary schools for Muslims could be opened ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state if any Schools have since been opened in any of those centres ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(b) The majority of large villages in Ajmer-Merwara with a Muslim population are already supplied with Government primary schools. For want of funds no new Government schools have been opened in Ajmer-Merwara since 1925-26, but provision has been made for the opening of new schools in connection with the five years' programme of educational expansion.

SUPERVISING STAFF OF THE BOARDING HOUSE OF THE GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, AJMER.

850. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that the boarding house of the Government High School, Ajmer, has a Head Superintendent as well as an Assistant Superintendent and that none of them is a Muhammadan ? Is it a fact that the Assistant Headmaster is the Head Superintendent of the Boarding House ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The boarding house has a Superintendent as well as an Assistant Superintendent, both of whom are Hindus. The Assistant Headmaster is Superintendent.

EMPLOYMENT OF MORE MUSLIMS IN THE CLERICAL CADRE OF THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT, AJMER-MERWARA.

851. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the percentage of the Hindus in the clerical cadre of Ajmer-Merwara is about 86 per cent. while that of Muhammadans is nearly 14 per cent. ? Will Government kindly state the number of clerks borne on the clerical cadre of the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department, how many of them are Hindus and how many Muslims ?

(b) Is it a fact that 40 per cent. of the population in Ajmer is Muhammadan ?

(c) Are Government prepared to increase the number of Muhammadans in the clerical cadre when filling the newly created posts under the 5-year programme ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) No, the percentage of Hindus and Muhammadans in the clerical cadre of Ajmer-Merwara is 72.2 and 27.8, respectively. The number of clerks borne on the clerical cadre of the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department is 7 out of whom 6 are Hindus and 1 Muhammadan.

(b) According to the Census Report of 1921, the percentage of Muhammadans in Ajmer city is 47.1, in Ajmer sub-division 27.5, and in Ajmer-Merwara 21.

(e) The three new posts of clerks, which have been created under the five-year programme, have been advertised, and the claims of suitable Muhammadan candidates will be considered.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Does the Census Report of 1921 A. D. say that the high percentage of Mussalmans in Ajmer-Merwara, that is, 20.5 compared with 16.2 in 1911, is due very largely to the Urs Fair pilgrim population, and does the Administration Report for 1925-26 not say that 50,000 pilgrims attended the Urs Fair that year ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Yes, Sir. That is correct.

NUMBER OF HINDU AND MUHAMMADAN GRADUATE TEACHERS IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE IN AJMER-MERWARA.

852. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to furnish the number of graduate teachers in Government service in Ajmer-Merwara in the following form :

——	Trained.	Untrained.
Muhamadans
Hindus

(b) How many of the above graduate teachers without training degrees draw more than Rs. 150 per month and how many of these are Hindus ? How many of the trained graduate teachers draw less than Rs. 100 per month and how many of these are Muhammadans ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) A statement showing the number of Hindu and Muhammadan graduate teachers in Government Schools in Ajmer-Merwara is laid on the table.

(b) Three untrained graduate teachers draw above Rs. 150 per mensem, and they are all Hindus. Most of the untrained graduate Hindu teachers were appointed over 12 years ago at a time when trained men were not available. Three trained graduate teachers draw less than Rs. 100 per mensem of whom two are Muhammadans.

Statement showing the number of Hindu and Muhammadan graduate teachers in Government schools in Ajmer-Merwara.

Muhammadans	5	1	6
Hindus	6	5	11
TOTAL ..	11	6	17

QUALIFICATION OF THE HEADMASTER OF THE WALTER ANGLO-VERNACULAR SCHOOL AT MOUNT ABU.

853. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state the salary of the post of Headmaster, Mount Abu Middle School ?

Is it a fact that the man appointed to the post (a) has no training degree (b) is not a retired Headmaster or teacher (c) has been in Ajmer only for a few months ? How many years has he been a teacher and where ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The salary of the post of Headmaster, Walter Anglo-Vernacular School, Mount Abu, is Rs. 125 a month. He is a B.A., but has no professional degree. He is not a retired Headmaster or teacher. Government have no information as to the time he spent in Ajmer before his appointment. He has had seven years' teaching experience at the City High School, Hyderabad, Deccan, the Anjuman Islam High School, Bombay, and the New High School, Bombay PAY OF THE PROFESSOR OF SANSKRIT AND THE PROFESSOR OF PERSIAN IN THE GOVERNMENT COLLEGE, AJMER.

854. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that in the Government College, Ajmer, a Professor with no University degrees but having Oriental Diplomas only holds the same grade as an English University graduate of about 12 years' service ?

(b) Is it a fact that in 1925, four boys appeared for their B. A. with Sanskrit from the Government College, Ajmer, and none passed in Sanskrit ? What was the pay of the Sanskrit Professor in March 1925, and what was his pay in July 1926, after the result was out ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes. The posts of Professor of Sanskrit and Professor of Persian are on the same scale of pay as other posts of professors in the College. These two posts are held by officers on whom the University of the Punjab granted, after examination, diplomas conferring on their recipients the Oriental Literary Title of Shastri and Maulvi Fazil. They are on the same scale of pay as one of the professors who holds the degree of an English University and has nearly 12 years' service as compared with 25 years' service of the Professor of Sanskrit and 14 years' service of the Professor of Persian.

(b) No ; in 1925 three boys appeared for the B.A. examination in Sanskrit and two passed.

The pay of the Professor of Sanskrit was Rs. 250 per mensem in March 1925, and Rs. 300 in July 1926, after reorganisation, when increase of pay had been given to the whole staff of the College.

BOARD OF HIGH SCHOOL AND INTERMEDIATE EDUCATION FOR AJMER-MERWARA, ETC.

855. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Do Government propose to allow Ajmer-Merwara to have a Board of its own for the High School and the Intermediate Examination ?

(b) Does the following represent the situation there ?

College Education.—European Principal to retire within 4 years.

Vice Principal and lately officiating Principal.....Hindu.

Secondary Education.—Government School Headmaster to retire within 4|3 years. ..Not a single Muhammadan on staff except Maulvis.

Primary Education.—The Assistant Superintendent of Education .....Hindu.

(c) Are Government prepared to safeguard the interest of the Muhammadan community by appointing more Muhammadans ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) No.

(b) No. It does not present the whole situation in a proper perspective.

(c) When vacancies arise the claims of suitable candidates of all communities including Muhammadans will be considered. Government repudiate the implication, if there is any, that the claims of the Muhammadan community are not being safeguarded.

SEPARATE INSPECTING AGENCY FOR AJMER-MERWARA, ETC.

856. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that Provincial Muslim League, Rajputana, in its memorandum addressed to the Government of India, Education Department, in 1926, prayed for a separate Inspecting Agency directly responsible to the Superintendent of Education ? Is it a fact that the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department in the matter of recognition and administrative regulations generally depends upon the United Provinces and subject to the approval of the Superintendent of Education, Ajmer-Merwara largely follows that Province ?

(b) Is it a fact that in Ajmer-Merwara the newly appointed Muhammadan Deputy Inspector is the only Muhammadan in the Inspecting Agency, and that he is under the Hindu Assistant Superintendent of Education and is not directly responsible to the Superintendent of Education in organising Muhammadan primary education ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) No memorandum from the Provincial Muslim League, Rajputana, was received by Government in 1926. In a memorandum received in 1925, the League prayed that the newly created post of Assistant Superintendent of Education, who is directly responsible to the Superintendent of Education, should be filled by a Muslim. It made no specific prayer for a separate inspecting agency directly responsible to the Superintendent of Education.

The Educational Code of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh is adopted, as far as possible, in Ajmer-Merwara.

(b) The inspecting agency of Ajmer-Merwara consists of one Superintendent (a European), one Assistant Superintendent (a Hindu) and two Deputy Inspectors (one Hindu and one Muhammadan). Government cannot agree to an arrangement by which the Muhammadan Deputy Inspector would go over the head of the Assistant Superintendent direct to the Superintendent.

†Nos. 857—859.

EMPLOYMENT IN THE ENGINEER-IN-CHIEF'S BRANCH OF A PERMANENT NON-MUSLIM CLERK IN THE PUNJAB GOVERNMENT.

860. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the Engineer-in-Chief's Branch recently recommended that the services of a permanent non-Muslim clerk in the Punjab Government may be obtained for employment under that Branch ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions with their answers will be found at pages 3921—22 of these proceedings.

(b) Is it a fact that this clerk is related to the Cashier of the Engineer-in-Chief's Branch and has been promised to be given the first permanent vacancy in that Branch in preference to all the temporary employees of the Branch ?

(c) Will Government please state how many Muslims have been given similar treatment by the Engineer-in-Chief's Branch ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) No, Sir, they are not related, and I am informed that until last May they were unacquainted with each other. No promise of permanent employment has been given to the clerk.

(c) I am not aware of any similar cases.

INABILITY OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION TO NOMINATE MUSLIM CANDIDATES FOR EMPLOYMENT IN THE ARMY DEPARTMENT.

861. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that according to the existing system of recruitment, all vacancies in the Army Department must be filled by candidates nominated by the Public Service Commission and that they have instructions to nominate candidates when required by the Army Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Army Department recently asked the Commission to nominate some Muslim candidates but the Commission expressed their inability to do this on the ground that passed Muslim candidates were not available ?

(c) Is it a fact that in announcing the result of the last examination of their ministerial branch in the Gazette of India, the Public Service Commission declared that the list of passed candidates could be added to if Departments of the Government of India asked the Commission to nominate candidates from communities not represented or not adequately represented ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state why action was not taken by the Commission on the lines indicated in the Government of India Gazette when they were asked to nominate Muslim candidates for employment in the Army Department ?

ISSUE BY THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OF A SUPPLEMENTARY LIST OF PASSED MUSLIM CANDIDATES.

862. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that out of 4 candidates passed by the Public Service Commission on a communal basis, only one is a Muslim ?

(b) Are Government now prepared to consider the advisability of issuing a supplementary list of passed Muslim candidates in order to ensure their adequate representation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I propose, Sir, with your permission, to reply to questions Nos. 861 and 862 together. My enquiries into the matter are not yet complete but I shall communicate the result to the Honourable Member.

ABSENCE OF MUSLIM CLERKS IN THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR OF CIVIL AVIATION.

863. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) How many clerks are employed in the office of the Director, Civil Aviation, and how many of them are Muslims ?

(b) Will Government please give reasons for the total absence of Muslims in this newly created office, when definite instructions exist for the representation of each community in Government service ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) One Superintendent, two assistants, two clerks and a stenographer. None of them are Muslims.

(b) The Superintendent and one assistant were transferred with the work from the Department of Industries and Labour (Public Works Branch) when the Civil Aviation Office was constituted ; the stenographer was transferred later. The rest of the staff, three in number, were selected as being the most suitable from among applicants for the appointments.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE PUBLIC WORKS BRANCH OF THE INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT.

864. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : How many fresh candidates have been employed in the Public Works Branch of the Industries Department in 1927 and how many of them are Muslims ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Two. Neither of them is a Muslim.

ALLEGED IRREGULARITIES IN THE ALLOTMENT OF RESIDENTIAL QUARTERS TO CLERKS IN SIMLA.

865. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the Under Secretary to the Government of India, Industries and Labour Department, holds dual charge of the office of the Superintending Engineer, Simla, also charge of the supervision and inspection of roads and other works in the Punjab and other parts of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that owing to these multifarious duties, the Superintending Engineer is unable to attend to all the duties and that work such as the allotment of residential quarters to clerks in Simla is left entirely in the hands of the Superintendent of the office of the Superintending Engineer ?

(c) Have the Government considered the question of the amalgamation of the office of the Superintending Engineer, Simla, with the Public Works Department, New Delhi ?

(d) Is it a fact that certain irregularities have occurred in the allotment of "C" class quarters in Kaithu ? If so, to what are these irregularities due ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) No. The allotments are made personally by the Superintending Engineer himself.

(c) Yes.

(d) Government are not aware that any irregularities have occurred in regard to the allotment of quarters referred to.

ALLOTMENT OF A "C" CLASS QUARTER IN SIMLA TO THE HEAD ASSISTANT, WIRELESS BRANCH OF THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

866. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Are the Government aware that the Head Assistant, Wireless Branch of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs Department, is in occupation of a "C" class quarter ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Head Assistant, Wireless Branch, is not entitled under the rules to a "C" class quarter as his pay and allowances amount to more than the maximum laid down for this class of quarter ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Head Assistant is in receipt of Simla allowance of Rs. 70 per mensem and that he draws it throughout the year even when he is in Delhi for the winter ?

(d) Will the Government please state whether this allowance was taken into account for the purpose of allotment of quarters to him ? If not, why not ?

(e) Is it not a fact that this allowance should have been taken into account as part of the pay under the Public Works Department Code for the purposes of allotment of quarters ?

(f) Are the Government aware that on account of this allotment, certain other lower paid clerks have been deprived of their rightful claim to these quarters ?

(g) Is the Honourable Member for the Industries and Labour Department prepared to enquire into this case personally and issue such orders as he thinks fit ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The allotment of this quarter to the Head Assistant was made in accordance with the orders issued by the Government of India in July 1925, to the effect that as a result of the revision of the classification of European clerks' quarters in Simla in that year no existing tenant would be required to vacate his quarters unless he became ineligible for the same under the old classification or he himself wished to do so.

(c) The Head Assistant is in receipt of a local allowance of Rs 75 per mensem throughout the year. Government servants eligible for it draw it even when they go to Delhi.

(d) Yes.

(e), (f) & (g). Do not arise.

ADDITIONAL EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY THE MOVE OF THE WIRELESS BRANCH OF THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS TO SIMLA.

867. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Under what orders are the staff of the Wireless Branch of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs Department, receiving the Simla allowances in addition to their pay ?

(b) Have the Government considered the position in the light of the changed circumstances now that the office has been located at Delhi permanently ? If not, do they propose to do so ?

(c) What is the justification for bringing the Wireless Branch up to Simla instead of locating it permanently in Delhi throughout the year ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the actual cost of bringing up the establishment to Simla and the additional cost of expenditure incurred by the move of this Branch to the hills and on account of the Simla allowances granted to the staff of this Branch ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Under the orders contained in Government of India letter No. 661-P.W., dated the 20th March 1922.

(b) The question of the future location of the Wireless Branch is now under examination by the Director-General.

(c) The Wireless Branch has been located at Simla since its formation in 1920.

(d) The Wireless Branch remains in Simla throughout the year and consequently no expenditure is incurred in bringing up the establishment to Simla or on the move of this Branch to the hills The allowances total Rs. 10,668 per annum, namely, Simla allowance Rs. 6,783, house rent allowance Rs. 2,560 and winter allowance Rs 1,325.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION ON THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

868. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Will Government be pleased to supply to me now the information re racial discrimination on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway promised to me on 31st January 1927 in reply to my unstarred question No. 63 put on that date ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am obtaining the information for the Honourable Member.

GRANT OF FURLOUGH TO THE INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

869. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Is it a fact that no Indian officer in the employ of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India and Rajputana Malwa Railway Companies is entitled to get furlough on any account, while all European employees drawing Rs. 150 and over, with ten years' service, are entitled to get furlough, whether ordinary, on medical certificate or on urgent private affairs, with allowances, up to 6 years ?

(b) Is it a fact that the furlough on half pay which may be granted to an European employee may be commuted into furlough on full substantive pay, so that after 24 or 25 years' active service, he can get furlough on half pay for six years or furlough on full pay for three years ?

(c) Are such liberal furlough rules in force on any of the State Railways in India ?

(d) Is there any reason why in the face of these rules, furlough should be denied to Indians on any account ?

(e) Are Government prepared to move the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Company to consider the question of granting furlough to its Indian employees even on restricted terms ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am obtaining the information for the Honourable Member.

Export Duty on Hides and Skins.

870. Mr. H. G. Cocke : Will Government please state their intentions with regard to the export duty on hides and skins ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India are considering whether the conflicting interests might not be satisfied, if the export duty were replaced by a cess for the benefit of the industry as a whole, which would be administered by a Committee similar to the Indian Central Cotton Committee. I lay on the table a copy of a letter which has been addressed to Local Governments on the subject.

Letter No. 75-T. (17), dated the 17th August, 1927, from the Honourable Sir Geoffrey Corbett, K.B.E., C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Commerce, to all Local Governments.

I am directed to address you on the subject of the export duty on raw hides. As the Government of ..... is aware, the last Indian Finance Bill provided for the removal of the existing duty of 5 per cent.; but the voting on an amendment to continue the duty resulted in a tie, and the President, in accordance with the usual Parliamentary procedure, gave his casting vote in favour of the status quo.

2. The Government of India have carefully reconsidered the question, and they recognise that the voting in the Assembly reflected a definite and well-balanced conflict of interests. After examination of the most recent figures available, they are of opinion that the advantage to the exporter of raw hides from the removal of the duty would to some extent be counterbalanced by the disadvantage to the tanning industry, and they doubt whether there would be any appreciable benefit, at any rate in many parts of India, to the primary producer. In these circumstances they might hesitate again to press upon the Indian legislature a proposal to remove the duty.

3. On the other hand, the Government of India are opposed in principle to export duties except as a revenue necessity, which can no longer be regarded as justifying an export duty on hides. Moreover, the World Economic Conference recently convened by the League of Nations considered that " export duties should only be resorted to to meet the essential needs of revenue or some exceptional economic situation or to safeguard the vital interests of the country ". And it recommended that " in any case, export duties on raw materials should never be imposed for the special purpose of subjecting foreign countries using such materials to an increased burden which will place them in a position of unfair inferiority as regards the production of the finished article ". These recommendations had the unanimous support of the delegates of all countries, including India. The delegates to this Conference were appointed for their personal qualifications. They did not in any way bind their Governments nor were they qualified to act as spokesmen of an official policy. The Government of India, therefore, are not in any way bound by those recommendations or committed to accept them. Nevertheless it must be recognised that the unanimous recommendations of so authoritative a Conference cannot lightly be disregarded.

4. The Government of India think that it might be regarded as a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, if the export duty were replaced by a cess, which would be administered by a Committee representing all interests concerned and would be expended for the benefit of the industry as a whole. It is generally recognised that cesses of this nature have been of great advantage to the cotton industry, to the tea industry and to the lac industry. And in his speech to the Associated Chambers of Commerce at Cawnpore in December last, His Excellency the Viceroy announced that the Government of India would favourably consider proposals to impose similar cesses for the development and organisation of other industries.

5. The Government of India recognise that such a proposal should ordinarily be initiated by the trades concerned, and that without their support and co-operation it would be useless to proceed with it. In this case, however, when the Bill which first imposed an export duty on hides and skins was before the Indian Legislative Council, the Honourable Mr. W. E. (Sir Erskine) Crum, speaking on behalf of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, strongly urged that part of the duty should be set aside for such a purpose. Since then the proposal has been discused more than once. And now that the Government of India no longer find it necessary to claim the whole proceeds of the export duties on hides and skins for revenue purposes, it seems opportune to consider whether the balance could not be profitably utilised in the manner first indicated by Mr. Crum.

6. The objects on which the proceeds of a cess might usefully be spent, would include :

(1) Improvement in the methods of flaying and preserving raw hides, and the prevention of adulteration;

(2) Improvement in the methods of tanning, including:

(a) the training of tanners,

(b) the supply of tanstuffs, and

(c) technological investigation;

(3) Organisation of marketing, grading, etc.

It will be seen that these objects touch very closely the economic life of the people, in the villages as well in the towns, and it seems clear that they are not likely to be fully attained by the activities of the trade alone. The co-operation of the Local Governments and their Departments of Industries appears to the Government of India to be an essential condition of success.

7. In the view of the Government of India, therefore, it would be necessary to constitute a Committee for the administration of the proposed cess on the lines of the Indian Central Cotton Committee, that is, including representatives of the Local Governments. The Indian Central Cotton Committee was constituted on the recommendations of the Indian Cotton Committee of 1919. And it does not seem desirable to set up a similar organisation for the leather industry without some preliminary investigation. In the opinion of the Government of India, there is no necessity in this case for any elaborate or prolonged survey. What they would suggest is a small ad hoc Committee, including representatives of the export trade, the tanning industry and the Local Governments, which would report on the following points :

(1) The articles on which a cess might suitably be imposed, and the rate of cess on each article ;

(2) The constitution and personnel of the Committee which would administer such a cess ; and

(3) The functions of the Committee, and the objects on which the cess might be expended.

In regard to the first point of reference, if the cess is to be utilised for the benefit of the industry as a whole, it would have to be considered whether it should be levied on skins as well as on hides, on the tanning industry as well as on the export trade.

It is thought that an ad hoc Committee with these restricted terms of reference, should be able to submit a report on which a Cess Bill could be based without undue delay.

8. I am now to request that the Government of ..... after consulting the commercial and other interests concerned, will give the Government of India their views on those proposals, and in particular on the proposed appointment of an ad hoc Committee and on the terms of reference.

Mr. B. Das : May I enquire whether Government have received any representation from the Madras tanning industries and shoe manufacturing industries all over India for protection of these industries ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I must ask for notice.

PAY AND YEARLY PROMOTIONS OF PREVENTIVE OFFICERS AND WHARFINGERS.

871. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether there are Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in the Customs Preventive Service in Calcutta ?

(b) Whether the Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in Bombay are not doing similar work as that done by the Preventive Officers ?

(c) If so, why is much difference made in the pay and the yearly promotions of the Preventive Officers and the Wharfingers ?

GRANT OF HOUSE-RENT TO WHARFINGERS AND ASSISTANT WHARFINGERS IN BOMBAY.

872. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether it is not a fact that a grant has been sanctioned for providing the Preventive Officers in Bombay with residential quarters ?

(b) Whether provision has not been made for Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers ?

(c) If so, why they are not given house-rent ?

RESULT OF THE ENQUIRY INTO THE GRIEVANCES OF WHARFINGERS AND ASSISTANT WHARFINGERS.

873. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state the result of the inquiry into the grievances of the Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers made by Sir Basil Blackett personally at Calcutta towards the end of the year 1925 ?

GRANT OF INCREASED PAY AND HOUSE-RENT TO WHARFINGERS AND ASSISTANT WHARFINGERS IN BOMBAY.

874. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state, whether Government have decided to give Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in Bombay a higher scale of pay bearing a reasonable proportion to the salary drawn by the Preventive Officers and also house rent ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I shall answer questions Nos. 871-74 together with your permission.

The Honourable Member is referred to the reply already given to question No. 859.

FINAL REPORT OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE HELD IN GENEVA, DURING MAY 1927.

875. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Government of India have received the Final Report of the World Economic Conference held in Geneva during May 1927 ?

(b) Have Government issued any Resolution or formulated any opinion on the said Report ?

(c) If the answer to (a) and (b), is in the affirmative, will Government kindly state whether they have any objection to supplying Members of this House with copies of the two documents in question ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) It is satisfactory to find that many of the recommendations of the Conference are in general conformity with the principles and practice already followed by India. In particular, as the Indian delegation has said, the section of the Report dealing with tariff levels, when examined in detail, will be found to justify in a stricking manner the policy pursued in India in accordance with the Resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly on the 16th February 1923.

It is expected that the Report of the Conference will be discussed at the session of the Assembly of the League of Nations which meets at Geneva to-day, and the Government do not propose to deal with the Report of the Conference until the Report of the Indian delegation to the Assembly has been received. Meanwhile our delegation has been informed that the Government are not at present prepared to commit themselves in regard to any particular recommendations of the Conference.

(c) The Government are reprinting the Report of the Conference, and also the Report of the Indian delegation to the Conference, and copies will be supplied to Members of the Legislature as soon as possible. Meanwhile copies of both Reports have been placed in the Library.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

ATTACK BY THE AFRIDIS ON SHIAH MUSLIMS IN TIRAH.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Sir, with your permission I want to put a short notice question of which I have given private notice.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the news published under the heading " Frontier Barbarism, Shia Muslims' Woes ", on page 4 of the Hindustan Times, dated the 2nd September, 1927 ?

(b) Will Government please state if the facts stated therein, namely, that a fanatical Mullah, with the help of Afridis, on August 21st, attacked two small Shia tribes, killing and wounding one thousand Shias and burning and plundering their houses and that eight hundred Shia families have taken refuge in British borders are correct ?

(c) If Government are in possession of further and more complete information regarding this will they please state it for the information of the House ?

(d) What action have Government taken or do they propose to take in the matter ?

Sir Denys Bray : I have not had the opportunity of reading the article in question. But the facts are briefly these. Towards the middle of last month a well-known Mullah of Tirah raised a large Afridi lashkar against the Shiah Orakzais. Joined by many Sunni Orakzais, the lashkar overran nearly the whole of the Muhammad Khel Orakzai country by the 23rd August, burnt several villages and drove most of the clan out of tribal territory into the Kohat district. The casualties in this tribal fighting were very heavy, the Muhammad Khel alone admitting to 125 killed. The Chief Commissioner has lost no time in taking up the role of peacemaker and throwing his influence on the side of the restoration of normal conditions in Tirah. One of the gravest features of this heavy inter-tribal fighting is, of course, the danger of the trouble spreading to the tribal inhabitants of the administered districts.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : I want to ask my question. Sir.

(The question was skipped over as the Honourable Member was absent.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is too late.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Sir. I was late only by a few minutes.

QUESTIONS NOT ASKED, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

Jolting of Carriages on the Tarakeswar Line.

857. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that the carriages on the Tarakeswar line shake too much, while there is no such shaking of carriages of the same train, when passing on the main line ? If so, what is it due to ?

(b) Do the Government propose to take steps to prevent the shaking of the carriages on the line ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have no information to this effect. The line is administered by the Local Government with whom any necessary action rests.

(b) Does not arise.

Discharge of Babu Kali Das Mukherjee, Assistant Station Master of Kunri, East Indian Railway.

858. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state in full the reasons for the discharge of Babu Kali Dass Mukerjee, the late assistant station master of Kunri, East Indian Railway (Birbhum District) by the letter No. Es.-741, dated 28th October 1925, from the Divisional Inspector of Asansol ?

(b) Are the Government aware of the fact that the said B. Kali Das Mukerjee was once assaulted by B. Durga Dass Bhattacharjee, the station master of the said Kunri station, and that the said B. Durga Dass the station master was consequently prosecuted under section 323-I.P.C., and only convicted with a nominal fine of Rs. 5 ?

(c) Are Government fruther aware of the fact that B. Durga Dass, the station master, made a report against B. Kali Dass, got the matter reported and enquired into by a European Inspector in the absence of B. Kali Dass while he was ailing in the local hospital owing to the injuries received from the said assault and had him discharged ?

(d) Is it not a fact (i) that B. Kali Dass had already put in service for a period of 18 years and also served the Government during the last European War in German East Africa and Bushire for 4 years and (ii) that B. Durga Dass was, once previous to this, punished and discharged for a similar offence against a European guard and only reinstated to a lower post owing to the war exigencies ?

(e) Is it not also a fact that the said European Inspector who investigated this case, was only immediately after, found to be incompetent as an Inspector and degraded ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the following :

(1) A copy of the judgment of the said criminal case.

(2) The whole record dealing with the discharge of B. Kali Dass.

(3) The detailed service records of the said B. Kali Dass, the said B. Durga Dass, and the said European Inspector ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information with regard to the matter which is entirely within the competence of the Agent to whom a copy of the question has been sent.

PAY OF WHARFINGERS AND ASSISTANT WHARFINGERS IN BOMBAY.

859. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Will the Government answer the following :

(a) Are there Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in the Customs Preventive Service in Calcutta ?

(b) Are not Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in the Bombay Customs Service doing similar work as that done by the Preventive Officers ?

(c) If so, why is much difference made in the pay and the yearly promotions of the Preventive Officers and the Wharfingers ?

(d) Is it a fact that a grant has been sanctioned for providing the Preventive Officers in Bombay with residential quarters and, if so, why no provision is made for Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers and why are they not given house rent ?

(e) What was the result of the inquiry into the grievances of Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers made by Sir Basil Blackett personally at Calcutta towards the end of the year 1925 ?

(f) Have Government decided to give Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in Bombay a higher scale of pay bearing a reasonable proportion to the salary drawn by the Preventive Officers and also house rent ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) and (c). The work done by Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers in Bombay is similar to the work done by Preventive Officers, but less difficult and responsible ; hence the difference in the rates of pay.

(d). The answer to the first part is in the affirmative as regards the second part, no proposals for building quarters for Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers have been submitted to the Government. The Government do not see any necessity for granting house rents to these officers whose pay has been fixed with reference to local conditions.

(e) It was found on further investigation that there was no case for increase in the pay of Wharfingers and Assistant Wharfingers.

(f) The Government consider that the present rates of pay bear a reasonable proportion to the rates of pay of Preventive Officers.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. President : I have received the following notice of a motion for adjournment of the House from Kumar Ganganand Sinha :

"I intend to move the adjournment of the business of the Assembly for discussing a definite matter of urgent importance

I suppose the Honourable Member means urgent public importance :

"namely, the feeling of great apprehension regarding the safety of person created by the successive cold-blooded murders of eight prominent Hindus during the course of the last eight months, the last of which occurred on the 27th August, 1927."

Perhaps the Honourable Member will explain how the matter which he intends to discuss by this motion, is a matter of recent occurrence. It is not any question connected with the recent murder that he proposes to discuss. What he wants to discuss is the feeling of great apprehension regarding the safety of person created by the successive cold-blooded murders. Will the Honourable Member explain how that feeling is a matter of recent occurrence so as to justify the Chair in permitting the Honourable Member to interrupt the ordinary business of the House.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : Isolated cases of murder, Sir, may not have had that effect, but the cumulative effect of all the murders occurring in such quick succession has produced a tense feeling in the country. It is now at the breaking point. Nobody knows what will happen tomorrow.

Mr. President : Why not wait till the ninth murder ? What is the object of the Honourable Member raising this question after the eight murder. The Honourable Member wishes to raise the question of the feeling of great apprehension. It is a growing thing. It is a continuous thing. It is not a matter of sudden occurrence. It has been there for the last eight months. If Honourable Members really thought that the matter was of such great public importance that it should be discussed in this Assembly, they could have given notice of a Resolution. I cannot allow this motion as one relating to a matter of recent occurrence. If the Honourable Member had restricted his motion to some question, connected with the last murder perhaps the Chair would have been disposed to consider the matter, but, as the Honourable Member wishes to raise and discuss the question of the feeling in the Hindu mind regarding the safety of person created by murders that have taken place for eight months past, I cannot treat the motion as one on a matter of recent occurrence.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Would the fiftieth murder make it serious ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Am I not entitled to.....

Mr. President : The Chair has given the ruling.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Secretary of the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State at their meeting held on the 2nd September, 1927, agreed without any amendment to the Bill to repeal certain enactments, which was passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 24th August, 1927."

BILLS PASSED BY THE COUNCIL OF STATE LAID ON THE TABLE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, in accordance with rule 25 of the Indian Legislative Rules I lay on the table the following three Bills which were passed by the Council of State at its meeting of the 2nd September, 1927, a Bill further to amend the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and Married Women's Property Act, 1874 ; a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the provision, maintenance and control of light-houses in British India ; a Bill further to amend the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1925, for certain purposes.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I lay on the table the Agreement* between the United Kingdom and the Latvian Republic relating to Tonnage Measurement Certificates which affects India.

THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder, Maulvi Muhammad Shafee, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. M. A. Jinnah, Mr. Ismail Khan, Mr. Abdul Haye, Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, Mr. J. Coatman, Mr. K. C. Roy, Sir Abdul Qaiyum, Sir Denys Bray, Lala Lajpat Rai and the Mover, with instructions to report within seven days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be nine.

Sir, though this Bill deals with important matters, matters immediately related to what is perhaps the most urgent and insistent issue which confronts us in India to-day, it is a short and simple measure. My original intention was to move that it be taken into consideration.

* Not printed in these proceedings.

I understood however that in several quarters it was thought desirable that its provisions should be considered and examined in Select Committee, and I have accordingly substituted the motion which I have just made. I think, Sir, that I have every ground for confidence that the principle of the Bill will receive general support and the House will agree to its being referred to the large and influential Committee for which the motion provides. If my hope is well-founded it is unnecessary for me at this stage to deal with it at any great length. The intention of the Bill may be stated in the words of the Indian Law Commissioners in their commentary on the original draft of Chapter XVI of the Indian Penal Code. They said :

> " The principle on which this Chapter is being framed is this, that every man should be suffered to profess his own religion and that no man should be suffered to insult the religion of another. Discussion indeed tends to elicit truth, but insults have no such tendency; instead of eliciting truth they only inflame fanaticism."

The measures which on these views the Commissioners proposed are substantially the provisions of Chapter XVI of the Code as it now stands. Many of the apprehensions expressed 80 years ago by the Commissioners of the consequences that would ensue if undue license in these matters were permitted are equally applicable, indeed there is only too much reason to believe that they are still more applicable, to the times in which we live. Religious animosities and differences have not abated, and their worst products, with a vastly greater development of the means of uttering and disseminating them, have a still more speedy and extended capacity for mischief. We live in almost daily contact with the dangers referred to by the Commissioners ; dangers, as they said, which can only be averted by a firm adherence to the true principles of toleration. Our best hope of the mitigation and removal of these dangers, the gravity and the tragic consequences of which are now with such deplorable frequency impressed upon us, still lies and must continue to lie in an effective appeal to and a more general practice of those principles of toleration. But it is necessary that the spirit of toleration should have an effective protection and support in the law by the restraint and punishment of malicious and aggressive intolerance. Recent experience has rendered it desirable that the law should be clarified and more directly adapted to this purpose.

But, Sir, in legislating for these ends we have to be careful that in prescribing punishments for deliberate and unwarranted aggression on the beliefs of others we do not run the risk of restraining or penalising the freedom of legitimate discussion. In the analogous English law great emphasis is laid on the elements of " scoffing or irreverent ridicule," " uttering or publishing contumelious reproaches," " profane scoffing," exposing religious beliefs to " contempt or ridicule," and the like. On the other hand, it has been held that it is not blasphemy with due gravity and propriety to examine and comment upon religious beliefs and doctrines even to the extent of contesting their truth. That, Sir, is the English law. The most important provisions of the existing law in India, which either deal specifically with offences relating to religion or may be found applicable to them, are contained in Chapter XV of the Indian Penal Code and in section 153-A of the Code. Section 295 of Chapter XV, it will be observed, deals with what is in effect a particular though a flagrant case of the offence of mischief, the destruction, damage or defilement of a place of worship or a sacred object.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

The remaining sections 296, 297 and 298 contemplate offences against particular persons or particular assemblies of persons actually engaged in religious worship or ceremonies, and on some particular occasion. These provisions therefore would not be ordinarily applicable or appropriate to the case of contumelious speeches or writings against a religion or against religious sentiments. Then we come to section 153-A of the Indian Penal Code. The fundamental ingredient in this offence is the promotion or the attempt to promote feelings of enmity and hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects. Now it is evident, and it has been shown by experience, that in the great majority of cases this ingredient will in fact be present when a scurrilous attack is made upon religion ; nothing indeed could be more calculated to promote hatred or enmity between classes. But if we are to regard a scurrilous attack upon religion as the substantive matter, this ingredient of promoting envy and hatred between classes becomes in point of law extraneous, though, in point of fact, it could hardly fail to be a circumstance of great relevance and importance. The principal effect of the Bill, then, will be precisely this, to make intentional insults to religion or intentional outrages on religious feelings the substantive matter and to make the promotion of feelings of hatred and enmity between classes extraneous at any rate to the requisite legal element and to the definition of the offence.

Another important point arising out of section 153-A is this. If a scandalous attack on the religion or religious feelings of one class were so framed, as is possible, as to make it difficult to hold that enmity and hatred were thereby promoted against another class ; if, for example, it could not be held as clearly established by the evidence or the circumstances that the author of the attack could himself be reasonably regarded as representative of some other class, or otherwise attracting to it the enmity or hatred of those whose sentiments were immediately assailed, the application of the section would be at least doubtful. This difficulty will be removed by the Bill, as it will be sufficient to establish an intention to insult the religion or outrage the religious feelings of any one class of His Majesty's subjects.

Much attention has been directed to the particular case of scurrilous attacks or calumnies on the founders of religious creeds or personages deemed sacred or divine by the adherents of such creeds. Whether a valid distinction could be drawn between such cases and insults to religion of a more general or a different character seems to me doubtful, but the Bill will remove any doubt there may be, as an intentional and scurrilous attack on a person regarded as sacred or divine could not fail to be at least an attempt to outrage the religious feelings of those holding that belief. But in applying a remedy for one evil, we must beware of setting up another and perhaps a worse evil. To curb and restrain scurrilous and aggressive intolerance is one thing, but we must beware of imposing unnecessary and dangerous impediments on the free movement of thought and speech in legitimate enquiry and discussion, which do not encroach on the rights and liberties of others, and which are themselves the best instruments of progress towards the spirit of reconciliation and toleration. This spirit of reconciliation and toleration is indeed far more to our present purpose than the expedients of punishment and restraint which are certainly necessary, but which can never penetrate so deeply to the root of the malady or touch the profounder causes underlying it. It is therefore important to note that the Bill lays great emphasis on intention. There must be an intentional insult or attempt to insult or an intentional outrage or attempt to outrage. Hence an enquiry or discussion, conducted and expressed, in the words of the English law, "with due gravity and propriety", in good faith and without any evil intention, will not come within the danger of the Bill. The nature of the intention may of course have to be collected or inferred from the internal evidence of any speech or writing which may come into question, or from the circumstances in which it is delivered or published, or both. But it is, I think, alike reasonable and necessary to require that anyone who undertakes the responsibility, or as he may conceive it the duty, of entering upon a religious enquiry, discussion or controversy, shall so temper and moderate his language and arguments as to establish unimpeachably the integrity of his intention. We can restrain no one in any true liberty of thought or speech by merely denying him the license to insult or outrage.

The only other point in the Bill which I think I need notice is the provision that no prosecution can be undertaken without the authority of Government under section 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It will, I think, be generally agreed that such a safeguard is necessary against frivolous, malicious or misguided prosecutions. Without this safeguard, indeed the Bill, especially in times or places in which religious animosities run high, would be more calculated to inflame than allay the dangers of the evils against which it is directed.

Sir, in this brief and somewhat summary explanation of the necessity and the objects of this measure I have deliberately refrained from entering in detail into controversial matters, especially those which are technically controversial. I have not discussed the precise effects of recent judgments in particular cases, as my endeavour has been to limit myself to what I hope are grounds of common consent and to the essential issues raised by the law as it stands in the Statute and the requirements of the situation. But I believe that the Bill will incidentally be effective in determining the lesser controversies and will at the same time approach the larger and more important issue. Because, Sir, the Bill is intended to be, though it cannot be regarded as more than, a practical endeavour to contribute to one aspect, itself a very limited aspect, of a graver and more comprehensive problem, for any complete solution of which, as I have already urged, legislation can only serve, great as is the authority of the law, to support and reinforce the higher authority and the greater powers of good conscience, enlightenment and toleration. (Applause.)

I ask the House to affirm that the support and reinforcement in this manner due from the law is in like manner reciprocally due to the law. I ask Honourable Members to consider this measure and the motion which I have moved in the spirit which animates and pervades the message so recently delivered to us by His Excellency the Viceroy. (Cheers.).

Mr. Abdul Haye (East Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to support the motion of my Honourable friend, the Home Member. I first of all congratulate the Government of India.....

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, on a point of order, I have given notice of an amendment to the effect that this Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should not be impatient. Mr. Abdul Haye.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Sir, I rise to support the motion of my Honourable friend, the Home Member, and in doing so, I first of all congratulate the Government of India on having lost no time in bringing forward this Bill before this Assembly. To me, Sir, it is a matter of extreme regret that it should have been necessary for us to legislate along the lines indicated in the provisions of this Bill. We have passed through circumstances, Sir, which are deplorable. I have no desire to make a speech which will worsen the situation, which is already deplorable, in view of certain attempts that are being made by the leaders of the various communities outside this Assembly. But I want to avail myself of this opportunity of declaring from my place in the Assembly that I most emphatically and unequivocally condemn all scurrilous attacks, no matter whether the person who indulges in them is a Mussalman or a Hindu. (Applause.) Sir, so far as my religion is concerned, there is a definite injunction in the Holy Koran that no Mussalman should indulge in any abusive language or in any scurrilous attack upon the religion or the religious founder of any other community ; and if there have been persons in the past who have been indulging in these attacks or who have written pamphlets or books like " Unnisween Saddi kâ Maharishi ", I have no hesitation in saying that those Mussalmans have acted in a most unIslamic manner. (Applause.)

Sir, I accept the principle of the legislation, but my own opinion is that the provisions of this Bill are rather wide and indefinite. When we come to the clauses of the Bill, the very first question that we have got to ask is what is the immediate cause of this legislation. As you all know it was a scurrilous attack upon the Prophet of Islam, on whom be peace, which created so much agitation among the Mussalmans of India and which created a situation that was fast growing menacing. Now, the first question that I have to ask my Honourable friend the Home Member is, " Does your Bill provide for such cases ? " In his speech he has said that it does, but to me it looks, Sir, that the Bill is very indefinite as it does not say in so many words that any dishonest or scurrilous attack upon the Prophet or the founder of a religion would come within the purview of the law. In view, Sir, of what has happened in the past, I have no desire to leave it to the idiosyncrasy of a Judge who will have to administer this law. My first point in this connection is that we shall have to mention specifically that any scurrilous attack or any insult offered to a Prophet, to an Avatar, to a Guru or to the founder of a religion, would come within the purview of this law. (Hear, hear.)

My next point is that the punishment that has been provided is not sufficient. The Bill says that such person shall be punished with imprisonment of either description which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both. In my humble opinion, this is entirely insufficient. I have no desire to ask you to legislate upon the lines of the " Shariat " of Islam, but you must realise before you provide for punishment that there is an important section of the people, the Mussalmans of India, who hold very strong views on this subject. My next argument is that this insult to a Prophet or to a founder of a religion, or this insult to a religion or outraging the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects is going to be made a new and specific offence, but this offence, as you have already acknowledged, would amount to more than one offence. It would necessarily come within the purview of section 153A also. In view of these facts, Sir, I would strongly urge that the punishment should be adequate and substantial.

Then, Sir, my third point is, as the Honourable the Mover of this Bill has said, that honest and candid and bonâ fide criticism of a religion or its founder should not fall within the purview of this law. But if that is so, would it not be more advisable to make it clear by adding an Explanation to the clauses of this Bill ? In view of the fact that the Bill is being referred to a Select Committee, I reserve my further comments on the subject. I support the motion of my Honourable friend the Home Member. (Applause.)

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, I rise not to discuss the principles of the Bill but to move the amendment which stands in my name. My amendment runs to the effect that this Bill should be referred to the different provinces to elicit public opinion. I do admit that this is a piece of very important legislation, but to me it seems that it is absolutely necessary to give the masses of the country sufficient time to consider this legislative measure. The measure was published only the other day. It was introduced into this Assembly not even a fortnight ago ; I doubt very much if copies of this legislative measure have been received in the remote ends of the country. The Bill to my knowledge has not been published in the local Gazettes of the various Local Governments. The Bill has not been translated into the principal vernaculars of the country and this is a legislative measure which undoubtedly will affect a very large number of people, in fact the whole country, because I have no doubt that as soon as this legislation is passed, it will become an Act. The measure will come into force not only in British India but also within the territories of the Princes in subordinate alliance with His Majesty in this country. Is it right that a measure of this importance should be considered without the knowledge and without the approval of the country at large ? Who is to blame for this panicky piece of legislation ? It is not surely the Members of this Legislature. Government sat quiet with folded arms for a number of years without doing anything. Now that Government see that there is a good deal of public feeling in Northern India provoked by the scurrilous attacks made by one newspaper upon another and the followers of one religion upon the followers of another, they, all of a sudden, bring forward this measure and ask this House to consider it and if possible to pass it into an Act. I do not believe that we should give our consent to a procedure like this. I have always protested in this House, at any rate more than once, against the manner in which legislation is rushed through in this Assembly. A Bill is introduced into the Assembly ; next week it is brought up for consideration of its principle and next week we are asked to pass it finally. I do submit that this is not fair to the people who are to be affected by the proposed legislation. I want to ascertain the opinions of the Press and the people of this country on this legislative measure. There are religious Gurus of the Hindu community, there are religious Gurus of the Mussalmans ; there are also Christian priests whose opinions will have to be taken into account. Sufficient time must be given to the various classes of the people to consider this measure. It may perhaps be urged that it is necessary to pass this measure as soon as possible to allay the public feeling that has been evoked in the country. I do not believe that public discontent or public feeling will be allayed simply by passing this measure. I do not think that we shall lose anything by trying to elicit the opinion of the country, and I do submit to the House that they should agree to my motion.

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

As I said at the outset, I do not want to discuss the principle of the measure at this stage. I agree with a good many points that were sought to be made by my friend Mr. Abdul Haye in his speech. If it be necessary for me to say anything on the point, I reserve my right to say it afterwards. For the present I am content to move my motion, and I do so.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I regret I cannot support the Honourable Mr. Belvi in the motion which he has made. (Hear, hear.) I do not admit that this is a panicky legislation, though I do hold that this is a legislation which has arisen out of an emergency. If a measure like this had been introduced into this House in ordinary times, I would have considered it my duty to oppose it. In my judgment considered on its merits it is a retrograde measure ; but considering the special circumstances in which we are placed at the present moment I think the proposed measure is a necessity and I therefore support its principle. In doing so I want to make my position clear. I want to submit that as soon as I heard of the decision of the High Court of the Punjab in the Rangila Rasul case, I lost no time in saying that, although, technically, the writer of the Rangila Rasul had been acquitted and the judgment was right in law, yet morally he was guilty. With your permission, Sir, I wish to read to the House what I wrote and what was published in The People, of Lahore, dated the 29th May 1927 :

" Technically the decision of the learned judge is correct. The judgment is a triumph for freedom of religious propaganda. But I have no doubt in my mind that morally the publication was a mistake. In these days of intensive communal tension it is nothing short of a moral crime to publish books of this kind. I am not quite sure if it is not bad to publish books of this kind at any time..... But general moralising apart, this is pre-eminently a time when the followers of different religions in India should avoid all provocative propaganda. Of all religious propaganda, disrespectful criticism of the founders of religious systems is the most offensive and objectionable. That the statements are true or authoritative is no defence. May I appeal to Mahashe Rajpal to withdraw the publication from circulation and may I also appeal to the leaders of the Arya Samaj to see that publications of this kind are not encouraged ? "

I go further, Sir, and am prepared to use strong language against the writers of books of the kind of Rangila Rasul and " Unnisween Saddi kâ Maharishi ". I realise the dangerous character of books of that kind in the present circumstances of the country. I do not defend their publication at any time, and under any circumstances, but particularly at this time when we are confronted with a terrible situation, I consider that all persons who indulge in this kind of propaganda are nothing but, enemies of the country. I wish to make no excuse for them and I do not want to qualify my remarks in any way. I think publications and books of this kind ought to be discouraged and suppressed by all possible means, moral or legal, or both inclusive. Having said that, Sir, I am not quite sure if the language of the clause as drafted is not wide enough to cover, unless properly explained, even legitimate criticism or historical research. I do not agree with the interpretation of section 153 which the Honourable the Home Member has put on it. To my mind, that section is absolutely clear and it does not cover the cases which are provided for by this clause by any stress of language or interpretation. Take, for example, the case of those people who criticise their own religion, I mean the religion in which they have been born and the religious society in which they move. No progress is possible unless legitimate criticism is freely allowed and fully protected. The Honourable the Home Member in his speech gave a long explanation of the measure now under consideration and quoted the analogous provisions of the English law. But in this country we have to be a little more careful because it cannot but be recognised that social reform is very much tied down with religious reform, and, with the interpretation of religious texts. Therefore, the law should not be so worded as to make it impossible for those who want social reform, and who want to carry on social reform propaganda. It should be, as has been suggested by my Honourable friend Mr. Abdul Haye, made clear either by an explanation added or by any change of language in the proposed clause, that bona fide criticism, historical research, and all that leads to the interpretation of religious texts in such a way as to lead to progressive reform in social matters will not be affected by the provisions of this clause. I do not agree with my friend Mr. Abdul Haye in saying that insults to religious founders do not come within the purview of this clause. Insults against religious founders are not directed against their personality. If the intention is to outrage the feelings of the followers of these religious founders, then the clause covers it. But if he or anybody else in the Select Committee wishes to provide anything further to stop scurrilous criticism of religious personalities, he will have my entire support. I may go a step further and say boldly that the Hindu community will welcome this measure most of all, in fact in preference to all other communities. I have many reasons for saying this, but I do not want to go into them. For a long time the Hindus had absolutely no intention of going in for any proselytizing propaganda. If at the present moment some sections of the Hindu community are engaged in proselytizing propaganda, as I understand it, it is more as defensive measure than an active propaganda for conversions. However, I do not want to go into that question, but I do want to assert on the floor of this House that the Hindu community as such will not object to any provision being made in the criminal law of the land which would make the intentional insult of religion or the intentional insult of high religious personages an offence. Therefore, to me there does not appear to be any necessity of circulating this measure for opinions. It is a measure which has arisen out of certain special circumstances and I think it ought to be passed as speedily as may be possible.

While I give my entire and whole-hearted support to this measure considering the circumstances of the times, I just want to repeat that care should be taken in the Select Committee to so word the law as to make it safe for those people who indulge in bona fide criticism or who make historical research about religious matters. That ought to be clearly understood.

Sir, after having said this, I just want to suggest to the Honourable the Home Member that the name of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya might be substituted in place of mine, because I may not be able to attend the meetings of the Select Committee. I have his permission to say so.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : May I say one word, Sir, on the point mentioned by Lala Lajpat Rai. If you and the House will permit, I should be very glad to make the substitution he suggests.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the name of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya be substituted for the name of Lala Lajpat Rai on the Select Committee."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I also regret that I cannot possibly support the motion moved by my friend Mr. Belvi that this Bill be circulated. I think this House must realise that there can be no difference of opinion on the fundamental principle, namely, that any vilification or wanton attack upon any religion or upon any individual which is likely to outrage the religious feelings of any particular class of His Majesty's subjects should be condemned. There can be no question that that is a state of things which ought not to be tolerated, particularly at this moment, as was well described by Lala Lajpat Rai. When that is so, I would like to ask the Honourable Member, what is the object of his motion that the Bill be circulated, except that it will mean that probably it will be several months before we can get back this Bill for discussion in the Assembly. If this is circulated, it is quite certain that it may not be possible to pass this Bill in this Session. It must wait till the cold weather Session. Is there any object in bringing about this delay ? I should like to understand from the Honourable Member what is the object that he gains by postponing this Bill. He says this Bill ought to be circulated so that the masses may understand it. Sir, if this House is unanimous—and I take it there can be no question that we in this House wish to make it clear that in future no wanton vilification or attack on any religion shall be permitted—then let us proceed with this Bill. Let us enact a measure which will give us security against these scurrilous writers of the character now described. As to how this measure should be modelled, and as to how it should be altered in the Select Committee, various suggestions have been thrown out, but I have my own ideas on the subject ; but that is entirely a matter for the Select Committee. Therefore, I do urge upon the Honourable the Mover of the amendment, Mr. Belvi, not to press his motion that the Bill be circulated because it is a dilatory motion. If he withdraws his motion, then we are only concerned with the motion that the Bill be referred to the Select Committee. Sir, on this subject, as I am on the Select Committee, I do not wish to take up the time of the House. A few suggestions have already been made and, as I said before, I have also got some ideas with regard to this Bill. The Honourable the Home Member made it very clear, and I thoroughly endorse the principle, that while this measure should aim at those undesirable persons who indulge in wanton vilification or attack upon the religion of any particular class or upon the founders and prophets of a religion, we must also secure this very important and fundamental principle that those who are engaged in historical works, those who are engaged in the ascertainment of truth and those who are engaged in bona fide and honest criticisms of a religion shall be protected. Sir, there is, therefore, really no difference of opinion between the Honourable the Home Member who represents the Government and this side of the House. The only question is how to shape and model this Bill so as to secure those fundamental principles upon which we are all agreed. Sir, I would only suggest one more thing and that is this. I understand my Honourable friend Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan desires to serve on the Select Committee, and I hope the Honourable the Home Member will kindly accept his name also for membership of the Select Committee.

12 NOON.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the name of Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan be added to the Select Committee".

The motion was adopted.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the motion of my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi that this Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion. I desire, Sir, to make it perfectly clear that I am not for a moment in favour of permitting intentional or scurrilous attacks upon the religion of anybody. Here, I may parenthetically add that I claim to be a student of religion. To religion I have given the best years of my study and I claim to this day to be more intensely and more passionately attached to my religion, the universal religion of my forefathers, than anybody, probably, who claim to be attached to his religion. But that apart, with all that, Sir, I do not see why I should be so much taken out of my equilibrium or out of my thought-balance because, as it always happens, a few people with more zeal than discretion indulge in what they consider to be a kind of great propaganda for the enlightenment of the world. Very often these attacks are due to superficial knowledge of religion , and if anybody has to resent, Sir, if any community has been subjected to the most intentional, most scurrilous and most vilifying attacks at the hands of all persons in the world. We, the Hindus, are the greatest sufferers in that respect. Every dear aspect of our religion has been criticised, every sacred text has been torn to pieces by men who know only to scoff, who do not know the elements of true religion nor of true spirituality. For many hundred years, the Christian missionaries who have come to India by cartloads have been attacking the most supremely beautiful, the most supremely rapturous revelations of spiritual life contained in the Hindu scriptures. Has the Hindu religion been thereby shattered to pieces ? On the other hand the Hindu religion is spreading everyday by leaps and bounds. The universal religion of the Supreme is spreading every day, not necessarily with a single name, but the same supreme spirit with various names. What is after all Christianity, but a faint shadow of the Hindu religion. What is Muhammadanism ? The Great Prophet whom I revere as much as any Mussalman friend of mine and the religion that he established are but reflections of the one Light. "The One remains, the many change and pass". What are these changes but the passing glimmers of the Eternal Light ? Some misguided people, out of zeal, take it into their heads to attack the founders of other religions. If fanatics lose their balance,

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

there is no reason why we, sober and saner people, should also lose our balance. Sir, I am sorry to bring it to the notice of this House that the religion to which I have the honour to belong has been ruthlessly vilified by hundreds of Christian missionaries. Coming nearer home, the Arya Samajists have in their ignorance been condemning us who follow the Sanathan Dharma as idolators. But who in this world are not idolators ? And of what are the majority in the world idolators ? Idolators of Lucre, of Lust, of the wine bottle ! Surely our idolatry has not been so bare as theirs. Whom do we worship through our idols ? The all-merciful, all-benevolent Lord Sri Krishna who in his infinite Love incarnated on the banks of the Jumna, fascinating all hearts with his magic beauty casting on all around His bewitching glances and helping all to free themselves from the fetters forged on themselves by ignorance, and lust, and greed and vanity. And yet is there any non-Hindu man or woman who has not attacked Sri Krishna ? These silly attacks, we simply pass by. We treat them with the contempt they deserve. These attacks have not belittled Him in our eyes. Surely we who are legislators should show a larger measure of level-headedness in enacting penal measures in this House. Why should we be scared and why should we lose our mental balance at the silly doings of these fanatics ? Fanatics there will always be in the world. These misguided fanatics have merely a very superficial knowledge of religion ; and owing to their half knowledge, which is worse than ignorance, they attack other religions. Are we therefore to lose our heads and cry out : " Oh, religion is in danger ". Even if all the rest of the world should attack my religion, I do not see why I should lose faith in myself and raise any alarm. The supreme religion in which I believe is bound to flourish in spite of the scurrilous and vilifying attacks by others. Those who attack my religion do not know its real truth that all are brothers, so far as the Spirit is concerned, the one Spirit that pervades the whole world and is God. He is inseparably close to us ; he is the bond that cements us all together ; and makes us brothers. If this you grasp, why do you allow the writings of the fanatics to disturb your equanimity ? Very often those fanatics prove to be not learned in any religion. They are over-emotional and often change suddenly. Some, when they come to scoff, very often remain to pray. It is our duty, it is the duty of every truly religious man, to take these things in their true light. Let all the world attack Sri Krishna. He is none the less the Sri Krishna of unbounded mercy whom I adore. I will treat all His detractors with the contempt they deserve. How many hundreds of people have not attacked Christ ? How many hundreds of people have not attacked the divinely-inspired Law Giver of the world, the Great Manu, during the past six or seven years in my own Presidency of Madras. Not a day passes in the Madras Presidency without the Brahmin community and the Law Giver Manu not coming in for a fair share of ridicule and attack from certain people. All our temples, all our rituals and all our ceremonials have all been ruthlessly attacked. Yet, Sir, the great Law Giver Manu has not disappeared. The greater the attacks made upon Manu, the more resplendant does he shine. I am surprised in this connection that such a level-headed gentleman like my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah should be so alarmed at the doings of the fanatics. He cannot understand why the Prophets should be attacked. He wants that this Bill should be rushed through at once. Why should we not wait for three months more to elicit public opinion on this Bill ? For hundreds of years the Hindu Avatars have been attacked. I am not a lawyer, and I hope my lawyer friends will correct me if I am wrong, I think the Indian Penal Code has been in existence for nearly 60 years ; in spite of the existence of the Indian Penal Code these irresponsible attacks have been going on and will go on. I do not see why the leaders of parties and the front bench leaders in this House should be so disturbed in their equanimity as to rush this Bill through without giving sufficient opportunity to the public to know what the contents of the Bill are. Are we to lose our heads because a fanatic has written in the most scurrilous manner against the founder of another religion ? I wish that we are cool-headed in all matters, especially in legislation. The other day, a fanatic lectured to other fanatics that he wanted not Swaraj but only Muslim Raj. Are we on that ground to lose our heads ? Fanatics there have been and fanatics there will always be in this world. In this world, there are always good men and bad men. Human nature is complex. It is impossible to separate the chaff from the grain through mere legislation. I should therefore appeal to the House that they should calmly consider this matter. As I have already said, it is not that I am lacking in fanaticism of my own kind. I love my religion most ardently, but I also revere other religions. It was the Christian religion that I learnt first. I love the Christian religion. I love the Christian religion because I believe it is part and parcel of my own religion. The Christian religion I learnt from preachers of Christianity who were most qualified to preach it. In this connection, I would refer only to one name, the name of Dr. William Miller, at whose feet I sat and learnt the New Testament, and I can claim that I know the New Testament fairly well. It has been my privilege to come in contact not only with preachers of religions but also with great men who have lived in blissful communion with the Supreme Existence. Just three days ago, I got a letter from one of whom the world knows nothing, from one who is a Christ, a Muhammad, almost a Sri Krishna, telling me ; " Be true to yourself, be a true Brahman ". (Applause.) If there is one single true Brahman left, the whole world will be saved. (Laughter.) Now, Sir, am I going to be disturbed in my mental equilibrium because the Arya Samajists vilify Sri Krishna, and denounce me as an idolator ? The Arya Samajists vilify Sri Krishna as one who lived in the midst of thousands of Gopis and as one who performed the rasakrida. These ignorant men, grown-up babies revelling in dirt, cannot understand the mystery and the rapture, the unspeakable beatitude of the union of the human with divine Love, of the Eternal Rasakrida which the pure in spirit alone can in spirit comprehend ! The Arya Samajists like ordinary Christian missionaries are mere children who believe in big words. As to those who vilify, let me ask how many of them know the true meaning of the Spirit ? Can they so much as think of the Spirit ? " Yato vacho nivartantê aprâpya manasâ saha "—Whence all thought and world alike fall back without reaching it. Yes ; God is Spirit ; and can be realised only by the spirit in us cleansed of all dross. But everybody is not a saint in this world. Everybody cannot visualise God in the nameless, formless. Men's minds want some Word, some Figure. Nâma and Rupa, Sound and Form, are the very basis of this world. What is nâma and rupa, but idolatry. The man that transcends nâma and rupa, that ancient wise man, he does not come out and complain that the Spirit has been destroyed. He does not complain against any one or anything in this world. He takes up all things smilingly, with Love in his heart and blessings on his lips ; for in all verily he perceives the blissful Krishna, the Supreme Soul ! The true Sikh, the true Christian, the true Muhammadan is also the true Hindu, is also a true devotee of the Lord Krishna, the One merciful Lord of beatitude and grace. And I do not see why because some people have said certain stupid things, therefore the sedate Legislatures of India are to be rushed into legislation. Do you think this legislation is going to bring about the millenium ? Will it set all disputes at rest ? It will not. This therefore is my first objection to the passing of this legislation at once, in a manner which is not warranted for people who have to carry very cool heads on their shoulders.

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

Secondly, what about the scurrilous things against our culture and religion that are written and said outside India ? What are you going to do about that ? Very recently there has been an instance where an American lady after a short visit to our land has written and published a book which severely scurrilously criticises Hinduism. What is going to be done with that book ? In the papers there has been much agitation about that book. Will this legislation reach that book ? If anybody has been an offender I suppose that lady has been. Personally I should simply read that book and smile over it, half in sorrow, half in contempt. There are some few things in it that are true, but a great many things that are absolutely imaginary, the product of a too fertile brain, of the obsessed imagination. Remember the book is written by a lady who has no husband, no home, no children of her own ; yet she longs to set right other's children ! Of course, bachelors' wives and maiden's children are always well taught ! I pity the good-intentioned lady, she seems to have had some very sad experiences in India which have led her to the conclusion that 8 out of 10 Hindu male adults are impotent, and Hinduism is responsible for it all ! And she rushes into the public gaze and wants the whole world to agree with her in her denunciation and blasphemy of things too holy for her American brain to fancy even ! Now, Sir, is this how India can be reformed ? Who is the man that can reform other people ? Surely he that has first reformed himself, that has himself overcome the temptations of the flesh. And he will reform others not through foul words, nor through foul propaganda, nor through foul books, but by smiles and gracious words of brotherly love. Yes, as the great Ram Tirtha has said beautifully : " Wanted reformers not of others but of themselves ! " We want the reformer that can stand up in his naked purity even as the Gopikas stood before the eye of the Supreme Lord Krishna. We want one that can purify and ennoble everything that he comes into contact with. That is the sort of reformer we need.

I want to be true to my religion ; and I wish to plead for tolerance. By all means let us see how we should deal with mischief-makers and those who hurt other men's religious feelings. But, as I said, most of the things said about India is absolute trash when it is not pure vilification ; and how are you going to deal with that ? There is Mr. Pilcher, for instance,—I suppose he is Right Honourable (Honourable Members: "No, no.") Well, I am glad he is not a Right Honourable gentleman. He or somebody else says something deliberately wicked in England, and it is flashed across the wires, a huge fuss is made about it in the papers, the Statesman has got it one day ; next day apologies and explanations are made ; and so on.

Now, Sir, I think that the best thing for us to do is to find out what the best brains of the country think. We cannot of course arrogate to ourselves all monopoly of the best brains of the country, although I do not claim that we are quite representative of the people. But there are those outside this House who can be expected to be better exponents of religion, better guardians of their own religion. And why should we not know what these say ? But, if we do not pass this legislation next week, says somebody on the opposite Benches, the Heavens will tumble down. I for one should not be sorry for that. All the wickedness and sin of this world will then be washed away and we may have a newer and a better world. It is true there has been some correspondence going on in the papers. I remember Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer writing in the Hindu suggesting some kind of legislation. Some were for it and others were not. I say, why should this House arrogate to itself all wisdom and what is the necessity for this breathless haste ? Mr. Jinnah does not say what the necessity of it is. It is not for Mr. Belvi to prove the non-urgency. It is for Mr. Jinnah to prove the urgency and he has not shown the absolute and urgent necessity of immediate legislation. I know somebody wrote something bad in the Punjab ; and I suppose the man has been booked. (An Honourable Member : " No.") Such a man can be booked, and the best way of booking him is to treat him with the contempt that he deserves. I therefore think that there is very good reason why we should consult all the various religions in India,—the leaders, the Sankaracharyas and the great Maulanas—we should consult them all, some Buddhist leaders, and some good Christian missionaries also who live according to the word of Christ and not only preach it. We should do well to consult them ; I do not know why we should throw away what these people have to say. And if after consulting the sedate, the thoughtful, calm, considered opinion of the country, we still find that certain mischievous people should be seriously dealt with, then, of course, there will be time enough to do it. Who is to judge—and already my Honourable friend, Mr. Abdul Haye, has said that he is not going to trust to the idiosyncrasies of any official Judge—who is to say whether there has been an intentional insult or not ? Not certainly Mr. Abdul Haye in every case, nor I either. Who is to decide ? The poor Judge has to say whether it has been intentional or not. But it is a very difficult thing to do that. The accused may claim all along that he is not really blaspheming but only propagating the supreme religion of Truth. Miss Catherine Mayo may claim that she is—and who can say that no, she is not, lunatic as she is—sincere. All lunatics are very sincere. Therefore, it is rather asking the House to take a huge plunge to penalise all such things with severity. It is just because the matter is agitating our minds, I say let us have some time during which our feelings may cool and our ideas assume proper proportions. Therefore, I strongly support the motion that this Bill be circulated for opinion, and I give my word as a religious man that the Heavens will not tumble, the Himalayas will not rush down the valleys, the oceans will not swell and the earth will not disappear if we take this measure at the next Delhi Session. I strongly recommend to the good sense, calm consideration and sedate judgment of every Honourable Member of this House that he do give his support to the amendment of my Honourable friend, Mr. Belvi.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): After the speech of my Honourable friend, Lala Lajpat Rai, it is not really necessary for me to elaborate the points which he has made. I am in entire agreement with the general principle and spirit of the Bill. So far as the details are concerned, we must examine them very carefully, and such exceptions or explanations as may be necessary to put in, for instance, explanations corresponding to that which is found in section 153-A. or the exceptions to the defamation section, will have to be examined and corresponding safeguards may have to be provided. While I do think that tolerance is far more important and that the liberty of the Press cannot be held to be sacrosanct in this direction, still the Press and its liberty ought also to be safeguarded. Equally, you must see that there is a difference between publication and authorship, and you must not, as in the case of the sedition section, make authorship and publication identical and say that even mere innocent publisher of an insult becomes liable. These are things which have to be examined and I hope the Select Committee will examine them. There are many other observations which strike me, but I think they are more pertinent to a later stage, when the Bill is discussed in Select Committee and afterwards when it emerges from it and is taken up for consideration. I refrain, therefore, from alluding to many technical and substantial points. But I would only say that this Bill has been long overdue. It is by no means a day too soon. It is not simply for the Muhammadans, not simply for the Hindus, not simply for the Christians, but for every community and for every religion in the land. Simply because it has been necessitated by the Rangila Rasul case, let us not imagine that the evil was not there or it is merely for the purpose of one religion being safeguarded. It is for the purpose of protecting the religions in India from deliberate, intentional insults and gross and wanton outrages. I would prefer, of course, not the word "intentional" by itself—I would say that it should be "deliberate." I like the word "outrage" and not the word "wound", because it is a much stronger word and it is necessary to have a stronger word than the weaker word which is used in some of the sections dealing with offences relating to religion in Chapter XV of the Penal Code. Speaking for myself, I do think that tolerance has been the law of the land—certainly in ancient times and in mediæval times. I do not wish to deal with the age of religious persecutions, but taking the great age of Asoka there is not the slightest doubt that tolerance was really technically the law of the land,—and no one was permitted in the guise of either proselytizing or championing the cause of his religion to wound other religions. Respect for the religion of another is the essence of the matter, as Asoka's edict puts it, and without it you cannot be truly religious and you cannot defend your own religion. Therefore, I think this was the law of the land whatever may have been the fluctuations of opinion in mediæval times. The Chapter in the Penal Code was, I suppose, thought sufficient when it was enacted. It is a great pity that during recent years there has been a large recrudescence of religious feuds which has made the introduction of this Bill, though it is highly regrettable, necessary. We must look at it not from the point of view of pure religion, but from that of secular considerations. The considerations of a united nation, the considerations of peace and good will between the two great communities which inhabit this land, and the opportunity that we are denied for doing other things when people break each other's heads, make it imperative that this Bill, made word-perfect and brought up according to the latest patterns and consistent with reasonable liberty of the Press, the people and all sections of the House, should certainly be passed. I have myself felt that this is only one of the measures which by legislation should be undertaken by this House for the purpose of settling the communal trouble. There are other far more important measures than this which in another place, I suppose, will be discussed, and when the time comes, those measures also, if the Government agrees, will have to be put on the Statute-book. If, as His Excellency the Viceroy said the other day, Government is prepared to take all those steps which may be necessary for the purpose of bringing about communal harmony in this land, I say legislation is inevitable, and legislation of the type that is going to be suggested, of course, subject to such modifications as Government and this House may think necessary to make, will have to be taken up in case this is to be supplemented, as it has to be—for this Bill by itself will hardly do. Then, there is one other point that strikes me in this connection. It is true that, so far as Southern India is concerned, we have not got very much of this Hindu-Muhammadan trouble, and perhaps because of that, the Honourable Member who just spoke before me thought that there may not be so much necessity for this legislation. I do not consider that this Bill is either panicky or useless. As I said. it has been long overdue. The truth is, the conditions in Upper India with which we in the South are not altogether very familiar, make it necessary that some steps should be taken in order that religion may not be abused, that in the name of religion communal troubles should not be fomented and fostered. What really happened is, not that you really propagate your religion, or you defend your religion, but religion is but a plaything, religion is but a toy, and you use it for the purpose of your secular ambitions and for your secular quarrels and rivalries. That, Sir, is the conclusion to which I have been obliged to come after such measure of experience as I have been gathering throughout the length and breadth of the country. The All-India Congress Committee has taken a great step forward in the direction of communal harmony and with the warm-hearted support not only of Mr. Jinnah and his friends but also of others who are still wavering, or differing, we will be able to lay the foundation stone of a great nation. The other steps which I hope will be taken on the 7th instant at Simla will bring about even greater peace and good will ; but we do want the Government to give all the legislative assistance it can and its voting strength to those who are interested in bringing about communal harmony. If they say, ' Hands off ', you cannot bring about peace and good will by mere conferences. It is impossible, because no leadership in India is of that indisputable description that you can say that a leader's word is implicitly obeyed throughout India. Therefore, it is that we want the sanction of legislation and the authority it carries, which will prevent persons profaning the sacred name of religion. Persons who are actuated, consciously or unconsciously, by purely secular considerations have brought about a great deal of trouble and turmoil. I have no desire to take up any sectarian cause or hold a brief for any one in this connection. The blame has been on both sides. All the communities in India are to blame, and more, for more than all the communities, Government are to blame and to blame throughout; and in saying that I am not saying a hackneyed thing or a thrice-told tale but what I firmly and conscientiously believe to be true, namely, that Government have been grossly negligent in the discharge of their duties in having allowed this communal conflagration to spread for years in this way. Therefore, Sir, I do support this Bill and I would request my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi not to press his motion for the circulation of the Bill.

[Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar.]

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur (South Madras : Muhammadan) : I had no idea of taking part in this discussion but for the fact that my Honourable friend from Madras, Mr. M. K. Acharya, dwelt upon the fact that legislation on the subject is not so very necessary and that the matter may be put off. I will be as brief as possible in what I am going to say. My friend Mr. M. K. Acharya said that it was not a case where we must lose our balance. Then I should tell him that the agitation is not confined only to Upper India but it has extended to every nook and corner of India, I may even say, to our own Presidency. Sir, this is not the outcome of fanaticism, but it is the outcome of pure religious fervour. The House should be alive to the fact that the Mussalmans as a class are very much attached to our Prophet and the reason is this. We firmly believe that it is he who taught us the strictly monotheistic principles of religion. It is he who taught us the unity of God. It is he who has shown us the way to salvation by means of peace. The very term 'Islam' means to resign ourselves to the will of God, to be peaceful. So legislation is a means of keeping up the peace. Our revered leader, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, has remarked, this kind of legislation has been long overdue. So far as we are concerned our principle is :

Mai Khuro, Mushaf bisazo, atish undar kaaba zan
Herchai Khahi Kun valaikin mardumazari makun.

This is the philosophy of our religion. It is not a philosophy taught by Mr. Acharya. It means "You may take wine, may burn down (holy) Koran, you may set fire to Mecca itself, but do not wound the feelings of anybody, which is the most heinous and unpardonable crime." This is applicable with even greater force in the case of religious feelings of the professors of different religions.

So, Sir, it is highly necessary that legislation of this kind should be undertaken and any further delay will prove disastrous to the country and will not be in the interests of Government itself. Though I have not congratulated the Government on any occasion, at least now I congratulate the Government of India on having introduced this legislation. Therefore I gladly and most willingly support the motion.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan) : I would be extremely sorry if my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi insisted upon his motion for delaying this piece of legislation. I think the great leaders of the Nationalist Party and of the Independent Party have given good reasons for proceeding with this legislation and not circulating it for eliciting public opinion. If my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya wants further reasons for proceeding with this legislation and not delaying it any more I would tell him one or two reasons. My friend might not have heard that there was anything like a controversy over the question of music before mosques. In Southern India at least it was absolutely a new thing, but my friend must have experienced by this time that this question which arose in Northern India has made its way to Southern India and there were riots, fightings and even killing of human beings on this account. I do not understand why my friend does not perceive what is going on in the country. Is it not a fact that we are passing through a very delicate time, because mischievous people in both the communities are trying to disturb as far as they can the harmony between the two great communities of India ? I believe that this question of music before mosques was nothing more than the invention of the evil genius of mischievous people in both the communities, and I submit that these scurrilous writings are only another phase of the same activity. It has begun only recently and we have seen what amount of agitation it has created. Of course it is still confined to the Punjab and the Frontier Provinces, but then it must have its sequel throughout the length and breadth of India in no time. I confess, Sir, I am really glad that the Government has intervened in time to check this growth of another deplorable phase of communal outbursts. I submit the Government is doing the best thing at the present moment. If it did not come up at once with this sort of legislation, whatever shape it may be given in the Select Committee, I think this would have spread like wild fire, in the same way as the question of music before mosques has spread from one part of the country to the other. If my Honourable friends Mr. Belvi and Mr. Acharya think there is not enough tension in the country between the two great communities, then they might press this motion for delaying the matter and might carry it and then see what consequences will follow.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the House will unanimously agree with the remark of the Honourable the Home Member that while everyone is entitled to complete religious freedom, no one has a right to wound the religious susceptibilities of others. There are occasions, Sir, when the truth or falsehood of a statement is a matter of secondary importance, and when the manner of it is more of its essence than its correspondence to fact. I understand that when a man makes defamatory statements against another person it is not a sufficient defence for him to say that the statements made by him are true. He has also to show that he was not actuated by malice and that he was performing a duty in making those remarks. It is right therefore that the same principle should be applied to a matter which is of far greater importance than purely personal reputation or personal feelings. But when I consider the scope of the Bill I confess, Sir, that my apprehensions are somewhat roused. When I looked first at the legislation proposed by Government I regarded it as an innocuous measure, as calculated only to counteract the evil which it is its object to prevent. But I happened to compare the new section 295-A with the legislation proposed by Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, and then I became aware of the dangers concealed in the language which has found favour with Government. Now, Sir, Sivaswamy Aiyer proposes to punish any man who intentionally indulges in " remarks of a blasphemous character against any religion, the founder of any religion, the deity of any religion or any reputed incarnation thereof, or any prophets, saints or spiritual leaders ". Now, as Lala Lajpat Rai has said, we witness daily in India the spectacle of reformers belonging to a community attacking the religious beliefs of that very community. And the question is of great importance in so far as living spiritual leaders of a community are concerned. There have been disputes in various communities with regard to their spiritual leadership. I have one or two such communities at the present moment in view. There are friends of mine of heterodox opinions who have used strong language on the subject which some might regard as scurrilous but which others would not regard as being stronger than the facts warrant. If the general language of the new clause proposed by Government to be enacted as section 295-A is sufficient to cover all the various categories mentioned by Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, I am not sure that the clause may not lead to worse results than its absence would produce. It is of the greatest importance, Sir, from this point of view that this clause should be so drafted as to protect honest and legitimate criticism and as not to prevent social reformers from giving effect to views, the expression of which they regard as necessary for the uplift of their community. This is not a question merely of quarrels between Hindus and Muhammadans. It is a question which affects members of the same religion to no less an extent ; and, if I may speak more explicitly, it affects members of the Hindu community more than the followers of either the Muhammadan or the Christian religion.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

From another point of view, Sir, I am not sure that the Bill would be regarded as wide enough to cover all objectionable cases. Recently the feelings of the Hindu community in general and the people of Maharashthra in particular were agitated by some remarks which appeared in an Urdu paper about Sivaji. Now, any one who is acquainted with Maharashthra will know that Sivaji is not regarded merely as a political hero. He is looked upon with feelings bordering on religious reverence ; but the Bill does not prevent the vilification of such a person. We have then to guard against these two great difficulties. We have to see that the Bill is of such a character as to satisfy members of all communities and at the same time not so wide as to kill all free and honest criticism. The illustrations that I have given are sufficient to show the difficulties inherent in the case, and that might, I hope, be regarded in some quarters as a reason for giving more thought to the subject than has so far been bestowed on it.

Sir, apart from these things, one cannot, as a student of literature and history, deny that it might sometimes be legitimate and necessary to criticise even the religious beliefs of others. Now I know that nothing is further from the intention of the Honourable the Home Member than to prevent the expression of remarks which are meant to be purely historical, provided they are uttered in a proper spirit, and, I said to myself when the Honourable the Home Member was speaking, " If this law is passed, would it be permissible for a man in India to publish a book like Renan's Life of Christ ? Surely no exception could be taken to the serious language and tone of that book, and yet, I honestly confess that I am not sure that a book of that kind would not place its writer within the four corners of this law as it is proposed to be enacted.

There are certain other remarks of a general character which one might make on this subject, but as the matter will be considered in the Select Committee, which consists of a large number of Members of this House, I have no desire to weary Honourable Members with detailed remarks. But there is one consideration that I should like to place prominently before the House, particularly before Government. What is the object of the constantly recurring religious attacks that we come across in newspapers and in speeches ? The object surely is proselytisation. My friend Dr. Paranjpye suggested three years ago that it should be made penal to convert a man to any faith other than that of his forefathers without adequate previous notice of the proposed conversion being given to the District Magistrate (" Hear, hear ".) (An Honourable Member : " Do you think so ? ") and without adequate publicity being given to that fact. If it is desired really to destroy the incentive to these religious attacks, which we all deplore, I think it is not merely desirable but necessary to see that conversion is allowed only in accordance with a well-understood legal procedure. I am not, Sir, pleading for one community or another. I am sure members of all communities here would agree that the mischief that we are trying to check would perhaps cease to exist to a considerable extent if a law of the kind I have suggested could be enforced. It is, Sir, from this point of view that I confess that I find myself in some sympathy with the remarks that have fallen from Mr. Belvi. I know how acute the situation is. I know the great tension that the present state of the law created a short time ago, but we have to legislate not for the moment but in such a way as to subserve the permanent interests of our country. I belong, Sir, to no communal organization ; in fact, I belong to a Society which debars its members from joining communal organizations. If I have spoken in the strain which I have done, it is because I honestly feel lest our best and permanent interests should be injured by our being in a hurry to check temporary causes of estrangement between the various communities inhabiting this country. I have spoken, Sir, as far as one living in India may do, as a detached and impartial observer, and I trust that the House will take my remarks in this spirit.

Mian Mohammad Shah Newaz (West Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, while I congratulate the Government on the introduction of this very important and urgent measure of legislation, I cannot help saying that in one respect it is dangerously wide. It rightly punishes those who make scurrilous and malicious attacks on religion and the founders of religions, but when it punishes those persons who outrage the religious feelings of a class, I honestly confess that I do not understand what is the meaning of the words " religious feelings ", because to my mind some of the religious feelings are essentially irreligious. I beg leave to say that notions about God and religion and religious feelings are changing with the changing wheel of time and the days are not very far off when some of these seemingly religious feelings will be entirely disapproved of. Again, Sir, there are some religious feelings, say the religious feelings of the Hindus, which are diametrically opposed to the religious feelings of the Mussalmans and thus there is a conflict of religious feelings between the two communities. I do not wish to irritate the members of the Hindu community or any other community in India in any way. It is not my religion that I should attack or wound the feelings of any man in the world who believes in the unity of God and call him infidel—but I know that there is a feeling among Muhammadans and Christians, be it right or wrong, that they think that the idol worshippers are infidels who cannot escape the fire of hell ; that is to say, they outrage the religious feelings of the Hindus, and in this way the religious feelings of the Hindus and the religious feelings of members of other religions are diametrically opposed. I do not wish to give more illustrations, but I tell you, Sir, that some religious feelings are such that they cannot be respected, and if we want to reform socially and in the sphere of religion, the words " to outrage the religious feelings of a class " should be deleted, and the Select Committee should seriously go into this aspect of the case. One should not be allowed to insult the religion and founders of religions, and if you like, Hindu incarnations. This is of course in accordance with the recent ruling of a Division Bench of the Punjab High Court and other High Courts. The Bill should not go further, because if it goes further, it will be trespassing on dangerous and mischievous grounds. The remedy will be worse than the disease. With these remarks, Sir, I support the motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee.

[Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz.]

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I am perfectly certain that the Honourable the Home Member will admit that a bad law is worse than no law at all ; but if I can show to him that the draft of his Bill now before the House is defective in three very essential respects, I am sure he will feel the desirability of recasting the whole measure. It is perfectly obvious that the Government of India is pledged to religious neutrality, and all classes of His Majesty's subjects in this country are firm believers in religious toleration. But while there must be religious toleration in the widest sense of the term, it must not trench upon freedom of speech and freedom of action, so far as that freedom is consistent with liberty which does not primarily and directly lead to a breach of peace. It is perfectly obvious that the Indian Penal Code, a most unscientific enactment, contains within its purview (An Honourable Member : " Why not try to reform it ? "), (I have tried to make it more scientific) four classes of cases. In the first place it has sections which deal with the defamation of the State known as sedition, and so forth. In the same Penal Code there are a few sections dealing with the defamation of a class, of which illustration is to be found in section 153A of the Indian Penal Code. We have then the third class of defamation, dealt with in sections 499 and 500 of the Indian Penal Code—defamation of the person ; and lastly we are now embarking upon the fourth class of defamation, namely, defamation of religion. Now, Sir, in a scientific Code I should have expected all these sections grouped together, but whether that is possible or not, one thing is absolutely certain, that all these classes of defamation are subject to the same principle and are equally subject to the same or analogous exceptions. Now let me give you a few illustrations. If you turn to section 124A, which deals with defamation of the State, 153A, which deals with the defamation of a class, or to section 499, which deals with the defamation of a person, you will find all these sections conditioned and circumscribed by a few salutary exceptions ; and those exceptions are that nobody would be punishable under any of those sections if the act in question is done in good faith without an intention to bring either the State or the class or the person into disrepute. That, therefore, is the cardinal principle underlying all these classes of defamation, whether it be the State or class or person.

1 P.M.

Now, if we turn, however, to the clause in this new proposed Bill, we find that there is absolutely no Explanation at all. I should like the spokesman of Government to justify this provision, and I ask the Select Committee when they go into the question to consider the analogous provisions of the Indian Penal Code and bring the language of this clause into harmony with the general generic law of defamation which is dealt with under the various sections of the Indian Penal Code to which I have adverted.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I can assure my Honourable friend that I am perfectly alive to this point of view.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am glad, Sir, that my friend Mr. Jinnah is perfectly alive to this point of view and I can only hope that the other members of the Select Committee would be equally alive to his point of view and mine.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member not on the Select Committee ? (Applause and Laughter.)

Sir Hari Singh Gour : No, Sir. There is another point and a very important one. Lawyers in this House will bear me out that the meaning of the term " intentionally " has been the subject of numerous cases. There are cases in which it has been held—and I venture to submit rightly held—that nothing is said to be done intentionally which is not done with that intention ; and there are cases in which it has been held that every man is presumed to intend the natural consequence of his act ; in other words, the word " intentionally " has been subjected to a dual sense,—one, an express intention, and secondly, a presumed intention. Now, Sir, I should like in a case of this character especially dealing with religious questions, that the word " intentionally " should be obviated and the opening sentence of this clause should be " Whoever with intent to wound the feelings, etc., commits a certain act should be made punishable ". That would avoid the ambiguity which centres round the definition of the word " intentionally " and which I am sure will give rise to further difficulties in the application of this clause.

The second point that I wish to draw the attention of the Select Committee to is that while I can understand the meaning of the words " insults the religion " I cannot understand what the draftsman means by " outraging the religious feeling " as distinct from religion. One Honourable Member has himself expressed his doubt as to how these two things are to be understood and understood by the lay mind and I am sure that the members of the Select Committee will apply their minds to either focussing their thoughts upon the meaning of the words " religious feeling " with a view to make it clear to the man in the street or to delete that clause altogether from this section.

Now, there are a few more points, Sir, upon which I should like to draw the attention of the members of the Select Committee. I am glad that Honourable Members on both sides of this House have acknowledged the fact that while religious toleration is a good thing, they have not disguised the fact in this House that religious reform is equally important, and this Bill is a compromise between these two conflicting principles, the one principle being religious toleration and the other principle being religious reform. The members of the Select Committee should see that they adopt that golden rule of taking the middle course and do not swerve too much either to the one side or to the other, because there is a lurking danger in curtailing human liberty if you wish unduly to emphasise the principle of religious toleration. On the other hand, if you swerve on the other side there is the obvious danger of defeating the very purpose which this Bill has in view. The question as to whether that middle course has been adopted is not free from doubt when we read this clause as it is presented to us by the Honourable the occupants of the Treasury Benches.

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

There is a further point to which I would draw the attention of the members of the Select Committee. If Honourable Members will turn to the Statement of Objects and Reasons and to the speech just delivered by the Honourable the Home Member they will find that there is a reference made to the effect that section 153A of the Indian Penal Code indirectly deals with this question. Now, Sir, I should like to know why you do not enlarge the provisions of section 153A and cover this case in point, instead of enacting a new section and thereby multiplying the already numerous sections of the Indian Penal Code by creating a new offence. It is conceded in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that anyone who reads section 153A of the Indian Penal Code will find that by a suitable amendment of that section you could have dealt with the mischief which this Bill is intended to provide against. I therefore suggest that the Select Committee should examine not only the provisions of the draft Bill but of section 153A of the Indian Penal Code with a view to see whether the object which the Government have in view cannot be served better by a mere amendment of section 153A of the Indian Penal Code. There are decided cases in which it has been held by the Judges of the High Court that persons who commit acts analogous to blasphemy by defaming other people's religion and thereby arouse sentiments of hostility in any class of His Majesty's subjects are punishable under section 153A. But as doubts have arisen it is just as well that suitable words should be inserted in section 153A so as to make that point clear. Section 153A contains an Explanation, and, as I pointed out, you cannot possibly enact any law dealing with defamation, whether of the State, of the class or of the person or, as in the present case, defamation of religion, without adding suitable Explanations or exceptions. Section 153A of the Indian Penal Code dealing with defamation of the class contains an Explanation which is more or less an exception. It says :

> "It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section to point out without malicious intention and with an honest view to their removal, matters which are producing or have a tendency to produce, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects."

Now, if section 153A is amended in the manner I have indicated, another Explanation might be added for the purpose of showing that it is not an offence within the meaning of this section if the criticism is made without the intention of arousing hostile feelings, but in the discharge of a public duty to state a historial fact or to publish the result of research. Historical writings, of a scientific character, writings even of a polemical character, are not all punishable and should not be punishable under the new clause or under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, because by doing so you would be gagging the expression of free discussion, and I am perfectly certain that it is the object of the Legislature here that there must be the maximum of personal liberty given to the people of this country to express their views without the fear that they would be prosecuted merely for an expression of opinion, though their intention may be to improve other religions, or it may be a mere matter of social reform, or their intention may be merely to publish the views which are the result of prolonged research.

One word more, Sir, and I have done. I wish to suggest to the members of the Select Committee that what my Honourable friend Mr. Abdul Haye and others have said—and I think there have been some expressions of opinion on this side of the House—is that this clause should be converted into a direct clause punishing blasphemy, namely, that whoever defames God, or a Prophet or a particular religion or a saint or a priest considered as a divine and thereby arouses feelings of hostility towards any class of His Majesty's subjects shall be punished. This, of course, is indirectly brought out in section 153A, but if the intention of the Legislature be to provide for the punishment of blasphemy direct, then I see no reason why the clause should not be recast again by punishing blasphemy as such instead of leaving it to inference, as is done in the proposed draft Bill. In other words, the criticism which the Honourable the Home Member has made against section 153A equally applies to the Bill which is now being consigned to the Select Committee. I, therefore, suggest that if you really wish to suppress blasphemy, by all means do so, but say that you are enacting against blasphemy. Do not do it in the indirect and inferential way in which you are trying to do in this Bill. I realize the difficulty of a secular Government dealing with religions towards which it professes absolute neutrality. But it is a difficulty the solution of which lies in enacting against a possible breach of peace which it is the duty of Government to maintain. It must be its sole objective. Sir, these are the only observations which I wish to make and I hope members of the Select Committee will take due note of them.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I congratulate the Government on introducing this Bill. I think that after the judgment of Justice Kunwar Dalip Singh it was inevitable that the Government should take note of the deficiency pointed out by him in the law and make an early attempt to remove that deficiency. I agree with my friends who have pressed that this Bill should receive very careful consideration. Any measure which infringes the liberty of the subject, as this measure does, must receive very careful consideration. The desire that it should receive careful consideration is reasonable and natural, but I do not agree with the proposal that the Bill should be circulated at this stage for opinion. I think, Sir, that on this question opinion has been to a certain extent crystallised, and I think we should trust the Select Committee to consider the measure in all its aspects and, if possible, report on it with such changes as it may think fit to this Assembly in this Session, so that this measure in the modified form in which it may emerge from the Committee and commend itself to this House, might be placed on the Statute-book before we leave Simla at the end of this Session. I wish to draw the attention of those friends who are anxious that we should not legislate in a hurry and thus give rise to greater future trouble than we desire to provide against, to the most important feature of this Bill. The Bill aims at preventing attacks upon certain religious personages. Every religion has somebody or some person at its head. We, Hindus, believe in the incarnation of God; we worship certain personalities as incarnations of God. Christians believe in Jesus as the one medium through whom salvation will be attained by Christians. Muhammadans believe that salvation will be obtained by believing in Muhammad. Buddhists worship Buddha and Parsees worship Zoroaster. Now, Sir, there are thus certain personalities which occupy the place of pre-eminence in every religion. What might be the facts about or incidents in the life of any one of these individuals is a matter of very little concern now to the vast mass of those who believe in, adore, worship and revere those personalities. The lives of these persons have been elevated from the sphere of ordinary criticism to a sphere where criticism must be reverential, and well considered. I am less concerned with the facts of the life of any of these glorious men of the world than with the fact that millions of my fellow-men hold each of them in reverence. I wish to bow to that feeling of reverence entertained by millions of my fellow-men more than to the facts of life connected with any of these personalities. The follower of any religion may study the lives of the prophets and even of the Avatars, and criticise them to the extent that an ordinary fair-minded critic would do, but with this difference that we should remember that the followers of the other religion or religions hold those high personalities in high reverence. I would place myself in that position and would consider how a criticism of one of these personalities will affect the minds of millions of my fellow-men who honour, revere and worship them. Do I wish to criticise the life of Jesus? I am not debarred from doing so. But I must show by my criticism that I approach the criticism of a personality which has been the source of moulding the lives of millions of men and a source of solace to millions, with the proper feeling and in a proper manner. Similarly, with the founder of the Muhammadan religion. If I wish to discuss the life of Muhammad, I must show that I hold him in the reverence which is his due because millions of my fellow-men hold him in that reverence. So also with the Avatars of the Hindu religion. If my friends, the Christians or the Muhammadans know that the Hindus hold certain Avatars in reverence, that they believe that God himself came down upon earth in those personalities, I expect that they will approach the study of the lives of those Avatars with a feeling of reverence. They may not believe in the particular tenets taught by the Avatars. But the personalities of the Avatars, and the personalities of eminent teachers of religion and of its founders and prophets stand on a different and a higher footing, and I wish, Sir, that this distinction should always be borne in mind. In discussing religious personalities, or the founders of religions, of the Avatars, of the leaders of religions, their personalities should be regarded as entitled to receive reverential consideration, while the tenets and doctrines of the religion which they preached or supported might well be open to free discussion and consideration. If that distinction is made, we shall be nearer together in the object we all have in view, and in the measure that we want to place on the Statute-book in order to secure that object. As I have already said, there should not be a light-hearted discussion of the facts connected with the life of any high personage, because as against the facts, which may be simple in themselves—they were all human and so the facts may be simple and of little importance in themselves—there is the mountain of feeling, a living feeling existing in the minds of millions of men who hold that personality in reverence, not because of the incidents of his life, but because of the teaching he promulgated and the solace and comfort which he gave to many sore hearts, because of the knowledge he spread in the world and the solace of religion which he has left for large sections of mankind. I, therefore, submit, Sir, that while we are all entitled, while any critic may be entitled to challenge the intellect of his fellow-man who does not believe with him in the same religious faith, while he may be entitled to argue with him and to discuss the tenets and the doctrines of the other religion in a friendly way, no one ought to hold himself free to utter or write in a light-hearted way anything which would wound the heart or hurt the religious feelings of his fellow-men. The intellect may be left open to attack. A person belonging to another religion may be invited to an intellectual contest so far as the tenets and doctrines of a religion are concerned, but his heart should be left unhurt, it should be respected, as one would wish his own heart to be respected. My Honourable friend Sayyid Murtaza Sahib told us what Islam taught to the world. While I support in part the view he expressed, I wish to remind him and all other fellow-men that the essence of religion was enunciated ages ago, several thousands of years ago in one couplet in the Mahabharata which says :

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

" Sruotâm dharma sarbbaswam srutva chapyabadharyyatâm,
Atmanah pratikulâni pareshâm na samâcharet,
Jadjadatmani chêchchêt,
Tat parasyapi chintayet."

" Listen to this essence of religion, and having listened to it treasure it in your heart. One ought not to do that unto another which he would not like another to do unto him. One should do that unto another which he would wish that other to do unto him."

The same truth is inculcated by all other religions, such as Christianity, Muhammadanism, Buddhism. Now, Sir, that is the teaching we have to carry out to enforce. I would not wish my father, even if he had some weakness, to be vilified in my presence. He was my father and the object of affection and reverence to me, and no brother of mine, no fellow-man of mine, who is a gentleman would like to tell me to my face about the weakness of my father. If that tenderness is expected by one gentleman from another in the case of individuals, may we not expect in a magnified degree that same tenderness of feeling, that same tender regard for the feelings of other fellow-men when they hold the propounder of a religion, or an avatar, in a thousand times greater reverence than even that in which they hold their own fathers, because that greater teacher, that Avatar, or that propounder of religion has been more than a father to every one of those who believe in him ? I submit, therefore, that the rule should be that though the doctrines and tenets of a religion might be discussed, that which is likely to hurt or wound the feelings of our fellow-men should be avoided. This only means that in matters touching religion, this rule of ordinary human fellowship and of the ordinary duty of one gentleman towards another should be the rule of conduct throughout the world.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

I do not wish to detain the House any longer. With reference to the fears that have been expressed that the liberty of criticism might be curtailed, I wish to say that this world of ours is now rather an old one. We have got the great religions of the world established in the affections of those who believe in them and those who practise them. It is not likely that there are to be any great changes by vast numbers of men abandoning one religion for another. Therefore we should be content to establish such a rule now as will make for peace, harmony and good will among men, such a rule as will eliminate causes of ill will and discord and discontent.

Sitting as we are together in this very House, Christians, Mussalmans, Parsis, Jews and Hindus,—do we not show consideration for the feelings of our fellow-men who do not belong to the same faith ? Even so should we seek earnestly and prayerfully to establish a similar state of things in the country at large so that while each individual remains free to follow, the faith he has inherited or which has been given to him, each shall respect the feelings of others who do not share the same faith with him. And I submit, Sir, that if we keep that before our minds we shall be able to arrive at a conclusion in the Select Committee which will meet the object we all have in view, which will avoid the danger of too wide a generalisation which has been referred to by some of my friends and will enable this House to accept the measure in a form which will promote mutual respect and good will among the followers of different faiths, and give us an assurance that individuals shall not with impunity be permitted to attack the religious personages held in reverence by any one community, and allowed thereby to create a gulf or alienate feelings between the members of two communities. Sir, I strongly support the motion that the Bill be referred to Select Committee. I would with your leave also beg to add that Sir Hari Singh Gour's name be added to the Select Committee.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the name of Sir Hari Singh Gour be added to the Select Committee."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I have heard with rapt attention some of the speeches delivered on the floor of this House. I heard with great happiness the speech of Sayyid Murtaza Sahib. I heard the quotation he gave, for the first time, and I am very glad to know of the quotation which says that the Koran and all the books may be burnt, but the feelings of other persons should not be wounded. I can only say that I have never heard a more blasphemous quotation so far from the lips of any other person. But all the same, Sir, I congratulate my Honourable friend for harbouring such noble feelings which are nobler even than the dogmas of particular religions. I have heard also the speeches of Mr. Acharya and Pandit Malaviya. With great deference to all the speakers who have preceded me I wish to point out, Sir, that coming to the sordid matters of this world, we find that if India were constituted of inhabitants like those who come into this Assembly there would be no trouble. These sentiments and all these good feelings may be very good in themselves ; they are very noble, very elevating ; all the same, Sir, you will excuse me if I point out that the man in the street has not got these noble things in his heart. If he had them there would be no necessity for this legislation. It is not that I am not at one with those who have spoken so far in condemning that sort of feeling which has given rise to the present impasse between Hindus and Muhammadans. All the same, Sir, I believe it is the prophets, the avatars and the great men who are very potent powers for good, whose lives should be criticised freely. If a Muhammadan says to me " You turn a Muhammadan, come and believe in my Koran ", I am bound to say to him in all humility " You are weaning me from my own religion. Allow me to see how your tenets stand certain tests, and how the Prophet conducted himself on particular occasions ". I think it is correct to say that it is the Sanatanists and Hindus of this land who are the victims of the proseletysing activities of different religions. I do not wish to submit before you that they are not right in converting those whom they want to, but at the same time I do want to emphatically state before you that in this panic we should not take away the liberty of speech and the liberty of criticism. When I read this Bill as it is, I feel, Sir, that the right of criticism and the right of liberty of speech have been taken away to such a large extent that I fear that this Bill will ultimately, if passed into law in its present state, only perpetuate religious intolerance which it seeks to avoid. My humble submission is that the dissension we find at present is not so much due to the innate nature of Hindus and Muhammadans for fighting with each other, but is in a great measure due to the attitude of Government in dealing with the trouble. Sir, I put some questions to Honourable Members opposite about their attitude and their conduct in respect of certain publications, such as the Uniswin Saddi ka Maharishi and Sair Din Dunya. Similar questions were put in the Punjab Council by various Members, and the reply of the Government was that since the agitation in respect of those publications was not such as justified them in launching prosecutions against the authors of those books, those books were neither proscribed nor their authors punished. May I submit, Sir, with all the emphasis at my command that the present situation would not have arisen if the Government had stiffened their attitude from the start towards the authors of those books. I maintain, Sir, that Rangila Rasul, which has been written as a reply to the book Uniswin Saddi ka Maharishi, would never have appeared in print if the Government had taken care to see that the first book, of which the second was the result, was proscribed and the author punished ? I know that Mr. Abdul Haye was one of the gentlemen who condemned the publication. We find that reasonable people condemned that publication and still the Government says there is no agitation against it. Is it not, I submit, unfair to those who do not want to indulge in agitations of this nature that their religious views are not properly protected? This is not the only case. Similarly, I put another question in this House about an article that appeared in Hasan Nizami's paper Munadi, and the Government replied that since that gentleman begged pardon he was not prosecuted. Now, Sir, I am not vindictive. I do not want any such prosecutions which would end in nothing and which would only embitter feelings between Hindus and Muhammadans further; but at the same time had the gentleman mended his ways I would have thought that the action of the Government had been justified. When however we find in the administration of justice such considerations as political exigencies, such considerations as that a particular sect or a particular people have not raised a sufficient amount of agitation: matters which are considered by Government in according sanction or making complaints, are we not justified in holding that it is due to the partial attitude of Government that the present position has been brought about?

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

Now, Sir, with your permission, I will just dissect the causes of the present strife between Hindus and Muhammadans a bit further. Hindus and Muhammadans have been living in this land for ages past, for about a thousand years; and in fact, Sir, the Christian missionaries also came on the field long ago. Christ, Muhammad and Krishna have come into conflict in this land for a long time; but still why were such books not written before, and how is it that Hindus and Muhammadans did not break each other's heads with so much frequency as we see now? The real reason is not far to seek. To my mind, the real reason is not that Hindus and Muhammadans have suddenly become ultra-religious during the past three or four years. The real reason, the mentality which is the real cause of all this trouble goes a little deeper. I understand, Sir, that since the inauguration of these Reforms with the introduction of a separate electorate, these dissensions have appeared in their present form. And this is not the whole cause. Hindus and Mussalmans have not got enough political rights to enable them to think of nothing else. In fact, Sir, if the Government really wanted to tackle the question and to settle the Hindu-Mussalman dispute, I for one believe that it would not be difficult for Government so to arrange matters as to bring about a condition of amity and goodwill between the Hindus and Mussalmans. What is the use of passing this Bill? Will this Bill bring about the millenium? My own opinion is that it will never do anything of the kind. You can pass any number of Bills, but how are you going to change the mentality of Hindus and Muslims. That mentality will not be changed by the passage of this Bill. I would therefore submit that instead of remedying the disease, this Bill and others like it, if they are not administered in the right spirit, will only add to the virus of the disease and will prove more poisonous than the disease itself. If you really want a solution of the question, then it is not for me, a humble Member of this House, to suggest any remedies; and I will not assume to myself the ability to suggest better remedies than those which are known to the leaders of all parties and to the Government itself. I would only submit that this whole question should be gone into not in the rarified atmosphere of tolerance, but in that real atmosphere which is out for finding a solution. And, Sir, judging from the nature of the Bill and its wide range, I submit that full scope must be given for that criticism from all parts of the country which will be of great help ultimately. I understand, Sir, that the Muhammadans of the Punjab have sent a telegram to several Members of this House, and I have just seen in the Hindustan Times that a meeting was held in Lahore and a resolution was passed that it may be urged in this House that the Bill should be circulated for public opinion. I will read now from the Tribune of the 4th September :

"A meeting consisting of respectable Mussalmans representative of various Mussalman bodies of Lahore was convened in Muhammadan Hall on the 1st September 1927.

After long discussion the following resolution was unanimously passed :-

'Resolved that in the opinion of this meeting of representatives of different Mussalman representative bodies in Lahore it is imperatively urgent to circulate Bill No. XXXIX of 1927 for penalising attacks on religion so as to elicit public opinion, as the matter is of great and vital importance'."

Now, Sir, it has been said in this House by several speakers who have preceded me that this is a dilatory motion on the part of Mr. Belvi, that a further postponement of this measure will not conduce to the best interests of Hindus and Mussalmans. I, Sir, as you know, come from the Punjab, and I know how this agitation in regard to the Rangila Rasul case has been developed, hatched, burst upon the poor people of the Punjab. But all the same, with a full consciousness of the gravity of the situation, and with all the responsibility that attaches to a Member of this House, I feel and submit that however grave and however urgent the matter may be, considerations of public policy and fair criticism warrant the motion of Mr. Belvi. If conversions are to go on at this rate or in this manner, then the Prophets and Avatars, etc., are liable to be criticised. Considering everything, I do think that the opinion of the whole country must be taken before we proceed with a measure of this nature.

Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim (Chittagong Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I am glad, Sir, at this late stage of this very important debate my friend Mr. Belvi has found a supporter in our friend Pandit Bhargava. Personally speaking, I have always had an open mind on these matters, and coming as I do from a place where the number of Muhammadans is 80 per cent. of the total population, I think it will not be a bad idea if I speak a few words on the motion.

First of all it will be desirable to give a short reply to the points of the previous speaker. He seems to think that this measure is the outcome of the Moslem agitation in this country. He takes his seat in a group of which the Leader has spoken. We have heard the Honourable the President of the Congress. We have heard our friend, the Honourable Mr. Jinnah. And it seems to me, Sir, that most of us on all sides think that this Bill should be referred to a Select Committee. That is the opinion of the majority of us here in this House. In listening to the debate I have chalked out one or two points upon which I wish to speak. Mr. Belvi has said that this is a measure more or less to please the Mussalmans. But I can assure you, Sir, that it is nothing of the kind—the Government of India exist for all, and if they find that any section of the people are taking the law into their own hands, it is their duty to preserve law and order. The Rangila Rasul case is in point. The Arya Samajists have tried to defame the Prophet of Islam, and there have been conflicting decisions with regard to the interpretation of section 153A of the Indian Penal

[Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim.]

Code. Hence this measure. We have felt a keen interest and are aware of the disservice this tall talk has caused to this part of India and other places also. Unless and until this irresponsible talk is nipped in the bud, I am afraid I do not know where we shall be led to. The previous speaker has in an interesting way suggested that, until we have an atmosphere of give and take, none of these measures will have any effect. May I ask him what his friends in the Punjab have been doing in this matter? Platitudes always sound nice. You can put any sort of measure on the Statute-book, but until you have a change of heart you will not meet the purpose, he says. May I ask my friend if he and those of his ilk would continue to support the gutter press which is agitating the illiterate masses all over the country. Will that restore quiet and peace which we all so wish to have and desire? The high priests of the Sangathan and Suddhi must know that they are mostly responsible for this aggressive propaganda. They have defied the law and perhaps this piece of legislation is overdue. Sir, some speakers have also lamented the curtailment of the activities of the vernacular press of this country. If I have to say the truth, I think, Sir, that this trouble which has been going on in the country is due to the kite-flying policy of these vernacular papers. If the writers in this section of the press, and if the owners of these papers, had a little sense of proportion in them, I can assure you that these troubles would have been very much minimised. I do not know if the previous speaker referred directly to the Hijrat—I hope he did not. At no time of Indian history during the past 700 years did the idea of the Hijrat come into the mind of the Mussalmans, and I again assure my friend that the time will never come when the Mussalmans of this country will have to do that. Then, Sir, the previous speaker has also referred to the reforms. He seems to think that the reforms that were granted to the people of this country are partly responsible for these troubles. My humble opinion, Sir, is that they are not. The real fact is, the real pinch is, that those who happen to be in greater and larger numbers in this country cannot have their own way everywhere and in every thing. The Government have their own duties; they are not partisans of anybody in this country. They have the duty to rule peacefully and to see everybody prosper, and I am sure they will not hesitate to put this legislation on the anvil. With these few remarks, Sir, I support the motion of the Home Member.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan (North Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I had no intention to take part in this debate to-day, but to reply to some of the remarks which have come from my Honourable friend from the Punjab. So I want neither to enter into communal discussion nor would I like to enter into a long debate on such controversial matters as have been pointed out by my Honourable friend. I think most of his remarks were absolutely irrelevant to the question which is now before us. To attribute these attacks on the Prophet and other saints of various religions to the separate electorate is the most illogical way of looking at things. However, Sir, there are two things which I would like to bring before the House. While I congratulate the Government on bringing forward this measure, and I strongly support the motion that this Bill may be referred to a Select Committee, I would point out two things. By doing so, I do not agree with every word of the clause as it is now before us. As everyone knows, it was due to the Rangila Rasul judgment, that is, the defect in the law which was pointed out by the Honourable Judge who tried that case, and who thought that the law required to be amended. The two things which he pointed out clearly were, first, that an attack upon a Prophet may not necessarily mean an attack upon religion, and the second thing was that it was necessary to prove that one man by attacking the Prophet or founder of a religion provokes feelings of hatred and contempt between two different communities. The object now is that mere attack upon the founder of a religion whether it has provoked any feelings of enmity between the two classes of His Majesty's subjects or not should be made punishable. There are conflicting rulings upon this point. Some Judges think that even under section 153A, as it stands at present, such attacks can be punished. Some of the Judges think that such cases cannot be brought under this section. So the object of this Bill should be restricted to making it clear that any attack upon a religious founder or any other person held sacred by the followers of any religion should be liable to be punished, and that it should not be necessary to prove that by making this attack the author provoked enmity between different classes of His Majesty's subjects.

Another point which the Select Committee should consider is that the punishment which has been awarded in this section is in my opinion too light. I think two years' imprisonment for such scurrilous writings which have created such a critical situation in a country like India should be subjected to severer punishment than two years. I am not one of those people who would say that distinction should be made by law between prophets or heads of different religions, but I think that if the maximum punishment is higher, the trying Magistrate always considers that an attack upon a prophet of a religion or a founder is more serious and more punishment should be awarded in such cases than for criticizing an ordinary man or a man who is politically regarded as a leader.

There is only one more point to which I would refer, and it is this, that some people have suggested that the Government's attitude in this matter has been objectionable. Particularly my friend from the Punjab blamed the Government for being at least indirectly responsible for this communal trouble. I think it is my duty, Sir, to repudiate this charge in the strongest possible terms I can. So far as the Punjab Government is concerned, their attitude towards this Rangila Rasul agitation has been most fair and reasonable. They have handled with the greatest prudence this critical situation which otherwise might have grown much worse than what it is at present. If His Excellency the Governor of the Punjab had not received the Moslem deputation and had not assured them that the Government sympathised with them in their grief, that the man who attacked their Prophet was let off because there was a technical flaw in the law, I think the Muhammadans would have been much more disappointed and the consequences would have been much more serious.

With these words, Sir, I oppose the amendment that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion and support the motion for its reference to a Select Committee.

Mr. M. S. Aney : (Berar Representative) : Sir, we have heard in this House up to this time many speeches in which the speakers have attempted to explain the principles or give their opinions on the principles underlying the substantive part of the new Bill under consideration, a Bill in which it is proposed to penalize intentional outrageous attacks upon religions or religious heads. But, Sir, this Bill consists of two parts. One part proposes to define the conditions and ingredients which will go to make attacks on religion an offence. There is another clause in this Bill which is in my opinion also equally important with this clause. If the provisions defining the offence are important, I submit that the provisions of the Bill which are intended to empower certain constituted authority to enforce that law are also equally important. In short the procedural portion of the Bill also deserves to be very seriously considered by this House. From the speeches hitherto delivered in this debate it must have been obvious to some of the Members of this House at any rate, that among the various causes which have brought about the present tension between the great communities some blame is laid at the door of the Government also, inasmuch as they have not been sufficiently alert or vigilant or even impartial in enforcing the provisions of the existing laws at the proper time. That is one of the causes which, according to some of the speakers, has contributed to some extent at least to bring about this existing deplorable position. If that is a fact, you have to seriously consider whether by the new changes that you seek to introduce in the Criminal Procedure Code, the powers to enforce the law and set the judicial machinery in motion should be entirely in the hands of the Government or whether there should be some latitude given to the aggrieved individuals or communities in this matter. Sir, my learned friend Sir Hari Singh Gour has analysed in the spirit of a jurist characteristic of him the whole of the Indian Penal Code and tried to bring together the various scattered sections dealing with defamation. He has said that the new offence which it is intended to penalise is one more addition to the penal law on defamation. If that is so, let us see what the procedural law regarding the various sections dealing with the three classes of defamation is. If this clause is to be examined in the Select Committee in the light of the principles underlying the law of defamation, on the ground that the proposed offence is analogous to that law, then I think, Sir, that when dealing with the procedural clause of this Bill, the principle underlying the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code dealing with the procedure in regard to the different classes of defamation may also be appropriately taken into consideration by the Select Committee for careful comparison. Now, my learned friend has already shown that defamation against the State is dealt with in section 124A, and defamation against a class under section 153A ; then there is defamation against individuals which is treated under sections 499, 500, and so on. Now, it is a matter of common knowledge to those who have to do something with the practice in the criminal courts and the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code that the procedure lays down two different ways for dealing with these three classes of defamation. Defamation against the State and defamation against a class provided for in sections 124A and 153A are purely matters in which the initiative for launching a prosecution lies with the Government. But as regards defamation against individuals the initiative is left with the individual and not with the State. What I have to bring to the notice of this House particularly and which I want those who are members of the Select Committee to take particular note of is to see whether it will be advisable to leave the initiative entirely in the hands of Government, and whether by so leaving the initiative of prosecution in this matter purely to the machinery which is provided for under clause 3 of this Bill, we shall be able to satisfactorily serve the object which the Honourable Member in-charge of the Bill has in view. The initiative for prosecution will under clause 3 of this Bill be in the hands of the Government. If the charge which some Members have made and to which I have already referred is true, that is to say, if the Government has not been very alert, vigilant and even impartial in launching prosecutions against persons who have often offended against section 153A, then it will be a matter for the members of the Select Committee to seriously consider whether initiative for prosecution under this new clause should be entirely left in the hands of the Local Government as provided for by clause 3. That is a point which I want them to seriously consider. If there is no foundation for this charge, then I at once admit that the provision made in the Bill is all right. But if there is any foundation for this charge, as I maintain that there is very strong foundation, there is no doubt then that we shall have to find out whether some latitude should not be also given in the procedural part of this Bill for private individuals to bring their grievance to the notice of Government and set the judicial machinery in motion without sanction or to make it obligatory on the Government in certain circumstances to launch the prosecution. It is necessary for the Committee to see whether some suitable amendment could not be made in clause 3 with a view to bring about this result. I am anxious to bring this point to the notice of the House particularly to safeguard the religious feelings of certain minorities. There are certain minor communities, small communities, who hold a particular religion. Their number is very small. I do not want to give any example, as it may wound the feelings of some Members. There are certain communities who hold certain religious views ; they have unbounded devotion for and implicit faith in their founder ; they have got some peculiar tenets. These communities, small in number, are very often mercilessly and even indiscriminately attacked by the so-called learned men belonging to other communities which are larger in numbers. They have many times protested against these scurrilous attacks, but these attacks very often go unheeded. Now, in considering such cases it has been one of the points sometimes urged by the authorities but which we have found it difficult to understand that the communities that have tried to bring their grievance to the notice of the Government official are neither sufficiently numerous nor vociferous. Such or similar grounds we have heard actually advanced in reply to some questions put on the floor of this House a few days ago. It has been stated that a sufficiently large community was not affected by certain scurrilous writings and therefore the Government did not think it worth while to launch any prosecution with a view to put a stop to scurrilous attacks made upon their religion. I can only mention one instance. There is a community called the Mahanubhava community in Maharashtra. They have got their religious founder. Certain attacks have been made against them and nobody thought it worth while to initiate a prosecution because presumably the community was very small. That community is scattered all over the country. In no place has the community such a dominant numerical existence as to force the attention of the Government by intensity of agitation to take note of the grievance which they have been labouring under on account of these attacks. These are cases where, on account of the very small number of the persons belonging to that sect and the comparative insignificance of their existence as compared to other large communities in those tracts, Government do not think it worth while to launch prosecutions as the authorities feel that such prosecutions are likely to enrage the feelings of another numerically large community living in those tracts. Under those circumstances Government, as a matter of policy, has avoided in the past and may continue to avoid in future to institute prosecutions. There are possibilities therefore that even in proper cases the Government who are immediately responsible only for peace and order and maintenance of goodwill among the various communities in a particular tract, may not be inclined to enforce the provisions of the law as rigorously and promptly as they should ; and thus in all probability justice will not be done to them. Such cases are possible. If this contingency is taken into consideration, the reasonableness of the position which I am placing before the House may to some extent be realised by those who are now entrusted by us with the duty of shaping this Bill in the Select Committee. That was the specific suggestion which I wanted to make for the consideration of the Select Committee. With these remarks, Sir, I support the motion that the Bill may be sent to the Select Committee.

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

3 P.M.

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not want to enter into controversy with the speech which was delivered by my Honourable friend Mr. Thakurdas in this House. Really, our intention to bring this Bill on the Statute-book is not to accentuate the feelings which are already existing in the communities. But I shall only deal with the point at issue and it is this, whether this Bill should be referred to a Select Committee or whether it should be circulated for eliciting public opinion. Now, Sir, we find that since the judgment in the Rangila Rasul case was pronounced by a single Judge of the Lahore High Court, there has been a very strong feeling among the Mussalmans throughout the whole country that the defect in the law in this respect should be remedied as soon as possible. The House probably knows, that meetings were held nearly in all the districts, in which resolutions were unanimously passed that the defect in the law in this respect should be removed at once and that in the meanwhile, if it takes some time before this law is amended, a Regulation should be enacted to stop this vilification of the founders of religions. In the face of this unanimous desire on the part of the Mussalmans of India that action should be taken immediately, I am sorry I cannot support the amendment that the Bill should be referred for eliciting opinion. As has already been remarked, public opinion is already known and we know what the desire, the unanimous desire, of the people of the country, both Hindus and Muhammadans, is. We are unanimous in holding that unwarranted attacks on the honour and persons of Holy Prophets and founders of recognised religions levelled against them by unscrupulous fanatics should be stopped, and therefore I am at one in agreeing with the principle of this Bill. But at the same time, Sir, I am also anxious that in our zeal in removing one evil we may not create another evil of the same serious nature. That is to say, I consider that the provisions of the Bill, as it is framed now, are too wide and too indefinite. I consider that the Bill, as it is prepared now, will not give sufficient proteetion to the seekers after truth and honest preachers of religions. The word " intentional " as used in the Bill, is not, I think, sufficient to protect such bona fide criticism and it leaves the accused entirely at the mercy of the court. We know, Sir, the history of this Bill. This Bill is really intended to protect the honour and the persons of the founders of religions against vilification, but the provisions of the Bill as framed at present still leave the point open whether the attacks on a person are really included in outraging the religious feelings of a community or not. I submit, therefore, that when this Bill goes to the Select Committee, it should be reframed in this way that its provisions should be confined only to the object for which it is intended to be enacted, that is to say, its provisions should be limited only to attacks on the holy prophets and founders of great and recognised religions.

Now, the other point which I beg to submit is that which has been raised by my Honourable friend Mr. Aney. I am sorry I am unable to agree with him on this point. I think it will be very injurious, improper and unwise if initiation of cases under this law is left in the hands of the public or if power is given to the individuals to lodge prosecutions under this clause, because under the present unfortunate conditions of this country the result would be that the courts would be overloaded with frivolous cases of this sort. Therefore, I think that it is quite just and proper that the initiation in such cases should be left with the Government.

I have just been reminded of a meeting, recently held at Lahore, in which it was resolved that this Bill should be circulated for obtaining public opinion. My answer to this is that in the face of hundreds of meetings which were held, not only in Lahore, but throughout the whole country, I do not think that a single meeting, which was held at Lahore the other day, carries a greater weight than the unanimous voice of the Mussalmans of the whole country. With these words, Sir, I support the motion that the Bill be referred to the Select Committee.

An Honourable Member : I move that the question be now put.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, this Bill enacts a provision which is of great importance to the newspaper press in India, and so far the House has only heard the lawyer's point of view. I hope, Sir, that you will not accept the motion that the question be now put.

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member wishes to speak, he should rise. If the Honourable Member desires to continue the debate, some Member should rise, otherwise there is no remedy.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Sir, I want to put it on record.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am ashamed that it has been necessary for Government to bring up this measure before this House. I am ashamed and pained at the circumstances that have made such a measure necessary to be brought forward for our consideration. The criminal law of a country is the index of its civilization and of its social conditions, and this particular section, which is going to be added to the Statute-book will stare us in the face and proclaim to the world the unhappy relations that subsist between the different communities in our land. Sir, only last year about this time we amended section 99A of the Code of Criminal Procedure in order to bring in communal matters within the purview of that section. Some years back section 153A had to be added to the penal laws of the country, which could do without such a provision for very many years in the past. All this goes to show that our progress in this matter has been in the backward direction. Last year, speaking on the amending Bill of section 99A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, I made a complaint that the Government, while very anxious to add to the criminal offences of the land, did not make proper use of the existing provisions of the law. And, if I rise to speak on the present motion to-day, it is to repeat that complaint once again. As my Honourable friend Mr. Bhargava has pointed out from his special knowledge of the province from which he comes, that the situation that has necessitated the present measure could have been prevented if Government had taken early action in certain directions. I have no desire to expatiate on that point. But, coming as I do from a part of the country where the head of the administration some years ago made a confession of his political bigamy and described one of the communities as his favourite wife, I cannot give a silent vote altogether on this motion.

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

Sir, religious neutrality, even as a platitude, is of not very long origin. After the Mutiny the cry was raised by British publicists and by British administrators that the Muhammadan religion must be suppressed and I find that a Governor General, Lord Ellenborough, writing to the authorities in England, remarked as follows :

"I cannot close my eyes to the belief that the race of Muhammadans is fundamentally hostile to us. Therefore, our true policy is to conciliate the Hindus." (Laughter.)

But things have changed a good deal since. Well, as my friends are getting a little impatient over it, I will come to the present year. I will refer to the evidence which the District Magistrate of a Bengal district gave only in June last in connection with a communal case. Sir, I am told this District Magistrate has since been thought fit for promotion ; and therefore I take it that the views which he expressed had the substantial support of Government, at least his views did not go altogether counter to the Government policy. Sir, this is what Mr. Blandy, who is the District Magistrate of Barisal, giving his evidence in a communal case in that district said :

"So far as Eastern Bengal was concerned, the Muhammadans preponderated here and, that being so, their feelings were to be respected far more than the Hindu feelings."

That does not look like religious tolerance ! Sir, communal preference goes ill together with religious neutrality. My Honourable friend Mr. Aney quite pertinently drew the attention of the House to the procedure section in this Bill, because no prosecution under the new section can be undertaken except by the sanction or at the instance of the Local Government.

And if the Local Governments are not above these communal preferences, how are we to think that this new law which we are going to add to the Statute-book will not prove an engine of oppression, will not prove an engine in the hands of the executive further to alienate the communities ? Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Yakub said that this provision was necessary in order to prevent frivolous and vexatious proceedings. We, who come from Bengal, know that before the regrettable riots of Calcutta and Eastern Bengal broke out last year, there were scurrilous writings in the newspapers and leaflets and the Government for a long time took no notice of them, with the result that there was a huge conflagration in the country. Attention was pointedly directed to the scurrilous attacks that were made either by one community or another, and yet the Government took no action, no effective action, with what result we all know. Sir, before I sit down, I want to make it clear that, although I have my suspicions about the way in which this new law may be administered with the help of the Local Government, I am not opposed to the present motion.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I must apologise to my Honourable friends for interposing at a very late stage of the debate, when I feel that many of them have become impatient and want the question to be put. My justification for intervening at this late stage is that I want to point out to my Honourable friends one or two aspects of this measure upon which some Members have spoken and about which I want the Government to form definite notions before they call a meeting of the Select Committee. I congratulate the Government, Sir, on the promptitude with which they have responded to the call of the country and brought forward this measure. They have come not one minute too soon. But while I congratulate the Government I cannot congratulate my countrymen that they should have so adjusted their religious affairs as to make this Bill necessary. In my opinion, Sir, such Bills are an indication of the inability of Indians to adjust their own affairs and let the operative processes of nation-building go on in their midst and I hold that in the same measure that these Bills are rendered necessary, Indians have failed to consolidate themselves into one nation. I remember, Sir, the time as a student when section 153-A was enacted. I wish to call the attention of my Honourable friends to a very celebrated judgment of a Judge, always eminent in the annals of the law. Mr. Justice Ranade, commenting on the necessity of such sections as 153-A, laid down a wholesome principle which I want the Government to keep clearly in their minds, notwithstanding the voices raised in some parts of the House that they ought to depart from the plain principle mentioned in the section. That principle is intelligible to us all, whether Hindus, Muhammadans, Sikhs or Christians, the principle which the Honourable the Home Member has accepted in section 295-A and on which I congratulate him, the plain principle, I say, namely, that the gist of the offence is an insult to the religion or religious feelings of the citizen. It is not the gist of the offence that a prophet is attacked or that an avatar is assailed or that a founder is criticized or a follower is ridiculed. I congratulate the Government that they have in this section recognised the rational principle that when religious fanaticism becomes a nuisance to the land and causes a conflagration of irritation and hostility, and when the peace, harmony and good will of the community are disturbed in the name of religion an offence is committed against the State. It is not an offence against religion. Somebody spoke here of blasphemy ; but that is entirely a different offence. In England it is an offence per se against religion. The State, as the upholder of the Church, protects people from irreligion. I hope the Honourable the Home Member in enacting this Bill has not such an ambitious ideal in view, that he is going to cure the religious feelings of Indians. I hope he has a limited ambition and wants to enact a section which will not allow religion or religious feelings to become a nuisance to the peace and harmony of the community, disturbing its growth and progress. If the Honourable the Home Member takes such a limited view of the section, I shall support him with all the weight I can command. But if he is going to go further and accede to the suggestion of some Members here who say : " Oh, we ought to have prophets mentioned in this section, the founders of religion ought to be specifically referred to, Gurus and avatars protected eo nomine " ; if this cry is acceded to, I do not know, Sir, where we will be able to draw the line. Is an offence against the peace and good will of the community less culpable because it is against a follower and not against the founder ? Is an offence more culpable because it is against a prophet ? Are we going to accept a graduated scale of criminality and administer justice according to the personality of the victim of the attack, or the measure of the disturbance of harmony and good will ? Are we going to accept the plain principle which this section speaks of, namely, no matter on whom the attack is levelled, if the attack causes religious disturbance of feeling which is a menace to the peace and goodwill of the community, then the disturber is punished. This is an intelligent principle which I can follow and which I hope will alone be protected by this section. If this is the principle accepted by the Government, then we have some sound and rational principle to go upon. But we embark upon the principle which my Honourable friend Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan suggested, I do not know where we will be. He suggests that the punishment ought to be increased because the attack on the founder is more culpable than on others, may I know why ? If it causes the same trouble in the country, the same disturbance to peace and order as an attack upon the humble follower of a religion or his tenets or religious beliefs, why is it more or less culpable ? I hope, Sir, that the Honourable the Home Member will not accede to these siren voices although they may appear to be sounded through the trumpet of religion ; I hope he will adhere to the rational principle which I can understand, namely, that no one in the name of religion has a right to disturb the peace and goodwill of the community because upon their preservation nation-building processes entirely depend. But if the Honourable the Home Member is going to depart from this principle and follow another, which I hope he will not, then I submit, Sir, that the Select Committee will be lost in the quagmire and miasma of religious disquisition and controversy and I do not know how and when we shall emerge from them. In other words, I regard this as an offence against State and it ought to be classed under the Chapter of the Penal Code where other offences against the State are mentioned. I regard it not as an offence against religion. The British Government are not here to favour one religion against another. It is only when a religion comes within the region of public disturbance that the Government can step in. It is only when a religion ceases to be pure profession of faith of a tolerant character and its open profession or preaching causes trouble, e.g., when it affects the peace, harmony, and goodwill of the community, that the interference of the Government is justified. Judged in this light, I submit that this offence should be regarded as offence against the State, like sections 153A and 124A. This is the proper view of the section, though it does not really matter where the section is actually inserted. I want to point out to the Honourable the Home Member that he should regard his duties purely from the point of view of a secular government trying to protect the peace and harmony of the citizens and not embark on the religious principle that the deities and founders, etc., of the community, should be protected against the attacks of unbelief. Then, Sir, it was suggested that the punishment of two years is not severe enough. I entirely differ from that view. (Hear, hear.) I regard this religious fanaticism as a monomania and those who indulge in that mania ought to be treated as lunatics are treated, with indulgence of course, but segregated from the rest of the community. If I were on the Government Benches, I would try and establish an asylum for these estimable gentlemen (Hear hear, and Laughter) where they can be taken. They would be segregated from all social and religious provocation and they would be allowed to stop there for a time isolated from the rest of the community so that their mania may be cured, even as lunacy is cured in isolation from provocation. I do not class these gentlemen with ordinary criminals known to the Indian Penal Code. They are a special class of criminals manufactured by the present circumstances of the country. In that way, Sir, as a counterblast I would even go the length of reducing the two years of imprisonment on the ground that it is perhaps too excessive. I want the Honourable the Home Member to regard these manias, as I do, from the point of view of an Indian, and treat them as a temporary phenomenon. I shall be very sorry, Sir, if this measure has to be put as a permanent one on our Statute-book. As the Honourable the Home Member rightly pointed out, it is an expedient measure, a temporary remedy, devised for a temporary aberration. Therefore it ought to be allowed to go through and on that ground, I do not agree with the view of my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi that the Bill ought to be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion. In my view, the sentence of two years is adequate enough. It may even be made simple imprisonment. Again I warn the Government not to yield to the suggestion that offences and their punishment ought to be graduated according to the personality of the victim of the attack, e.g., if the attack is against the founder—10 years, prophet—7 years, Guru—5 years, Avatar—9 years, follower—4 years, tenets—3 years, and a humble individual like myself—6 months ! We do not want to yield to this demand. Let Government adhere to the simple principle which they have accepted in the section.

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

For the rest I have many more points to suggest, but I shall wait till the Bill comes before the Select Committee. But I shall say one thing, namely, that I hope, Sir, the Government will not stop with this measure. This is only a preventive measure. May I suggest, as a man who understands a little of these questions, that the true cure will not come unless Government courageously lay their hands on the real cause of this disease. I do hope, Sir, some day when this Government is more courageous because it has behind it the voice of the community and there are more Indians on their Benches giving them less timidity and more courage,—some day when this Government is more courageous, they will I hope come before this House and carry the same reforming processes underneath the surface of society and not merely confine them to the surface. The Honourable the Home Member will then delve underneath Indian society to find out what is the true cause of this trouble and lay the axe courageously at the root of it. May I submit that processions and religious conversions are the prime causes of the trouble and what we want is some law which the Government can courageously adopt to meet the situation. I know I am speaking of a highly controversial matter, which will cause a difference of opinion in certain quarters, but if I had the government in my hand I would courageously restrict these conversions to circumstances where a purely psychological change of faith is permitted ; I would remove from these conversions all causes which introduce the elements of fraud, deception, cajolery, chicanery, elements which make even a contract under the Indian Contract Act invalid. The House must be aware that under the Indian Contract Act a contract is invalid—merely a contract to buy and sell cotton, not change religion which is a far more important thing ; but even a contract for goods is rendered invalid according to the law of the land if certain elements enter into it, such as fraud, duress, coercion, mistake or misrepresentation. How much greater is the necessity for such safeguards when the transaction affects a change of religion. Therefore I hold the view that some day in the near future either the Government themselves should bring in, or allow a non-official Member to bring in, a measure which will lay the axe at the root of these conversions by means of some provision of the law which will make sure that each conversion is really a psychological change of faith which a true conversion should be and not a conversion brought about by or in an atmosphere of fraud, deception, promises, threats or even political considerations—if I may add the last. Until that is done I venture to believe that Bills like this are all temporary remedies. They may stop the disease for a time and its manifestations on the surface ; they will not cure the disease at the root from which it emanates.

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

Mr. Hla Tun Pru (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, I have followed the speeches of the leaders of various communities with a great deal of interest and my own excuse for participating in this debate is that I feel all penal legislation is a necessary evil. I feel, Sir, that an extraordinary situation in India has brought forth this legislation. In Burma there is no communal tension, and submit with great respect to the leaders of the Hindu and Muhammadan communities that it is because they have exhausted all their resources of reconciliation that they have now to face this penal legislation.

Sir, in so far as it is a measure providing for religious tolerance it is very good. On the other hand, it may in actual practice work against the equally important principle of freedom of public discussion. In these days of advancing civilisation we value nothing more than the freedom of public discussion, whether it affects the measures of the State or any other thing. There may be a necessity for this legislation in certain parts of India, but I have spoken to-day only because I feel that the operation of this Bill may not be extended to those parts of India where it is not really necessary. It is only exceptional communal circumstances which must be met by this kind of legislation. We in Burma have always tolerated other religions. We have always acted on the principle " Suffer fools gladly." So, Sir, this legislation, so far as Burma is concerned, is unnecessary. I would therefore respectfully submit to the members of the Select Committee that when they come to consider the Bill they should exempt Burma from its operation.

Well, Sir, to come to a further criticism of this Bill. The Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour has pointed out that the expression " intentionally insults " may be misused. I had something to do with the operation of the law of sedition in my country. I found, Sir, that the Judges always said that intention was to be gathered from the effect of the words. Therefore, as the words stand at present, it will be only a matter for each Judge to say " Yes, so far as I am concerned, these words constitute an attempt to outrage religious feeling." His judgment will vary really with the measure of his thought. Therefore, there must be some standard. We can well trust the Select Committee, which comprises eminent lawyers from both sides of the House, to frame a definition which will cover only a grossly unfair, outrageous and wanton attack upon religion or religious powers. Now, Sir, we are in certain difficulties with regard to what a religion is. So far as Muhammadanism, Buddhism, Christianity, Jainism, Zoroastrianism are concerned, everybody understands or thinks he understands what religion is. On the other hand, Sir, religion should be so construed as to include also atheism, rationalism and even irreligion. Why, Sir, should a man holding rationalist beliefs be unprotected under this particular section ? So, Sir, with these remarks I thank the House for patiently listening to me.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh (Chota Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I also rise to join in the chorus of congratulations for the Honourable the Home Member and his Government, but my congratulations will be confined greatly to the Honourable the Home Member and not so much to the Government ; because it appears to me that the steps which Government have taken so far are timid and negligible. They are going now to legislate against writings against religions and to respect religious sentiments and feelings of the people. But so far as the religious sentiments of my country-men are concerned, they are very tender and it is very difficult to protect that tenderness. Sir, I have known that some time ago when a monkey was killed by some body, the religious feelings of the Hindu community were wounded. I do not know how the Government will protect that tenderness of our Hindu brethren. I may quote another instance. Some times, when there was a discussion about the Deva-Nagari script and the Urdu script, I found my Muhammadan friends being offended as though their religious feelings were wounded by somebody talking against the Urdu script. The very sound of a conch is likely to wound the tender feelings of our Muhammadan friends. It is very difficult for the Government to protect them in cases like these. We heard only a few weeks ago that a tajia in a procession in the United Provinces was not respected by the Hindus and the religious sentiments of Muhammadans were wounded. Not only that ; in these days, whenever two people start fighting, of whom one is a Hindu and another a Muhammadan, if the Muhammadan is beaten, the religious feelings of all the Muhammadans are wounded, and when the Hindu is beaten, the religious feelings of all the Hindus are wounded. How are we to protect such religious tenderness ? Many more such instances may be quoted when religious feelings are said to have been wounded in several other ways, and this legislation cannot help people in such cases. I therefore say, Sir, that the Government is still timid and has not the courage to legislate the right things.

Mr. President : What is the right thing ?

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : I am going to say that, Sir. We hear of murders here and there ; a murder committed in one place on one day and a murder somewhere else the next day. There is no legislation for that yet. But in this Rangila Rasul case while I see that Rajpal is still living, we hear of head breaking, we hear of riots, we hear of all sorts of trouble here and there because of the question of music in processions before mosques and nothing like this has yet happened as the direct result of this case. There is the decision of the Privy Council that every citizen of the country has a right to go in procession on the King's highway. Where is the legislation, where is the courage of the Government in regard to bringing legislation to enforce that right ? I may tell you, Sir, that in my own ilaqa, there is no trouble between Hindus and Muhammadans on account of all these things. But there is trouble between Hindus and Muhammadans always over the question of cow slaughter. Where is the legislation for stopping this kind of trouble ? But, Sir, I may tell you that all the trouble in this country between Hindus and Muhammadans is going on not for religious feelings but for the loaves and fishes which are at the disposal of the British Government and may be bestowed by them on either Hindus or Muhammadans. I may tell you, Sir, frankly that religious quarrels are created only in order to achieve leadership, so that certain people may be elected to the Council or the District Board or Municipality. Then, Sir, if the Government have the courage, the remedy lies in their coming forward to legislate only for civic rights, not in talking about religion. But they have not the courage, nor the strength, nor the sense to take up that. I therefore oppose the motion, Sir.

[Mr. Ram Narayan Singh.]

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : At this late hour I do not want to sound a discordant note. Moreover, as my community has demanded legislation to protect the founder of the religion from scurrilous attacks, out of respect for their feelings, I do not oppose the Bill. But personally I do really feel that this Bill, instead of serving the purpose for which it is going to be enacted, will do harm to the cause and will be more capable of mischief than of protecting religions and religious founders. Sir, the immediate need of the Bill is said to be that some scurrilous attacks were made on the Prophet of Islam. I, as a Mussalman, do feel utter humiliation in seeking the protection of my Holy Prophet through a Legislature which cannot protect itself. Turn your attention now, Sir, to the potentialities of this Bill. Here there is a quarrel between Hindus and Muhammadans, but have the Muhammadans thought about the differences between Sunnis and Shiahs and Ahmadis ? What is going to be the result of this Bill if it is enacted ? A greater discord between communities themselves. Sir, as I have said, it is out of respect for the feelings of my community that I do not oppose this Bill ; but I do ask, through you, Sir, the Members of the Select Committee to limit the scope of the Bill as far as possible. We have seen to-day, while only discussing the principle, we have come down from the Prophets to Shivaji and consequently to Aurangzeb, and I do not see any reason why to-morrow we should not come down to the two Honourable Members from the Punjab. (Laughter.) Sir, I do acknowledge that if religions ever required protection they do require protection in this 20th century. I do feel that, but it is not protection from the scurrilous attacks of certain lunatics that we require protection, but protection we require from the growing scepticism arising out of the demons of civilization and rationalism ; and that protection no legislation can provide. I do not oppose the Bill, but I would request the Select Committee to limit the scope of the Bill as far as they possibly can.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, the debate has already covered a great deal of ground and in view of what I think is the general sense of the House it would really be unnecessary for me to prolong it. In moving the motion I ventured to express the hope that the principle and the intention of the Bill would meet with very general acceptance. I think that hope has been more than fulfilled, because the principle and intention of the Bill have, I think, been almost unanimously accepted. I agree entirely with the Honourable and learned gentleman from Bombay, Mr. Jayakar, that in defining the principle and the intention of the Bill, we must beware of extending our ambitions beyond the limits which a secular Government can reasonably be called upon to attempt or can reasonably hope to effect. As I conceive them, the principle and the intention of the Bill are to make an intentional insult to religion the substantive matter of an offence, with the object of securing the rights and enforcing the obligations of good citizenship and of protecting society from the consequences which might otherwise ensue. That position may perhaps not go so far as some of my Honourable friends would desire, but it is a position which, so far as it goes, will command universal acceptance in this House. The House and the Government substantially agree that this measure should go to a Select Committee, and the reasons have been so ably and so forcibly urged both by Honourable gentlemen on this side and by Honourable gentleman on that side of the House that it is unnecessary for me to pursue that argument further. In conclusion, therefore, I would only suggest to the Honourable and learned gentleman opposite that after having heard the arguments on both sides on his amendment, he will now withdraw it and support the motion which I originally moved. (Applause.)

Mr. President : The original question was :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder, Maulvi Muhammad Shafee, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. M. A. Jinnah, Mr. Ismail Khan, Mr. Abdul Haye, Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, Mr. J. Coatman, Mr. K. C. Roy, Sir Abdul Qaiyum, Sir Denys Bray, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Sir Hari Singh Gour and the Mover, with instructions to report within seven days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be nine."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question I have now to put is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder, Maulvi Muhammad Shafee, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. M. A. Jinnah, Mr. Ismail Khan, Mr. Abdul Haye, Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, Mr. J. Coatman, Mr. K. C. Roy, Sir Abdul Qaiyum, Sir Denys Bray, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Sir Hari Singh Gour and the Mover, with instructions to report within seven days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be nine."

The motion was adopted.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER THE QUESTION OF RESIDENCE AND ACCOMMODATION FOR MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I move :

"That the Honourable the President do appoint six Members of this House to serve on a Committee to consider the question of residence and accommodation for Members of the Indian Legislature, including the use and disposal of the Western Hostel, New Delhi, and that the Council of State be asked to nominate Members to serve on the Committee."

Sir, the House is aware that there is a certain amount of grievance among Members of this House who occupy the accommodation provided for them by Government in New Delhi in regard to that accommodation, to the catering arrangements for the Western Hostel and various other matters. These matters have been receiving the consideration of Government from time to time, and last year we were inclined to think that perhaps an effective remedy would be to encourage a hotel company to establish a hotel in New Delhi. Now if that arrangement is feasible, it would not only help Members of the Legislature but it would also help the officers of Government and would thereby be of advantage to Government in reducing the extra accommodation which it may ultimately be compelled to build for its officers in New Delhi. Tenders were accordingly called for by advertisement asking hotel companies whether they were willing to establish a hotel in New Delhi, certain concessions in regard to land being offered. Unfortunately that did not evoke any response. Private conversations elicited the information that so long as Government wanted practically to run a hotel in the shape of the Western Hostel, it was unlikely that any hotel company would come forward to establish a hotel in New Delhi. On the other hand, if we were to hand over the Western Hostel to a hotel company, that might cause inconvenience to some of the Members of the Legislature who now utilise that accommodation. After consideration of all the difficulties, Government have accordingly decided to consult the Legislature in regard to this troublesome matter. They have no doubt that this Committee, whose composition I am now proposing, will, in making their recommendations, take into consideration every aspect of the question including the interests of the tax-payer. Sir, I have nothing more to add, and I move my motion.

Mr. President : Before this motion is discussed, I should like to know from the Honourable Member firstly, as to how many Members he wants the Council of State to nominate, and secondly, what would be the functions of the proposed Committee : would it be purely an advisory Committee, a Committee to make recommendations only, or would it have power to finally settle all questions regarding residence and accommodation for Honourable Members. My own idea is that it would be much better if Honourable Members are left to settle for themselves this question of their accommodation in view of the great dis-satisfaction that prevails at present.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, in regard to the first question, that is the number of Members from the Council of State, we do not propose to ask them to nominate more than six. But I should prefer to leave it at that at this stage. A similar motion will be moved in the Council of State as soon as this motion is adopted by this House.

But it is not the intention of Government that the Council of State will be asked to nominate more than six Members....

Mr. President : Is it the intention of Government to ask the Council of State to nominate equal number, regardless of its size ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I said "not more than six" ; we shall probably reduce it to four. (Hear, hear). (An Honourable Member : "Still more if possible.")

4 P.M.

As regards the other point you raised, Sir, this Committee will simply make recommendations. It will not be the function of this Committee to settle particular questions. For example, I may mention that one of the questions which this Committee will have to consider is the use and disposal of the Western Hostel. They cannot possibly dispose of the Western Hostel themselves ; that is a matter which must be left to the Government. This Committee will simply make recommendations and it will thereafter be left to Government to take action thereon. I shall give another example. Let us suppose that this Committee say : We want 30 more quarters to be built. Surely they are not going to build those quarters. Therefore it follows that they will simply make recommendations and thereafter Government will take such action as they deem fit on those recommendations.

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Would any Honourable Member care to serve on a Committee of that description ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Surely they would.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I should like to know from the Honourable Member whether it is the intention of Government that this Committee that he proposes should serve as a House Committee to look after the convenience of Members of this House or is it a temporary Committee only for this purpose.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : This Committee is a temporary Committee. If thereafter it is found necessary that there should be a permanent House Committee, that will certainly come within the purview of the recommendations of this particular Committee and Government will be at liberty to take action on that recommendation.

Mr. President : So many complaints have come to me from Honourable Members regarding accommodation that I thought the time had arrived for the Government to leave the question of allotting accommodation to Honourable Members themselves through a Committee appointed by them. I should not have made this suggestion had it not been for the fact that there has been a strong feeling on the subject among Members and numerous complaints have reached me from time to time.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, I was not here then, but I believe there used to be a House Committee of the type referred to by you. But my information is that that Committee did not function properly and it came to a natural death. (An Honourable Member : "That was in the first Assembly.") I do not know whether it was the previous Assembly, or whether the allegation made by my friend over there is correct, viz., that its members were less active than the Members composing this Assembly. I was not here then. But in any case, as I have already said in reply to a question asked by my Honourable friend Mr. Chetty, if this temporary Committee, the appointment of which is now before the House, includes in its recommendations that a permanent House Committee should be appointed to deal with the question of allotment of accommodation provided and ancillary questions, Government would be quite prepared to consider that recommendation in due course.

[Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra.]

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : It seems to me, Sir, that the Honourable Member is mixing up two separate and distinct questions in this motion. There is first.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is entitled to separate the questions by an amendment if he wishes to do so.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, the Honourable the Mover of this motion has referred to a previous House Committee. (Laughter). Well, Sir, I know something about it. As a matter of fact, it was at my initiative (Hear, hear) that the first House Committee was selected in the first Session of the Legislative Assembly, and I think Honourable Members of this House would like to know from me the history of that House Committee which never functioned. When we suffered inconvenience from the accommodation in the Western Hostel and elsewhere, we met and decided to force the hands of the Government to appoint a House Committee, to give that Committee power to select houses and allot them to Members at their own discretion. The proposal was resisted by Government, but we carried it and a Committee was duly nominated and the rest of the story of that Committee was that that Committee was never called into existence ; it remained a paper Committee and in spite of the protest made by the Members on this side of the House that the Government were not taking that Committee into confidence nor called upon it to function, the Government remained obdurate and that Committee died a natural death. This is the history of the first Committee.

Mr. President : How many non-officials were there ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Now, Sir, I am very glad to find that there has been a resurrection of that Committee after 6 or 7 years. But you, Sir, have anticipated, because it is not merely sufficient if the Committee is appointed ; we must know definitely as to what are the powers and functions of that Committee and how far that Committee would have the initiative of deciding who should have what accommodation and what arrangements should be made. I find, Sir, from a small book I have in my hand that we have in the British House of Commons a Kitchen and Refreshment Committee (Hear, hear, and Applause) and that Committee is in sole charge of all the arrangements. (An Honourable Member : " Accommodation ? "). They have no accommodation there. They are in charge of all the arrangements of the Kitchen and Refreshment Rooms. Now, so far as the British House of Commons is concerned, they do not provide accommodation for their members because they live in London and consequently there is ample accommodation available to Honourable Members. We are, on the other hand, to visit the deserted city of Delhi once a year and consequently there is necessity for accommodation. I therefore suggest, Sir, that the Committee may be nominated, but on this condition that it will draw up rules in consultation with the Honourable Member and that he would accede to the rules, and if there is any difference of opinion between the Committee and the Honourable Member, you, Sir, I expect, will act as the umpire. It is only in this way that that Committee is likely to function. I submit it is a reasonable request and the Honourable Member who is the author of this motion should have no hesitation in accepting this suggestion. There is another suggestion that I have got to make. The Honourable Member says that the number of members of the Council of State will not be more than six, and then he suggested in answer to your question that they would be four. Considering that we are 143 and they are only 60 I suggest that the representation of that House on the House Committee should be pro rata, proportionately to their number (Sir Victor Sassoon : " 2½.") It does not matter how many there are, provided we have not got too many of them. The third point that I wish to suggest is this.

Mr. President : It is no use suggesting these points. Has the Honourable Member any definite amendment to move ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, I have a definite amendment to move, and it is this.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member pass it on to the Chair ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Sir, I am sorry I am not ready with the amendment. If this motion is adjourned, I dare say I shall be able to put forward an amendment acceptable to all parties. I move, Sir, that this motion be adjourned.

Mr. President : To what date.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Some other Government day, the day after to-morrow.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must be definite.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Sir, I move that this motion do stand adjourned to Wednesday next.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Before this motion is taken into consideration, may I submit that there seems to be a certain amount of misapprehension on the part of several Members, including my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour, about the scope of this motion. This motion is not intended to establish a permanent or standing Committee on the lines of the previous House Committee, as I have already made clear. The Committee contemplated in my motion is required to examine certain specific matters and those matters are the question of residence and accommodation for Members of the Indian Legislature including the use and disposal of the Western Hostel. As I have already said, that Committee will certainly be entitled to consider the question of appointment of a permanent House Committee and should they include that proposal in their recommendation, the matter will receive the consideration of Government in due course. But at the present moment, if I may say so, there seems to be a certain amount of confusion in the matter.....

Mr. President : I do not think there is any confusion in the matter. Some Members wish to move amendments to this motion and for that purpose they want time.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I wanted to explain, Sir, that it was hardly necessary for them to move for an adjournment with the object of introducing an amendment at this stage. There is nothing in this motion regarding the appointment of a Committee for a specific purpose which prevents that Committee from making that particular suggestion.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : We can make many suggestions even on the floor of the House.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I quite agree that the House is entitled to make any amendments coming within the scope of my motion, or any suggestions, but that would, if I may say so, be wasting the time of the House. My motion, as it stands, is a perfectly colourless motion.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : We want to give it a little colour.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the further discussion of the motion do stand adjourned till Wednesday next."

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(AMENDMENT OF SECTION 59.)

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move that leave be given to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes.

The purpose of this Bill is to remedy a defect which has come to light as the result of the proposals made in the last Budget in regard to the assessment of income-tax upon tea companies. It will be remembered that the Government were of opinion that the existing rule which limited to 25 per cent. the amount of the profits of the tea companies which might be treated as non-agricultural was unnecessarily generous to some, at any rate, of the tea companies and that the Government proposed to raise the figure to 50 per cent. There was an existing rule issued under the Income-tax Act which fixed at 25 per cent. the amount of the profits of tea companies which were to be treated as non-agricultural. When the Government proposed to raise that to 50 per cent., they naturally had some discussion with the tea companies before action. In the course of those discussions it became obvious that there was, at any rate, some doubt whether the rule under the Income-tax Act was intra vires. It laid down that in all circumstances 25 per cent. of the tea companies' profits must be treated as nonagricultural and assessed to income-tax, but the Income-tax Act says that agricultural income shall not be assessed to income-tax. Therefore it was possible, though not likely in many cases, that the effect of the rule fixing 25 per cent. for all cases would be to tax agricultural profits in some cases. That being so and a doubt having arisen in regard to the validity of the existing rule, the Government through the Central Board of Revenue entered into negotiations with the tea companies. The Government's first intention was, what seems a straightforward arrangement, that the question of the amount of each particular tea company's profits, which should be treated as non-agricultural, should be decided by the Income-tax authorities with reference to the particular case. It is proved, however, that that would be extremely cumbrous and inconvenient to the tax-payer, and it is at the request of the tea companies that the Government now propose that this slight change in the Income-tax Act be made in order that they might be able to re-introduce a rule, which will be intra vires, fixing a definite percentage which will apply to all tea companies. This Bill, as I said, is introduced after negotiations with, and at the request of, the particular taxpayers to whom it applies. At the same time, we found that if there was a doubt as to the question whether the rule regarding the tea companies was intra vires, there was a doubt also as to the rule which made a similar arrangement in regard to one or two other matters. The Bill, therefore, proposes to take power to make a new rule which shall be intra vires in the case of the tea companies and to remove whatever doubts there may be as to the validity of certain existing rules which are for the convenience of the tax-payer. The Government are anxious to get this Bill through this Session in order that they may be able to proceed conveniently to the assessment of tea companies for the year. The next motion that I shall make, therefore, will be that the Bill be taken into consideration unless I am given to understand that a Select Committee would be desired, in which case no doubt one will consider it, but I am anxious that this Bill, which makes a very small change in the law, should come into force soon after the end of the Session. Sir, I move.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I just want to put a question to the Honourable the Finance Member. I understand that this Bill is intended to remove a defect which the Government have found in regard to the 25 per cent. rule as regards the assessments of tea companies. When the Finance Bill was under discussion in this House, the House was asked definitely to assent to the proposal that the export duty on tea should be removed on the understanding that the revenue lost by it would be recovered by means of this assessment of non-agricultural income of tea estates. That proposal has so far not been carried out and it is still in the negotiation stage. We are now asked only to assent to a rule-making power on the part of the Government to enable it to do so. So, before this House gives leave, I desire to ask whether the Government have fulfilled the undertaking that they had given that so far as the tea companies are concerned the income that the State has lost through the export duty on tea will be re-imbursed by means of the change proposed, and if so whether that provision should not be properly put into the section itself.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : With your permission, Sir, may I answer this question ? The Government have certainly kept very much in mind the intentions that they had at the time of the Budget and it is in order that they may be able to assess the tea companies to that higher income-tax which they regard as due from them, that they ask the House to pass this Bill. Without this Bill the Government will have to try and proceed to assess every single tea company separately and come to a separate conclusion as regards the rate applicable. Instead of that, they desire power under this Bill to fix a rate once for all. What that rate exactly will be must necessarily remain for discussion with the tea companies, when we have power to make the rule, but the intention to make good the loss on the tea export duties still remains.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL.

(AMENDMENT OF SECTIONS 2, 23, 28, ETC.)

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I move that leave be given to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes.

Sir, if the last Bill which I introduced was a small Bill and an innocuous Bill, a Bill introduced at the request of a particular class of tax-payer, I cannot claim that this is the position in regard to this Bill. This Bill is a small thought on a great subject. The object of this Bill is to do something to protect the revenue of the general tax-payer against skilful legal evasion of income-tax. The possibilities of legal evasion of income-tax have been before this House on several occasions and I have more than once foreshadowed to this House the probability of our desiring to introduce and pass into law legislation with a view to checking the habit which is a growing one and which does a serious injustice to the ordinary tax-payer. I do not propose at this stage to make any attempt to explain the Bill in detail. In regard to this Bill, if leave is given to introduce it to-day, the next motion which the Government propose to make will be that it should be circulated for opinion. Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE CANTONMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. G. M. Young (Army Secretary) : Sir, I move that leave be given to introduce a Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes.

The proposed amendments are explained in detail in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. They are, with perhaps one exception, of minor importance. Some of them are intended to clarify the language of the Act, others to remove inconsistencies, and others again to bring the provisions of the Act more into line with the existing municipal law Clause 2 of the Bill contains a purely verbal amendment which requires no comment.

Clause 3 deals with a subject to which attention has been drawn more than once in this House. It is a statutory duty of a Vice-President, as the name implies, to preside in the absence of the President. But section 20 of the Act lays down that the President of a Cantonment Board must be the Officer Commanding the Station ; and under military practice there is always an Officer Commanding the Station present in the station. If the permanent Commanding Officer goes away, for however short a time, the next senior officer takes his place, and automatically becomes the Commanding Officer of the Station and the President of the Cantonment Board The result is that no Vice-President can ever preside at a meeting of the Cantonment Board unless the President deliberately stays away from the meeting to enable him to do so. Clause 3 proposes to remove this anomaly, and enable the Vice-President, on occasion, to preside at meetings of the Board.

Clauses 4 and 5 propose to empower Local Governments to remove members of Cantonment Boards who have, since their election, become subject to any disqualification, which if it existed at the time of their election would have rendered them ineligible for election. This, also, is in accordance with municipal law.

Clause 6 proposes to assimilate the powers of Local Governments of imposing taxation in Cantonments with their existing powers of imposing taxation in municipalities.

Other clauses are intended to improve the phraseology of certain sections of the Act which deal with property tax.

Clause 12 proposes to enable Cantonment Boards to invest their funds in fixed deposit with banks other than the Imperial Bank Formerly Cantonment Board funds vested in the Crown, and merged in Government balances. They could therefore be invested in fixed deposit with the Imperial Bank only. Cantonment funds now vest in, and are managed by the Cantonment Authority, and there is no reason why Cantonment Authorities should not be able to deposit their funds with other banks, subject to the approval of the Local Government. Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. G. M. Young Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(AMENDMENT OF SECTIONS 10, 14, ETC.)

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I rise to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Haji Abdoola Haroon, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtullah, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. Ram Narayan Singh, Mr. T. A. K Shervani, Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder, Mr. D. V. Belvi, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Seth Jamnadas, Mr. M S. Aney, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda, Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim, Sir Victor Sassoon, Mr. H. G. Cocke, Mr. W. S. Lamb, Mr. V. K. Aravamuda Ayangar, Mr. G Sarvotham Rao, Mr. K. C. Roy, and the Mover and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be seven.

Sir, the holiday that we have had from other legislation seems to have produced a number of measures so far as income-tax legislation is concerned to-day. This is the third Bill dealing with income-tax in regard to which I have had the privilege of rising to move a motion. This Bill is the Bill which was introduced last Session and was then circulated for public opinion. It contains eleven sections which even the Government have assessed at varying valuation and which I gather some of the tax-payers regard as of varying wickedness. I think it is a little difficult to attempt to summarise the contents of the Bill and I already did so on the motion, during the last Session, when the original idea of referring the measure to a Select Committee was modified into a motion for circulation. The opinions received are fairly voluminous and will give an opportunity for study to the members of the Committee. I have no reason to suppose that there is any objection in the House to the motion that the Bill as a whole should go to a Select Committee. I know that when we reach the Committee, there will be difference of opinion about some of the clauses. I think, therefore, that I shall be suiting the interests of you, Sir, and of the House, if I do not prolong my speech on the subject now but content myself with moving the motion which I have just read out.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

The motion was adopted

Mr. President : Sir Basil Blackett.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : There is a Resolution by Mr. Dalal which comes before the Supplementary Grant that stands in my name.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Mr. Joshi going to speak on that motion ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : (Nominated : Labour Interests) : I shall not make a long speech on this motion, Sir ; but I want to speak on it.

Mr. President : That is why I passed it over at present. Sir Basil Blackett.

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.

SALT.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I am not sure that the House has had much time to consider the Supplementary Grants and I would suggest for your consideration that, if the Resolution of Mr. Dalal is not to be moved, we might conveniently adjourn. However, if it is not the desire of the House, I am perfectly prepared to go on.

Sir, I beg to move :

" That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 6,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1928, is respect of ' Salt '."

The purpose of this supplementary estimate is not to permit of expenditure over and above the amount which has already been voted by the House, but the sum for which we ask authority is required for the quarrying of gypsum at Khewra and it has been held by the Auditor General, with the full concurrence of the Government of India, that this expenditure constitutes a new expenditure which ought not to be incurred in the course of the year without the special approval of the House. The matter has been before the Standing Finance Committee and I do not think the House will have any difficulty in agreeing that the sum should be granted. Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

EMIGRATION—EXTERNAL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I move :

" That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 81,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1928, in respect of ' Emigration-External '."

The purpose of this grant is stated at the bottom of page 2 of the document which has been circulated, and I am sure it is one with which this House will have great sympathy.

The motion was adopted.

CURRENCY.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I beg to move :

" That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 2,93,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1928, in respect of ' Currency '."

The purpose of this grant is explained on page 3 of the Supplementary Demands. It is partly required to meet the expenditure on account of scales and weights, to be supplied to the Treasuries to enable them to receive sovereigns and half-sovereigns in exchange under section 2 of the Currency Act, 1927 ; and partly it is for the purpose of meeting expenditure on paper required to manufacture a larger number of currency notes. This last item is not an additional expenditure but an anticipation of expenditure with a view to the fact that we foresee the coming into existence of the new Currency Printing Press at Nasik which will, we hope, in a short time be supplying India with the whole of the currency notes which she requires instead of any being manufactured elsewhere.

The motion was adopted.

CIVIL WORKS.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir I rise to move :

" That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1928, in respect of ' Civil Works '."

This Supplementary Demand is required for the purpose of providing a solution for the very difficult problem of the accommodation of the lady clerks in the Government of India at Delhi. The matter has been discussed for some time and the solution that is here proposed is one which is, I think, both a satisfactory one in itself and, I am convinced after considering possible alternatives, the most economical way of providing for the housing of these ladies. It is a duty that I think the House will recognise is one which cannot be neglected by the Government of India, and the Government of India are of opinion that this is the most economical way in which that duty can be discharged in New Delhi. Sir, I move.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : As this is a contentious matter may I suggest that it will be to the convenience of this House if it were adjourned until to-morrow.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Some of us are going to oppose it.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I say a word. The matter was discussed by the Standing Finance Committee and was passed by a majority. It is a question which I think should be considered by this House—I do not say necessarily discussed—but it should be carefully considered by this House, and if there is a demand for an adjournment I do not wish on behalf of Government to oppose it.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : It may be discussed now.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I oppose the motion. I move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has already spoken to his motion. He is not entitled to move an adjournment of the debate.

Diwan Chaman Lall : (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : May I suggest an adjournment of this motion till to-morrow. Apparently there is a feeling in the House that the motion ought to be discussed, and in the circumstances I would suggest an adjournment.

Mr. President : I understand from the Leader of the Congress Party that there is no objection to going on with the business now. I do not understand why members of the same party should speak with different voices.

If no Honourable Member is going to speak I will put the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I move that the motion be adjourned until to-morrow.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I suggest that the Government business is arranged by Government If it is adjourned to-day we shall put it down for to-morrow.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That further discussion of this motion be adjourned."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 6th September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 6th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

COMMUNAL DISTURBANCES.

876. Mr. Narayan Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Indians killed and the loss of property on account of the last year's communal disturbances in India ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the amount spent from the Government Treasury for the suppression of communal disturbances ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what measures they propose to adopt to stop these communal disturbances in India in future ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The number of persons reported to have been killed in the communal disturbances since the 1st September 1926 is 99. Statistics of loss of property are not available.

(b) The expenditure falls on Local Governments, and the Government of India have no information.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer on this subject given by my predecessor to Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas' question of the 18th August, 1926.

Mr. Narayan Prasad Singh : Will the Honourable Member give the answer in Hindustani so that I may understand the answer and put supplementary questions, if necessary ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Am I to understand, Sir, that the Honourable Member wants me to read the reply in Hindustani ? I think, Sir, I should prefer to communicate the answer in writing to the Honourable Member.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Now he is deprived of the right of putting supplementary questions, because he cannot understand the answer given in English.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think I must ask the Honourable Member to put down his question in writing and I will answer it to the best of my ability.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : It is the right of every Member to expect Government's answer to be intelligible to him.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : On a point of procedure, Sir. I think, according to the rules of procedure of this House, it is permissible for a Member of this House, if he does not know English, to use his own vernacular and I think in using his vernacular, he has got the right to expect an answer in the language which he understands.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I have got a question put by U. Tok Kyi. Am I to understand that I have to answer him in Burmese ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I may say at once in reply to that, that the rule is if a Member is acquainted with English, he will use the English language, and if he is not acquainted with English, he is permitted and he is entitled to use his own vernacular and he is entitled to expect an answer in his own vernacular.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member cite the Standing Order that he is referring to ?

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask, Sir, whether the original question was put in English or the vernacular. (An Honourable Member : "English.") Is it not therefore to be presumed that the Honourable Member who put his question in English knew the vernacular ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The question of Mr. Narayan Prasad Singh was put in the vernacular, and it is only the English translation that is before the House.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Is not the Honourable Mr. Crerar entitled to answer in his own vernacular ? (Laughter).

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I refer to Rule 14 of the Indian Legislative Rules which says :

"The business of the Indian Legislature shall be transacted in English, provided that the President may permit any Member unacquainted with English to address the Council in a vernacular ".

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I suggest, Sir, that the answer to this question may be postponed till to-morrow, so that we may think over this question in the meanwhile.

Mr. President : Rule 14 says :

"The business of the Indian Legislature shall be transacted in English

—Honourable Members know that it is transacted in English—

"provided that the President may permit any Member unacquainted with English to address the Assembly in a vernacular language."

This applies to the general rules of procedure, that is to the speeches made in this House. If the Honourable Member does not know English and the Chair is satisfied that he cannot fluently speak the English language, then the Chair might permit him to speak in his own vernacular. But this does not apply to the putting of questions and the answering of questions ; and in any case it certainly does not apply to the answering of questions.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I say a word on this point. I think the proceedings of the Assembly include the putting of questions and the giving of answers, and the speeches made on questions are as much speeches as those made on Bills and motions. Without by any means saying that the Honourable the Home Member is bound to give his answer only in English, I think it is only fair that, when a questioner does not understand English, the answer should be translated into the vernacular for the benefit of the Member putting the question in order to enable him to put supplementary questions. It is only fair that the answer which the Home Member gives should be translated and sent to the questioner in advance so that he may put supplementary questions.

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : Will it not be possible to have an interpreter in the Assembly for interpreting English questions into the vernacular and vernacular answers into English. They have interpreters in the Punjab Legislative Council.

Mr. President : What the Honourable Member for Madras suggests is that translations of the replies should be supplied in advance to the Honourable Member who puts the question, so that he may be ready, if need be, to put supplementary questions. That is a suggestion which the Chair will take into consideration in consultation with the Honourable the Home Member, and on some future occasion will state what the procedure in such cases should be.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What about the answer to this particular question ?

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : I beg to ask a supplementary question, that the reply to supplementary questions also may be in Hindustani.

DEFENCE OF INDIA.

877. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article by the Military Correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, dated July 1st, 1927, regarding the defence of India ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether any friction has arisen between the authorities in Great Britain and in India in regard to the questions of defence or questions relating to the formation of an Expeditionary Force ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay papers connected with the correspondence that has passed between Whitehall and Simla or Delhi in this connection on the table ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) and (c). No, Sir.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Does it mean that there is a consensus of opinion between Whitehall and the Government of India in regard to this matter ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Which matter ?

Diwan Chaman Lall : The matter referred to in part (a) of the question.

Mr. G. M. Young : The matter in that article, from the point of view of the Government, does not exist.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether his attention has been drawn to the fact that English newspapers have commented upon the dissension that has arisen between Whitehall and Simla in regard to military defence.

Mr. G. M. Young : I am aware that dissensions have been mentioned ; but, as I have already stated, those dissensions do not exist.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I take it that the Government of India have agreed to the proposals of the British Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member assumes that the British Government have made proposals which, in fact, as I have already stated, they have not made.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member inform the House whether any proposals were made ?

Mr. G. M. Young : They are non-existent.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I take it that the article that appeared in the Daily Telegraph is absolutely incorrect.

Mr. G. M. Young : It is entirely without foundation.

FUMIGATION OF AMERICAN COTTON.

878. Mr. E. F. Sykes : (a) Have Government considered whether the remission of charges for fumigation of American cotton will act as a bounty on its importation, and considered the question of giving a countervailing bonus to producers of Indian cotton ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government is considering the recommendation of the Cotton Industry Tariff Board that the Central Revenues should bear the cost of fumigating imported American cotton ? If so, are Government prepared also to consider the advisability of negotiating with the Government of the United States in order to obtain similar action on the part of America and a consequent reduction in the import charges on Indian cotton imported into the United States ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The suggestions contained in the Honourable Member's question will be considered.

ISSUE OF INSTRUCTIONS BY THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT REGARDING THE SUPPLY OF INFORMATION TO THE PRESS.

879. U. Tok Kyi : (a) Is it a fact that the Education Department of the Government of India has issued instructions that no information is to be given separately to any newspaper except to the " Associated Press " ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

STATE MANAGEMENT OF THE BURMA RAILWAYS.

880. U. Tok Kyi : (a) Is it not a fact that the existing contract between the Government and the Burma Railway Company will expire on the 31st December 1928 ?

(b) If so, will the Government be prepared to take the Burma Railway back from the Company and run it themselves ?

(c) Are the Government aware that the Burma Legislative Council is in favour of State management ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Secretary of State has given the Burma Railways Company notice of the termination of the existing contract between him and the Company on the 31st December, 1928.

(b) The question is under consideration.

(c) Yes.

EMPLOYMENT OF UNPASSED MEN IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

881. Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if there are employees in the Government of India who have not passed the Public Service Commission examination ? If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state (i) the reasons of such employment, and (ii) the number thereof ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the Finance Department of the Government of India (including the Military Finance) unpassed men are being made permanent in preference to graduate passed men ? If so, will the Government be pleased to give reasons for it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

FILLING UP OF VACANCIES IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

882. Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state if priority in examination is a material consideration in filling up permanent vacancies ? Is it a fact that men passing the Board's examinations later than 1920 were given preference to those who passed in 1920 ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : So far as departmental candidates are concerned, promotions to permanent vacancies are not entirely dependent on the date of passing the examination but are regulated also by such considerations as merit and capacity.

In the case of outside candidates, nominations for permanent vacancies are invariably made according to the seniority of candidates on the waiting list maintained by the Public Service Commission, unless it is desired to recruit a member of a minority community.

Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : Is not examination a test of merit ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No doubt examination is a test of merit but there are other tests.

DISCONTENT AMONG RAILWAY OFFICERS CONSEQUENT ON THE INTRODUCTION OF THE DIVISIONAL SCHEME.

883. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Are the Government of India aware that since the introduction of the Divisional Scheme, a considerable measure of distrust and discontent prevails among most railway officers with the single and significant exception of the Royal Engineer Officers who are attached to Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reply is in the negative.

EMPLOYMENT OF ROYAL ENGINEER OFFICERS N ADMINISTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

884. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Government be pleased to state whether or not, the wide utilisation of the services of Royal Engineer officers in administrative appointments on Indian State Railways, is an answer to the Indianisation of those Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Royal Engineer officers appointed to the Railways are treated as having been recruited in England, and the appointment of such officers does not affect the question of Indianisation.

NUMBER OF ROYAL ENGINEER OFFICERS EMPLOYED ON STATE RAILWAYS.

885. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Royal Engineer Officers employed on Indian State Railways giving the nature of each such appointment ?

(b) Is it a fact that the salaries of such Royal Engineer Officers are debited to Indian revenues ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The information may be obtained from the Railway Board's Classified List, a copy of which is in the Library.

(b) Yes.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : I notice the answer to part (b) of the question is " Yes ". Can the Honourable Member give the reason " Why " it is " Yes " ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : My answer to the original question was " Yes ". The reason why their salaries are debited to Indian revenues is that they are employed for the benefit of India.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : That does not answer my question at all, Sir.

EMPLOYMENT OF ROYAL ENGINEER OFFICERS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

886. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Are Royal Engineer officers borne on the permanent cadres of State Railway Services ?

(b) In the event of war, particularly, out of India, is it intended that such officers should continue to be employed on Indian Railways ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to say how many Royal Engineer Officers there were on State Railways in 1914, and how many were retained on Railways in India after the declaration of and during the currency of the Great War and in what capacities ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Such officers are liable to be recalled to military duty in the event of war.

(c) In 1914 there were 55 Royal Engineer officers in railway employ. Of these, 47 were recalled to military duty in the last Great War. The officers retained on Railways were employed as Agent, Traffic Manager, Government Inspector of Railways, etc.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Arising out of the Honourable Member's answer, will he please state whether it proves or disproves that the entertainment of Royal Engineer officers on Indian Railways neither is a necessity nor correct ?

Mr. A. A L. Parsons : I am afraid I am not prepared to give an answer offhand.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I ask the Honourable Member what are the duties of Royal Engineer officers employed on the Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They are employed in a good many engineering posts, occasionally as Divisional Superintendents, sometimes as Agents, Government Inspectors of Railways, and so on. They form part of our engineering cadre.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Cannot indigenous talent be employed for that purpose ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As I have explained the Royal Engineer officers are considered as part of our European recruitment. They come into the 25 per cent. of European recruitment agreed upon.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The object in employing these Royal Engineer officers is not the service they render to the Railways but extraneous considerations enter into their employment ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I should not be prepared to make quite so definite a statement. It is not easy to get a sufficient number of competent engineering officers and I should not like to say that we employ them in peace time purely as a war reserve.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Has any attempt been made to recruit local officers to replace them ? The Honourable Member says it is not quite so easy, but has any attempt been made ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Does the Honourable Member mean Indian officers ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We take Indian officers when we can recruit them locally up to the 75 per cent. limit. As I have explained, the Royal Engineer officers do not come against Indian recruitment at all. They come against the 25 per cent. of European recruitment.

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : May I ask whether it is the practice in England to employ Royal Engineer officers on the railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I must ask for notice.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly tell me whether the employment on Indian Railways of Royal Engineer officers is similar in policy to the employment of I. M. S. officers in the Civil Medical Service—in other words, a war reserve ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As I have just explained in reply to Sir Hari Singh Gour, I am not prepared to say without qualification that we employ them purely as a war reserve. I should have to look much more carefully into the matter than I have done at present.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Another question, Sir. Does Indianisation of the Railways, in so far as it refers to the 25 per cent.

of European recruitment refer to and include the employment of purely Military Royal Engineer officers as is being done to-day or should this percentage be entirely recruited from engineers outside the Army ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I do not understand the Honourable Member's question.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is it right that in the entertainment of 25 per cent. of European railway engineers, as ordained by the Lee Commission, military engineers should be included, because Royal Engineer officers are military officers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Lee Commission's recommendation, to the exact terms of which I should like to refer the Honourable Member, applies to the number of engineers, whether they are military or civil, to be taken in by the Railways. The effect of that recommendation is that we have bound ourselves to recruit as quickly as possible up to 75 per cent. of Indians for vacancies in the Railway Departments as a whole. If we take Royal Engineer officers into the Railways they count against the balance of 25 per cent. English recruitment.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Is not that a deviation from the policy of commercialising the Railways ?

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : May I ask another supplementary question, Sir ?

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member pass on to the next question ?

EMPLOYMENT OF ROYAL ENGINEER OFFICERS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

887. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is the practice of employing Royal Engineer Officers in posts other than those of Agents, peculiar to State Railways alone, and if so, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Most of the Royal Engineer officers in railway service are employed on State-managed Railways though occasionally their services are placed at the disposal of Company-managed Railways at the request of the Boards of Directors.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask why Royal Engineers are employed in the Traffic Department and whether engineers others than Royal Engineers are also so employed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not sure of the answer to the second part of Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru's question, but I think that engineers other than Royal Engineers are occasionally employed as traffic officers and in other departments than the engineering departments of the Railways. The answer to the first part of the question is that the natural aptitudes of individuals are taken into consideration.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : In Indianisation of the superior railway service, do the Government subscribe to the policy of recruiting Royal Engineer officers, who are purely military officers, to fill up the 25 per cent. of European recruitment, which should be obtained from outside the Army ? Is this Indianisation or militarisation of the superior railway services ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I must ask for notice : I am afraid I could not possibly make a statement offhand.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether the recruitment for these posts as they fall vacant is conducted separately ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Separately from what ?

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member consider the matter and let me have an answer to my question in the course of time, since he cannot do so now ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the Honourable Member will put down a question I will do my best to answer him.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are not Transportation Officers separately recruited from the Royal Engineers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it not the case then that in these posts which should be given to Transportation Officers Royal Engineers are employed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I should like to know which post the Honourable Member refers to as those which ought to be filled by traffic officers.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I refer to the posts to which the Honourable Member himself referred when he said that Royal Engineers were occasionally employed in traffic posts. As no reply was given to this, the Honourable Member said : " The Honourable Member might think over it and let me have his reply afterwards ". (Laughter.)

MARTIAL AND NON-MARTIAL RACES OF INDIA.

888. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the following :

(i) which are the castes, classes or communities recognised by the Government as the martial races of the country ?

(ii) what are the special qualities, physical, moral or otherwise on which this recognition is based ?

(iii) which are the districts and provinces to which these martial races belong ?

(b) Are the Anglo-Indians, Christians and Muhammadans living all over the country and pursuing any profession recognised as martial races ?

(c) How and when have the Government come to classify some communities as martial races and the rest as non-martial races ?

(d) Are the Government in possession of any evidence to show that the martial spirit of a race has undergone a change on account of a permanent change in the residence of that race from one province to another ? And if so, what ?

(e) Have the Government ever made any attempt to create a military spirit in any of the communities not recognised by them as martial, and if so, when and with what results ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I propose to answer the question as a whole. No particular caste, class or community is officially recognized by Government as martial or otherwise, but units of the Indian Army have always been organized on a class basis : and as there are limits to the size of that army, only a limited number of classes can ordinarily find a place in it. The classes selected are those which, from the point of view of military efficiency alone, the military authorities prefer to enlist.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Is it not a fact that the Government generally recruit from the classes which, according to Manu's classification, were considered to be the fighting races ? That is to say, the Government found certain classes to be martial classes according to Manu's classification and they carry on their recruitment according to that classification ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am afraid my Honourable friend has the advantage of me.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : May I know what the Government mean by the martial races of the country ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, it is I that want to know what my Honourable friend means by the martial races of the country.

STOPPAGE OF RECRUITMENT FOR THE ARMY IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

889. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Are not the Government aware of the fact that there is great discontent and heart-burning in the Province of Bihar and Orissa owing to the stoppage of military recruitment therein ?

(b) Are Government prepared to take steps to allay the said discontent and heart-burning ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). The answer is in the negative.

TOTAL NUMBER OF MEN AND OFFICERS RECRUITED FROM BIHAR AND ORISSA DURING THE GREAT WAR.

890. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the total number of men and officers both combatants and non-combatants recruited from the Province of Bihar and Orissa, district by district, during the last European War ?

(b) Are any of them in service yet ? If so, how many and in what capacities ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The total number of officers and men recruited from the Province of Bihar and Orissa during the War was 41,552. Of this number 8,576 were combatants. Our statistics do not show the numbers recruited by Districts, but by Provinces.

(b) The information asked for is not available, but probably very few of those recruited during the War are still serving.

NUMBER OF BIHARIS GRANTED KING'S COMMISSIONS, ETC.

891. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state the following :

(a) How many Biharis have got the King's commissions yet ?

(b) How many of them are cadets at Sandhurst now ?

(c) How many Biharis are in the Prince of Wales' College at Dehra Dun ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) One.

(b) None.

(c) Two.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

ADDRESS DELIVERED BY SIR EDWARD GRIGG TO THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF KENYA.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : With your permission, Sir, I would like to ask the following short notice question which my Honourable friend Mr. Bajpai has kindly consented to answer :

1. Has the attention of Government been drawn to the report in the Press of the address delivered by Sir Edward Grigg to the Legislative Council of Kenya ?

2. (a) Is it a fact that the Feetham Commission report on Local Government has been approved by the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the result of it would be to reduce the proportion of Indian representation on institutions of Local Government ?

(b) Were the Government of India consulted before the Report was finally accepted by the Secretary of State for the Colonies and have Government acquiesced in the action of the Secretary of State ? If not, will Government be pleased to state what action they have taken or propose to take in the matter ?

3. Is it a fact that the constitution of the Legislature of Kenya is proposed to be changed with a view to give an elected majority ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps have Government taken to adequately protect these interests ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer the question in the order enumerated by the Honourable Member opposite.

1 The reply to the Honourable Member's first question is in the affirmative.

The answer to part 2 (a) of the second question is as follows :

The Government of India have no information apart from what has appeared in the Press, but have made inquiries.

As regards part (b), the answer to the first part is in the negative, and the second part does not arise.

3. (a) The Government of India have no information, but have made inquiries.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Was not the attention of the Government drawn to the fact that the Feetham Commission was engaged in making certain enquiries into the administration of the Local Government of the Kenya Colony ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Am I to understand, Sir, that the Government of India were not aware that the Feetham Commission was appointed for the purpose of making certain inquiries into the administration of the Local Government of the Kenya Colony ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India had no official information on this subject at all. It was about the middle of July last that a gentleman from Kenya visited India, and he also came up to Simla and informed me in an informal conversation that Mr. Justice Feetham and a number of other people had been making inquiries into the question of Local Government and administration in Kenya and had submitted a report which was confidential.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : When that fact came to the knowledge of the Government of India, did they take any action ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India could not possibly take any action on knowledge which was derived from purely informal conversation with a private individual.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know whether the Government of India did not think it right to address the Secretary of State for the Colonies and find out whether this report was correct ? Was it not sufficient notice to the Government of India to make inquiries on a matter of this urgency ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already said that information derived from informal conversation with a private individual cannot be made the basis of State action or of State correspondence.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Am I right, Sir, in taking it that the reports that have constantly appeared in the Press that the Feetham Commission have submitted their report and that the Government of India have not taken any notice of it are correct ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I confess I cannot claim my Honourable friend's journalistic omscience, but so far as I am aware, the first notice of the report of the Feetham Commission that appeared in the press was in connection with Reuter's report of the address by Sir Edward Grigg to the Legislative Council of Kenya.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know, Sir, if the Government of India have received a copy of the Feetham Committee's report ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir, they have not ; but they have asked for it.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will they lay it on the table of the House when it is received ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I cannot say anything about that until the report is received.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that action is contemplated by His Majesty's Government in connection with that report ? If so, what is the objection to the Government of India laying that report on the table of the House for the information of Honourable Members ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The assumption, underlying the Honourable Member's question, has yet to be verified ;—the assumption being that the Government of Kenya have already taken action on the report. As I have already stated in reply to Mr. Shanmukham Chetty, Government have made inquiries both as to the substance of the report of the Feetham Committee and of the action, if any, contemplated on it. When the Government of India receive the report, they will take such action as may be considered to be necessary.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have the British Government been asked to postpone taking action on the report of the Committee till the Government of India have had time to make representations to them ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already said that the Government of India cannot ask His Majesty's Government to postpone action as they do not know what is actually contemplated. All that they have to go upon is a press report to the effect that certain things have happened. The Government of India have asked for information and when they are in possession of all the facts they will take necessary action. The nature of that action will be determined entirely by the nature of the action contemplated on the other side.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : In view of the fact that the Governor of Kenya Colony has announced to the Legislative Council that the Secretary of State for the Colonies has accepted the findings of the Feetham Commission, do not the Government of India think it necessary to warn the Secretary of State for the Colonies not to take any action on that report before the Government of India have had an opportunity to express their opinion ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That, Sir, is a matter of opinion. In any case, as I have stated, the Government of India have made telegraphic inquiries from the Secretary of State, and I think I can assure the House that the Government of India yield to no section of the House either in their desire or their determination to do everything possible to safeguard Indian interests.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Will the Honourable Member make a statement to the House later on when he gets more information on the subject ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I shall certainly consider my Honourable friend's suggestion.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

REVISED SCALES OF PAY FOR POSTAL CLERKS, ETC.

99. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Has the scale of pay sanctioned for the staff of the R. M. and S. and the lower selection grades in G. O. I. Resolution No. P. T. E.-11, dated 27th April 1927, been given effect to ? If not, why not ? Do Government propose to give effect to it at an early date ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government have no reason to believe that full effect has not been given to the revised scales of pay for postal clerks sanctioned in their letter of the 27th April 1927. Orders regarding the revision of the scales of pay of the lower selection grades and of Railway Mail sorters were issued on the 5th and 10th August 1927, respectively.

PAY OF GRADUATES IN POST OFFICES AND THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

100. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is it a fact that graduates entertained in Post Offices and the Railway Mail Service subsequent to 27th April 1927 are started on Rs. 55 a month, while this rule is not applied to those graduates, who are already in service, before that date, drawing less salaries and whose salaries did not rise under the rules sanctioning this minimum pay of Rs. 55 ? If so, do Government propose to bring their salaries into line with those of graduates newly entertained ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The facts are substantially as stated by the Honourable Member in the first part of the question.

The matter is under the consideration of the Government of India.

GRANT OF HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCE TO POSTMEN AND MENIALS.

101. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is any provision made for grant of house rent allowance to postmen and menials in the Budget of 1926-27 ? If so, how much of it has been spent ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The amount spent was about Rs. 1 lakh.

GRANT OF HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCE TO POSTAL OFFICIALS IN CERTAIN PLACES IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

102. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Are Government aware that postal officials in some places, where the rents of houses are high, such as those at Berhampore, Chatrapur, Chepurupalle and Parvatipur, etc., in the Madras Presidency, have not been given any house rent allowance ? If not, would the Government enquire into it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : House rent allowance is not given to postal officials at the places named in the question. The Government of India have no information whether house rent is high at those places. An enquiry will be made and suitable action will be taken by the Director General.

REFUSAL OF LANDLORDS TO REPAIR HOUSES LEASED TO THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

103. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Are Government aware that in the Presidency of Madras, corresponding to the increase in prices and rents of houses, no increase in rents of buildings, leased to the Postal Department, is sanctioned, in spite of repeated demands from landlords, and as a result, landlords have been refusing to repair the buildings, pending the increase in the rents which they demanded and that the postal officials, living in such houses, have been suffering considerable inconvenience, on this account ? If not, are Government prepared to enquire into the matter and take steps to remedy these complaints and inconveniences ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government are not aware of the facts as stated. An enquiry will however be made and whatever steps are necessary will be taken in the direction indicated.

MEMORIAL OF THE STAFF OF THE GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPH OFFICE AT VIZAGAPATAM.

104. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Did the staff of the Government Telegraph Office at Vizagapatam make representations to Government for the grant of a compensatory allowance to them, in view of the fact that the City of Vizagapatam has increased enormously in importance, extent and population, during the last decade and for the reasons stated in their representations to H. E. the Viceroy and Governor General of India and to the Director General of Post Offices ? And, did the Government say that the matter was under their consideration ? If so, have the Government come to any conclusion ? If not, do Government intend to consider the case of the staff as early as possible and give them relief ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Representations on the subject addressed to His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General were received by the Director General through the Postmaster General, Madras, at the end of July. When these are forwarded to Government by the Director General with his recommendations, they will receive due consideration.

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.

CIVIL WORKS.

Mr. President : The House will now resume the further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett :

" That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1928, in respect of ' Civil Works '."

(At this stage Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh rose to speak.)

Mr. President (Addressing Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh) : The Honourable Member had already spoken. He opposed the motion yesterday, and he is not entitled to speak again.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : I did not.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member did rise and opposed the motion yesterday. No doubt, he did not make any speech, but that does not matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : But the Debate was adjourned.....

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : As my friend Mr. Neogy was not there when I got up, I had to take on myself the unpleasant duty of opposing the Supplementary Grant asked for by the Honourable the Finance Member. Now, Sir, I should like to make it clear that I am not in the least against a Government grant being given to any social instituton, whether Christian, Hindu or Muhammadan. But in view of the discussion that took place in this House on the provision of accommodation for officers in August 1926, I think the Government would have been well advised if instead of bringing worward a motion of this kind they had themselves undertaken to construct the necessary buildings. Now the reason placed before us for the course adopted by Government is that it would lead to economy. That is a point which was discussed threadbare in August 1926, and I should not like to weary the House by a repetition of what was said then. But it is pertinent even now to point out that, although the cost might be slightly greater to Government if they provided the necessary accomodation themselves, the buildings which would be constructed will remain their property. In this particular case there is this difference as compared with the case discussed by the Assembly in August 1926, that the Government proposed to give not nearly a loan but also a grant of Rs. 75,000 to the Y. W. C. A. Now, as I say, if the Y. W. C. A. engages in social activities which are for the good of the country and imposes no racial restrictions, nobody would be against giving any grant to it. But that question stands by itself. If Government find, after considering the needs of the Y. W. C. A., that the help that they ask for is legitimate, they can come forward with a separate proposal. But I do not like the Y. W. C. A. being helped in this indirect and, if I may say so without offence, in this surreptitious way. I think, as a matter of policy, Government ought to undertake to construct the buildings needed for its own officers. It cannot in the guise of helping its officers really help other institutions. The help to be given to other institutions must be considered on the merits of the case. I am therefore opposed to the motion before us, but I should like to make it clear that I am not opposed in principle to any grant being given to the Y. W. C. A. That is an entirely separate matter and ought to be discussed on a separate Demand.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

Mr. President : The question is :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1928, in respect of 'Civil Works'."

The Assembly divided :

AYES—51.

Abdoola Haroon, Haji.
Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Maulvi.
Abdul Qaiyum, Nawab Sir Sahibzada.
Abdullah Haji Kasim, Khan Bahadur Haji.
Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nasir-ud-din.
Alexander, Mr. William.
Anwar-ul-Azim, Mr.
Ashrafuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nawabzada Sayid.
Ayangar, Mr. V. K. Aravámudha.
Ayyangar, Rao Bahadur Narasimha Gopalaswami.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Blackett, The Honourable Sir Basil.
Bray, Sir Denys.
Coatman, Mr. J.
Cocke, Mr. H. G.
Cosgrave, Mr. W. A.
Courtenay, Mr. R. H.
Crawford, Colonel J. D.
Crerar, The Honourable Mr. J.
Crofton, Mr. R. M.
Dalal, Mr. A. R.
Dalal, Sardar Sir Bomanji.
Donovan, Mr. J. T.
Dunnett, Mr. J. M.
Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Raja.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J.

Haigh, Mr. P. B.
Irving, Mr. Miles.
Ismail Khan, Mr.
Jowahir Singh, Sarda Bahadur Sardar.
Kabul Singh Bahadur, Captain.
Keane, Mr. M.
Kirk, Mr. R. T. F.
Lamb, Mr. W. S.
Mitra, The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath.
Moore, Mr. Arthur.
Mukherjee, Mr. S. C.
Murray, Sir Alexander.
Parsons, Mr. A. A. L.
Rainy, The Honourable Sir George.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Ruthnaswamy, Mr. M.
Sams, Mr. H. A.
Shah Nawaz, Mian Mohammad.
Singh, Rai Bahadur S. N.
Sykes, Mr. E. F.
Tonkinson, Mr. H.
Wright, Mr. W. T. M.
Yakub, Maulvi Muhammad.
Young, Mr. G. M.
Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir.

NOES—33.

Aiyangar, Mr. C. Duraiswamy.
Aney, Mr. M. S.
Ayyangar, Mr. K. V. Rangaswami.
Ayyangar, Mr. M. S. Sesha.
Belvi, Mr. D. V.
Bhargava, Pandit Thakur Das.
Gour, Sir Hari Singh.
Iswar Saran, Munshi.
Iyengar, Mr. A. Rangaswami.
Iyengar, Mr. S. Srinivasa.
Jayakar, Mr. M. R.
Jogiah, Mr. Varahagiri Venkata.
Kelkar, Mr. N. C.
Kidwai, Mr. Rafi Ahmad.
Kunzru, Pandit Hirday Nath.
Lahiri Chaudhury, Mr. Dhirendra Kanta.
Lajpat Rai, Lala.
Mehta, Mr. Jamnadas M.
Mitra, Mr. Satyendra Chandra.
Moonje, Dr. B. S.
Mukhtar Singh, Mr.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi Sayyid.
Naidu, Mr. B. P.
Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir.
Rao, Mr. G. Sarvotham.
Sarda, Rai Sahib Harbilas.
Shafee, Maulvi Mohammad.
Siddiqi, Mr. Abdul Qadir.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Narayan Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Ram Narayan.
Sinha, Mr. Siddheswar.

The motion was adopted.

DRAFT CONVENTION AND RECOMMENDATION OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE REGARDING INSPECTION OF EMIGRANTS ON BOARD SHIP, ETC.

Mr. A. R. Dalal (Secretary, Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I move :

"That this Assembly having considered the draft Convention and Recommendation adopted by the International Labour Conference at its eighth session held at Geneva between the 26th May and 5th June 1926, concerning respectively the simplification of the inspection of emigrants on board ship and the protection of emigrant women and girls on board ship, recommends to the Governor General in Council that he should ratify the draft Convention and accept the Recommendation".

Sir, I crave the kind indulgence of the House for a very short time while I describe briefly the circumstances which led up to the moving of this Resolution. An International Conference on Emigration and Immigration was held in Rome in 1924. The representative of India at that Conference was Sir P. Rajagopalachari, then Member of the Secretary of State's Council. One of the Resolutions adopted by that Conference was the simplification of the system of inspection of emigrants on board emigrant vessels. The President of that Conference happened to be the Italian Delegate on the governing body of the International Labour Office. At his instance the International Labour Office decided to put the question of the simplification of the process of inspection of emigrants on board vessels on the agenda of their eigth session. Accordingly, at the eighth session of the International Labour Conference held in Geneva in June, 1926, a Convention and a Recommendation were adopted. The object of the Convention was the simplification of the system of inspection of emigrants on board emigrant vessels. The object of the Recommendation was the protection of women and girls travelling by such vessels. Now, Sir, the conditions to which both the Convention and the Recommendation were meant to apply were primarily, if not mainly, European conditions. In Europe it is the practice for the nationals of a large number of different countries to travel on board the same emigrant vessel, the nationals of each country being accompanied by their own Inspector or Inspectors. It would be easy for this House to imagine the disputes and the conflict of jurisdiction that would occur under such circumstances. It is primarily to remedy this state of affairs that this Convention has been adopted. Its main recommendations are that under such circumstances, there should be only one official Inspector travelling on board emigrant vessels and that that Inspector should be the national of the country whose flag the ship is flying The object of the Recommendation is the protection, as I have said, of women and girls travelling on board such vessels.

[Mr. A. R. Dalal.]

When the questionnaire regarding this Convention was circulated to the Government of India, we made it quite clear that these circumstances did not apply to India. As the House is no doubt aware, unskilled emigration of labour is permitted to Ceylon and the Malay States only. There is no question of the appointment of Inspectors on board vessels plying to Ceylon for the simple reason that it is a short voyage in home trade waters merely across the channel on practically what amounts to a ferry boat. As regards the Malay States, the Government of the Malay States themselves appoint Inspectors, both male and female, to accompany emigrants both on the voyage from India to the States and from the States back again to India. The fact that the Convention did not apply to Indian conditions was also made plain by our representative at the eighth session. But the object of the Convention as it is now passed is merely the simplification of the process of inspection where it exists, and not the institution of any new system of inspection where it does not exist. That is made perfectly plain in paragraph 12 of the report of our representative at the Conference. It runs :

"The draft Convention, as finally passed by the Session, deals only with the simplification of existing systems of inspection, a point which is evident not only from the terms of the Convention, but which was categorically stated in the Report of the Committee to the Session."

I wish to emphasise this point, Sir, because I wish to make it quite plain to the House that by ratifying this Convention, we are not committing ourselves to instituting any new system of inspection on board emigrant ships. As regards the Recommendation, it is to the effect that if 15 or more women or girls travel on board emigrant vessels unaccompanied by any responsible person in authority, there should be a woman travelling with them who should render to these women and girls such moral and material assistance as may be required. This also, Sir, does not primarily apply to Indian conditions, because, in the first place, under 22 of our Emigration Rules, the emigration of unaccompanied women and girls is prohibited. In the second place, Indian women and girls do not emigrate unaccompanied by their male relatives.

Under Article 405 of the Treaty of Versailles every member of the International Labour Office is bound to bring the Convention or Recommendation adopted by the Labour Office to the notice of the authority competent to implement such Convention or Recommendation within a period of 18 months at the most. The Indian Legislature is the authority competent to implement this Convention, because, if it is ratified, legislation will be necessary. Therefore this Resolution is now put before this Honourable House. When the Convention first came up before Government in the Education Department, we were somewhat doubtful about the advisability of ratifying it because it did not apply to Indian conditions. We placed the matter before our Standing Emigration Committee. Our Standing Emigration Committee were, however, of opinion that it would be more in consonance with the moral dignity of India and the consistent support which this country has always accorded to the Conventions and Recommendations of the League of Nations and the International Labour Office if this Convention was ratified. I think, Sir, that this country can claim an honourable place among the nations of the world for the promptness and fidelity with which it has carried out the Recommendations and Conventions of the League of Nations and International Labour Office.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Not for anything else.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : On the recommendation, therefore, of our Standing Emigration Committee, Sir, the Government have on further consideration decided to ratify the Convention. It is true that it would not apply immediately to Indian conditions, but if in future, emigration to distant countries beyond home trade waters was ever permitted, the provisions of the Convention would immediately come into operation. In the meantime, by ratifying the Convention, we would be making a gesture of friendliness towards the League, and I submit that that is not without its moral significance.

Under Article 11 of the Convention we are bound, if we ratify the Convention to bring the provisions of Articles 1 to 7 into operation. Now Articles 2 to 7 are contingent on the appointment of official Inspectors on board emigrant vessels. So long as such official Inspectors are not appointed these clauses do not come into operation. But Article 1 comes into operation at once. Under that Article we must define the terms " emigrant " and " emigrant vessel ". The term emigrant is already defined under our Emigration Act, No. VII of 1927. If this House ratifies the Convention we propose immediately to introduce a Bill by which we will define the term " emigrant vessel " and also take power for the protection and security of emigrants by means of a system of inspection or otherwise during the voyage under the rule-making powers of the Emigration Act, a power which we do not possess at present.

[Mr. A. R. Dalal.]

I have endeavoured, Sir, to explain the scope and object of the Convention and the reasons which have actuated Government to ratify it to the best of my ability. If I have failed to make anything perfectly plain I hope the House will make allowance for my prentice hand, or rather, tongue. The proposal is in accordance with the recommendations of our Standing Emigration Committee, and I hope it will command the unanimous approval of the House. Sir, I move it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, the Members of the Assembly may remember that at the last Delhi Session the Government of India had given notice of a Resolution recommending this House not to ratify the Convention. I am glad, Sir, that in the interval the Government of India have thought over the matter and come to the wise decision of ratifying this Convention. I admit that it does not give anything substantial to Indian emigrants. I am glad that the Government of India have introduced a Bill. I do not wish to speak on that Bill on this occasion, but let me make it quite clear that I think the Government of India are not carrying out the provisions of the Conventions fully and satisfactorily in the Bill which they have introduced. I hope when the Bill comes up for discussion that I shall receive the support of this House in securing proper effect being given to the Convention which the Government of India is ratifying on this occasion.

There is one more point on which I would like to say one word. The Honourable Member in charge of this Resolution stated that the Convention does not impose any obligation upon the Government for appointing an Inspector. Technically speaking, what he has said is true, but I think, Sir, that the omission of the obligation being placed upon the Government is due to the fact that the Emigration Conference that met in Geneva did not imagine that there would be any Government which would not appoint Inspectors on emigrant ships. They did not really imagine that the Government of India would take advantage of the fact that the Convention does not impose an obligation on them to appoint an Inspector. But, if you read through the wording of the Convention, it is quite clear that the Government of India and every Government ratifying the Convention is expected to appoint Inspectors. The Convention has taken the appointment of Inspectors for granted, and having taken that for granted they proceed to suggest a way of simplifying the procedure.

Sir, I do not wish to speak any more, but I congratulate the Government of India upon the wise decision which they have been persuaded to take on this occasion.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, in speaking on this Resolution I should like to draw the attention of the House to what I might call the history of the 8th Geneva Labour Conference at which the international Convention was passed. It is to us no doubt a matter of great satisfaction that the Government of India have seen their way to fall into line with the requirements of the recommendations of the 8th International Labour Conference. But, Sir, the details of what happened at Geneva between the 25th May and 5th June of 1926 throw a light on the history of this subject which I hope the House will excuse me for referring to at some length. At the initial stage of this Conference, the recommendations of which are now accepted by our Government, I am sorry to find that the employers' group made a dead set against the whole of the Conference and wanted to make out that the Conference had no competence to discuss the problem of emigration ; and if they had had their way, as this was the only item before the Conference, the Conference would have dispersed without arriving at any conclusions. I will just read out to you, Sir, an extract from the official report of the Delegates of the Government of India to the 8th and 9th sessions of the International Labour Conference at Geneva. In paragraph 10 at page 5 of the report, it says :

"It is also noteworthy that no Government objected under Article 402 of the Treaty to the inclusion of this item...."

—that is, the item of emigration—

"in the agenda of the 8th session. Immediately, however, on the decision by the Plenary Sitting of the session to appoint a committee to deal with this item of the agenda, the British Employers' delegate with the support of practically the whole of the Employers' group put forward a resolution in the following terms :

'That the International Labour Organization is not competent to deal with questions of the regulation of the transport of emigrants ; that this Conference accordingly declines to discuss the question of the simplification of inspection of emigrants on board ship'."

Fortunately for the emigrants, and in order perhaps to provide an opportunity to the Honourable the Education Secretary to move this motion this morning, the resolution of the employers, including the British employers, was debated at length, and it was ultimately rejected by 77 votes to 23. This gives us an indication of the attitude of the employers in general and of the British employers in particular, in connection with the main item of the agenda of the 8th International Labour Conference. And, Sir, if I want to lay stress on this part of the subject it is only to draw particular attention here to the fact that unfortunately for this country the employers' delegate sent by India, who formed part of the Indian Delegation, instead of acting in this matter from the Indian employers' point of view, acted in a way that went very much against what I believe would have been the intentions of the employers in this country and voted in support of this resolution which wanted to annul the whole session of the International Conference and the main subject to be discussed before it, and he voted with the British group. And why ? Because, Sir, he was not an Indian employer but a British employer representing British interests.

12 NOON.

Now, Sir, if you will permit me, I will just say a few words with regard to how it was that a British employer came to represent, or rather misrepresent as it turned out, the Indian employers at the eighth International Labour Conference. According to the rules of the Labour Conference under the Treaty of Versailles, the delegations of various countries are composed of two Government delegates.....

Mr. A. R. Dalal : On a point of order, Sir. I submit that this does not arise out of the Resolution under discussion.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I beg to submit that, as the Resolution arises out of the work of the Indian Delegation at the eighth International Labour Conference, I am fully entitled to go into the details of the composition of that Delegation. As I was saying, the fact that we did not have an Indian employer on this Conference came about as follows. According to the Treaty of Versailles, each country is represented by two Government delegates, one employers' delegate and one labour delegate. Now, the employers' and labour delegates are to be appointed by the respective associations in the country under question and the Government has to accept the choice of the employers' organisations and the labour organisations. Very strange it is that even this final report has to admit the fact that, though on many an occasion labour organisations of various countries had to put up protests against the action of their Government with regard to labour delegation owing to various difficulties about the official recognition of trade unions, e.g., non-Fascist associations in Italy, not until the eighth Conference was there any trouble with regard to the employers' delegates. But I am sorry to say that to our Government belongs the discredit of having brought about a situation which necessitated an official protest being registered in connection with the appointment of the Indian employers' delegate to the eighth International Labour Conference. Paragraph 6 of the Report says :

[Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji.]

"Much interest was evinced at both sessions of the Conference in the protests against the nomination of Sir Arthur Froom as the Indian employers' delegate. This was the first occasion in the history of the International Labour Conference when the nomination of an employers' delegate had been challenged. Moreover, printed documents in English and French setting forth in full the case of the protesting associations were extensively circulated among all Members and visitors to the meetings."

Now, Sir, in a sense it is unfortunate that our country should have to set this precedent, but as one being concerned directly and personally in connection with this protest, I may say that the point of view of India, and particularly nationalist India, got so much support from almost all countries, including the Colonies within the Empire, that in so far as the non-official acceptance of the Indian point of view was concerned, we could not have much ground for grievance. But I want to refer not so much to what happened at Geneva as to what happened in this country. As I have said before, the employers' delegate is chosen by the employers' associations, and it has been laid down in the Treaty of Versailles that the Government must accept the nomination of the majority of the selecting organisations. Now, Sir, until this protest was taken to Geneva, the question that the representative of a country, whether a labour representative or an employers' representative, should be a national of the country never arose before this Conference ; as a matter of fact, the peculiar circumstances of the Treaty of Versailles took it for granted that no country would be so ignorant of its own interests....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is going too far. He might ventilate this particular grievance of his by a separate Resolution. I have allowed him sufficient indulgence.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Thank you, Sir. I was just going to wind up by saying that under the Treaty of Versailles no country, aware of its own interests, need send any one but a national and it is because of the unfortunate position in which this country finds itself that we have to invoke the aid of the Treaty of Versailles in order that our nominations to the Geneva Conference should be national in tone and character.

Now, coming to the integral part of the subject—the question of emigration—and the delaying tactics that were employed by the British delegates of whom unfortunately the Indian employer formed a part, I do feel that the name of India would have been condemned among the workers of the international world particularly if this resolution of the British employers had been carried and the sittings of the eighth International Labour Conference brought to a premature end. I hope, therefore, that in view of the lesson which the Government have learnt in this connection after the reports and the findings of the Credentials Committee at Geneva, no occasion would arise in future for this country, either from the employers' point of view or the labour point of view, to have to send protests to Geneva against the Government's nominations. In conclusion, Sir, I hope that when the Resolution moved by the Honourable Mr. Dalal is acted upon by Government in the form of a Bill, sufficient provision will be made to bring within its purview all those ships that carry emigrants from India. With these words, I have great pleasure in supporting this Resolution.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I do not propose to oppose this Resolution, nor do I want to enter into those questions which have been raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Haji. But I am not sure if the Honourable Member who proposed this Resolution was quite right in saying that the object of the inspection of emigrant ships was purely the protection of women and girls.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I did not say so.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I understood him to say that the International Conference.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must accept the Honourable Mr. Dalal's statement.

Lala Lajpat Rai : If you will allow me, Sir, I will proceed further because that is relevant to the other point too. I want to point out that the most important question which was also considered by the 8th Session of the International Labour Conference and which relates very intimately to the question that has been raised by the Honourable Member who has proposed this Resolution, was the protection of emigrants as defined by different Governments. In answer to the questionnaire that was issued by the International Labour Office in connection with the agenda of the 8th Session of the International Labour Conference, the answer given by the Indian Government as to who was an emigrant, was entirely different from that given by the British Government. The British Government practically defines emigrant to include all those people who travel third class on the steamers. I have not got the wording before me. I read it at the time. The Indian Government limits the definition of emigrant only to those who go out of this country permanently to seek employment or to work for wages. I submit the question is not the protection of women and girls only, but the protection of all people who go out of this country to seek employment either temporarily or permanently, and, if any legislation is going to be brought in pursuance of this Resolution, I would draw the attention of the Government to that important point. The word " emigrant " should be defined in such a way as to include all those people who leave the shores of this country for the purpose of seeking employment, where they are allowed to go. As we are situated, the gates of all countries are shut to us except a few. I would like the Honourable Member to state if emigration to Guiana is not open. I understood some time ago that it had been opened. I see from the Honourable Member's nodding of the head that it is not so. I accept his statement. I am not positive about that. I am certain a good deal depends on the definition of the words " emigrant " and " emigrant ship ". The word " emigrant " should be so defined as to make it include all those people who want to leave the shores of this country for the purpose of seeking employment, to those places where they are permitted to go by law or by convention. Their conditions of travel and the treatment they get on the ships are all relevant matters and, therefore, as my friend Mr. Joshi has remarked, it is absolutely necessary that the Government should make a provision for the appointment of Inspectors on those ships which take these emigrants outside of India. It has been assumed in the Convention that all Governments have adopted that provision and if the Government of India does not accept that liability or that responsibility, I submit it is very unfortunate. An impression has gone out that the Government of India care more for the shipping companies that run the ships which carry third class passengers than for the latter. Provision should be made for the protection and comfort of emigrants by providing Inspectors on those ships, and I submit that no interest of the shipping companies should be allowed to intervene between the interests of these emigrants and the duty of the Government to provide for their protection and comforts while travelling abroad. It may not be of very great importance, because the number of emigrants leaving this country is very small, but all the same the principle is very important and it ought to be kept in view when legislation is proposed in pursuance of this Convention. This is the only remark I wanted to make.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am thankful to my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi for congratulating Government on having decided to ratify this Convention. My Honourable friend however could not resist the temptation of twitting us for changing our minds. (Mr. N. M. Joshi : " I congratulated Government. ") Now, Sir, speaking for myself although we are the Education Department, we are not above learning ourselves, and we are quite prepared to gather in wisdom with both hands from whatever source it may come. (Lala Lajpat Rai : " We are very glad to hear this admission.") As for my Honourable friend Mr. Haji, I am sure that all of us in this House are very much indebted to him for the very keen interest he takes in all matters concerning shipping, an interest which has earned for him from his friends the well deserved though unofficial title of ' Admiral Haji.' As for the part he himself took at the 8th Session of the International Labour Conference, where I understand he was the adviser to the adviser to the Indian delegation.....

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I was the representative of the Indian National Protesting Organisations.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : As for Sir Arthur Froom to whom my Honourable friend thought fit to refer.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member never mentioned any name. (Honourable Members : " He did.")

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I say that I merely mentioned Sir Arthur Froom because his name appeared in the report.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : May I submit that that is not germane to the question at hand and I should allow that Honourable gentleman to rest in peace in the calmer atmosphere of the Upper House. As for my friend Lala Lajpat Rai, I do think he was labouring under some very serious misapprehension and for that misapprehension I am afraid I must blame myself because I have not the felicity of phrase and the lucidity of expression which makes my Honourable friend the envy of this House. I am afraid that he totally misunderstood me. The object of the Convention is not merely the protection of women and girls on board emigrant vessels. That is merely the object of the Recommendation. The Convention is entirely a thing apart and the object of the Convention is simplification of the system of inspection of emigrants on board emigrant vessels.

Lala Lajpat Rai : If I mistake not, the object of the Recommendation was not to confine it to women and girls.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : If the Honourable the President will allow me, I will read out the Recommendation. It runs to this effect :

" Where 15 or more women and girls un-accompanied by a responsible person are carried as emigrants on board an emigrant vessel, a properly qualified woman who has no other duty to fulfil on board shall be appointed to give such women any material or moral assistance of which they may stand in need without in any way encroaching upon the authority of the master of the vessel. She shall report to the authority making the appointment and the report shall be available for the use of the Governments which may be concerned."

Lala Lajpat Rai : That is only a part.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : That is the whole. As for the term " emigrant " it is also defined in section 2 of our Emigration Act of 1922. Emigrant means " any person who emigrates, has emigrated or who has been registered as an emigrant under the Act and includes any dependent upon any emigrant but does not include....etc." My Honourable friend will see that it is a wide enough definition. As for the term emigrant vessel, we are going to define it and when we come to the Bill we will certainly take into consideration what my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi has said, but I do join issue with him in his interpretation of the object of the convention, which, as I took pains to elaborate in my original speech, is simplification and not inspection.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I referred to the answer of the Government of India to the questionnaire issued by the International Labour Conference.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : At that time we made it clear that the circumstances were quite different from the circumstances to which the Convention was designed to apply. I hope, Sir, that this House will now agree to adopt the Resolution unanimously.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That this Assembly, having considered the draft Convention and Recommendation adopted by the International Labour Conference at its eighth session held at Geneva between the 26th May and 5th June 1926, concerning respectively the simplification of the inspection of emigrants on board ship and the protection of emigrant women and girls on board ship, recommends to the Governor General in Council that he should ratify the draft Convention and accept the Recommendation."

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN EMIGRATION (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. A. R. Dalal (Secretary, Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, after having taken up so much of the time of the House, I do not think it is necessary for me to detain them any further while I beg for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1922, for a certain purpose.

As I have already stated, if this Convention is ratified, under Article 11 of the Convention this country is bound to bring the provisions of Articles 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 into operation by the 1st January, 1928, and hence this Bill, which, I hope, will pass both Houses during this Session.

Now, as I have already stated, Articles 2 to 7 do not come into operation unless and until we appoint official Inspectors on board emigrant vessels. As for Article 1, the term " emigrant " has already been defined and we are taking powers under this Bill to define the term " emigrant vessels ". At the same time, we find that under our rule-making power, under section 24 although we have got power to provide for the security, well-being and protection of emigrants up to the date of their departure from India and on their return to India, we have not got that rule-making power to provide for the security, well-being and protection of these people during the voyage, and hence we want this rule-making power to enable us to protect them during the voyage. I think, Sir, that it is not necessary for me at this stage to dilate on the detailed provisions of the Bill.

I move for leave to introduce the Bill.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (COTTON YARN AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

The Select Committee, Mr. President, has made only one change in the Bill as it was introduced in this House. I should like very briefly to say a word or two about that. The alteration consists in this, that in the Preamble and in the long title of the Bill the word " protection " has been substituted for the word " safeguarding ". For reasons which I explained in my Minute of Dissent I was unable to concur in that proposal. Now, I do not propose to dwell on the matter at any length. I have been sometimes accused, I regret to say, of being prone to the fault commonly attributed to the nation to which I belong, of an undue taste for metaphysics and theology, and I do not wish to weary the House by any metaphysical disquisition on the subject of the difference in meaning which may exist between the term " safeguarding " and the term " protection ". But, it is important that the position of the Government of India should be made perfectly clear and that no room for doubt should be left as to the grounds on which they have brought forward this Bill and are asking the House to pass it into law. Briefly the basis of the Bill is that night work by women is allowed in the Japanese cotton mills, that this makes double shift working possible and thereby reduces the cost of production to a lower level than is possible in the Indian mills where night work by women is prohibited by law. It was because the basis of the Bill was limited to this one fact that the Government of India thought it more appropriate to use the word " safeguarding " which has a narrower meaning than the word " protection " which has a wider meaning. I should like to lay some little stress on this point that the sole ground on which the Government of India are asking the House to pass this Bill into law is that night work by women is the regular practice in the Japanese mill thereby making double shift working possible. It follows quite definitely that the Government of India have arrived at no finding that labour conditions as a whole are worse in the Japanese mills than they are in the Indian mills, apart from the sole point to which I have already alluded. I am quite aware that the Tariff Board brought out the fact in their Report that although in the mills which work double shifts in Japan the hours of work are practically the same as in the Indian mills, nevertheless in the mills which work single shifts only, the hours of work admissible under the law are longer than in India. But this fact—by itself, I lay some stress upon this point—would not necessarily establish a claim on the part of the Indian cotton mill industry to protection or safeguarding, whichever term may be used. There are two points which would then have to be considered. One of them would be the period of work which was conducive to the greatest efficiency. That is a matter in which perhaps in India we are somewhat backward ; but it has been proved in other countries and in other industries that long hours of work do not necessarily lead to the largest output or the most economical output. The Tariff Board, in one passage of their Report drew attention to the fact that in some upcountry mills the limitation of hours to ' ten per shift ' had resulted sometimes in no decrease in the output, and in some cases had actually been followed by an increase in the output. The second point is this. If the question of the number of hours of work were raised inevitably the whole question as to the wages paid would have to be examined. On page 115 of their Report the Tariff Board gave a tabular statement showing the wages paid in Japanese cotton mills. Assuming that the figures that the Tariff Board gave were comparable with the figures we have of the wages paid in Indian mills, there is no question at all that the Japanese wages are substantially higher. On the other hand there are reports—by an American Tariff Commission, I think—which suggests that the figures of wages in the Japanese mills may not be strictly comparable to the Indian figures ; that is to say the report appears to suggest that the Japanese figures include other items in addition to the wages proper. That is a matter on which the Government have no special information beyond what is available to other Members of the House. My point at the moment is to bring out the fact that, if the question of longer hours in Japanese cotton mills were raised, before any conclusion could be arrived at, it would be necessary also to examine the question of the wages paid. That leads me, Mr. President, to come to a rather important point. In the Bill it is proposed that the 1½ annas duty on cotton yarn should have effect up to the 31st of March, 1930, and that date is directly connected with another date, namely, the 1st of

[Sir George Rainy.]

July, 1929, when, according to the Japanese factory law, night work by women in the cotton mills is to cease.

The two dates are directly connected and the obvious implication is that, once night work by women in the Japanese mills has ceased, the need for protecting or safeguarding the manufacture of yarn in cotton mills in India will have passed away. Now it is conceivable—it is impossible for anybody to say, but it is conceivable—that the date at which night work by women in the Japanese mills is to cease may be advanced. It is possible that it may be decided by the Government and Legislature of that country that it is expedient that the change in the law should take effect from an earlier date. Obviously that would be a matter which the Government of India would have to take into their consideration. Primâ facie the necessity for safeguarding or protection would have passed away. It is impossible of course now to say what view the Government of India might take, for their decision would have to be guided by all the facts before them, but I think it is necessary to draw the attention of the House to the position which would exist in the contingency which I have suggested. The position would simply be this, that the Government of India would have then to decide whether there was any sufficient reason for the continuance of the one-and-a-half anna duty, and if they were not satisfied that there were adequate reasons they would no doubt have to bring the matter before the Legislature. There is, however, one very important fact, already in sight, which would have to be taken into account. It was not before the Tariff Board when they wrote their Report although in two or three passages they alluded to the danger. One of them is at page 72 of the Report :

"A word should perhaps be added in regard to the imports from China where labour conditions are notoriously unsatisfactory. The imports of yarn from China are negligible, the highest figure being 399,000 lbs. in 1924-25."

Since the Tariff Board wrote their Report there has been a very remarkable change as regards imports from China. During the four months from April to July, 1926, India imported from China 14,000 lbs. of yarn and exported nearly 7 million lbs. whereas in the months from April to July, 1927, India imported from China nearly 3 million lbs. and exported only 170,000 lbs. Now, that is a swing-over in the trade of nearly 10 million lbs. in a period of 4 months. Quite obviously that is a new and important fact. Therefore, if the particular difficulty created by the night work of women in the Japanese mills were removed, the Government of India in considering what course of action they should take would also have to weigh carefully what action, if any, was necessary in order to prevent injury to the manufacture of cotton yarn in India from this new source of competition, the Chinese mills. I frankly admit, it is too soon to come to any certain conclusion as to what these large imports of yarn from China may mean. It may be a purely temporary phenomenon. As all Members of the House are aware, for some time past conditions in China have been extremely disturbed, and in these circumstances the natural outlet for the production of the Chinese mills has been obstructed, and in order to keep going at all they may have found it necessary to get rid of part of their output in the Indian market at sacrificial prices. If so, if that is the explanation, then with the restoration of more settled conditions in China one might expect that these abnormal imports would pass away. That, however, is a matter for the future. But here there are two points. In the first place, at the present moment the need for safeguarding the manufacture of cotton yarn in India as against Chinese imports exists : whether it will continue to exist we do not know, but it exists at the present moment. In the second place, when the time comes—it may not come until the 31st March, 1930, or it may come earlier, we do not know ; but when it comes and the Government of India have to consider whether it is necessary to continue to safeguard or to protect the manufacture of cotton yarn in India, there is at any rate this to be said that, as between China and India, there is no trade agreement or convention corresponding to the trade agreement between India and Japan, and therefore in that matter India will have a freer hand.

This question of the competition from China brings me to what after all was the subject which chiefly engaged the attention of the Select Committee and which I am sure is the aspect of the case which is chiefly engaging the minds of Members of this House. The proposal of the Government of India that the 5 per cent. duty on cotton yarn should be subject to a specific minimum of 1½ annas a lb. raises the question how will this duty affect the interests of the handloom weaver. Now in this matter the facts are pretty plain. Of the total quantity of yarn used by the handloom weaver in India much the greater part is produced by the Indian mills. He uses of course a certain amount of imported yarn, but still the fact remains that quite five-sixths of the yarn he uses is produced not abroad but in India. Now if this duty that is proposed has any effect at all, it must have the effect of making the price of cotton yarn in India higher than it otherwise would be. To the extent that it does so it will benefit the cotton mills by raising the price of what they sell, and similarly, to the extent that it does so, it will do something to weaken the position of the handloom weaver by making dearer what he buys. That is the plain fact of the case and no kind of ingenuity can get round it. Therefore it is one of those cases of a conflict of interests referred to by the Fiscal Commission in which a decision has to be arrived at after considering both the interests concerned. I endeavoured, when I moved that this Bill should be referred to Select Committee, to adduce those circumstances which, in the view of the Government of India, justified the belief that the effect on the handloom industry would not be very serious.

I do not wish to weary the House by treading again and again the same ground, but I think I ought briefly to recall the main points. In the first place there are the higher counts, that is, every thing above 40s., or at any rate above 50s. As regards those the effect of the duty must be very small. When you get to the really high counts, the 1½ anna duty is less than 5 per cent. and obviously therefore it cannot raise the price. When you come a little lower down to the counts between 60*s*. and 40*s*., the increase in the price will be quite small. As far as I can make out from the figures in the trade returns, between 50*s*. and 60*s*., the 1½ anna duty would not be much more than 6 per cent. and between 40s. and 50s. perhaps 7 per cent. Therefore, as regards these counts, the effect on the handloom industry cannot be very appreciable. Then, as regards the lower counts, that is, the counts below 30s. I endeavoured to show that there were good reasons for thinking that the price could not rise very much, but for a different reason. In this case the reason is that the internal competition between the Indian mills in these lower counts is so severe—the total imports being only about 2 millions lbs. a year—that in all probability any rise in price which the duty might bring about would almost instantly be checked by an increase in the Indian production, which would bring down the price again. Finally, there are what we call the medium counts, from 31*s.* to 40*s.* ; and here I said that it seemed likely that the duty might raise the price of the yarn by almost the full amount of the duty. It is in respect of these counts that the Indian cotton mills stand to gain and, to a limited extent, the handloom weaver stands to lose. Now the House will have to come to a decision on this Bill which is more in the national interest, namely, whether protection or safeguarding should be given to the manufacturer of cotton yarn in India, or whether the interests of the handloom weaver should be regarded as paramount and should prevail. The Chinese competition is of some importance in this connection and for this reason. As regards these lower counts of yarn nothing has been more remarkable in recent years than the decrease in the imports of such yarn from Japan. Japanese yarn of the lower counts has almost been driven out of the market by the Indian yarn. Hitherto, I am given to understand, the imports from China have been mainly of the medium counts ; but the latest information we have received is that the import of the lower counts of yarn from China is now beginning ; and if it is a case in which the Chinese mills have to get rid of a part of their output at almost any price, then the competition with the Indian mills will become much more serious, because it will be direct competition in the counts of yarn in which the Indian mills are chiefly interested. That is an additional reason which I did not bring out, and which I was hardly in a position to bring out fully when I addressed this House on this subject. It may be that this increase in the imports from China may become a serious matter, and therefore there is the more reason for adopting the proposal in this Bill in order to safeguard the Indian cotton mills.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Now, there are one or two other matters which I think the House ought to take into account in coming to their decision. In the first place under a system of ad valorem duties, when the price goes up, the duty goes up too, and so the burden on the consumer and the burden on the handloom weaver under a system of that kind would steadily increase with the rise in price. But that is not so under the proposals in the Bill, because the duty which is intended to protect the industry is a specific duty which remains the same whatever the price of the yarn. As things are in the world to-day, the main factor which affects the price of cotton goods generally is the price of raw cotton. It is always very difficult to forecast what may be the future course of prices in this industry, but I think there would be general agreement that during the last 8 or 9 months prices have been down very nearly to bedrock. It has been a period of great difficulty for the cotton mill industry all over the world, and the next change in price is likely to be in an upward and not in a downward direction. That belief is confirmed by the reports which have been received as to the condition of the American cotton crop, because that is the factor which governs the price of raw cotton all over the world. It would be entirely unsafe to prophesy, but such indications as there are point in the direction that some increase in the price of cotton, and consequently of cotton goods, is likely to occur. Now, when that occurs, the result will be at once to diminish the difference between the 5 per cent. duty and the 1½ anna duty, and consequently any burden that may be inflicted upon the handloom industry would be reduced automatically ; whereas on the other hand, since the duty on cotton piecegoods remains at 11 per cent. ad valorem, the 11 per cent. duty would go up with the increase in the price. Therefore, the burden on the handloom industry, such as it is, will be greatest as things are at present and will diminish with any increase in price. The other point of which I should like the House to take account in arriving at their decision is this. After all, does not the demand that no additional burden should be thrown on the handloom weaver amount very nearly to this, that whatever the cause is of the present low price of yarn, even if it is due to industrial conditions which are clearly undesirable, such as the employment of women by night in cotton mills — but whatever the cause of the low price, yet the interests of the handloom weaver are to prevail over everything else ? Surely that is rather an extreme position for Members of this House to take up. I think when the question of prices comes up—and admitting the desirability as I fully do that handloom weavers should get their yarn as cheap as possible—I do think that in a case of that kind it is legitimate to examine the cause of the low price, and if the low price is due to some abnormal and undesirable cause, it will be perfectly justifiable for the House to come to the conclusion that it was not in the national interest that for this very special reason that the handloom weavers should continue to get their yarn at a price which was lower than the price at which the Indian mills could produce it.

I will not, Mr. President, weary the House longer on this question. I have said that the House has to arrive at a decision after considering all that can be urged on the one hand as to the necessity of safeguarding or protecting the manufacturer of cotton yarn in India against competition from other countries which is regarded as unfair and also what is to be said on the other hand as to the interests of the handloom weavers, a very important class in the community as the Government are the first to admit. I have given the reasons, Mr. President, which led the Government of India to the conclusion that in this case the interests of the cotton mills ought to prevail. I would not ask this House to decide the question except under a deep sense of responsibility and after weighing all that can be said on both sides. But I do, on behalf of the Government of India, quite distinctly ask them to accept the view I have tried to put before them, namely, that in this case it is expedient in the national interest that the manufacturer of cotton yarn in India should be safeguarded. Sir, I move.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to perform an unpleasant duty, and that is to move the dilatory motion that stands in my name, namely, that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.

Mr. President : Under what Standing Order does the Honourable Member wish to make that motion ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, Standing Order No. 44, clause 2, which says that :

"If the Member in charge moves that the Bill be taken into consideration, any Member may move as an amendment that the Bill be recommitted or re-circulated for the purpose of eliciting further opinions thereon."

As this Bill was never circulated in the beginning, I think it is necessary in the interests of the English language to say that the Bill be circulated for eliciting further opinions thereon.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is entitled to make a motion for recirculation. When a motion is made that the Bill be taken into consideration, any Member is entitled to make a motion that the Bill be circulated for eliciting opinions thereon, but when the Bill comes back from the Select Committee and a motion is made that the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration, the only motion that is permissible is for recirculation and not for circulation.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I think if it is permissible to make a motion that the Bill be recirculated in case the Bill has once been circulated before, I think it would be common sense.....

Mr. President : Common sense and law do not always go together.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I quite agree, but, Sir, circumstances that were not existent before might have arisen which would justify the circulation of the Bill after it is reported by the Select Committee. Sir, in this particular instance, I shall show that such a circumstance has arisen which had not existed before.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member arguing the point of order ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Yes, Sir. I should like to draw the attention of this House, and your attention, in particular, Sir, to the recommendation made by the Select Committee that an inquiry should be undertaken into the practical effect of the working of this measure after six months. That is a position which has arisen for the first time on the Report of the Select Committee, and my contention is that if you are alive to the necessity of an inquiry six months hence, why not make the inquiry now and be done with it ?

Mr. President : That is common sense. But what is the Standing Order ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Well, Sir, if you are disposed to take a strict view of the Standing Order, I would like to move the alternative motion that stands in my name.....

Mr. President : I have no desire to be strict, but I should like to hear the Government before I give my ruling.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would submit, Sir, that the general effect of the Standing Orders would appear to be that, if a Bill is to be circulated, the motion would naturally be made before its reference to the Select Committee. That would be the proper time to move for circulation. If that motion is not made, and if the Bill returns from the Select Committee without substantial amendments, then I would submit that any motion to circulate is out of time, because it should have been quite properly made at an earlier stage. I would also submit, Sir, that in the Standing Order the phrase " recirculation " means recirculation, and that the case contemplated is that when a Bill has been circulated once and then sent to the Select Committee and substantial amendments have been made, it is fair to take another opportunity of obtaining public opinion on the Bill. I would submit, Sir, therefore, that the motion proposed is not in order.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : In the present instance, I think an amendment has been made which, even in the opinion of the Government, is of a substantial character, and that is the change in the Preamble of the Bill to which reference was made by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill. Even on that view I submit there is every ground for circulating the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : Sir, I am very much in sympathy with my Honourable colleague Sir George Rainy's view, that recirculation means recirculation. It seems to me that when the author of these rules was drafting them, if he meant recirculation to include circulation, he should have said so. The point could have been met by saying that the Bill be circulated or re-circulated, as the case may be, and not that the Bill be recirculated. On the other hand, Sir, I should not like to be absolutely sure in my own mind that the author of these regulations was so all-wise and all-farseeing that he anticipated the ingenuity of Mr. Neogy and other Members, and I think, Sir, in my view there is obviously room for doubt whether the intention of the rule should be regarded as the exclusion of a possibility of a motion for circulation when a Bill has not been previously circulated. At the same time, I am bound to say that in the interests of Government and the expedition of business, it seems to me that it is somewhat undesirable to create a precedent under which once the Government have escaped the circulation of their Bill at the proper stage, they should be liable to the danger of having it circulated after it has come back from the Select Committee, unless there is some obvious change which might alter the situation, in which case it should probably withdraw the Bill and introduce it again. I would, therefore, suggest, Sir, that you should, if possible, avoid a ruling on the subject and allow Mr. Neogy to move his second motion.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the greater includes the less. When it is said in the Standing Orders that the House has authority to allow a recirculation, even when there has been a circulation before it was committed to the Select Committee, it would include the right on the part of the House to ask for a circulation of the Bill. The recirculation is an emphatic way of stating that even though it had been circulated once before, it can be circulated again. Of course, we know that language is employed in Statutes which has no emphatic meaning sometimes, and certainly the word " recirculation " includes circulation in the context, and having regard to the spirit and purpose of the Standing Order, the right on the part of the House to allow the circulation to be made must be acceded to.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : I think, Sir, the strict interpretation which some Honourable Members are trying to put upon it will land us in a strange legal difficulty. It is tantamount to introducing a new rule of interpretation. I think that the ordinary rule is that we are not to presume a rule of estoppel unless it is expressly provided for. As no such express rule has been provided for, we should not be justified in assuming that the right of Members of this House to move for circulation is altogether gone, or that they are estopped from moving for circulation after the Bill comes back from the Select Committee. That sort of estoppel cannot be presumed unless it has been expressly provided for. On that ground also, I think the interpretation put upon the rule by Mr. Neogy is very reasonable.

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, may I just point out a thing or two in connection with this motion ?

1 P.M.

Mr. President : I think on the whole I should be disposed to agree with the Honourable the Leader of the House and give the benefit of the doubt to Mr. Neogy.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I am very thankful to you for having given me the benefit of the doubt, but the alternative amendment which stands in my name would have been quite as good or quite as bad as the one I am moving, so it does not at all affect the position whether I am permitted to move this or the next. Sir, it seems to me there is a sort of misapprehension as regards my attitude towards the cotton industry, and that is due to certain observations which I made.....

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : May I ask, Sir, which of his motions the Honourable Member is moving ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am moving the one that I have moved. I did not read the other one. Well, Sir, I want to remove any such misapprehension that might be in the minds of any Member of this House or anybody outside. Sir, what I intended to convey on the last occasion was that, when we are asked to consider the question of giving protection to the cotton textile industry of India, we should remember that here we have to find the solution for certain difficulties which face Bombay particularly and that the circumstances with which Bombay has to contend are not quite the circumstances with which the mills in the other parts of India are faced ; and in seeking to draw this distinction I was particularly reminded of the remarks made by the Tariff Board that it is not a case merely of competition with Japan, so far as the Bombay mills are concerned, it is also competition from places outside Bombay that also has got to be taken into consideration. I thought that, if we had to concede the principle that a section of the industry—it may be a very important section of the industry—has got to be protected not merely because it finds it difficult to stand competition from a foreign country but also because it finds it difficult to stand competition from certain other parts of the country, I thought, Sir, that we might be landing ourselves in difficulty because a time might come when the Bombay mill industry might ask for protection against the rest of India. When I made these observations I made it quite clear that, so far as the provisions of the present Bill were concerned, I was not prepared to oppose it. What I conveyed was that, if the measure of protection was sought to be increased to the detriment of the consumer and the handloom industry, this House should not be counted on for support for this measure, and that is the indication I gave to the members of the Select Committee when the last motion was made. On the present occasion I do not propose to oppose this Bill outright, and I have taken care to so frame my amendment as to enable me to plead for further time for consideration of this very important matter. Sir, the Honourable Member in charge stated this morning that, while we take into consideration the case of the mill industry, we must at the same time give careful attention to what it might mean to the handloom industry. It is a question of preference,—whether we are prepared to protect the Bombay mill industry at the expense of the handloom industry in India. I think the whole question boils down to that. It has been admitted by the Report of the Select Committee that this measure will certainly affect the position of the handloom industry. The question is as to what is the extent to which it will be affected. Before we come to that, Sir, I want to point out that, so far as the number of people who are interested in either of these industries is concerned, if numbers are to influence our judgment in any way, then certainly our judgment should go in favour of the handloom industry. It has been pointed out that the Bombay mill hands number about a lakh and a half, and I think the total number of mill hands in India is about 3,68,000 or thereabouts. When we come to consider the number of handlooms, we find that the number given in the last Census Report was somewhat in the neighbourhood of 20 lakhs of handlooms. But this number did not take into account handlooms in certain provinces and in certain Indian States, so that we do not know exactly what the number of handlooms in India is, but it is safe to put the figure at somewhere near 25 lakhs. And it has been asserted by men who have made a study of this question that, even on a modest computation, the handloom supports over 60 lakhs of people. So when we come to consider the number of people who are affected by this measure we find we have a lakh and a half, or even more if you like, 2 lakhs or 3 lakhs at the most, and on the other hand we have the interests of 60 lakhs of people. Then, Sir, we find that the Select Committee was at pains to point out that inasmuch as we are putting up the import duty on yarn of particular counts only, the effect of that increase in the duty, entailing as it will an increase in the price of yarn, will be to effect an additional cost of about 12 lakhs a year. I will read about one or two passages on this point from the Report of the Select Committee. They say :

"It is possible that the price may be raised to the full extent of the difference between the 1½ anna duty and the 5 per cent. duty. In that case the additional cost is estimated to be Rs. 12 lakhs a year. But the yarn of counts from 31*s*. to 40*s*. is probably not more than 10 per cent. of the total yarn consumption of the handloom weavers, and the additional cost spread over their whole output would not seriously affect them."

Sir, I am very much afraid that my Honourable friend, Sir George Rainy, and also the Select Committee overlooked the considered observation made by the Tariff Board at page 39 of their Report (paragraph 20) on this subject. This is what they say, while dealing with the question as to whether the price of the Japanese yarn as between these two counts does affect the price of other counts as well :

"In view of the fact that there is a definite relative value between the prices of the various counts of yarn sold and that a fall in the price of yarn of counts 30*s*. or 40*s*. therefore affects the price of all other counts in a varying degree...."

There the Tariff Board was dealing with the question of a fall in price affecting sympathetically the price of other counts. Here we have a converse case : the question as to whether when there is a rise in price of these particular counts, the price of other counts will also be affected sympathetically or not. That is a point, Sir, which I submit has been overlooked by the Select Committee, and I therefore say that they were under-estimating the prejudicial effect which this measure will have on the handloom industry. Sir, the Select Committee further made the observation :

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

"We recognise the difficulties which always exist in forecasting the exact effect of an increase in duty, and we consider that the actual effect on the handloom industry should be watched. We recommend, therefore, that the Government should be asked to address Local Governments on the subject, desiring them to have special inquiries made and to report on the subject six months after the passage of the Bill into law."

Sir, I do not know why it is that the Committee fixed the period at six months. We find here that the Committee are absolutely uncertain as to the effect which this increase in the price of yarn will have on the handloom industry. If, therefore, it is their desire to ascertain exactly the effect of the enhanced duty, it is quite conceivable that six months will be too short a period or too long a period. So far as we know and as we can imagine, the immediate effect of our discussions in this House will be, if it has not been already, to lead to a larger import of yarn from abroad, so as to obviate the enhanced duty that we are discussing. The result will be that for some time to come perhaps there will be a considerable additional quantity of yarn available in the country which will not be affected by the enhanced duty, and if its price does not rise on that account, it may be that the effect of this enhancement of duty will not be felt to the fullest extent within the next six months. If, therefore, Government propose to wait for a little while more, that is to say, enlarge the period to, say, 12 months, what is likely to be the effect ? As has been said by Mr. Noyce when he put some questions to a witness :

"After all, the handloom industry has very little in the way of resources, and if prices go up, would it not be hit very hard ? "

That was the question he put to the witness :

"Would it not be hit immediately and possibly with fatal results ? "

The witness agreed that the price of cloth will go up. Then Mr. Noyce put the question :

"Quite so. That restricts consumption. My point is that the restriction of consumption may act much more quickly and with more direful results in the case of the handloom industry than in the case of the mill industry. The mill industry might be prepared to put up with restriction of consumption in the hope of an ultimate lasting benefit, but the handloom industry might be dead before the benefit came along."

So, I say, Sir, the handloom industry might be dead if the Government were to prolong the period for making this inquiry. If not altogether dead, as apprehended by Mr. Noyce, it might be seriously affected. Therefore, I say, Sir, if you are really anxious to look into the matter more carefully (on your own admission, you have not got materials sufficient for the purpose of coming to a definite decision on the point), you ought to undertake an inquiry before you embark on this measure of tariff reform. So far with regard to this point.

Several reasons have been advanced as to why these particular counts have been selected for an increase of the duty. I am not going to repeat them. But to my mind there is perhaps one ground which has not been so far touched upon, and that is to be found on page 36 of the Tariff Board's Report. The Tariff Board here point out that :

"an almost equally striking feature has been the gain of Japan at the expense of the United Kingdom in counts 31s. to 40s."

Sir, I do not know whether it will be fair on my part to give expression to any suspicion that I may have in my mind as to the reason that induced my Honourable friend Sir George Rainy to select these particular counts for an enhancement of duty. Certainly the Tariff Board never recommended that protective action should be confined only to counts between 31s. and 40s. I do not know whether he had any personal feeling about it, whether in selecting these counts, he wanted to have a sort of retaliation on behalf of Great Britain. Sir, the Textile Mercury, a well-known technical journal, dated May 30th, 1925, has the following rather significant observation :

"A suggestion has been made in Lancashire recently that India should be urged to put up a tariff against Japan with the idea of benefiting the Lancashire cotton industry."

Sir, this was followed by the visit of a very prominent millowner of Bombay to England, and I have seen rather uncharitable observations made as to the object of his visit there and as to the nature of the conversations he is supposed to have had with the Lancashire people. I have no intention to peer behind the scene on the present occasion, but the result of all these negotiations and agitation for the protection of the mill industry has taken the shape of a proposal to raise the import duty on certain kinds of yarn in regard to which England has got a very legitimate grievance against Japan. I will not say anything more on the subject.

Sir, it has been said by the Honourable Member in charge this morning—it was said by some other Members also on a previous occasion—that we must pay sufficient regard to the national importance of this industry. I will be the last person to under-rate the national importance of such an industry as the cotton textile industry of India. But, Sir, when an appeal is made to our patriotic sentiments, can we not ask the millowners to observe that rule " Do unto others as you would be done by " ? What has their attitude been in regard to other industries of India ? My Honourable friend Mr. Das on the last occasion made a complaint that the Bombay mill industry had done little or nothing to promote sister industries—allied industries—industries on which they depend for the carrying on of their own business. Here I have an instance in which they have been very negligent of the interests of another great national industry in India. The industry to which I am going to refer has also been suffering on account of unfair competition from another country. May I not expect my friends from Bombay, my millowner friends, to have a little more sympathy for another struggling industry of India ? Sir, telegrams were sent to the members of the Select Committee from the Indian Mining Federation referring to an instance in which the Bombay mill industry, or a particular firm of Bombay millowners, went in for a large indent of bounty-fed South African coal in spite of the fact that cheaper coal was available to it. Sir, that message came from an interested party, but here I hold in my hand the comment of a recognised commercial journal conducted by Europeans, I mean the Commerce, dated the 3rd September, 1927. This is what it says :

"During the past fortnight there has been no business of any importance reported except that a series of cargoes of Natal coal amounting to about 50,000 tons in the aggregate have been fixed for delivery up to June 1928, and that Messrs. Currimbhoy Ebrahim and Sons have accepted Natal Northern Navigation coal 1,500 tons per month, the reported price being Rs. 27 per ton c. i. f., which means about Rs. 18-3 at the present rate of exchange and adding landing and delivery and charges, and import duty it brings the cost delivered to about Rs. 22-9.

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

"Now we know....."

this is how the paper proceeds :

".... they were offered Selected Grade 14 seam Jherria railborne at a price which would mean, delivered, weighed and stacked at mills, about Rs. 21-4 per ton. What then is to be said when an Indian industry will pay over Re. 1 per ton more for foreign coal rather than support its own country's coal industry ? And further, it is a well-known fact that railborne coal is always in much better condition than is the case with seaborne. However, there is the fact, and this market has to contemplate at any rate for the next eight or nine months, the competition of roughly 6,000 tons per month certain of coal which should by all means have come from India's collieries, instead of from Africa."

Are we not entitled to expect fair play even from the Bombay millowners ?

Sir, there is one other point which I desire to mention, and that arises in connection with the effect that our discussions have already produced in Japan. I do not hold any brief for Japan. If we find that our industry is being hit on account of unfair competition from any foreign country, I should be the first man to support any sound proposal for a fair amount of protection to be given to that industry against unfair competition, having regard, of course, to the interests of other home industries and the interests of the consumer. I do not, however, make light of the apprehensions that are crossing my mind of an impending economic war between two great Asiatic people. I have seen observations in the press which make me fear that our apprehensions may not prove altogether groundless. It is said that a Tariff Enquiry Committee is about to sit in Japan, and if we were to take any hasty action with regard to this matter, it might have the immediate result of influencing the decisions of the Tariff Committee in Japan and inducing it to recommend retaliation. When we talk of retaliation, let us remember what great stakes we have in our export trade with Japan. There is one particular trade, which perhaps more than any other may be affected adversely if such retaliation ever takes place, and that is pig-iron. I warn this House to seriously consider whether it is proper to rush this measure without paying sufficient regard to the possibilities of complications of a rather international kind. It does not seem that this measure has satisfied anybody. Not sufficient, says the millowner ; injurious, says the handloom industry ; and on the top of this we have the not altogether unlikely contingency of Japan retaliating. I therefore submit to this House very respectfully that before we take this measure into consideration we should have a little more time to ponder over the various issues that are involved ; particularly when we find that the Government themselves are not in possession of sufficient facts to enable them to say with any amount of certainty as to what the effect of this legislation will be on the handloom industry. With these few words I commend my motion to the House.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, may I have your ruling as to whether we should confine our remarks to the amendment moved by Mr. Neogy or discuss the whole matter.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member might go on until he is asked to stop.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : Sir, I rise to make an appeal to this House on behalf of the handloom weavers, and in so doing I feel no hesitation in opposing the motion made by the Honourable Sir George Rainy. Sir, it seems to me that I cannot congratulate the Honourable Sir George Rainy on this inauspicious inauguration of his administration of the Commerce Department by laying his sword primarily upon the poor handloom weaver. Sir, we have often heard it said, and there is no doubt that the Government in India has gained notoriety for carrying on the administration on the policy of divide et impera, but we thought it was confined only to other matters and not to industry and commerce. But to-day, Sir, the Honourable Sir George Rainy is inaugurating his regime by dividing one part of an industry against another by separating the handloom weavers from the millowners and making them fight with each other. Sir, this Bill is, and for the matter of that there always is, a frequent prayer for protection on behalf of the millowners of Bombay. So much so that I have often felt that this Assembly is fast becoming the millowners' association. The present agitation is made soon after the protection that has been granted to the millowners even to the prejudice of the handloom weavers in this country by the removal of the cotton excise duty. That, Sir, was operating as a big protection wall against the poor handloom weavers in this country, and upon some big political issue they raised a hue and cry over that matter and got the cotton excise duty abolished. Sir, I must frankly make a confession to this House that in voting for it I voted against my conscience. Sir, I may point out to this Assembly that there are three classes of millowners. There are mills which are purely spinning mills, there are mills which are purely weaving mills, and there are mills which are combined spinning and weaving mills. Of the 274 mills in this country 50 per cent. are in Bombay while the rest are scattered all over the country. But of these, Sir, the purely spinning mills are 50 in number, the purely weaving mills are 23 in number and the combined mills are 201 in number. Of these three classes, Sir, the class which is most affected and which is most clamouring at the present time, stating that they are in a very depressed condition, that they are dying, that they are in the last agonies of death—all these groans proceed more or less from the first class, the purely spinning mills. So far as the purely weaving mills are concerned, they stand more or less on the footing of the handloom weavers, and they do not mind whether such protection is granted or not, because they have to depend for their yarn upon other mills or upon imports. And so far as the combined spinning and weaving mills are concerned, they are mills which make use of all the yarn which they can spin and they cannot, therefore, be put to serious difficulty. Therefore, it appears to me, Sir, that the whole clamour is proceeding from 50 millowners who have got purely spinning mills. If instead of clamouring like this and trying to kill the handloom weavers, they only added looms to their mills all this crying would have vanished. But, Sir, we are not concerned with what they might have done. We are faced with what they are at present doing. Now, Sir, I come to the handlooms. The Honourable Sir George Rainy raised the question which is the national industry of this country, the handlooms or the mills ? But not feeling sure of his ground he evaded giving an answer to it himself. Sir, I will tell him that the national industry of this country is the handloom industry. It is the most ancient industry of this country. It is the industry which is protecting the largest class of poor people in this country. It is the cottage industry above all others of India. Sir, are you going to apply the term " national industry " to this handloom industry or are you going to apply it to the mills, whose owners get all their stores from England and who contribute but a small portion of their work for the manufacture of cloth in their looms ? Is that the national industry or is this cottage industry national ? If this cottage industry is the national industry, then I have no doubt that Sir George Rainy would not have said that it is an extreme proposition to protect the handloom weavers in spite of the depression in the mills. I am sure he would not call it too extreme a proposition if only he had considered the true definition of a national industry and understood that the handloom weaving industry is the national industry of this country. Sir, you will find that the statistics in the case of the handloom weaving industry are not so critically taken as in the case of the mill industry. The Government rarely bestows any attention upon the poor handloom weavers, and if we refer to figures at all we must take the last census of 1921. And we are now six years after that. According to the figures there given, Sir, we have got 19,38,072 handlooms in this country, of which I may specifically mention the important provinces. In Assam there are 4,21,367 handlooms ; in Bengal 2,13,886 ; in Bihar and Orissa 1,64,592 ; in Burma 4,79,637 ; in Madras 1,69,403 ; in the Punjab 2,70,507. I need not quote the smaller figures. But these figures do not give, according to the statement made in the Tariff Board Report or the evidence there, the figures for the Bombay Presidency, the Central Provinces, the North-West Frontier Province, the Mysore State, Kashmir, Baluchistan, Kathiawar, etc. ; and they estimate that in all there must be 20 to 25 lakhs of handlooms in this country upon which depends, not in the luxurious scale obtainable in the mill centres but at the rate of 3 annas per head, the maintenance of 6 millions of people. Sir, I have not heard till now one strong voice being raised in this Assembly during the period of nearly 4 years of my experience here on behalf of these poor people, except that one friend of mine, Mr. R. D. Bell of Bombay, who advocated the cause of the handloom industry in this Assembly. I am sorry I do not find him in this House at present. He was so placed in this Assembly that he was by my side in the non-official block even though he was a nominated official. Sir, it is said also, and I am sure the figures are correct, that in the Bombay Presidency where the mills loom so large there are 800,000 people in three hundred centres who all depend on handlooms. Sir, I ask is the case of these handloom weavers to be treated lightly, with levity, with indifference, with neglect or with apathy ? I say, Sir, that the Honourable Sir George Rainy would do well to bestow his most sympathetic attention on the condition of the handloom weaver, in the first instance, has to [illegible] with the millowners of Bombay. Sir, what is the treatment that has been accorded all along to the handloom weavers in this country ? When the millowners wanted to import their machinery and stores they were allowed to do it on a duty of 2½ per cent. But when the handloom weavers wanted to import machinery or tools they had to pay an import duty of 15 per cent. till last year. I made some feeble agitation over this in the last Assembly, but my agitation was not favourably treated. Luckily, however, Mr. Saklatvala simultaneously raised the same question in the House of Commons, and when the British Parliament wanted this Government to give an explanation in this connection, then a Bill was introduced reducing the duty to 2½ per cent. That is the treatment, so far as purchase of stores and tools are concerned, meted out to the handloom weavers. Then, Sir, the import duty on yarn, although it was objected to on principle, although it was condemned by the Fiscal Commission, was still imposed at the rate of 5 per cent. for administrative or revenue purposes. Then, Sir, as I have already said, the cotton excise duty was abolished. Now, Sir, I would refer this House to a short passage in the Fiscal Commission's Report in which the members of that Commission expressed complete sympathy with the condition of the handloom weavers. In paragraph 116 of the Report, at page 66, they say :

[Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar.]

"In the course of our tour we received a certain amount of evidence in regard to the principle of a duty on cotton yarn, some witnesses advocating it as a measure of protection to the Indian spinning industry, while others pointed out the ill effects which they anticipated any such duty would produce on the handloom industry. In the current year's budget, however, the Government of India, impelled by the necessities of the financial situation, proposed the imposition of a duty at the rate of 5 per cent., ad valorem, on imported cotton yarn. The proposal was accepted and passed by the Legislature. We feel that we are not in a position to pronounce any definite opinion regarding the propriety of this duty. But we recommend strongly that in view of the fact that the duty has been imposed without, as far as we are aware, any detailed enquiry into its possible effects on the interests concerned, and that in accordance with our general principle that no duty should be imposed on a partly manufactured article like cotton yarn until the effect has been carefully analysed by the Tariff Board, the question of the continuance of the duty on cotton yarn should be referred at any early date for investigation and report by the Tariff Board. The evidence which we received from those interested in the maintenance of the handloom industry was that the great bulk of imported yarn is consumed by the handlooms, that the rise in the cost of the cloth which would result from a duty on yarn was likely to affect the demand for the product of the handloom, and that it was even probable that the handloom weavers, owing to their ill-organised condition, might not be able to pass on the whole of the duty by raising the price of their cloth, and therefore the duty would to some extent have to be paid directly out of their own pockets. This, it was felt, would constitute a heavy burden on a poor class with small resources. It was further urged that in the coarser qualities of goods the handloom weaver is in direct competition with the Indian power looms, and that a duty on yarn would confer a clear advantage on the power looms. The weaving mills for the most part obtain their yarn from their own spinning departments, and consequently the cost of the yarn which they use will not be affected by the import duty. The handloom weavers on the other hand, having to purchase yarn in the market, will undoubtedly have to pay a price which takes into account the import duty, whether they purchase imported or Indian made yarn. The Tariff Board will have to examine the validity of these contentions and also the question whether any duty on cotton yarn is required for protective purposes, for though the present duty has been imposed by the Government purely in order to raise revenue, the advocates of the duty regard it with satisfaction as a measure of protection."

But, Sir, what has been done by the Government of India since the imposition of the 5 per cent. duty ? Did they take the advice of the Fiscal

[Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar.]

Commission ? No. But then a chance occurred to them and the Tariff Board had to go through the whole question and had to give their opinion. But with what courtesy is the Tariff Board's Report treated by the Government ? They brush aside most unceremoniously the recommendation made by the majority report of the Tariff Board. The Honourable Sir George Rainy at least, who has had some experience with a Tariff Board, and to whom it was one of the rungs of his ladder, should not now kick it. I would therefore request the Honourable Sir George Rainy to look upon the Tariff Board's Report as more valuable than the clamour which has encircled him since the Report was made. And what does the Tariff Board Report say with reference to the levy of an import duty on yarn ? At page 175, they say :

"The majority of us consider, however, that the imposition of any additional duty on yarn is undesirable in view of the effect that this would have on the handloom industry which in 1925-26, according to the figures given in Appendix IV, supplied about 26 per cent. of the total consumption of cloth in India. It was represented to us by many witnesses, including some Directors of Industries, that the imposition of an additional duty on yarn would not affect that industry unfavourably as the greatest part of its output is of cloth woven from yarn of the finer counts and may, therefore, be regarded as a luxury product, any increase in the price of which due to an enhanced duty could easily be passed on to the consumer. We are not convinced by this argument."

Sir, the Tariff Board have made it very plain what their view is ; they held an elaborate enquiry and took much evidence. I crave the liberty of referring to a few pages in the evidence. In Volume III we have got the opinions of Local Governments and also the opinions of the Directors of Industries and textile experts, all men who have studied the question and gone carefully into it. But all that evidence is of no value to this Government. At page 1 of Volume III the Madras Government say :

"Until the reasons for the depression are ascertained and the industry reformed and placed on sound business lines this Government are unable to recommend any form of assistance or additional taxation."

To that is appended a note by the Director of Industries, Madras. He says :

"The approximate quantity of cotton yarn consumed per annum by the handlooms in the whole of India and in the Madras Presidency may be taken as 200 millions and 60 million pounds respectively. It will thus be seen that one-third of the total quantity of cotton goods manufactured on handlooms in India is produced in Southern India."

Then again he says, dealing with the suggestions put forward by the Bombay Millowners' Association specifically :

"In the interests of the handloom weaving industry, I am opposed to increasing the duty on imported yarn and am inclined to favour the removal of the present ad valorem import duty of 5 per cent. now levied on yarn. The abolition would help power weaving mills, which are not combined with spinning mills, as well as the development of the handloom weaving and indigenous dyeing industries and subsidiary manufactures, such as hosiery. Nearly 75 per cent. of cotton yarn consumed by handloom weavers is imported from overseas. It pays the Indian mills to produce coarse and medium counts of yarn. They do not produce yarn of fine counts on a large scale and the increase of duty on yarn would not therefore materially help the spinning mills in India. A large quantity of imported fine grey yarn is dyed and utilised in the manufacture of a class of coloured goods referred to in my answer to question 38. The removal of the import duty would, therefore not affect even the weaving mills in India. The handloom weaver cannot afford to pay more for his yarn than he is doing at present as the price of the hand woven product is already at a higher level than that of mill made cloth. This imposition therefore constitutes a burden on the mass of poor people with small resources who indirectly pay the duty. When Japan gradually assumed the control of the China market to the exclusion of inferior and costly Indian mill made yarn, the Indian millowners proceeded to add weaving sheds to their spinning mills and necessarily produced yarn superior in quality to that formerly exported to China. The Indian mills hope to supply with the aid of an enhanced duty of 18 per cent., the bulk of the yarn of all counts below 40s. used by the handloom weavers in India. In my opinion it would not be in the interests of the handloom weavers in India if they were to depend entirely on the Indian mills for the supply of yarn.

The fact that handloom weavers demand yarn in straight reeled hanks indicates that they have little faith in Indian mill yarn being of reputed counts and of correct length for a given weight, leaving aside the more important question of strength and elasticity required for standing frictional resistance and strain during weaving."

Sir, then on page 13.....

Mr. President : I would inform the Honourable Member that reading such long quotations is not permissible.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : The quotations are more authoritative. I will only make a brief reference to them. On page 13 the Burma Government says :

"As regards the proposed import duty on yarn and piecegoods, the Local Government has not sufficient information to say whether foreign exporters of yarn and piecegoods to India are making sufficient profit to enable them to reduce their prices by the amount of the duty and thereby put their goods on the wholesale market at the same price as before."

Then, Sir, on page 15, you have this. It is worth reading. The Government of Bihar and Orissa say :

"While welcoming the inquiry of the Tariff Board into the causes of the present depression in the Bombay cotton mill industry and which is to suggest measures which might be taken to restore it to prosperity the handloom weavers have reasons to view the suggestions of the millowners with some concern lest the interests of the handloom weavers be overlooked. As a result of the inquiry of the Indian Fiscal Commission of 1922 their raw material, viz., yarn was taxed by the imposition of an import duty of 5 per cent. which enabled the cotton mills to put into their pockets and additional profit from the earnings of the handloom weavers. By the abolition of the excise duty in December last the only protection which the handloom weaver enjoyed so far and which counterbalanced the import duty imposed on his raw material was withdrawn. Now the present demand from the millowners is for further enhancement of the import duty not only on piecegoods but also on yarn. It is very unfortunate that there has been little organised effort to put forward the claims of the handloom weavers. Very few people are aware that this industry supporting over 5 million of people is responsible for an annual output of about 50 crores worth of cloth and realise that it plays a very important part in the economic well being of the country. The Indian mills which have practically lost their export trade in yarn have now to depend on the handloom weavers for the disposal of about 230 million lbs. or one-third of their entire output in yarn. The cotton mills have no case to be protected at the expense of cottage artisans who with great difficulty can make both ends meet."

I need not read more. Honourable Members will find other opinions on page 23, and on page 25 they will see the opinion of the Assam Government. All Governments have voted against Sir George Rainy's motion. Then, Sir, on page 457 you will find what the Labour Textile Union of Bombay have stated. I want particularly to quote if for the benefit of my friend Mr. Joshi who supports the Bill and does not want to reject it. This is what they say :

"The imposition of an additional import duty of 13 per cent. on yarn and piecegoods recommended by the millowner's association will have a very adverse effect upon the prices of cloth in India. They will go high considerably and the consumer and ultimately the industry itself will suffer. The Board are already aware that the prices of cloth are much higher than those of other commodities and if they are allowed to go still higher my Union is afraid that the prices will be almost prohibitive and that the demand for cloth will be much less than it is to-day. Moreover, my Union is more than doubtful whether, by raising the import duty, the imports of foreign and especially Japanese goods will be restricted or their prices will be such as will enable the Indian mills to sell their cloth favourably. If Japan takes it into her head not to lose the Indian market she can adopt measures to still further lower the selling prices so as to maintain her position in India. If this is done the additional import duties will have no effect whatever ; and the Indian mills will still be in the position in which they are to-day. Further, the Bombay Millowners' object of bringing the labour conditions in Japan on a par with those in India will not be achieved; on the contrary, the Japanese employers may worsen the labour conditions there in order to enable them to compete in the Indian market with the increased import duty."

[Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar.]

If my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi is not satisfied I will quote his own evidence. My Honourable friend Mr. Joshi is the one gentleman about whom I was disappointed when he abandoned the condition of the hand-loom weavers and considered only those who are employed in the Bombay mills. On page 515 of this volume.....

Mr. President : Why not lay it on the table ? (Laughter.)

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : This was placed in the Library and nobody read it. I am therefore.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member does not seem to take the hint. He must understand that such long quotations are not permissible.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : I am sorry, Sir, I will close with this :

"Q.—There are ways and ways of doing things, Mr. Joshi. You are not in favour of an increased import duty ?

A.—No, because I think it is a wrong method of giving protection.

Q.—You consider it would increase the cost to the consumer ?

A.—Yes ; and on the whole it will not do good to the industry. Your people will not purchase goods if they become more costly and the industry may lose instead of gaining.

Q.—But the millowners consider that probably the increase in the cost to the consumer would be negligible if you put on this 13 or 17½ per cent. they suggest.

A.—I can only say that their idea of negligible and my idea of negligible are different."

Sir, I do not wish to quote any more and I would ask my Honourable friends in this Assembly to read the passage for themselves. I now come to Sir Victor Sassoon's arguments. He has appended a minute to the Select Committee's Report. He need not have appended a minute because he entirely concurred with them. It was not a dissenting minute but a pleading minute, a defence minute, defence of the mills in Bombay. He there takes the opportunity of answering the various charges which are levelled against the mill management, over-capitalisation and mill working and other things for which that was certainly not the right place. However, nobody grudges it. But I am not concerned with the defects of mill management, but I am concerned only with his argument when he says, comparing the price of 40 counts on the 18th August the Japan yarn was saleable at 15.75 annas per pound inclusive of the import duty of 5 per cent. Taking the price of cotton on that date at Rs. 620 per candy he puts the same count of Indian mills at 19.71 annas per pound, and argues that there is an advantage of 25 per cent. and even if another 5 per cent. is taken away from that, the handloom weaver will still have an advantage of 20 per cent. Of course I do not ordinarily dabble in these figures. We are accustomed more to sections and Codes rather than to figures but to my common sense it does not appeal to say that the price of Japanese yarn on that date, which is based on the cotton price of some other day, is compared with the price of yarn in India on that particular date. Now, Sir, I would like to ask him also to consider in connection with this suggestion that the price of a particular count of cotton is not the only test to be applied when we consider the effect of the import duty that is levied by Statute on a particular count. It is admitted by the Tariff Board on page 36 or 37 that there is a definite relationship between the higher counts as well as the lower counts in the matter of adjustment, rise or fall in prices, when a duty is raised on any particular count. Supposing there is a particular count of yarn which can be had at 12 annas per pound and if 1½ annas is added to it the importer can sell it only at 13½ annas. But the handloom weavers depend upon the Indian mill yarn for the lower counts. Now, what is there to prevent these Indian millowners from raising the price from 12 annas to at least 13 annas, leaving a margin of half an anna in order to shut out Japan. Then, I submit that if the higher count is sold at 15 annas, people will have to take lower counts for 13 annas. Putting it at the lowest, supposing he raises it by three pies, even then, Sir, the handloom weavers who have to depend on Indian mill yarn to the extent of 260 million pounds will have to pay three pies per pound more upon those counts which they purchase irrespective of the present existing prices. If they raise it 3 pies per lb. over the existing prices, that makes up 40 lakhs of rupees. Where is the force in saying that this additional increase of duty on yarn at 1½ annas will affect only to the extent of 10 per cent. of the consumption and that it will give only 12 lakhs of rupees and nothing more ? 12 lakhs of rupees can be easily distributed over 30 crores and those who purchase will not feel it a great burden. But, I submit that this argument cannot be upheld. On the other hand there is absolutely no doubt of the fact that there will be a general rise in prices even over others. But what is the way in which they propose to meet this ? They say internal competition will prevent any rise in price of the lower counts. Sir, the millowners are an organised body, they know how to form a combine, they know how to keep the market in their hands, though not by underbidding at least to a certain extent in other ways. The handloom weavers are unorganised, disorganised, helpless, voiceless, voteless. It is therefore perfectly possible for the millowners to buy even lower counts and hold it at higher prices. It is not therefore correct to say that the extent to which the handloom weavers will be affected will be only to the extent of 12 lakhs. On the other hand I submit that even if three pies more are added to the rest of what they have necessarily to buy from the Indian millowners, they will have to add 40 lakhs more. I will not be surprised if they raise the price to half an anna. Is there any guarantee that these Indian millowners will sell lower counts at the price at which they are now selling even after this duty on yarn is modified by this Indian Tariff (amendment) Bill? Sir, they will certainly not give a guarantee and nobody can take a guarantee from them with certainty. Now, Sir, the contributions which the handloom weavers are making to the consumption of cloth in this country as not very small. After all, even at this stage, in spite of so many struggles for existence, the handloom weavers are not a negligible factor. The mill production gives us about 1,789 million yards, imports 1,769 million yards, and the handlooms 1,372 million yards. It gives us at least 28 per cent. That is the contribution of the handloom weavers. But, Sir, there is a depression in the handloom industry. Look at Appendix IV of the Tariff Board Report where they say that in 1924-25, the handloom weavers produced 1,256 million yards, but in 1925-26 they produced only 1,160 million yards. Who cares for that depression. If there is depreciation of 40 or even 20 million yards in the mill industry, there is a great hue and cry raised in the whole of India.

[Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar.]

My Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas rightly said in his minute of dissent that this protection which is sought to be given by this Bill is only an eyewash, and in fact, everybody is agreed on this point, and even in the speech of the Honourable Sir George Rainy, we could not find any warmth imported into it because he knows the weakness of his case. He put his case fairly as a judge does to the jury slightly hinting here and there that the Bill should be supported. He himself does not believe in the correctness and stability of his position as to be able to say that this will not affect the handloom weavers ; but that it will benefit the millowners is a proposition which is illogical on the face of it. To the extent that you give benefit to the millowners, to that extent it is a loss to the handloom weaving industry. You only take away something from the handloom weavers and give it to the millowners ; it is nothing else. Therefore, there is no meaning in saying that this Bill does not affect the handloom weavers while benefiting the millowners. That is why no millowners have till now agreed that it is benefiting them. My Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon has taken care to say : " Let us take even the small gifts that are offered to us by Government ". I ask Sir Victor Sassoon and his fellow millowners to stand up with self-respect in this Assembly and say to the Government " we will not go to you with a begging bowl. We will not take these small pittances of nine and three pies. If you are prepared to protect our industry, protect us properly. Protect us by all means, but do not kill another neighbouring industry. Do this, otherwise we will not accept your offer. We will rather die than take this protection from the Government which entails the destruction of a neighbouring industry ". Well Sir, this must be the attitude of the millowners towards the Government. When the Government are so half-hearted in giving this protection and at the same time they want to kill this handloom industry, it is up to the millowners to refuse this protection. Sir, these millowners, let it be noted these millowners, like the Japanese people, have never been favourably inclined towards our national industry, properly so called. I am not for the moment pleading the cause of Japan. I am not swayed by the threats of my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy that a tariff war might arise between India and Japan. I am the least swayed by all these threats. The Japanese have been trying to kill our handloom industry and our own millowners have been doing the very same thing now. I refer to the khaddar industry. When the khaddar industry was started, when hand spinning and hand weaving were introduced in order to make an offday earning method for even the agricultural population and to make it a widspread cottage industry by reviving it, what did the millowners do ? The millowners produced khaddar and dumped it in the market. The Japanese did the same thing. Mill-made khaddar was passed for Gandhi cloth and pure hand spun and hand woven khaddar. The millowners have cheated us. (Laughter.) Therefore I have no sympathy with the millowners nor with the Japanese. Having taken an oath that I will not quote anything, I hope I will be permitted to say merely the words of the greatest man only in a few sentences. With reference to this mill khaddar, Mahatma Gandhi says :

" I have been painfully aware of it. I had hoped that the millowners would give up the undesirable practice. But it was hoping against hope. Wherever I have gone people have drawn my attention to this unpatriotic conduct on the part of some millowners. The only comfort I have derived from the usurpation by the millowners of the name khaddar is, that it is proof of the popularity of khaddar among the masses upon whose ignorance the millowners are playing. For, I know that wherever the buyers have discovered the deception, they have cursed themselves and the millowners ".

Sir, I am not therefore in sympathy with either. The newspapers published a telegram saying that the Cotton Spinners' Association of Japan are trying to leave no stone unturned to see that this Bill is thrown out. That is published in the newspapers. The millowners have not been less vigorous. They are also leaving no stone unturned in seeing that this Bill is passed. I have no sympathy with either. My submission is that this Assembly while giving benefit to one industry should see that it does not kill another industry. The handloom weavers are very poor people. You talk of unfair competition in Japan ; you say that women in Japan are working during the night. Here look at the handloom weavers. All of them, men, women and children, are working day and night and they are not able to earn three annas per day per head, and still you want to impose this burden upon them. Why all this talk of giving protection to a national industry. I ask the Honourable Sir George Rainy to give us a proper definition of the term " national industry ". Therefore, Sir, I have no hesitation in opposing the motion made by the Honourable the Commerce Member. Of course, as for my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy's motion, that is tantamount to the same. There is a Tamil proverb which mentions two methods of killing, either you employ a sword or you employ a wet cloth. He wants to use the method of wet cloth for killing this Bill ; whereas I want to use the direct method of the sword. The millowners will then know what other form of aid they must get for the protection of the Mill Industry. I ask why should the Government prolong the agony by circulating this Bill. I only want to read to the Assembly one telegram which I received from the handloom weavers of Sholapur assembled at a public meeting at that place. The telegram says :

" Public meeting, Sholapur handloom weavers held yesterday, opine propose additional duty yarn will jeopardise handloom industry. Therefore strongly urge impose additional duty cloth instead yarn to protect handloom industry. Further resolves if unfortunately additional duty be imposed yarn instead cloth, the amount thus collected be utilised to benefit the handloom industry by granting adequate bounty to handloom cloth, research work in improving handloom machinery and education propaganda ".

The telegram is issued under the signature of Rai Bahadur Mulai, chairman of the public meeting. Sir, there is certainly a strong feeling in the whole country that this Government is neglecting the condition of these handloom weavers. I make this appeal to this House ; I make this appeal to the Honourable Sir George Rainy that he may start his administration with sympathy more for the poor than for the rich. I therefore urge upon the millowners also not to accept this half-hearted—this what shall call it ? (An Honourable Member : " Crumb ! "), this kind of protection that is now offered by the Government which is most unworthy on their part to accept. I therefore appeal to all the Members of this House to vote down this Bill.

[Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar.]

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, in rising to oppose the amendment proposed by Mr. Neogy, I want to make it quite clear that I do not in any way commit myself in favour of the Bill being brought on the Statute-book. My reasons for opposing the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy are these, that the Bill under discussion is only an emergent and temporary measure to give some relief to the cotton yarn millowners in India against unfair competition by Japan, and the relief which it is proposed by this Bill to be given to the millowners is only to the extent of the loss which they sustain on account of that competition with Japan. It is not intended by this Bill to protect the cotton yarn millowners against internal competition. Now, Sir, it is advocated on behalf of these millowners that the yarn industry in India is in the throes of death. I do not say that I agree with them. I do not say whatever they say is right or wrong ; but what I say is that this is the proper time that we should discuss this Bill and thoroughly go into the proposition. If we find that the yarn mill industry in India is really in the throes of death, then of course it would be frustrating the object of the Bill itself if the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy is accepted, because if the Bill is sent for circulation and takes 5 or 6 months before it comes before this House, then if in reality the condition of the yarn mills in India is such as the millowners say, then by that time the yarn mill industry would have been killed altogether and the object of the Bill will be lost and the millowners of Bombay, in the language of the immortal poet, will have occasion to say :

" ki mare qatal ke bad usne jafa se toba, hae us zud pashiman ka pashiman huna."

which means, " He has taken a vow not to commit tyranny after having killed me, Ah me ! look at the early repentance of that early repentant." On the other hand, if we find that the case which has been put by the millowners is not a right case, is not a correct case and that in fact they are not in need of any relief, then it becomes still more important that this Bill should be taken into consideration just at present in the Assembly, because the millowners must know that they will not get any relief from us, they must know what their position will be and what steps they are going to take after they have been refused any relief by the Government. Taking all these facts into consideration, I think, Sir, that it will not be fair or just to any party to postpone the consideration of this Bill. Let us decide once for all whether we are prepared to give any relief to the yarn millowners or not ; and for these reasons, Sir, I oppose the motion proposed by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to support the motion for circulation moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy and to oppose the motion for consideration moved by the Honourable the Commerce Member. Sir, I am sorry to say that some friends in opposing this Bill have concentrated the fire of their criticism on the unfortunate millowners of Bombay. They will appreciate my position if I cannot follow them. (Diwan Chaman Lall : " Why are they unfortunate ? "). Because anybody who is compelled to beg for his very existence is certainly unfortunate. And after all, Sir, I cannot agree that the millowners of Bombay are such a bad lot at all. It must be a cold heart that cannot appreciate the tremendous service which the millowners of Bombay have done to the country in largely displacing the import of foreign cloth into this country by indigenous manufacture ; and while I am as devoted a champion of the handloom industry as anybody else, I am equally devoted to the mill industry and I cannot accept anything to its derogation, because I hold that it is the pioneer efforts of the mill industry of Bombay that have displaced Lancashire and Manchester cotton cloth to such a large extent in this country. Sir, if the figures are examined it will be found that in 1899-1900 the output of the Indian mill industry was only 9 per cent. of the total requirement of cloth in India, and to-day the output of the mill industry has raised the percentage from 9 to 42. And I say, Sir, it is the enterprise, the industry and the business ability of the millowners of India, and Bombay in particular, that are responsible for such a beneficent result. What after all will be the result if the Bombay millowner goes down ? He will only be displaced by the Lancashire millowner and the Japanese millowner. And I ask those friends who have been so hard on the Bombay millowners to say whether they contemplate such contingency with any degree of satisfaction. The rise of the Indian mill industry is a romantic event as it has come in spite of the absence of any assistance from the State. I repeat, Sir, that the State in this country has never helped the mill industry. (Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : " That is rather ingratitude ! "). It would be ingratitude if the State had helped the industry ; but that is not the case. It is quite the contrary. Look at the conduct of the State from 1893 onwards. On account of the exchange and currency troubles for which the Government themselves were responsible—the Tariff Board itself admits it—the whole industry, the production of yarn and the production of cloth were greatly handicapped ; and it was the great Swadeshi movement in Bengal in 1905 in contradistinction to the step-fatherly conduct of the Government, it was this self-relying movement on the part of the people which saved the mill industry in Bombay and India from the throes of the great calamity by which it was overtaken. The Tariff Board has investigated the question long and widely but it has failed to bring out the importance of the great Swadeshi movement which from 1905 saved the mill industry in Bombay from the consequences of the exchange and currency policy of Government. In 1896 everybody knows the 3½ per cent. countervailing duties were levied—an unheard of treatment of a national industry by the Government of the country. My Honourable friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar was sorry that he voted for the removal of that duty. Well, I am pained to hear that ; if any protection resulted to the handloom industry by the 3½ per cent. duties imposed on the Indian mill industry, that was a downright robbery and I am sure the handloom industry does not want to subsist on the robbery of another industry in this country. I say, Sir, it is not by such countervailing duty that the handloom industry or any other industry should expect to thrive, and the removal of the disgraceful impost came not a day too soon. Sir, it is the step-fatherly treatment of Government, their exchange policy, their 3½ per cent. countervailing duties, their failure to give any constructive and active support to the industry, and latterly their raising of the rupee to 18*d.*, and coupled with these the unfair competition of Japan—it is all these that have brought the mill industry to its present most deplorable condition. My friend Mr. Neogy and others have unnecessarily confined themselves to the Bombay mill industry. While the Bombay mill industry stands in need of greater protection, it is not the finding of the Tariff Board that the rest of the industry does not need protection. The Tariff Board have repeatedly said that it is a question of degree, and if my friends will look at the events since this inquiry was undertaken, they will find that the whole Indian mill industry has identified itself with the inquiry that was undertaken by the Tariff Board, and at every stage not merely the millowners of Bombay, but the millowners of Ahmedabad and Cawnpore and the rest have identified themselves with all the steps that had been taken for ventilating the grievances of the mill industry as a whole. Sir, I grant that the Bombay mill industry stands in need of greater protection, but that is not the same thing as saying that the Bombay mill industry is getting or is attempting to get protection at the cost of mills in other parts of India. The difference is only one of degree. Therefore, I say, Sir, it was unfortunate that attention was being focussed only on the Bombay mill industrialists, and that they were being castigated as a sort of untouchables and outcasts who were not to receive any consideration at all in this House. I cannot accept that position ; Sir, the figures which are published on pages 228 to 235 of the Tariff Board's Report show that, in spite of all the handicaps to which I have referred, the mill industry in this country has made giant strides—thanks to the enterprise and initiative of our capitalists, and thanks also to the hardy mill worker from the Konkan and Gujarat. We in Bombay are proud of the achievements at once of our industrialists and our mill workers. These capitalists and the mill workers between themselves have built up an industry of which any Government should have been proud, and if this industry had been actively assisted by a sympathetic Government, it would have been possible long ago to clothe every one of the 315 millions of people in this land with cloth manufactured in this country, whether by the handloom or by the mill industry. If we only compare the statistics of the giant strides which the Japanese mill industry has made during the last 15 or 20 years under the protecting wings of the State, the justice of the criticism which I am making will be obvious even to the Government. Compare the progress which the Japanese mill industry has made in 20 years with the progress made by us in this country after nearly 44 years, and we will see that if only the State had rendered active assistance to the mill industry, without looking to extraneous interests, we would have been able to manufacture 100 per cent. of our requirements. From 1883 to 1884, when there were only 82 mills in India, we have now 337 mills in the whole of India. The spindles which were only 20 lakhs in 1883 are now 85 lakhs. The looms which were only 16,000 in 1883 are to-day 1,54,000, and the number of workers which the mill industry employed in 1883 was 60,000 as against nearly 4 lakhs to-day. Sir, an industry which is responsible for 42 per cent. of the clothing of the people of this country, an industry which employs nearly 4 lakhs of people, an industry which purchases over 30 crores worth of cotton from the cotton growers of this country, and an industry which keeps at bay foreign importers—is that an industry about which any one can afford to talk in a light-hearted manner ? Leave the millowners and their sins of omission and commission alone. It is the industry that is seeking protection, and if it gets it in a real genuine form, let us not grudge it because the millowners benefit thereby. We never wanted to help The Tatas as such, but the steel industry ; the same is the case here.

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

Sir, this is the position that I hold as regards the mill industry in this country, and yet I am compelled to oppose the consideration of this Bill, because the protection offered is not genuine.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : From the sublime to the ridiculous ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : My Honourable friend is nothing but ridiculous everywhere.

And, Sir, I oppose the consideration of this Bill, for two reasons. One reason is that the Government have treated the Report of the Tariff Board with contempt. It would be impossible to imagine anything so outrageous as the treatment which this Government have given to the Report of the Tariff Board. They have spent a lakh and fifty thousand of the tax-payer's money on the inquiry by the Tariff Board, and when that body consisting of independent people, after careful investigation came to definite deliberate conclusions, the Government of India have thrown them to the winds, and their action to-day is in direct contravention of the Tariff Board's recommendations. How can they expect any reasonable man, however well disposed he may be to his own industry, how can they expect any reasonable man to fall into line with their proposals which are, as I say, in direct contravention of the recommendations of the Tariff Board ?

Sir, I had supported the reference of this Bill to the Select Committee on the distinct understanding that we would be allowed in the Select Committee to open the whole question of the protection to the textile industry ; otherwise I would not have supported it, and although there were rumblings and thunders of warnings that it might not be possible to open the question again in the Select Committee because it would increase the scope of the Bill, I hoped against hope. I had a precedent in doing so. We had the Report of the Currency Commission on which the Government framed the Ratio Bill, and the House was allowed not merely to discuss the question of the ratio, but the whole subject matter covered by the Report of the Currency Commission. We were allowed to discuss the question of the ratio, the gold mohur, the gold standard, the gold currency and everything that was relevant under the Report of the Currency Commission. And therefore, with this precedent in mind, and having regard to the fact that this inquiry was undertaken in the interests of the textile industry ; I was hopeful that Government would allow us to discuss the entire question of the protection to the mill industry, although the Bill itself was a restricted one. But unhappily, we were not allowed to raise the question of protection to the textile industry as a whole, and, as I hold, the Tariff

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

Board's Report is the minimum protection that the mill industry should get, and as I find that the proposals of Government cannot give any real protection to the mill industry, I am compelled to oppose the consideration of this measure.

Sir, it is a very unfortunate and embarrassing position for the mill industrialists of Bombay, as it is always for those who come to the Government and ask for protection. Beggars cannot be choosers always, and although these mill industrialists have time and again shouted the loudest that the proposals of Government do not carry them anywhere, I am pained to see to-day that they are willing to accept this dole. The real thing is, Sir, they do not like to break with this Government. They dare not say : " Well, if you give us protection, give us a genuine protection or none at all ". That is not the stuff of which the capitalists are made. They cannot stand up for their entire right and refuse to have any crust or crumb thrown at them when they really deserve wholemeal bread, very nutritive and wholesome, and that is why we are reduced to this very unseemly position of the millowners going behind their repeatedly declared word that the recommendation of the Tariff Board was the minimum they could accept. I will only quote one or two instances of their views until this Bill was introduced. When Government addressed the millowners on the 15th August they reiterated what they had declared over and over again, namely, that they could not impose import duties on piecegoods from foreign countries ; the millowners then met in conclave at Hornby Road in Bombay and they thought long and they thought mighty, and from what has seen the light of day, it is clear that they remained unconvinced ; here is a telegram from the Free Press which says :

" Opinion in well-informed circles is that the industry should take up the stand that the protection on yarn without protection on cloth is a doubtful benefit carrying with it increased handicap to the handloom industry which is mainstay of the Indian spinning industry and an indirect advantage to foreign imports in finer counts and....

In the circumstances it is right that the industry should ask that it should be given protection on cloth as well as on yarn and that without the one it should not have the other."

This was the opinion in well-informed circles in Bombay when the millowners were considering the reply of the Government of India dated the 15th August. But that is not all. They have lately addressed a letter to the Government of India in reply to the Government's letter of the 15th August and even there—and this letter was written at the end of August—even there, what do they say ? In paragraph 18 which is the last paragraph of their reply and which is signed by Mr. J. P. Wadia, the Assistant Secretary, because I think the Secretary was here, they say :

" In the end I am to express my committee's keen disappointment that even the revised decision of the Government of India should leave the industry practically in the same position as it was before the Tariff Board began their investigation."

What is the meaning of this ? That whether you give protection on yarn or whether you do not, we remain in the same position practically —unless imports of piecegoods were taxed it will be six of one and half a dozen of the other. That is practically the latest pronouncement of the millowners of Bombay, their considered judgment that the protection on yarn alone would render no assistance to the industry. And yet, as I said, before, Sir, the millowners are compelled to accept this measure because they cannot do otherwise. But the representatives of the people are not in that position. I am, Sir, a protectionist by conviction, sentiment and temperament. In these days all over the world the State regards it as its duty to protect the industries of the country and the Fiscal Commission also has recommended protection as a measure for all national industries whenever the occasion arises. I am willing, actively willing to support any industry which stands in need of protection, but I am not here simply to pass any measure, under the guise of protection, if it injures another, industry and when the first industry itself does not really get any benefit from it. It will be said that the contention that the handloom industry is affected is wrong. Now, Sir, the findings of the Tariff Board, the declarations of the Government of India and the statistics of the progress of the handloom industry and the mill industry will clearly prove that the handloom industry stands equally in need of the fostering care of the State. I just now showed, Sir, that while in 1899-1900 the output of the mill industry was 9 per cent. of our total requirement in 1925-26 it is 42 per cent. What is the progress that the handloom industry has made during the same time? The handloom industry, Sir, in 1899 was producing 27 per cent. of the requirements of the people of this country. To-day, according to the statement of the Tariff Board, it is producing 26 per cent. So that in the course of nearly a generation, the handloom industry has made no progress. On the contrary, the handloom industry has deteriorated. Why? When the mill industry has made such tremendous strides, from 9 per cent. to 42 per cent., why is it that the handloom industry has, far from progressing, remained in a stagnant position and made no advance? Because the handloom weaver is not a man of resource. (Mr. Chaman Lall : "Like the millowners".) I am sorry you are so unnecessarily inimical to the millowners. I say, Sir, the handloom weaver is a man without resource, he is carrying on from hand to mouth. And on the top of that in March last only by passing that hateful Ratio Bill, the House placed him (Laughter on Official Benches)—you ought to weep instead of laughing that these 60 lakhs of people have been by your vote handicapped by 12½ per cent. against foreign importers. How can they subsist when a measure like this passed only last March cuts them down by 12½ per cent. in competition with foreign importers? And I say, Sir, the repeated handicap which the State has placed on him coupled with his own poverty has been responsible for the failure of the handloom weaver to work up to a higher percentage of output than he has been able to do. For these reasons, Sir, I say that the House ought to think ten times before attempting to place a further strain on that very honest man. Sir, the Government themselves in their Resolution of the 17th June 1927, on the Tariff Board's Report said :

"But an additional duty on yarn only would affect prejudicially the handloom industry and for this reason should not be imposed."

This is the categorical statement of Government supporting the finding of the Tariff Board, and the evidence of witnesses before the Tariff Board ought to have warned Government against taking any measure which will, in the slightest degree even, have the remote probability of having a prejudicial effect on the handloom industry. Let us see, Sir, how the Select Committee, the majority report argues about this. It was a very wonderful performance for the Honourable Sir George Rainy, after having signed the Resolution of the 7th June.....

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I may state that I did not sign the Resolution of the 7th June. It is not usual for a Member of Council to sign a Resolution of the Government of India.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I shall say, after having authorised the issue of the Resolution of the 7th of June, wherein it is stated that yarn imports should not be taxed, it was a marvellous metamorphosis on the part of the Government of India to have suddenly, within two months, become a convert to the position that the handloom industry would not be affected by a duty on yarn. But the Report of the Select Committee is so halting that it displays a consciousness of guilt throughout in every line. Sir George Rainy is too honest not to feel that he was performing a volte face so soon that even the short memory of the public cannot forget. In paragraph 3 of the Select Committee's Report arguments are given to show that the handloom industry would not be affected. It is said :

"We recognise that this duty can benefit the cotton mill industry only to the extent to which the price of yarn is increased thereby and that any increase in the price of yarn must be a burden on the handloom weaver unless he is able to receive higher price for the cloth that he weaves."

It is admitted that unless he gets a higher price he is at a disadvantage, but it is immediately assumed that he will get a higher price. Why he should get it in this competitive world I cannot understand, and I am sure the House will not understand. It is further stated that the handloom weaver mostly used yarn below 30*s*. whose prices are governed by internal competition. The effect of the duty will not therefore be large and may be ignored. And thirdly, Sir, in paragraph 4, it is said that the annual consumption of yarn of these counts (i.e., 31*s*. to 40*s*.) in India is about 50 million pounds and the production of the Indian mills is more than half of the total. I think there is some mistake in that statement. The Tariff Board on page 188 have recorded a finding in the last few lines of the first paragraph :

"We are of opinion that a production approximating to nearly 100 million pounds (i.e., as a result of the bounty) would constitute a sufficiently large advance especially when it is remembered that the production of counts of 31*s*. to 40*s*. in India in 1925-26 was almost exactly the same as it was in 1912-13 (namely 19.7)".

Here the Tariff Board has recorded a finding that the production of yarn of these counts in 1925-26 was 19.7 million pounds, but the Select Committee have made a statement that of the 50 million pounds of yarn of these counts, the annual production of the Indian mills is more than half the total, that is to say, over 25 million pounds.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : This is a small point of fact, Mr. President, and I think it might save time if I intervene at this moment. The statement that more than half the consumption of the medium counts is produced in India is based simply on the production and import figures of the year 1926-27. The production in India in that year of the medium counts 31*s*. to 40*s*. was 27,657,000 pounds.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I am glad to have the figures which the Honourable the Commerce Member has quoted. To call the figures of one year, annual production, is, I submit, a discrepancy. The statement on page 188 that the production of yarn of counts 31s. to 40s. in this country was 19.7 million pounds in 1925-26, was not easy to reconcile with the statement of the Select Committee that the annual production of yarn of those counts was more than half of the total consumption. Whichever may be the truth I do not know. I am entitled to rely on the statement of the Tariff Board that.....

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Mr. President, on a point of explanation, there is no statement in the report of the Select Committee that the figure given is for the year 1925-26.

Mr. Jamnadas M Mehta : I thought that this was the last year for which we had got figures, and if it is for a later year, I am willing to admit that it may be so for that year but, that is different from saying that is the annual production.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have already said that it is for 1926-27.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not bound to give way.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Thank you, Sir, I am anxious to be scrupulously fair in this matter. Sir, all that I say is that the figures given by the Tariff Board do not warrant the statement that the annual production of these counts of yarn in India is more than half. If the figures of the Tariff Board are right, it is not merely half but nearly 60 per cent. of the total quantity of yarn which will be subject to the additional duty proposed in this Bill. And if the handloom industry consumes 25 million pounds of this yarn, the remaining 6 millions, of the imported yarn are consumed, I would assume, by the 25 weaving mills in this country which have no spinning department at all. We have it also, on the authority of the Tariff Board, that there are nearly 25 weaving mills only, and they must require yarn, and I say these 6 millions must be required by the exclusively weaving mills. I may tell my friend Sir Victor Sassoon that these 25 weaving mills also would be affected by the import duty which is now proposed on yarn. Sir, an added reason is given, which was not present to the mind of the Tariff Board, except indirectly. That reason is that conditions in China will make it possible for the producers there to dump yarn in this country at prices cheaper than the present ones. Sir, if this is so, I should be sorry. But the responsibility for that should be laid on the Government of India in its Finance Department, and not on anybody else. They have sold 92 lakhs ounces of silver. They have depreciated the silver market all over the world, and there is no wonder that the Chinese exchange to-day has in consequence depreciated 4 per cent. and that is the handicap against the mill industry in this country. So, if there is any fear of further dumping the whole responsibility for this added handicap must be laid at the door of my Honourable friend the Leader of the House. Sir, I do not stand isolated in that opinion. I have other authority besides that of my humble self, and that authority is the Statist newspaper. What does it say about this latest performance of the Finance Member in its issue of the 13th of August, 1927 ? It says :

"The undertone of the silver market continues very weak. The effect of the Indian Government's sale of fine silver held in the currency reserve is making itself felt gradually but unimstakably. Sentiments in the two great countries, India and China have been greatly disturbed. In India it had been generally anticipated that the Government would follow the recommendation of the Indian Joint Committee which had urged that the redundant silver in the Reserve should be handled with more regard to the silver market than the bare recommendations of the Currency Commission appeared to promise. These hopes are rudely shattered by the announcement of the sale and hence rapid deterioration in speculative centres. The transactions during the week have been on a large scale. India and China not only are selling previous purchases but building up a bear position of considerable magnitude."

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

I need not quote further. It is now established that as a result of the sale of silver, the silver market in the world has been greatly affected. There has been depreciation in the Chinese exchange and for their latest misfortune the millowners of Bombay should hold the Leader of the House directly responsible. But that cannot be allowed to prejudice the handloom weaving industry. Because one wrong is done by the Government of India, we cannot associate ourselves with doing another wrong to the handloom industry in this country.

Lastly, Sir, I must warn the Government of India that, whatever may be the individual merits and demerits of millowners, the people of this country will reagrd and do regard the mill industry with great affection, and they want it to rise rapidly to the point of being able to supply all the requirements of cloth in this country. They want that Government should give us a genuine measure of protection, not the weak, halting, half-hearted, meagre, niggardly Bill verging on the point of meanness in the question of its protection to the national industry of this country. I want to read in this connection only one quotation, from the statement of an Honourable Minister of the Australian Commonwealth. What does that gentleman say ? This is from the Manchester Guardian of July, 1926. The Honourable Mr. H. E. Pratten, Minister for Trade and Customs for the Commonwealth of Australia says :

" .... owing to our isolated position and somewhat elementary development it is necessary for us to adopt a policy of protection..... I have told your manufacturers (namely, British manufacturers) that no Government and no Parliament would allow an efficient industry established there to be smashed by foreign competition, and that the security for British capital invested in industry in the Commonwealth is absolute, because of the strong national sentiment of the whole people."

And to vary the language, we can say in the terms of the report of the Tariff Board that no Government and no Assembly ought to allow this national industry to be crippled by foreign competition. I shall finish by reading that quotation :

" A great industry is in a serious condition, and our proposals have been inspired by the belief that, in spite of a comparatively long spell of adversity, it still retains sufficient vitality and capacity for self-help which only require to be stimulated into action and this stimulus our modest scheme of state help is calculated to provide."

That modest proposal of State help—you have driven a coach and four through that proposal and reduced it to nullity, and I am compelled to oppose this, because this measure is not a genuine measure of protection to the textile industry but only a pretended measure and the reluctance to tax imports is clearly traceable to an unwillingness in any way to tax the imports from Lancashire and Manchester. The millowenrs of Bombay committed the greatest blunder of their life in not having led sufficient evidence for protection against Lancashire as well, and the results of that blunder are being visited upon them by an ever clever and skilful Government who have turned the tables on them and are merely pretending to give a measure of protection which is no protection at all. The two Bills that are proposed to-day, one this and the other that follows, will leave the British manufacturers, whether of cotton or of machinery alone, and will save them lakhs and lakhs of rupees, while imposing further handicaps on the industry here and also on the exchequer. For these reasons, unless a genuine measure of protection is produced, I am unable to associate myself with the consideration of this Bill. Sir, I have done. (Applause.)

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I feel quite thankful to the Honourable the Commerce Member for what I should call a fair presentation of his case. He practically conceded that whatever is proposed under the Bill will certainly and adversely affect the handloom industry ; but he added that so far as counts above 40*s*. are concerned the degree to which it will be affected would be inappreciable. But, unfortunately for the House, no statistics are offered by the Honourable the Commerce Member. Similarly, as regards counts below 30*s*. he also says the same thing, that it will be inappreciably affected. Here, again, there are no statistics given. Probably, the Honourable the Commerce Member thought that the House, being on the duty on yarn, might as well indulge in the pastime of spinning for itself. We are absolutely groping in the dark as to what probably the statistics will be as regards the inappreciable extent to which the Honourable the Commerce Member says counts above 40*s*. and counts below 30*s*. will be affected. But he says, that, so far as the medium counts are concerned, certainly the handloom industry will be affected seriously. Lastly, he wants the support of this House for the Bill on the ground that, inasmuch as there is a national industry that needs protection, the House might well consider the propriety of examining that attitude. My Honourable friend, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, a Swarajist as he is, naturally grew righteously indignant over this application of the word " national " to the mill industries. But even assuming that the Honourable the Commerce Member meant the word " national " in the sense in which I think he took it—even there I submit to the House that the handloom industry is not less national, for what do we find in Appendix IV ? We find, so far as the total consumption of piece-goods in this country is concerned, it is 4,479 million yards of cloth, of which the imports give us 1,529 million yards, the mills about 1,700 million yards, the handlooms about 1,160 million yards. So that, if the handloom industry is able to give us about 26 per cent. of the total consumption of piecegoods in India, the mills supply us about 40 per cent., or a little less than 40 per cent., and from the net imports we have about 35 per cent. Even there, considering these figures, I submit to the House the handloom industry is not less national. In this connection, I would beg leave to correct my Honourable friend, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, when he gave us the figures of handlooms in this country which he culled from the Census Report—I would beg leave to correct him and say that the last Census Report excludes the handlooms in the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, and many Indian States. So that certainly a larger number of people would be affected by the introduction of this Bill. In this connection, I would also beg to submit to the House that so far as the attitude of the mill-owners in the Bombay Presidency is concerned, it has never been friendly, for what do I see ? I see a passage in the Famine Commission's Report of 1901, page 75, paragraph 226, to the following effect :

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

"The Famine Commission of 1898 agreed with the Commission of 1880 that it was desirable, where convenient, to relieve artisans of whom weavers are the most numerous, through their own trades, one of their reasons being that it is important to maintain all crafts by which people are supported independently of agriculture. They were also of opinion that a carefully managed, businesslike scheme is not open to any of the objections usually urged against this class of relief ; and that it would probably not result in a greater loss to Government than that caused by employing the weavers on the ordinary relief works. This opinion is more than confirmed by experience, and is now, we believe, accepted in every province except Bombay."

I dare say that the Bombay Government is influenced mostly by the mill-owners of that Presidency. Again on the next page we find the following :

"It is sometimes objected that it is useless to prop up handloom or cottage weaving in the face of mill competition. But in fact the two industries supply different wants. The coarse and durable cloths of the handlooms are still preferred in many parts of India by field workers and labourers, while the more delicate and peculiar products of those looms still hold the market."

But, since then, there has been somewhat of a change of attitude, as we see from the small pamphlet issued, probably for the use of Members of this House, by the Bombay Millowners' Association, under the heading, "Indian Cotton Textile Industry. Need for Protection". I refer to page 61 therein. The Bombay millowners discovered that the Government were not anxious to accept the majority recommendations of the Tariff Report and that they were determined to turn it down. They were alive to the situation and expressed their views in these words :

"We do not wish to make light of the fact that the handloom industry should above all be protected. But we maintain that the best method of protecting both the mill industry and the handloom industry is by eliminating the unfair Japanese competition which cuts at the very root of the home industry. Japan is deliberately selling her yarn at low prices with a view to oust the home product so that once she has established herself in the market, she could raise the prices to the level she chooses. We have seen that the Tariff Board itself was fully alive to this well-known economic fact."

The reference made here is to this passage in the Tariff Board's Report on page 170 :

"From the point of view of the consumer therefore, the imposition of differential duty against unfair competition merely hastens the rise in prices which would in any event be brought about by the play of normal economic forces."

I submit, therefore, that the millowners have conceded the fact that nothing should be done in this House by the Government to impair the handloom industry. Then, what is there left outstanding which would gain the support for this Bill except the total rejection of the Bill as it stands ? We take it that the millowners themselves are also alive to the situation and they are at one with us who want to protect the handloom industry when we say that the Bill, while it does not give adequate protection to the millowners, actually affects adversely the handloom industry to a very large extent. There is also this fact that the majority of the Tariff Board favoured this view that no duty on yarn ought to be imposed ; but if at all, a bounty can be suggested ; and lastly I would submit that my Honourable friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar has said that there are three classes of mills in this country. Let us confine our attention to those that take to spinning alone. Supposing they take to-morrow to weaving also ; that would necessitate the handloom industry seeking for imported yarn ; and if you raise by this Bill the duty on imported yarn it would mean that the effect would be adverse upon them ; and there would also be internal competition which would necessarily mean deterioration first, probably decay next and then death ultimately. So for these reasons I oppose the motion made by the Honourable the Commerce Member.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I am sorry I have not yet heard anything in support of the motion except what Sir George Rainy spoke in moving the consideration. He did it in a halting manner, as if he was not sure himself of the grounds he was treading on.

The position, however, comes to this, that the mill industry in this measure does not get a good chance and the handloom industry is going to be ruined. I am not an expert economist but I was at any rate influenced to believe that in some way some protection is necessary for the mills, but then I never thought that any protection should be contemplated with regard to something which may be called half raw. I consider yarn as a half raw material. The imported yarn is used by mills to a certain extent but the major portion of the yarn in question here is used by the handloom weavers practically as raw material, and as we know handloom weavers are gradually dying, it is simply cruel and unjust to deprive them of the means of their living.

It has been said that the handloom industry is not a national industry. The statement is not quite without some foundation. There is a view, on account of this crushing Western industrialism, which is growing throughout the world among a class of people, that only the mills should remain and that cottage industries like handlooms should be destroyed. We all know that the agricultural nations with teaming rural populations strenuously strive against it, but I do not know whether even Members for Labour, like my friend Mr. Joshi, have seriously considered the very dislocation of society which await such nations if Western industrialisation is superimposed with unreasonable haste and without a proper study of existing conditions. What will follow if in India the handloom is destroyed ? In this connection Japan has been quoted by my friend Mr. Mehta. He said that the mill industry was protected in Japan, and in some 3 or 4 decades—nay even in 15 years (I am grateful to my friend Mr. Mehta for the correction), Japan has been able now practically to monopolise the Indian market in yarn from 31 to 40 counts. My friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar also says that if Japan wants, she can reduce her prices, and dump the Indian market with yarn only for the sake of retaliation, as it were. Yes, I think it is possible. But what has the Government done in Japan ? They don't leave the problem of unemployment in villages unsolved, or unconsidered like the Indian Government. They have carefully organised mill industries in village centres, so that the evils of hasty industrialisation do not affect the nation. Ours is a vast agricultural country. I do not know when the day will come when our Government will likewise organise small industries in village centres so that the grave question of our national unemployment may be on the way to be solved.

[Pandit Nilakantha Das.]

We have seen that the handloom industry has been already damaged by the abolition of the cotton excise duty. Mr. Mehta calls it a legitimate abolition. I grant it to him. But I do not know, what this measure, this illegitimate protection of yarn according to Mr. Mehta, will mean to our poor handloom weavers. We all know that they work day and night, morning and evening, day after day, without rest, leisure, or recreation. We are providing in this Bill against the Japanese double shift labour. But the poor handloom weaver in our villages works actually with not only double, or treble, but with quadruple shifts, or even more. He works night and day, man, wife and children, and as my friend Mr. Duraiswamy has queerly put it, even babies, all engaged. They all work to get how much ? Less than 3 annas per day.

I come from a part of the country where I have daily experience of the ways of these weavers. They are getting rapidly out of employ ment and are being turned into beggars in numbers every day. In my boyhood days I found them a happy and prosperous artisan class, but if you come to my part of the country you will find that 60 to 80 per cent. of the beggars are of these weavers. They are beggars not by choice but by compulsion and for want of employment. They are also going in numbers to foreign lands in search of employment. But alas ! no one knows what fate awaits them there ! The best that they can have, may not even be better than the fate of Indians in South and East Africa. They have no place here, nor there. What will they do ?

Now for argument's sake, I will admit that you may support the mill industry by any means you like. But it is the duty of the Government to look at this question of unemployment which is daily increasing at an alarming rate. If this measure is introduced, what will be the effect. The Government say that it will affect the handloom industry only to the extent of 12 lakhs of rupees. But my Honourable friend Mr. Duraiswamy Iyengar has proved that it will never be 12 lakhs ; it will be somewhere near 40 lakhs. I will not be surprised, if it is even more. The organised millowners will put higher prices on even lower counts. They will not rest content with raising it to 12 annas 3 pies, as my Honourable friend has put it. They may even raise it to 13 annas. There is nothing to prevent them from doing so. If they try in an organised manner, they may do that. But who will pay this additional price ? It has been said that it will affect the pockets of the consumer. I know, as a matter of fact, that it will affect only the handloom weavers. I have seen with my own eyes, the whole family labour 2 or 3 days and weave 2 or 3 cloths. Then comes the question of finding a purchaser. The father or any male member of the family knocks from door to door in the neighbouring villages for a customer. Do you ever think, Sir, that under such circumstances this additional duty will at all be transferred to the consumer, for the supposed reason that he wants quality ? I clearly find that a greater portion if not the whole of it will be paid by the handloom weaver himself. This burden can never be transferred to anybody else. Such being the case, is it not better and more just to tax the handloom directly to pay the mills ? One pound of yarn gives 4 yards of cloth—the product of one day's labour for a family. At the rate of one anna it comes to a yearly tax of Rs. 20 per loom. Can you, Sir, conceive it ?

Then, what happens ? Our handlooms will inevitably lie idle in thousands and lakhs. Terrific unemployment will be the order of the day. If the Government of India in the Commerce Department are going to create it, then I do not know what the Industry Department will do to face it. There have been on other occasions several questions about unemployment and we were complacently assured there was none. But this kind of evasive dose will no longer have its desired effect, when the disease will grow intensely acute.

I submit, Sir, further that this question is not only one concerning the Commerce or Industry Department of the Government of India, but it also concerns the Provincial Governments. The opinions of all the Local Governments are here in those volumes. They were buried in the Library, and nobody saw them, as is put by my friend Mr. Duraiswamy Iyengar. My friend wants the credit of exhuming them from that burial. Let him have the credit. I don't grudge it. He has just quoted, however, opinions from Madras to Assam. Almost all the Local Governments, it is found, are against this protection. In fact, every Provincial Government is against this measure because it affects the cause of handloom weavers, and especially my province of Bihar and Orissa is the most affected in this respect. The Government as well as the Director of Industries of that Province have expressed very strong views against this duty on yarn. According to some calculations, 28 per cent. of the total cloth consumed in India is produced and supplied by the handloom. Others calculate it to be 26 per cent. Thus we have 26 to 28 per cent. of our cloth produced by handloom weavers in this country. But so far as my province of Bihar and Orissa is concerned, it is 40 per cent. I may say that our province has no mills at all. If this measure is passed, we shall be faced with the problem of unemployment all the more. The province of Bihar and Orissa, besides, has got to manage many flood stricken and famine stricken areas. As Honourable Members are aware flood and famine are a regular feature of my province. Consequently my province of Bihar and Orissa is very strongly against this measure.

I am glad that Provincial Governments are in this connection so well alive to their own interests, but I do not know what the Commerce Department is doing with the opinions of all these provinces. We, the representatives of Bihar and Orissa as well as those others whose provinces are likewise more directly affected, cannot think of voting for this motion. I am here to oppose this motion and support the motion of my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy, which amounts practically to the same thing in a different form of language. In this connection, I should however like to know how the Government are going to guide the votes of official Members who represent the various Local Governments, and particularly of the member who represent the Government of Bihar and Orissa. Those officials who come from Bihar and Orissa represent the Government of that province and they are presumably bound by the opinions forwarded by that Government and they must give their votes in accordance with the wishes of the Bihar and Orissa Government. And so also are the representatives of other Local Governments to be guided by their proper mandates, so to say. But we all know, as a matter of fact, how the Government Whips canvass votes. They manage to whip everybody mercilessly and without consideration. We also whip ourselves. (Laughter.) But our whip is not so vigorous. We often keep questions open. (Hear, hear.) I should like to know whether the Honourable the Leader of the Government Party in this House is going to make this question an open one, at least so far as the representatives of the Provincial Governments are concerned. (Hear, hear.) There is my Honourable friend Rai Bahadur Shyam Narayan Singh who represents my province. I should like to know whether the Government is going to allow him to vote in accordance with the wishes of the province he represents or in accordance with the wishes of the Government of India. (Laughter and Applause.) It will be very unfair if the representatives of Provincial Governments are in this particular business to be led by the nose into the lobby. I know my Honourable friend Shyam Narayan Singh is to-day busy as usual in the corridors and lobbies canvassing and collecting votes for the Government. (Laughter.) But I don't understand him. This kind of duty on his part, specially in this particular matter, is unthinkable. I may say, it is simply exasperating. I cannot conceive how the representative of the Government of my province should collect votes in support of this measure, not to speak of his own voting for it himself. In this particular case, there is no reason why my Honourable friend Mr. Shyam Narayan Singh should go contrary to the opinion expressed by the Government of the province which sent him here. (Hear, hear and laughter.) In justice and fairness the Leader of the Government party in this House should allow the representatives of Provincial Governments to vote as they like. In spite of this honest exasperation which I cannot but feel on this occasion, I appeal to the Leader of the Government party to be just to Local Governments, and permit their representatives to exercise their free and unfettered vote according to their own light and sense of duty. There must be complete freedom of voting in this matter.

[Pandit Nilakantha Das.]

I pathetically picture to myself specially the condition of handloom weavers in my province if this measure passes out of this House. My Honourable friend Sir George Rainy having served in my province of Bihar and Orissa might have very well known the conditions of my province. As the Commerce Member of the Government of India, I am sorry, to-day he is introducing this measure. But when he was in the Bihar Government, I am sure, he had opportunities to come into daily contact with the peasants and artisans of my province, and let him for a moment throw off the garb of a Commerce Member, and honestly as a man say how this measure will affect the handloom weavers there. Last of all I appeal to the House on behalf of the voiceless handloom weavers who have practically no real representatives, so to say, in this House to safeguard their interests, that they may not be led away to damage the defenceless toiling millions for an imaginary benefit of a few who know best how to protect themselves. This House entirely consists of rich men, millowners, lawyers, zemindars and several others many of whom have perhaps no time or occasion to picture to themselves how the poor toil in fields and villages, in mud and mire, even with one scanty meal a day. The Government who sometimes pose themselves in International Conferences as their trustees against the exploitation of the rich and the powerful are seldom, if ever, found honest in their professions of that kind. The poor and the voiceless, therefore, go practically unrepresented. And it is in their name and for their sake that I again appeal to the House to rise up to their real duty, and help those that are in need of help.

With these words, I oppose the motion of the Honourable the Commerce Member and support the motion of my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : With your permission, Sir, I desire to make a statement regarding the Government business which we propose to place before the House to-morrow and Thursday. In view of the fact that it is not possible, in the present circumstances, to resume consideration of the Reserve Bank Bill this week, the Government consider it important to dispose of some at any rate of the business which would normally have come up during next week. We propose, therefore, to-morrow, Wednesday, the 7th, in the first place, to complete the disposal of the Indian Tariff (Amendment) Bills, the Bamboo Paper Industry (Protection) Bill, the Indian Securities (Amendment) Bill and the Volunteer Police Bill, or any of those Bills which have not been disposed of to-day, and the further consideration of the motion relating to accommodation in New Delhi. Thereafter, we propose to make the following motions :

(1) that the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes (Amendment of sections 2, 23, 28, etc.), be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon ;

(2) that the Bills to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and to supplement the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, which have already been published under rule 18 of the Indian Legislative Rules, be introduced ;

(3) a motion will be made to take into consideration, and, if that motion is passed, to pass the Forest Consolidation Bill, as reported by the Select Committee ;

(4) a Resolution will be moved for the appointment of a Committee to examine and report on the system of censorship of cinematograph films.

Thereafter, Sir, the Government propose to give time for the consideration of the Report of the Select Committee on the amendments to the Standing Orders which was presented to the Assembly during the Delhi Session.

On Thursday, the 8th, we propose to dispose of any Government business remaining over from the preceding day and thereafter to undertake the following business :

(1) a motion to take into consideration and, if that is passed, to pass the Indian Lighthouse Bill, as passed by the Council of State ;

(2) motions to take into consideration and pass the Bill further to amend the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, as passed by the Council of State ;

(3) similar motions as regards the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909, as passed by the Council of State ;

(4) motions to take into consideration and, if those motions are passed, to pass the Bills further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, and to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1922.

Thereafter, motions will be made to move two Resolutions regarding :

(a) the draft Conventions concerning seamen's articles of agreement and the repatriation of seamen, and

(b) recommendations of the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations concerning the repatriation of masters and apprentices and general principles for the inspection of the conditions of work of seamen.

Thereafter, we propose to give time for further consideration of the Report of the Select Committee on the amendments to Standing Orders.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, if the Government will put down the Select Committee's Report on Standing Orders on Thursday if it is not reached on Wednesday ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am afraid, not. We must take precautions to see that the Government business which is not otherwise taken next week shall not be shut out altogether.

Mr. President : I thought the Honourable Member would ask the Leader of the House whether Friday would be available !

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 7th September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 7th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Mr. D. G. Mitchell, M.L.A. (Legislative Department : Nominated Official).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

MEDICAL EDUCATION IN AJMER-MERWARA.

892. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Will Government state, if there is a Medical College in Ajmer-Merwara ?

(b) If not, what arrangements have Government made for the medical education of students from Ajmer-Merwara desirous of getting it ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Lucknow Medical College maintained by the United Provinces revenues refuses to admit students from Ajmer-Merwara on the same terms as those from the United Provinces, but insists on the Ajmer-Merwara students paying tuition fees, which the United Provinces students are not required to pay ?

(d) If so, what is the amount of those fees ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No.

(b) Students from Ajmer-Merwara who require medical education have to obtain admission to medical schools and colleges elsewhere.

(c) and (d). The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

CUTTING OF THE RAILWAY LINE ABOUT THREE MILES FROM BALASORE RAILWAY STATION.

893. Mr. B. C. Roy : (a) Are Government aware that some people in order to save their houses from further inundation were cutting the railway line about three miles from the Balasore railway station ?

(b) Is it a fact that railway lines without sufficient outlet for the discharge of water are one of the causes of flood and accumulation of water ? If so, what action do the Government propose to take in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information asked for is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

Mr. B. C. Roy : Sir, I beg to withdraw the following questions.

Mr. President : All the remaining questions standing in the Honourable Member's name ?

Mr. B. C. Roy : Yes, Sir, Nos. 894-898.

†899*—903*.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE CALCUTTA CHORD RAILWAY (BALLY BRIDGE CONSTRUCTION).

904. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) What arrangements have been made in the matter of construction of the Calcutta Chord Railway (Bally Bridge construction) ?

(b) What is the total estimated cost of the works, and how much thereof is to be entrusted to private contractors ?

(c) Have tenders been called for from private contracts in the matter if so, with what result ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The work has been put in hand and is making very good progress. The latest figure of the cost of the bridge is about Rs. 2½ crores. A large proportion of the work will be done by contract, but I am unable to say at this stage exactly how much.

(c) Tenders for the caissons were called for and two suitable tenders were accepted. The design of the steel work for the girders is not yet completed, as tenders have not yet been invited.

RETRENCHMENT BY THE BENGAL-NAGPUR RAILWAY OF WORKMEN EMPLOYED IN THE WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

905. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether it is a fact that the Railway Board has instructed the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities to make retrenchment in the number of workers in the workshops at Kharagpur ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state the exact terms of their instructions ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to explain the reason for such instructions ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No. The position is that the Bengal Nagpur Railway Administration, though their workshop methods at Kharagpur have not yet been completely reorganised, have carried out certain improvements which, coupled with a diminution in the amount of repair work to be done, enable them to effect a reduction of about 2,000 men in the labour force of about 12,000 men in the workshops there.

(b) and (c): Do not arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Am I to understand, Sir, that the Railway Board had no correspondence with the Bengal Nagpur Railway on this subject ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We had no correspondence, Sir. The Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway came to Simla and saw the Railway Board sometime towards the end of July, and informed us that this reduction of 2,000 men was necessary and discussed with us the manner in which it could be carried out.

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers thereto will be found at pages 4051—58 of these proceedings.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is the Honourable Member aware that the Superintendent of the Workshop of the Bengal Nagpur Railway told the Union that this was being done under the orders of the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not received notice of any such statement but the facts are exactly as I have told the House.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask the Honourable Member to inform the House what improvements the Honourable Member refers to which enabled the Railway Board to do with a smaller number of people ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not details of the improvements, Sir, but I understand that Mr. Cole, the Chief Mechanical Engineer, or the officers under him have designed new methods of work in the shops. I shall have to ask for notice if the Honourable Member wants to know exactly what improvements have been made in the workshops.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, why the renewals and repairs are diminished this year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Because, as I think the House is aware, on most railways repairs were very behindhand throughout the period after the War and we have now on the Bengal Nagpur Railway, as on other Railways, caught up those arrears to a very large extent.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member if any of the permanent workmen who were involved in the last strike have been brought under the axe ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Judging from the latest telegraphic information I have from the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, there has been so far, up to yesterday or the day before, no actual action taken to discharge these 2,000 workers because, as the Honourable Member will learn from a reply that I shall give to a subsequent question, at present we are at the stage of voluntary resignations. I should like to take this opportunity of saying that there is no intention whatsoever in the mind of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Administration, as the House I am sure will know that there is not in the minds of the Railway Board, of any victimisation.

RETRENCHMENT BY THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY OF WORKMEN EMPLOYED IN THE WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

906. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact,

(a) that the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities have issued a communiqué in which they have stated their intention to discharge 2,000 men ?

(b) that 200 men are already discharged ?

(c) that among the men discharged there are some men who have worked regularly for more than 15 years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities issued a notice intimating that the number of men employed in the Kharagpur workshops would be reduced. I lay a copy of the notice on the table. It invited voluntary resignations from the men and offered certain privileges to those who resigned, but it also pointed out that in the event of an insufficient number of men resigning voluntarily it would be necessary to resort to compulsory retirements. I may mention that though, in the notice, the 27th August, 1927, was given as the date before which voluntary resignations must be received, this date was subsequently extended to the 7th of September, 1927. I should also mention that the Agent of the Railway was in close touch throughout with the Labour Union and kept them fully informed of the methods whereby the reduction in staff would be effected.

I should perhaps add to that that on, I think, the 21st of August, the Agent met the Labour Union and discussed fully with them certain points which they wished to put forward with regard to the way in which these resignations or these retirements should be effected and that on a very considerable number of these points he met their wishes. He has throughout kept very closely in touch with the authorities of the Labour Union in this matter.

(b) and (c). 178 men were, I understand, discharged some time before the issue of this notice because there was not work for them. Discharges were then suspended, since in view of the considerable reduction, which it was found necessary to effect, the Agent considered that before proceeding further he should let the Labour Union know what action was proposed. Government are not aware of the exact length of service of these 178 men, but it is quite possible that some of them had more than 15 years' service.

DRAFT NOTICE.

With effect from 30th September, 1927, the number of men employed in Kharagpur workshops will be reduced.

2. Special benefits will be given to men who voluntarily resign before 27th August, 1927. Such men will be granted all leave, gratuity and Provident Fund bonus that may be due to them under the rules and in addition they will receive a bonus of one month's pay. They will be granted service certificates stating particulars of service, and reason for leaving "Resigned of own accord", not "Discharged on reduction of establishment". Those men will be permitted to leave immediately on their giving notice or at any time thereafter up to one month from the date of their notice.

3. In the event of an insufficient number of men resigning voluntarily under the above terms, the necessary reduction will be made from amongst men approaching or past the age of 55, excepting individuals who may be specially required in the interests of the Company's service, and from others by selection.

4. Men thus compulsorily retired will be given one month's notice and such gratuity, Provident Fund bonus and leave benefits as may be due to them under the rules, but no bonus of a month's pay.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that the Labour Union requested the Agent to reduce, if necessary, first the junior men instead of reducing the senior men ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have no information to that effect, Sir. The Labour Union made certain inquiries whether employees with short service, who were brought under reduction, would get a gratuity. But I find nothing in the memorandum which has been given to me of the conversations between the Agent and the Union which suggests that they put forward that request.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Railway Board will recommend to the Bengal Nagpur Railway Agent that persons who have been engaged during this year should first be reduced before people who have put in longer service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will consider the Honourable Member's suggestion and bring it to the notice of the Agent of the Railway. I must point out, however, that, I think probably quite advisably, the first men the Agent proposes to retire are those who are nearing the age for retirement, i.e., nearing the age of 55. I am not sure that it will be desirable to alter that particular provision in the manner suggested by the Honourable Member.

Mr. B. Das : Are Government aware that owing to the floods there is already severe distress in the district of Midnapur and the districts of Chota Nagpur and Orissa, and in view of the fact that any retirement of the staff on the Bengal Nagpur Railway will affect the people inhabiting those districts and enhance the distress of the Oriya people as well, will Government see their way to recommend to the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities not to reduce the staff, at least under the present distressing conditions ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I could not recommend to the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway to continue to keep on staff for whom there is no work.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member recommend that these men be utilised in any other capacity on the Bengal Nagpur Railway, especially in the affected area where the railway lines are breached ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Is the Honourable Member asking whether I will recommend to the Agent that any man who has been discharged from the Kharagpur Workshops should be given other employment on the Railway in places where they can find him suitable employment ? I think it is almost certain that the Agent has already taken that into consideration, but I will convey the suggestion to him.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly state whether the Railway Board has any authority to interfere with the personnel of Company-managed Railways and whether it considers it advisable to interfere with the personnel of Company-managed Railway Workshops ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware, Sir, that any charge of interference with the personnel of these workshops has been levelled against the Railway Board. We have been acting entirely in consultation with the Agent, who himself consulted us Our relations with the authorities of Company-managed Railways are extremely intimate, and they would certainly consider themselves bound to consult us when action of this sort has to be taken.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities, while discharging old workers, have been extending the service of men who are over 55 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the Honourable Member will wait, there is a further question, on which, though it does not exactly answer his question, I think that it will more appropriately arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the supplementary question of my gallant friend, Colonel Gidney, may I ask the Railway Board whether most of the capital of the Company-managed Railways is supplied by the Government of India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : That is so.

Mr. K. Ahmed : One supplementary question, Sir. In view of the fact that more workmen will be required for the repair of the damages caused by the floods, do Government propose for the benefit of these workmen and for the benefit of the country, to keep these men on until the works are finished and the damages are repaired ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I can find very little connection between work which is done by skilled artizans in the Kharagpur workshops and the earth work which is being done on mending the lines on the East Coast section. I have already said that I will convey the suggestion to the Agent of the Railway that, if possible, other work should be found for these men on the Railway.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I inquire whether the Railway Board will consider the suggestion of the Labour Union that instead of reducing the men all at once, they should wait for vacancies taking place in the natural course ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think I have already answered that I am afraid the Railway Board cannot justify the continuance of employment in the Kharagpur workshops of men for whom there is no work.

EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY THE BENGAL-NAGPUR RAILWAY ON SUPERIOR OFFICERS AND SUBORDINATE SUPERVISING STAFF.

907. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are Government aware that during the last three years their expenditure on the Bengal Nagpur Railway for superior officers and for subordinate supervising staff has gone up considerably ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state by how much the above expenditure has gone up ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Final figures of the expenditure on superior and subordinate supervising staff on the Bengal Nagpur Railway for 1926-27 are not yet ready, but I will send the Honourable Member the information that he requires as soon as they come in.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether, if the expenditure on the superior and subordinate supervising staff has gone up considerably, the Railway Board will be prepared to reduce that expenditure ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We should only be prepared to reduce expenditure if it was thought that it was not being wisely incurred. I think, when the Honourable Member sees the figures, he will find that there has been a considerable drop in expenditure last year as compared with the year before.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : My question was whether the expenditure has not gone up during the last few years, and if the expenditure has gone up, whether the Government of India will reduce that expenditure.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the Honourable Member's question is that we addressed the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, as well as the Agents of all other Railways, to see whether they could not, by revising their arrangements, and without loss of efficiency, succeed in obtaining a reduction of administrative charges.

RATES FOR DAILY WAGE STAFF IN WORKSHOPS OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

908. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state whether after the last strike of the Bengal Nagpur Railway employees any improvement in the conditions of service of the workers has been made and, if so, will they be pleased to state what it is ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes. The pay of workers drawing under eleven rupees per mensem has been raised in all departments except the Locomotive Department where proposals are under final examination. Meanwhile, the Chief Mechanical Engineer has already been authorised to adopt from the 1st September the following minima rates for daily wage staff in workshops :

Skilled labour, twelve annas a day,

Unskilled adult men, nine annas a day.

DISCHARGE OF OLD WORKMEN OF THE WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

909. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state whether :

(a) while old workers are being discharged in the Kharagpur workshops, some new workers are being engaged ?

(b) articles manufactured in the shops are being obtained through contractors ?

(c) articles manufactured in the workshops are being obtained from foreign countries ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) Certain articles such as bolts and nuts below three quarters of an inch diameter and some casting, etc., have always been obtained through contractors. Probably what the Honourable Member wishes to know is whether there has been any recent alterations of practice. If so, the answer is in the negative.

(c) Here again there has been no alteration of the practice on the Bengal Nagpur Railway, which is much the same as that of other Railways.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah : May I ask, Sir, whether the Bengal Nagpur Railway have been discharging old workers and at the same time granting extensions to those who have completed the age of 55 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Not so far as my information goes, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether it is not a fact that articles so far manufactured in the Kharagpur workshops are now ordered to be obtained either through contractors or through foreign countries ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information given me by the Agent of the Railway, which I have just read out to the House, appears to me to show that that is not the fact, for he states there has been no alteration in the practice.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Though there may not be an alteration in the practice, there may be alteration in the amount of the articles made in Kharagpur, and I want to know whether the Railway Board will be willing to convey the sense of this House that it is not right and that it is not in the interests of the workers of this country that they should get these articles from foreign countries.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not sure that I understand to what articles the Honourable Member refers, nor am I sure that he expresses the sense of this House.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : The Honourable Member is aware that this House has given protection to many industries ?

DISCHARGE OF 12 CLERKS BY THE LOCOMOTIVE AUDITOR AT KHARAGPUR, BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

910. Mr N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the Loco. Auditor at Kharagpur has in the name of economy discharged 12 clerks and purchased equipment and machinery worth nearly Rs. 50,000 and is incurring an additional monthly expenditure of about Rs. 1,000 ?

(b) Do Government propose to enquire into this matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A reference has been made to the Railway Administration, but up to the present no reply has been received. The information will be communicated to the Honourable Member on receipt.

NUMBER OF INDIAN GUARDS AND DRIVERS ON PASSENGER TRAINS ON THE MAIN LINE OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

911. Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the reply given to my unstarred question No. 29, dated 18th August 1927, will Government be pleased to enquire how many Indian guards and drivers are running on the main line of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway for passenger trains, and if there are none, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will obtain the information for the Honourable Member.

NUMBER OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES DISCHARGED AFTER PERIODICAL MEDICAL EXAMINATION DURING THE YEAR 1926.

912. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) With reference to the reply to my unstarred question No. 38, dated 18th August 1927, will Government be pleased to enquire how many men in railway service were discharged after periodical medical examination during the year 1926 ?

(b) Will they also be pleased to state how many of the men discharged were Indians and how many Europeans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will obtain the information for the Honourable Member.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

BOOKING OF MOTOR CARS AND LIVE STOCK FROM DIGHA GHAT, BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY, ACROSS THE RIVER DURING THE RAINS.

899. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) If they are aware that booking of motor cars and live stock from Digha Ghat, Bengal and North-Western Railway across the river remains closed during the rains ?

(b) If so, for how many months in the year ?

(c) What other course is open to the public to send live stock and motor cars during the period ?

(d) Is it a fact that the other routes for their transport are very costly ?

(e) Do Government propose to take necessary steps to give relief to the public in this connection ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Enquiry has been made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member.

REPORT OF THE INDIAN SUGAR COMMITTEE.

900. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) When did the Indian Sugar Committee submit its Report ?

(b) If it has, what action have the Government taken since the submission of the Report ?

(c) If not, when is the Committee expected to submit the report ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) In 1921.

(b) A statement showing the action taken by Government on the Reports is laid on the table of the House.

(c) Does not arise.

X.—ACTION TAKEN BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INDIAN SUGAR COMMITTEE.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
I.—General Agricultural Recommendations.
Recommendation No. 225.—The importance of agricultural engineering should be recognised by the incorporation of Agricultural Engineers in the I. A. S.	The Government of India abandoned the proposal to include the Agricultural Engineers in the cadre of the I. A. S.
Recommendation No. 230.—The mycological needs of cane will be met, if laboratory facilities are provided at the Sugar Research Institute and when necessity arises, a Mycologist from Pusa is lent to the Institute.	Action on these was postponed pending the creation of an all-India Entomological Service.
Recommendation No. 231.—An additional Entomologist should be appointed to the Pusa staff principally for the investigation of cane pests throughout India.	The consideration of this proposal has been postponed pending the receipt of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
Recommendation No. 232.—The power of the Imperial Sugarcane Expert to import cane from other countries without a certificate of freedom from disease should be transferred to the Director of the Sugar Research Institute when it is created.	The Sugar Research Institute has not been established yet.
Recommendation No. 233.—Till then the power should also be given to the officer in charge of the Research Station at Shahjahanpur.	This recommendation has been given effect to.
Recommendation No. 234.—The water requirements of cane should be investigated on all agricultural stations working on cane.	Left to local Governments for necessary action.
Recommendation No. 235.—The establishment of the proposed research station in the Punjab for the investigation of the water requirements of all crops should be expedited and a Soil Physicist or Physical Chemist should be placed in charge.
Recommendation No. 236.—The possibility should be considered of meeting the cost of lining canals on which a concentrated cane area is to be served by increasing the water rates.
Recommendation No. 237.—The system of selling irrigation water by volume has great advantages and conditions are more favourable for its adoption than when the Irrigation Commission first expressed their preference for it when practicable.	Under consideration by the Public Works Department.
Recommendation No. 239.—Early action on the recommendations of the Committee on Weights and Measures is required in the interests of the cultivator.	Necessary action has been taken by the Commerce Department.
II.—Other sources of Sugar.
Recommendation No. 258.—A unique opportunity appears to be afforded of opening a combined cane and beet sugar factory in the Peshawar Valley.	Left to the local Government concerned.
III.—The Manufacture of Gur.
Recommendation No. 287.—The Industrial Commission's recommendations for the grant of loans for small or cottage industries are well suited to encourage the gur-making industry, except that the disposal of these loans should be entrusted to the Agricultural Department and not to the Department of Industries.	Referred to the local Governments who agreed to grant loans where necessary.
IV.—The Sugar Factory and its Raw Material.
Recommendation No. 313.—To enable monthly settlements to be made under the scale proposed, the Director of Statistics should issue monthly a statement of the average wholesale prices in the principal markets of white sugar manufactured in India.	This is covered by recommendation No. 375.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
Recommendation No. 319.—There are several projects for new lines in North Bihar the execution of which would be of great benefit to the factory industry there. Recommendation No. 320.—Other schemes that should be proceeded with are for branch lines or extensions in Gorakhpur (United Provinces), Kamrup (Assam), Ganjam (Madras) and Poona (Bombay). Recommendation No. 321.—On existing lines the chief need is a prompt service of open trucks with low sides.	Necessary action has been taken by the Railway Board.
Recommendation No. 322.—With the development of the industry there will be a growing need for privately owned light railways to convey cane to the factory; and the authorities controlling existing roads and railways should as far as possible afford the necessary facilities.	Necessary action has been taken by the Railway Board.

V.—Manufacture of Sugar.

Recommendation No. 342.—Government should, therefore, erect a pioneer factory in Upper India outside the present factory zone, possibly in the Karnal or Rohtak district of the Punjab. Recommendation No. 343.—It should be run on purely commercial lines by a directorate of five—a managing director. the Director of the Sugar Research Institute (ex-officio) another official nominated by Government and two non-officials nominated by the Sugar Board. Recommendation No. 344.—The nanaging director and factory staff should be recruited on special agreements and participate in profits. Recommendation No. 345.—Should Government be unable to provide the funds, a loan should be raised in the form of debentures carrying a guaranteed interest of 7 per cent free. of income-tax and a half share in all profits above 7 per cent. up to 13 per cent. Recommendation No. 346.—The Factory should be required to carry out general experiments for the benefit of the sugar industry and should receive no privileges which would not be given to a private factory.	The establishment of a pioneer factory in Upper India was postponed owing to financial stringency. It must now await the recommendations of the Royal Commission.
Recommendation No. 352.—The period of notice for the submission of tenders should not exceed six months. Recommendation No. 353.—The possibility should be considered of adopting as the contract rate a sliding scale based on the market price of the distiller's basic material.	Necessary action has been taken by the Commerce Department.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
VI.—The Tariff Question.
Recommendation No. 358.—A quantitative duty is preferable to an ad valorem duty; but the present time is not opportune for the change.	A quantitative duty (23 (D. S. and above Rs. 4-8-0 per cwt., between 8 and 23 D. S. Rs. 4 per cwt.) has been imposed with effect from the 1st June 1925.
Recommendation No. 360.—If Imperial preference is adopted generally, it should be adopted in favour of Empire sugar by means of a proportional reduction on the present tariff.	No present action is called for.
VII.—Statistical.
Recommendation No. 373.—A certain amount of re-arrangement would considerably improve the "Agricultural Statistics of India."	The changes recommended have been accepted.
Recommendation No. 374.—The "Commercial Statistics of India" should include statistics of cane crushed and sugar and molasses turned out by sugar factories.	The publication known as "Commercial Statistics of India" have been replaced by the "Statistical Abstract," in which no separate figures for sugar factories are given. It was not considered desirable to give effect to the recommendations of the Sugar Committee.
Recommendation No. 375.—The monthly sugar price returns recommended in Chapter XIX should be reproduced in "Prices and Wages in India."	Held over pending final orders on the question of the discontinuance of "Prices and Wages in India" volume.
Recommendation No. 380.—Detailed improvements are suggested in other Tables of "Prices and Wages in India".
Recommendation No. 381.—Imports and exports of sugar should be recorded in tons in the "Annual Statement of Seaborne Trade".	This is now being done.
VIII.—Formation of an Indian Sugar Board.
Recommendation No. 382.—The organisation of the Indian Sugar Industry on the Java model is essential to progress.	The establishment of a Sugar Research Institute and a Sugar Board was postponed on grounds of financial stringency and economy. It must await the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture. The question of establishing research stations in the provinces has been left to local Governments.
Recommendation No. 385.—In the first instance all members will have to be nominated by Government; but the first duty of the Board should be to evolve a scheme to secure representative appointments.
Recommendation No. 386.—Members should then hold office for three years and their tenure should be honorary.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
VIII.—Formation of an Indian Sugar Board—contd.
Recommendation No. 387.—An Imperial Sugar Research Institute should be established with three divisions, agricultural, chemical, engineering, each with its own independent head, and it should control the work on the various research stations already proposed for the provinces. Recommendation No. 388.—A director required for the administrative control of the whole Institute and to keep in touch with the sugar work of the Province. Recommendation No. 389.—In addition to the more obvious lines of work the Institute should consider the needs of the small gur manufacturer, investigate the possibilities of the beet sugar production and assist the palm sugar industry. Recommendation No. 390.—The first Director and heads of divisions should be recruited on special terms, and other officers of the research organisation as members of the Indian Agricultural Service. Recommendation No. 391.—Subsequent Directors and heads of divisions should be appointed by promotion and given the status and pay of provincial Directors of Agriculture and officers in the selection grade of the Indian Agricultural Service respectively. Recommendation No. 395.—Factories should be encouraged to maintain their own agricultural advisers provided and controlled by the Sugar Research Institute. Recommendation No. 396.—The sugar industry should be expected to contribute towards the cost of the Institute from the outset; and the first representative Board should evolve a practical system of contribution. Recommendation No. 397.—Peculiar conditions in India, especially the importance of the gur industry, preclude the complete elimination of Government interest in the Institute; and when the industry is in a position to take over the main control, its funds should be provided by a levy on factories supplemented by a Government subsidy to ensure consideration of the interests of the small grower. Recommendation No. 398.—The functions of the Sugar Board would be to control the policy of the Research Institute and the administration of its funds, to advise Government on matters affecting the sugar industry and to supervise the issue and receipt of returns by the Institute. Recommendation No. 399.—The cost of the Sugar Board would be negligible; that of the Research Institute, the sugar school and the sub-stations is estimated at 35½ lakhs non-recurring and 12 lakhs recurring; but the latter should be largely reduced by the earnings of the sub-stations.	The establishment of a Sugar Research Institute and a Sugar Board was postponed. It must now await the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture. The question of establishing research stations in the provinces has been left to local Governments.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
VIII.—Formation of an Indian Sugar Board—concld.
Recommendation No. 400.—Profits on the research stations should be devoted to the expansion of the activities of the Institute.	The establishment of a Sugar Research Institute and a Sugar Board was postponed. It must now await the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture. The question of establishing research stations in the provinces has been left to local Governments.
Recommendation No. 401.—The submission by factories to the Institute of returns approved by the Board should be made compulsory by legislation; but proceedings for default should only be taken on the complaint of the Board.
Recommendation No. 402.—The Research Institute should be located where it can serve not only the existing factory industry of Upper India but also the great cane tract further west and north: and a site in the Basti or Kheri district of the United Provinces would fulfil these requirements.
Recommendation No. 403.—The same place should be adopted as the headquarters of the Board, though the Chairman should have power in case of necessity to convene meetings elsewhere.
Recommendation No. 404.—The Sugar Bureau should be continued pending its absorption in the Research Institute.
IX.—Coimbatore.
Recommendation No. 406.—The Coimbatore cane-breeding station and the post of cane breeding expert should now be made permanent.	The Coimbatore Cane breeding station has been made permanent and brought under Imperial control with effect from 1st April 1925. Funds amounting to Rs. 1,03,600 for providing additional staff and for the purchase of land, etc., were provided during 1925-26. Additional land has been acquired and extra staff is being recruited. A sum of Rs. 1,00,000 has been provided for further expansion of the station during 1926-27. A Second Cane-breeding Officer has been appointed to conduct research on thick canes.
Recommendation No. 407.—The station should be transferred to Imperial control.
Recommendation No. 412.—More attention should be paid to the breeding of new varieties of thick canes for Peninsular India, Burma and Assam.
Recommendation No. 413.—The area of the station should, if necessary, be increased by some 25 or 30 acres for this purpose
Recommendation No. 414.—Coimbatore should also become a cane research station for South Madras.
Recommendation No. 416.—In addition to undertaking branches of work indicated in Chapter X, the research station should carry out special investigations into the water requirements of cane.
Recommendation No. 417.—A second cane-breeding station is required mainly for the raising of seedlings from parents that will not produce fertile seed at Coimbatore.
Recommendation No. 422.—The cane-breeding expert should control both breeding stations, making Coimbatore his headquarters.

Recommendations.	Action taken.
X.—Sugar Schools.
Recommendation No. 426.—One of the greatest needs of the Indian Sugar industry is a properly trained staff of chemical, engineering and agricultural assistants.	Owing to financial stringency consideration of the proposals was deferred. It must now await the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture.
Recommendation No. 427.—The specialised technical training which will qualify men to enter the sugar industry as competent workers should be provided in the country.
Recommendation No. 428.—Of the educational institutions in other countries which give courses of instruction in sugar technology the Audubon Sugar School of the Louisiana State University and the College of Hawali furnish the most instructive precedents for India.
Recommendation No. 429.—The school for India should provide a thorough training in sugar agriculture, chemistry and engineering and should form an integral part of the Sugar Research Institute.
Recommendation No. 430.—The ultimate standard of training to be aimed at should be worked up to gradually with due regard to the immediate needs of the industry.
Recommendation No. 431.—Prior to admission students should have taken the first two years' course of an Agricultural or Engineering College with some additional instruction in chemistry and physics.
Recommendation No. 432.—The Sugar School course should extend over 2½ years and three crushing seasons; and should be conducted in two sections, an agricultural section and a chemical and engineering section, though a part of the training would be common to both.
Recommendation No. 433.—Practical field and factory work should form the most prominent feature of the course; and for this purpose the school should have its own farm and small model factory.

NOTE.—Other recommendations concerned local Governments and were left to them to take such action as they considered necessary.

CREATION OF SCHOLARSHIPS FOR THE STUDY OF THE SUGAR INDUSTRY IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

901. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: (a) Are Government considering the desirability of creating scholarships for the study of the sugar industry in foreign countries?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, will the Government please give reasons?

Mr. A. R. Dalal: (a) and (b). The question of creating scholarships for the study of the sugar industry is under the consideration of the Royal Commission on Agriculture. It will be taken up by the Government of India when the recommendations of the Commission are received.

PROPOSED BRANCH LINE OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY BETWEEN MAHARAJGUNJ AND DRAULI.

902. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) When it is expected to open the proposed branch line of the Bengal and North Western Railway between Maharajgunj and Drauli in the District of Saran (Bihar and Orissa) ?

(b) Do they propose to ask the Company to expedite the completion of the scheme ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). This line has not yet been surveyed. If the Mashrak-Thawe line, which is under consideration, is taken up, it will serve the same area.

RUNNING OF THROUGH COMPOSITE FIRST AND SECOND CLASS CARRIAGE BETWEEN PAHLEZA GHAT AND THE MAIN LINE OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

903. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) If it is proposed to run a through composite first and second class carriage between Pahleza Ghat and the main line of the Bengal and North Western Railway going to Cawnpore ?

(b) Is it a fact that passengers, specially ladies, are subjected to inconvenience during the rains and cold weather by walking a long distance on the Sonepur station platform to get another train ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Enquiry has been made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member.

(b) Government have received no complaints to this effect.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

RETRENCHMENT BY THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY OF WORKMEN EMPLOYED IN THE WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

Mr. President : I have received the following notice of motion for adjournment of the House under rule 11 of the Indian Legislative Rules from Mr. M. K. Acharya :

"I desire under Rule 11 of the Indian Legislative Rules to make a motion for the adjournment of the business of the Assembly to-day (7th September 1927) for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the decision of the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities immediately to retrench 2,000 men of the Kharagpur workshops at a time when th eneighbouring parts of the country are stricken with the havoc caused by the recent floods, and while the said railway authorities are giving out on contract to private firms large quantities of work till recently done in the railway workshops by the workmen themselves."

This notice of motion came into my hands one minute before 11 o'clock. It is extremely inconvenient to every one concerned, particularly to the Chair and to the Department that Members should give such notice just at the eleventh hour. I must have some time at any rate to consider the question of admissibility to enable me to pass orders on it. I hope, therefore, that Members who desire to give notice of motions for adjournment of the House under rule 11, will at least give a few minutes to the Chair, so that the Chair might communicate with the Department concerned and have their view. This is, of course, for future guidance. As for the particular notice which I have just read to the House, I should like to know from Mr. Acharya on what date this decision of the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities was arrived at ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, from the papers that I have got, notice seems to have been given on the 15th of last month and it is to take effect before the end of this month. It is specifically stated in the notice that arrangements should be made so that the whole of the surplus is eliminated before the beginning of the Puja holidays. It says :

" The notices to the staff whose services are dispensed with compulsorily should be issued so that they will expire by the 29th September at latest ".

I got this two days ago. I was thinking over it and consulting friends as to the action that should be taken. I hope when the occasion arrives I shall be able to show that it is not only urgent but that, inasmuch as it affects the welfare of 2,000 workers and their families, it is of great public interest, and I hope I shall be able.....

Mr. President : I only want to know from the Honourable Member when the decision of the Bengal Nagpur Railway was arrived at ? On what date ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I cannot say. I have got only the letter of the Agent addressed to the Chief Mechanical Engineer giving instructions to bring about retrenchment before the 29th September at latest.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : I think, Sir, I can supply the information for which you have asked. The decision of the Agent was communicated to the Labour Union at Kharagpur on the 15th August last. I remember myself seeing in one of the Calcutta newspapers a public announcement on the subject,—in a paper which reached Simla on the 18th August. I take it, therefore, that it must have been actually published in Calcutta either on the 16th or the 17th. As regards the admissibility of the motion, Mr. President, I should like to make two submissions. In the first place, the House has heard the answers given by Mr. Parsons to the questions on this subject. I would submit that it is very difficult to say that this is a matter of public importance. I do not say that a large reduction in the labour force in a railway workshop might not be in given circumstances a matter of real public importance : but I do think that a great deal would depend upon the circumstances, and as far as I know, there is nothing in the present case which would justify the belief that it is, in fact, a matter of great public importance. It is obvious, I think, that if matters of this kind were invariably so regarded, the time of this House would be constantly taken up with discussions on subjects of this kind.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Then, on the second point, Mr. President, namely, as regards the urgency of the motion, I would submit that, since the decision of the Agent was announced as long ago as the 15th August and was actually published in the papers as long ago as the 16th or 17th August, if the matter was regarded as of such importance and urgency as to require discussion in this House it ought to have been brought up at an earlier date. The Honourable Member who has given notice of the motion has had a number of opportunities on which he could have brought the matter up, and I do submit, Sir, that it cannot now be regarded as a matter of urgency within the meaning of the rule.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : I want to say one word about the question of importance and also of urgency. The importance of the matter lies in the fact that, although most of the capital which is required for running the Bengal Nagpur Railway is provided by the Indian tax-payer, the railway authorities are sending away a number of men, while at the same time they are ordering things from abroad which could be made in the workshops. I think that the tax-payer has a right to say why Government should not follow this policy. The urgency of the matter lies in the fact that, although the notices were issued as early as the 15th August, the Union was negotiating with the Agent and I think no action could be taken for some time.

Mr. President : Unlike the Commerce Member, I am clearly of opinion that the matter is of great public importance. But I am not convinced that the matter is urgent. I should have certainly admitted this notice of motion for adjournment if it had come to me on the 18th August. The decision proposed to be questioned was arrived at on the 15th August. It was published in the newspapers on the 16th or 17th August, as Sir George Rainy has said, and there is absolutely no reason why the Honourable Member should not have given a notice of motion for adjournment on the 18th. In these circumstances.....

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Would you hear us on that point ?

Mr. President : It is not necessary to hear any more speeches. I rule that the motion is not in order.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State have, at their meeting held on the 6th September, 1927, agreed without any amendments to the following Bills which were passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 18th and 24th August, 1927 :

A Bill to amend the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926, for certain purposes.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act for a certain purpose."

BILLS PASSED BY THE COUNCIL OF STATE LAID ON THE TABLE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, in accordance with Rule 25 of the Indian Legislative Rules, I lay on the table the following two Bills which were passed by the Council of State at its meeting of the 6th September, 1927 :

1. A Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act for a certain purpose.
2. A Bill further to amend the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, 1901, for certain purposes.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (COTTON YARN AMENDMENT) BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir George Rainy on the 6th September 1927 :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla (Bombay Central Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I rise to oppose the amendment proposed by my friend Mr. Neogy. I think, Sir, my friend Mr. Neogy has not sufficiently realised the serious situation in which the mill industry of Bombay is passing. The light-hearted manner in which he dwelt on this subject shows that he has not understood the present situation at all and the arguments that he put forward are to my mind very frivolous, because he found fault with a particular millowner in Bombay regarding the purchase of coal, and therefore he says that the millowners are not sympathetic and therefore the national industry should go to ruin. That is his argument.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : How is it a national industry ?

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : I am going to show you how, if you will wait. As regards the point of the purchase of coal, if a millowner buys coal at Rs. 22 per ton in preference to Rs. 21-4-0 per ton which is to his interest I think he must have got very good reasons and I leave it to the official spokesman of the Millowners' Association, to deal with this matter in detail, but I say, Sir, that that is not the argument for rejecting the Bill which is now before us in the shape of the Report of the Select Committee. Sir, while criticising the attitude of my friend Mr. Neogy, I must say, Sir, that I was considerably surprised to find my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta supporting the amendment. Coming from Bombay and praising Bombay to the skies on the floor of this House yesterday, he has thought it his duty to request us to reject this Bill and to support the amendment, knowing full well the present situation through which the industry is passing. He said that the millowners must support the yarn Bill because beggars cannot be choosers. While saying that, he contradicted that statement the next minute. What did he say ? He said that the millowners ought to stand up and dictate to Government that, if they do not give us real protection, we will not have it. I hope, Sir, the Honourable Member will tell this House what methods the millowners or the representatives of this nation should adopt in order to compel Government to give that protection which my friend desires.

[Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla.]

Sir, there are two points which have been discussed in this House, which I think require some consideration. The first point was that the present Bill is not sufficient to protect the mill industry. The second point was that it hits the handloom industry. As regards the first point, I would just read a few lines, from the Millowners' Report to show why this yarn Bill has been justified and is necessary in the present circumstances :

"The greatest value of the duty in the opinion of the millowners is that it would act as a powerful weapon against the dumping of yarns of coarse counts which are the lifeblood of the Indian industry. Even during the last four years of depression the millowners point out that by selling their yarn at a loss they have been able to keep out imports of coarse counts, but they fear that with a continuation of the unsettled conditions of the Far Eastern markets, the Japanese and Sino-Japanese mills will attempt to dispose of the coarse yarns in India at dumping prices, which under normal circumstances would have been sold in China. Already Sino-Japanese yarns of medium counts are being sold in Bombay at 20 to 25 per cent. below the bare cost of production in India, and the latest shipments indicate that the movement is extending to yarn of counts below 20. This, to our mind, constitutes a very valid reason for supporting the duty which the Government's Bill proposes."

As regards the argument of my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta that the Tariff Board Report has said nothing about the yarn duty. They have said on the contrary that the yarn duty if levied would go against the handloom industry. I would draw his attention to page 192 where it is said :

"At the same time, it must be recognised that conditions in this respect may change and that large quantities of coarse yarn may be placed on the Indian market at prices with which the Indian mills may not be able to compete. The possibility that Japan may, owing to the disturbed conditions in China, seek an outlet for yarn of lower counts in India at such prices cannot be overlooked. Should this happen and, especially, should it happen before the industry has had time to effect the internal economies and the reorganisation we have suggested, we are of opinion that a contingency will have arisen in which an additional duty on yarn would be fully justified."

Sir, I leave the matter at that and leave it to the Members to judge why the millowners have come forward to support the Select Committee's Report or in other words the Government measure. As regards the handloom industry there is no doubt that it is going to be hit. I do not think, Sir, there is anybody in this House who will deny that statement. The point is whether the handloom industry is going to be hit to-day or whether it is going to be ultimately hit by some other causes and consequences which will be much more serious. I shall point out to my friends here who are as keen as I am about the handloom industry to read page 170 of the Tariff Board's Report :

"It should be pointed out that, even if no counterveiling duty is levied, a rise in price is inevitable since, unless Japan is able to supply all the requirements of India at the low prices at which she is able to supply part of them, it is to her interest, once she has established herself in the Indian market, to allow prices to rise to the level at which other competitors can sell without loss but which would yield her larger profits. A rise in prices in this way would, however, be far more gradual than that which would follow the imposition of a differential duty and in the meantime serious and perhaps lasting damage might have been inflicted on the home industry. From the point of view of the consumer, therefore, the imposition of a differential duty against unfair competition merely hastens the rise in prices which would, in any event, be brought about by the play of normal economic forces."

Sir, I have dealt with these two points and now I must congratulate my friend, barring these two points, on the excellent speech which he delivered. I entirely agree with Mr. Jamnadas Mehta that the Government have placed this House in a dilemma. If they had adopted the Tariff Board's recommendations they would have secured the unanimous support of this House. Instead of that, by bringing forward this yarn Bill they have created a conflict of interests, and instead of having the relief for which the millowners were fighting we are now asked to fight amongst ourselves. The millowners, as you know, Sir, asked the Government to appoint a Tariff Board to go into the question of preventing the unfair competition from Japan. What do we find now ? Instead of having the Tariff Board's recommendation to prevent unfair competition from Japan, we find that the mill industry has to fight against the representatives of the people in connection with the handloom industry. Sir, I may be permitted to mention here what the Japanese Government themselves have done for their own staple industries and what they are doing in order to safeguard their interests. I would call upon the Government, which call themselves the Government of India, to look after the interests of India and to see that the unfair competition is not allowed to go on while the staple industry of India is ruined. Sir, I will read from an extract from a Japanese financial and economic monthly for February 1927 :

" In response to any enquiry put by the Department of Commerce and Industry, the Commission on the Promotion of National Industry has recently drawn up a basic policy for laying solid foundations for the staple industries of the country and the means to be employed for carrying it out. By taking into consideration these important results of study by the Commission, the authorities of the Department of Commerce and Industry soon completed a draft of a basic policy for the helping of staple industries of the country which they had been studying. The draft policy which has already been transferred to the Legislative Bureau, will shortly be decided upon at the Cabinet Council. As a result, the financial expenditure required for the protection of industries for the financial year 1927-28 will be submitted to the Diet in the form of an additional estimate. To state in outline the basic policy for the helping of staple industries for ten to fifteen years to come (according to industry) the Government is to render pecuniary help to staple industries to the extent of roughly Yen 45,000,000 per year."

Which means 6 crores of rupees per year. Take other things about shipping companies. Here is an extract from page 191—The Indian Cotton Excise Duty :

" The leading steamship company of Japan receives an annual subsidy of 6 million yen—(which means 80 lakhs of rupees)—supposedly for carrying the mails, but it is difficult to resist the conclusion that such a huge subsidy is paid to enable the company to quote extremely low rates of freights to Japanese merchants and mills, because for a period of ten years before the late war, although this particular steamship company made a loss on each year's working, the subsidy enabled them to wipe out the loss and pay a dividend of 10 per cent. per year."

Take another instance. This is an extract from a report on the Cotton Spinning and Weaving Industry in Japan by Mr. W. B. Cunningham, His Majesty's Consul, Osaka :

" The Osaka Shosen Kaisha runs a monthly service to the East Coast of Africa, calling at such ports as Kilindini, Mombasa and Dar-es-salaam, which brings cotton to Japan. A subsidy of 400,000 yen (which means 5½ lakhs of rupees per annum) is paid to this service, which was inaugurated in 1926.

I come now to another extract about low freights :

" The freight for cotton from India to Japan is 4.56 yen per bale subject to a discount of 1.40 yen per bale to Japanese spinners. This works out at 2 pies per pound. The freight on piecegoods from Japan to India is 14.5 yen per ton less a discount of 10 per cent., which works out at 2.1 pies per pound. The total freight on both raw cotton and piecegoods thus amounts to 4.1 pies per pound, which it may be noted is the railway freight on piecegoods alone per pound from Bombay to Sholapur."

[Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla.]

I hope, Sir, that this will serve as an eye-opener to the Honourable the Commerce Member and show him that the time has arrived, if he wants to do justice to the staple industries of India, to take such measures as Japan is taking to safeguard these industries, and I will say that he will not fail in having the support of this part of the House in any measure of this kind that he may bring forward. Sir, as regards the unfair competition from Japan, I think the Honourable the Commerce Member has already admitted this fact. If he has not then the telegram from Japan which we have received here would amply show that there is no doubt about the unfair competition. Reuter's telegram of August 31st announced :

"London: Osaka Committee of Japanese Cotton Spinners' Association has decided to employ every means in its power to prevent the passage through Indian Assembly of Cotton Yarn Bill."

I think, Sir, the Honourable the Commerce Member will not forget to bring forward at a very early date the Cloth Bill which my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta is so keen about and which I think he will whole-heartedly support. As regards the question of labour, I think my friends here are already aware that the labour conditions in Japan are not the same as those of India. I have got various extracts with me here from Japan and other places.

Diwan Chaman Lall : From Anglo-Japanese sources ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member might put them on the table if he likes. (Laughter.)

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member inform us whether they are from Anglo-Japanese papers or not ?

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : No, Sir, they are not. I have here an extract from the Japanese Year Book for 1924 ; an extract from a petition presented in the Japanese Diet by women and children working in Japanese factories in 1926 urging the immediate abolition of night work.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is not that extract from an Anglo-Japanese paper ?

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : It is a petition from the Japanese women workers.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Has the Honourable Member seen the original petition ?

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : Sir, I will now turn to another point which I think is also important. As the House is probably aware, India was exporting bales of yarn to China. In 1905 we exported 6,51,870 bales of 400 pounds each. In 1925 we exported 28,623, and in six months of 1926 we find that only 3,000 bales were exported. That is due to China and Japan having mills in Shanghai and other places, and they are taking every precaution to see that the staple industries get adequate protection : every facility is provided by their Government to give them that protection which is needed to make them stand on their own legs. But here we find, Sir, that the Government is creating a conflict of interests. Sir, there is another important point that I think must be brought forward before this House, and it is this. I shall give an extract from the Asahi English Supplement, Present day Japan, 1927,—page 99 :—The Cotton Industry :

"It is also notable that the Toyo Raw Cotton Company purchased the Diamond Mill (with a spindleage of 34,552) at Bombay and began to run it under the style of the Toyo Podar Mills with a capital of two million rupees, while the Nippon Raw Cotton Company bought up several spinning and packing mills in Tanganyika and Uganda in Africa."

I am informed, Sir, that no foreigner is allowed to buy a scrap of land in Japan. And what do we find here, Sir ? Japan can purchase any amount of land, can purchase your mills, and, if the depression continues, they will become the masters of your mills here.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Why do the Bombay people send cotton to Japan ?

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : Because there is more cotton than your mills can consume. The Mill Industry is in a precarious condition and, if Mr. B. Das is not inclined to support the Bill, there will be more cotton going out of this country unless the Member wishes the mill-owners to run their mills at a loss.

Diwan Chaman Lall : What happened to your profits in the past ?

Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : Sir, I shall now conclude my speech by pointing out to this House another aspect of the question from the point of view of the cotton grower. There is a resolution in my hand passed by the Indian Central Committee, which is an all-India body, and that resolution was passed at their annual meeting in last July. What does it say :

"As it is understood that the Resolution of the Government of India on the Report of the Indian Tariff Board (Cotton Textile Industry Enquiry) is now under consideration, the Central Cotton Committee request that the whole question be considered with reference to the needs of Indian cotton growing.

Whilst expressing no opinion on the Tariff Board's recommendations they desire to emphasise the fact that a healthy and prosperous Indian cotton spinning and manufacturing industry has an important bearing on the welfare of the cotton grower and on my Committee's own efforts to improve the quality of Indian cotton."

I hope. Sir, that will be enough to show to this House why the millowners are justified in supporting the Government and why it is necessary and essential that no postponement should take place, and that if you want to give some protection to the mill industry of India, you should support the measure that is now put forward in the shape of the Select Committee's Report.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, as one of the signatories to the majority report of the Select Committee, I would like to say a few words about the reasons that weighed with me in agreeing to the imposition of the proposed additional duty on cotton yarn. In doing so, I do not think it necessary at this stage to say anything about the depressed condition of the textile industry in India and the case that has been made out for giving it adequate protection ; nor is it necessary for me to follow the Honourable the Commerce Member in his subtle and metaphysical disquisition about the difference between a safeguarding and a protecting Bill. I would like to answer some of the criticisms that have been urged against this measure by those who have taken up the advocacy of the handloom industry of India.

[Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty.]

Mr. B. Das : Are you speaking as a director of a cotton mill ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : I am speaking as a Member of this House. Sir, those who have opposed this measure have based their criticism on two main grounds ; firstly, that the Tariff Board itself did not recommend a duty upon imported yarn, and secondly, that any duty on yarn would prejudicially affect the handloom industry in India. It is true that the Tariff Board did not recommend the imposition of a duty on imported yarn ; but the Tariff Board pointed out certain circumstances which if they came into existence, would not merely justify but necessitate the imposition of a duty on cotton yarn. These circumstances have been mentioned in the passage on page 192 of the Report which my Honourable friend over there read to the House just now. In that passage the Tariff Board pointed out the possibility of Japan dumping more yarn on the Indian market on account of the disturbed conditions of China, and they have proceeded to say that under those conditions an additional duty on yarn would not merely be justified but would be absolutely necessary to safeguard the Indian textile industry. I maintain, Sir, that the conditions and circumstances foreshadowed by the Tariff Board in that passage have already come into existence. Though the Tariff Board thought that Japan, on account of the disturbed conditions in China, may dump more yarn into the Indian market, the present position is that yarn from the Chinese mills themselves is being dumped on the Indian market. For the first five months of 1926 the total import of yarn into India from China was about 8,000 lbs., and for the first five months of 1927 the total import of yarn from China amounted to two million pounds ; and in this connection I would like to draw the attention of the House to the fact that this enormous increase in the import of yarn from China took place during the first five months of the year 1927, that is long before the Government of India placed their surplus silver on the market. It is anticipated that yarn of even coarser counts might be dumped on the Indian market from China. It has been brought to my notice, Sir, that coarse yarn is actually on its way to India from China at the present moment. I therefore maintain that the contingency that the Tariff Board expected might happen has already happened, and it would therefore serve no useful purpose to say that the Tariff Board itself was against the imposition of any duty upon yarn.

I will now come to the second objection—the effect of this duty upon the handloom industry in India. Sir, the object of a protective duty is to protect an industry ; and if a protective duty is to be effective, it must be paid by somebody or other. If the protective duty is not going to affect anyone, then it ceases to be a protective duty.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Should it be paid by another industry ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : If the Honourable Member will wait, he will hear my arguments. It is therefore no use denying that anybody is going to be prejudicially affected by this additional duty on cotton yarn. But there is one inconsistency in the arguments of the advocates of the handloom industry. They would say that the effect of this duty upon the Indian textile industry is very negligible, that the benefit that would be conferred upon the mills is very small, and in the same breath they would say that the handloom industry would be killed. Well, Sir, they cannot have it both ways. If the effect on the Indian textile industry is going to be small and negligible, the prejudicial effect on the handloom industry will also be necessarily small and negligible. (An Honourable Member : "Why"?) Sir, it is certainly our duty to consider how far the handloom industry will be prejudicially affected by this additional duty. I am prepared to concede at the very outset that the handloom industry will be affected to some extent, but I am not prepared to go so far as to say that the effect of this additional duty will be altogether to kill or wipe away the handloom industry. Let us analyse what the effect of this additional duty will be upon the handloom industry. The total consumption of yarn in India is about 800 million pounds of yarn per annum. Of these 800 million pounds of yarn consumed in India about 420 million pounds are consumed by the Indian mills and 380 million pounds are consumed by the handlooms. We have therefore to appraise what would be the actual effect of this duty on the 380 million pounds of yarn consumed by the handlooms. Now, this 380 million pounds of yarn ranges into various counts, the coarser counts, the medium counts and the finer counts ; and let us try to find out what would be the probable effect of this duty on the various qualities of yarn that are used by the handloom industry. So far as the coarser counts are concerned, it is admitted that the quantity of the coarser counts that is imported into India is under 5 per cent. of the total. Such being the case, the selling price of the coarser counts will naturally be determined by the competition amongst the Indian mills themselves and not by the price of the imported coarser counts. Anyone who knows the large stocks held by Indian mills of coarser counts of yarn and the desperate efforts that they are making to get rid of this surplus stock will realise at once that by sheer competition amongst the Indian mills the price of lower counts of yarn cannot possibly be raised to any appreciable degree ; and I am therefore right in concluding that, so far as the coarser counts are concerned, the price will not be increased as a result of this duty. What about the higher counts ? So far as counts over 40s,—certainly so far as counts over 50s are concerned—the provisions of this Bill will not affect these counts. The Bill provides that the duty that will be imposed upon yarn will be either 5 per cent. ad valorem or 1½ annas per pound, whichever is higher. When you go above 50 counts, you find that the 5 per cent. ad valorem duty is higher than the 1½ anna per pound duty and therefore the price of higher counts will not be affected by this Bill. Now, this leaves us with counts between 30s, and 40s. It must at once be conceded that the price of counts between 30s and 40s will certainly be increased as a result of this duty and the effect on the handloom industry will be to the extent of the rise in price of these counts and nothing more. And what is the quantity of yarn of counts between 30s and 40s that is used by the handloom industry ? It is estimated that the maximum quantity of yarn consumed by the handloom industry of the counts between 30s and 40s is about 25 million pounds. I would ask Honourable Members to consider whether an industry which uses 320 million pounds of yarn will be wiped out and killed by a rise in price of 25 million pounds of the total quantity consumed, less than about 8 per cent. of the total quantity. Take again the money value of these 25 million pounds. Even if it is assumed that the whole of the imported duty will go to raise the price of this yarn, it will be 9 pies per pound on 25 million pounds of yarn, which means Rs. 12 lakhs ; and even supposing that the whole burden will fall on the handloom industry, the maximum effect will be Rs. 12 lakhs. Sir, what is the total produce of the handloom Industry ? I have not got accurate figures, but I am told it is somewhere in the neighbourhood of Rs. 30 crores per annum. I ask Honourable Members to consider whether in a total production of Rs. 30 crores per annum an increase of Rs. 12 lakhs in the cost of production is going to kill that industry.

12Noon.

[Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty.]

Mr. B. P. Naidu (Guntur cum Nellore : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : It is enough to kill the industry

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : It is enough to kill you and me but not the industry.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : Rs. 12 lakhs is not correct.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : I refuse to believe that as a result of the increase of Rs. 12 lakhs the handloom industry which puts out on the market produce to the extent of Rs. 30 crores is going to be hit, much less killed. The handloom weaver would naturally try to shift a part of this burden on the consumer of the cloth. Now, it is possible that the price of the cloth woven in handlooms may not appreciably go up because of the competition of foreign cloth Taking it for granted then that the handloom weaver would not be in a position to shift any portion of these Rs. 12 lakhs on to the consumer, I maintain that the burden that is imposed upon him will not have the effect of hitting him hard. Sir, as I said at the outset, somebody or other must be prejudicially affected by a protective duty ; and in a case of this nature what the House has to consider is the question of balance of advantage on either side. Here we have got the Indian textile industry, in which in Bombay alone about Rs. 45 crores of capital has been sunk, an industry in which over 3 to 4 lakhs of labourers earn their daily bread, in danger of perishing ; and here, as against it, you have got the handloom industry, employing no doubt 6 millions of people, who may be prejudicially affected to a maximum extent of Rs. 12 lakhs ; and wherein lies the balance of advantage ? Honourable friends on this side wanted to present a gloomy picture. Is it worth while for you to save a few Indian mills, in which about 3 to 4 lakhs of labourers are employed, and wipe out of existence 6 millions of handloom weavers ? Thank God, we are not placed in this dilemma conjured up by these gentlemen. The problem that we are called upon to solve to-day is much simpler. The House has to decide on which side the balance of advantage lies ; and I was convinced, Sir, that the balance of advantage in this case lay distinctly on the side of the imposition of this duty. Sir, the Government took a serious responsibility upon their shoulders in not giving full effect to the recommendations of the Tariff Board, and if as a result of the policy that Government have pursued in this matter, the Indian textile industry is to be seriously hit then Government will have very much to answer ; and I would submit to Honourable Members that they will be taking even a greater responsibility on their shoulders by rejecting this Bill. (Applause.)

Mr. William Alexander (Madras : European) : Sir, I rise to say a few words in support of this motion. It is not necessary for me to make much reference to the question of the handloom industry as my Honourable friends on the other side have practically said all that could be said on that subject. I only wish to point out that if the handloom weaver is to be penalised even to the extent of one rupee by the passing of this Bill, then that is a sufficient reason for rejecting it. Sir, I would like to say a few words with regard to the present position of this most important industry. Looking at a matter of this kind, it is necessary to visualise the whole situation. It is necessary to take the long view and to take the good with the bad. Looking at it from that point of view and turning to the figures given in the Board's Report on page 241, I would point out that for nine years, that is, 1917 to 1925, the average yearly dividend paid was 20 per cent. Now, Sir, to some of us there does not seem to be very much to complain about it in that, in fact it may be said to be a most excellent return on money invested. As regards the future, I would like to point out that since this outcry first began some of the most vital conditions surrounding the industry have changed,—and are now changing, rapidly. Firstly, this year there is a rise in the value of the raw article. During the past month or two cotton in Liverpool has advanced from 7*d.* to 1*s.* per lb., which is equal to a rise of 40 per cent. We assume that the millowners took the usual precaution of securing their supplies for a year ahead. In that case they have every right to anticipate that this year they will secure much larger profits than they have done for a long time past. Secondly, there is now stability in the rupee. Bombay millowners were always faced with the possibility—with the danger—of their markets being again flooded with cheaply bought Lancashire goods through an advancing exchange. They have now been secured against that. Thirdly, the value of the Japan yen has now appreciated in value, so much so as to be almost at par to-day. This has taken away much of the advantage which Japanese shippers had up to not so very long ago. I am quite aware that there may be something in those three points I have made which may be questioned but to some of us who have spent more years than we care to remember in very close connection with this cotton goods and yarns trade, watching all the signs in the sky of the industry, there is no doubt whatever that changes are taking place and that the Bombay millowners have not so very much to complain about and that they like all other people engaged in mercantile pursuits have just to wait for the general uplift in trade which will bring back prosperity to the industry.

And, Sir, there is a fourth point I would like to make with regard to which I do not think there can be any controversy. I refer to the increase of purchasing power which is coming to the consumer through a big harvest of plentiful crops following an unusually heavy monsoon. This result should be seen in a very few months.

And so, Sir, prospects taken all round are better than they have been for a long time past and for those reasons and looking to the danger and risk involved in raising a trade war with a country which buys from us three times the value of what we sell to them and with whom we have for many years past been on the best of terms, I trust Honourable Members of this House will support this amendment which after all only aims at preventing the passing of a piece of hasty legislation,—a course which many of us are perfectly certain Government would have reason to regret later on.

[Mr. William Alexander.]

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I do not rise to take any large part in this debate, but there is something that has just fallen from the last speaker which I should like to refer to. I might begin by congratulating him on his maiden speech which was so optimistic in character and I hope there will be many more of them because it has brought real pleasure to the heart of a Finance Member who likes optimism. The last statement that was made by the last speaker was that the only purpose of this amendment of Mr. Neogy's is to give time so that the matter may be more fully considered. Now, Sir, almost every speech that has been made in support of the amendment has been a speech not in favour of postponement but in favour of rejection and I should like to ask all those who are thinking of supporting it to remember that if they support this motion which in form is a dilatory motion, they are quite definitely supporting a motion for rejection and therefore the responsibility for the failure of this Bill to come into law will be just as much theirs if they vote for its postponement as if they were voting for its rejection. Look at the position. It is a Bill which proposes to impose a safeguarding duty for a limited period of two and a half years. The amendment proposes that the Bill be circulated for eliciting opinion. That is to say, for six months at least nothing can be done. Six months of the two and a half years will in the meanwhile, have gone by. It is perfectly clear, therefore, that a motion for deliberate postponement at this stage is nothing less than a motion for rejection. I hope that some of my friends, such as Mr. Jamnadas Mehta who represents Bombay, although from his speech of yesterday he was apparently representing Lancashire and Japan, which is a mood that I had not previously observed to be frequent with him, will take to heart what I am saying. They are perfectly entitled, if they so wish, to come to the conclusion that even this measure of safeguarding which the Government of India propose for the cotton industry is not justified. But if they think that, on the contrary, they are simply telling the Government that it is desirable that they should do more, I would ask them whether saying that a limited measure is not justified is the best way to say that a larger measure is. If the Honourable Member will forgive me, I would also remind him that it is rather dangerous for him to use the argument that he has used about the handloom industry. If Honourable Members will examine that argument about the handloom industry carefully they will see that it comes to this. Supposing you had a state of complete free trade, then special measures ought to be taken to protect the handloom industry against the mill industry. It is a very strong argument for the cotton excise duty ; and I think the Honourable Member should be careful how he uses it, and I would warn others to be careful too. I do not wish to take up the time of the House any more, but I should like just once more to bring to their notice what has happened. The Government of India have, after carefully considering the majority and minority report of the Tariff Committee and coming to the conclusion that they could not accept either in that form, came to certain conclusions to which effect has been given in another Bill now before the House.

It was then pointed out to them that, although the Tariff Board had not recommended a duty on yarn, they had definitely said that there were special reasons for safeguarding the cotton yarn industry against what they regarded as unfair competition from Japan. Taking that into account, the Government have brought forward this measure for temporarily safeguarding the cotton yarn industry. If the House comes to the conclusion that that is not desirable, well and good, that is a natural use of the House's responsibility. But do not let it think that by introducing a dilatory motion it is in any way escaping its responsibility for giving or refusing protection to the cotton industry as proposed in this Bill.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I want to congratulate the Government, not for the reason that has been advanced by another Member, but I want to congratulate the Government that they have been able to create a sort of conflict between the Members of this House and at the same time I must congratulate the Government that they have succeeded, in the first place, in hitting the Japan industries of yarn and at the same time they have been able to safeguard the Lancashire and Manchester interests. In order to prove, Sir, that they have hit directly the Japanese manufacturer of yarn, I may read a few figures from the Tariff Board's Report on page 36. There you will be pleased to notice that in 1922-23 the percentage of import of yarn from the United Kingdom was 51 per cent. while that of Japan was 48.6 per cent. In 1923-24, the import from the United Kingdom was reduced to 23.8 per cent. while the import from Japan went up to 76.8 per cent. In 1924-25 the import from the United Kingdom was further reduced to 10.2 per cent. while that of Japan went up to 89.7 per cent. In 1925-26 the import from the United Kingdom was further reduced to 7.3 per cent. and the import from Japan was increased to 92.5 per cent. And I suppose, Sir, that after a few years there is a possibility of ousting the manufacturer of yarn of the United Kingdom altogether from the Indian market. This is why I consider that the Government are so very anxious not to give effect to the recommendation of the Tariff Board ; but they have decided to levy a duty on yarn alone. I may further point out, Sir, why the Government have decided not to put a duty on piecegoods. On page 41 we find, Sir, that the import of grey piecegoods between the years 1920 and 1925 from the United Kingdom varied from 72.4 per cent. to 79 per cent., while the import from Japan has decreased from 25 per cent. to 20 per cent. That merely shows that the manufacturers of piecegoods in Lancashire and Manchester are not able to hold their own in this country, while they are unable to compete with the Japanese manufacturer of yarn. The recommendation of the Tariff Board in this respect has been clear and definite. They clearly decided that an import duty on yarn was undesirable. They have stated :

> " The majority of us consider, however, that the imposition of any import duty on yarn is undesirable in view of the effect that this would have on the handloom industry which in 1925-26 according the figures given in Appendix IV supplied 26 per cent. of the total consumption of the cloth in India."

They have clearly stated, Sir, that the import duty on yarn is not desirable. Not only that, Sir, they have pointed out that any differential duty on yarn of different counts is also undesirable. They have clearly found out that the only method of protecting the mill industry in this country is that of levying a duty on piecegoods. They have given very good arguments for that.

[Mr. Mukhtar Singh.]

"The fourth method which the majority of us favour is, therefore, that of an addition to the present ad valorem duty of 11 per cent. on all cotton manufactures other than yarn. Such a duty has, in our view, four great advantages. In the first place it gives protection against unfair competition. In the second it avoids complications arising from discrimination against particular countries. In the third, it enables funds to be found to give a definite stimulus to the development of the industry on the lines we have considered desirable, and lastly, it obviates the necessity for certificates of origin which would be necessary to ensure that the goods of foreign origin are not passed off as goods from any part of the Empire."

The Government in their Resolution stated as if the main recommendation of the Tariff Board was that of a bounty and in order to find money for the bounty it was necessary for them to impose a duty on piecegoods. Here is what the Government Resolution says :

"A majority of the Board has proposed that the import duty on cotton piecegoods should be increased from 11 to 15 per cent. for a period of three years. The primary object of this increase is to provide funds to meet the cost of the proposed bounty on the spinning of the finer counts, and of certain other proposals made by the Board, but it will also serve to reduce the rigour of the competition from Japan from which the industry suffers. No increase in the duty of yarn is recommended by the majority in view of the effect that such a measure might have on the handloom industry. The President of the Board (Mr. Noyce) does not consider that an all-round increase in the import duty on piecegoods can be justified, but has recommended that an additional duty of 4 per cent. should be imposed on all cotton manufactures, including yarn, imported from Japan for a period of three years."

From this you will be pleased to notice that the main point that has been argued in this Resolution is that the primary object of this increase is to provide a bounty for the spinning of finer counts. I would submit, Sir, that this is not the case. We find that the heading under which this recommendation has been made is "additional import duty on yarn, cloth and other cotton manufactures." And further on, when they finish their recommendations on that point, they have taken up the case of State aid and other changes in the tariff. Under that heading they have decided that it is necessary to give a bounty to yarn manufacturers. This clearly shows that they have decided definitely that it is necessary and there is no other course open to the Government to protect this industry but to levy an import duty on piecegoods. It will be incorrect to say that they decided to levy this duty simply on account of the necessity for finding funds for giving bounties to the yarn manufacturers. I would submit, Sir, that from the time the question of protection has been raised in this country, the Government have been following a very bad procedure. The Government have been able to raise money by putting up tariff walls and by hitting the consumer, but they have not tried to use that money for the development of those industries for the protection of which the tariff wall was raised.

Mr. B. Das : Hear, hear. That is my view also.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : That is why, Sir, the majority of the members of the Tariff Board have decided that this thing should be done away with If the Government raise a tariff wall for the protection of a certain industry, the whole amount so realised should be used for the protection of that industry. This is the reason why they have laid stress that the bounty system should be introduced. The Honourable the Commerce

Member has laboured at length in his speech to show that the bounty system is a very bad system and that the Bill he has given us is much better to protect the yarn industry in this country. I would submit, Sir, that there is a fallacy that lies underneath the whole argument, and it is this. May I ask whether we are protecting the yarn or whether we are going to protect the textile industry as such ? Is the yarn to be used for any purpose other than cloth making ? If we have not been able to protect our industry from the importation of cheap piecegoods from foreign countries, it is no protection at all. That is the main point to be considered. This is why the members of the Board clearly decided that it is but necessary to protect this country from the importation of cheap piecegoods. Suppose, Sir, for a moment that the spinning mills of this country are unable to produce surplus stock for the handloom industry and they consume the entire volume of cotton yarn that they produce What would happen ? Certainly the handloom industry will require the importation of cotton yarn for their manufacture of cloth, and the mill industry will in no way be a loser by this import. I would welcome the day when the whole amount of cotton yarn that is produced by the cotton mills in this country is used by themselves for the production of piecegoods. So, Sir, I do not understand why the Commerce Member lays stress on the idea that yarn should be protected. If we pass this Bill, it has been admitted by all the gentlemen who have spoken here that it will hit the handloom industry. Hitting the handloom industry means nothing else than the fact that the handloom industry will not be able to consume the surplus stock of yarn produced by the Indian mills and sell its piecegoods at a cheaper rate than the imported piecegoods. If you raise the duty on yarn and force the handloom weaver not to use certain counts, of which the price has been raised, the natural result will be that the consumption of yarn by the handloom weaver will be much less. What could you make of the surplus production of yarn by the cotton mills then ? Hitting the handloom industry in a way means nothing short of the fact that you reduce the consumption of yarn by the handloom industry, and the natural result would be that the amount of piecegoods produced in this country would be reduced further, and the importation of piecegoods from foreign countries into this country would be much more increased. It means that we invite in a way the manufacturer of piecegoods to send in more piecegoods into this country by hitting the handloom industry, and, on the other hand, we are in no way helping the mill industry of this country, because, after all, the surplus yarn that is produced, will be used by nobody else but by the handloom weaver himself. That is one reason why I submit that it is necessary to see whether it is at all required to put a duty on yarn as has been suggested in this Bill.

The other argument that has been advanced by the Honourable the Commerce Member is that the bounty is very inadequate. It works to 1 4|5th pie per pound while the Bill suggests that it will be one anna and six pies. I submit that this is also another fallacious argument. I have tried to calculate how much surplus yarn will be available for the handloom industry in this country. It has been suggested that the total yarn of 31s. to 40s. used in this country is about 50 million pounds, out of which about half is used by the handloom industry. The point is how much surplus is there left in the Indian cotton mills which is available for sale in this country. According to the Commerce Member it comes to about 10 per cent. of 25 million pounds, that is, about 2.5 million pounds. According to the figures I have been able to find out from the Tariff Board Report, it is only 19.7 million pounds. It has been repeated in several places that 19.7 million pounds is the production of Indian mills of cotton yarn of counts from 31*s*. to 40*s*. I have tried to calculate and I find that the average production for the 11 years comes to 18.6 million pounds per year. If there has been an increase in this year, and if it is totalled and divided, it will make a very small and negligible increase. So, we find, that the total yarn that is produced by the Indian cotton mills is consumed by them, and they consume over and above that about 6 million pounds. If this is a correct figure, then we are also forcing the mills to purchase yarn at a higher price than they are purchasing to-day. If it is not so then in the other case, I would submit that, according to the best figures that have been given, there would be only a surplus of 2.5 million pounds which will be available for sale, and for the protection of this amount we are putting this duty on the importation of yarn. If that is so, the amount of help in both the cases will work out to exactly the same figure. That clearly shows that the bounty system is in no way less efficacious than the system that has been proposed. It has been admitted practically by all that the handloom industry will be hit hard by this proposed duty, while it is very doubtful whether the duty will be in any way useful to the mill industry. The Select Committee say :

[Mr. Mukhtar Singh.]

"We recommend, therefore, that the Government should be asked to address Local Governments on the subject, desiring them to have special inquiries made and to report on the subject six months after the passage of the Bill into law."

It is very surprising that we are asked to pass a Bill, the effect of which on a very important industry of this country we do not know. Not only that, but we are forced to admit the arguments advanced by the Tariff Board and recommend to the Government that the effect of this duty should be watched for six months. It means that we are very doubtful—rather we consider that the handloom industry will be hit hard and therefore we recommend to Government that it is necessary to ask the Local Governments for their opinion and to watch the effect on the handloom industry. If it was so, it was the duty of the Government to place all the materials before this Committee. This matter has been before the Government for a very, very long time. They could have addressed the Local Governments earlier and if the opinions received had been that the handloom industry would not suffer to the extent that the Honourable Members of this House are afraid of, it would have been a very good case for the Government. Unfortunately, Government do not care, for the development of the industries in this country, and I am very sorry to note that the members of the Tariff Board have taken pretty good care not to go into the details of the manufacture of piecegoods in England—Lancashire and Manchester. They have clearly declined to go into that question at all. Why ? They say, "We are not going into this question because the millowners have not asked us to do so." I say, if you are really earnest to find out in what way the textile industry should be protected, it is your duty to go into the details of the working of the Lancashire and Manchester mills. Then, again, as regards the State aid in Japan, they have clearly refused to go into that question, though they had to admit that the help given in Japan by the shipping subsidies and other methods was considerable. They declined to analyse that question simply because the textile industry in Japan has no preferential treatment. Rather, they seem to admit that in Japan every industry has a right, has a claim upon the Government for its protection and development. While the members of the Board seem to admit that, India being under a foreign Government, the people of this country have no right, have no claim on this Government for the protection and development of their industries. I would submit that the Tariff Board ought to have gone into the details of this question, and then they would have found why in this country, although we grow cotton ourselves—not only the ordinary cotton but also American cotton, the raw product which is the main part of this industry—why it is that our produce is not cheaper than that of Japan. Again, labour is much cheaper here than in Japan. There ought to be something very, very peculiar to this country if it is not able successfully to compete with Japan, or with England, or with any other countries in this world. Here was a time when Government could have washed off their old sins of killing this industry. But they refused to avail themselves of that opportunity and would not like the idea of developing this industry. What do we find in this Report itself ? It says, because there is unfair competition, therefore we would only go into details as to how far that unfair competition affects the industry. The Tariff Board refused clearly to enquire in what way the industry can be developed. I ask, sincerely ask, earnestly ask Government whether or not it is their duty to develop this industry ? Suppose there is no unfair competition from Japan and we find that this industry is not able to compete with the other foreign manufacturers. Is it not the duty of this Government to develop this industry in such a way that it may be able to compete with all foreign countries ? The case does not end there. Unfortunately, situated as we are, this Assembly is powerless and helpless to suggest any means by which this industry can be saved. This House cannot force the Government to adopt the recommendations of the Tariff Board, nor can they suggest any other alternative ? On the day when the Bill was introduced, some Honourable Members asked whether they would be allowed to go into the question of duties on piecegoods. The answer was a definite 'no.' That shows clearly that Government have decided that the Lancashire and Manchester mills should not be affected at all. Therefore, I submit in the first place that this Bill does in no way help the mill industry, and if it does, it is to a very, very insignificant extent. At the same time, it affects the handloom industry of this country very adversely. That has been admitted. I submit that the millowners can go on for at least 2 or 3 years at a loss, because they have gained much in the boom period. But may I take the case of the weaver ? What are his resources ? A poor weaver who works from morning to evening gets hardly eight annas a day. And you are taxing him, you are asking him to pay 1½ annas a pound by this duty. The members of the Select Committee, unfortunately, say that there is a likelihood that the prices of the piecegoods that the weavers will manufacture will be a little higher. I fail to understand the reasons for coming to this conclusion. Is it likely, as soon as this duty is raised, the Lancashire people, the Manchester people, the Japanese people, will raise their price of piecegoods also, or there will be more patriotism in the people of this country to purchase the cloth manufactured by these weavers at a higher price ?

[Mr. Mukhtar Singh.]

If this is not so, Sir, may I ask what is the material on which they have come to the conclusion that it is likely that the price of the cloth might be raised ? I submit, Sir, that there is no case made out for coming to the decision that the price of the cloth manufactured by the weavers will in any way be raised. If that is not so, I would submit that the price of the cloth will be increased by about 2 pice per yard, because, in the calculation they have taken, one pound of yarn is equal to 4 yards. So that will be about one pice and a half per yard. That is a very high increase in the price of the cloth manufactured by the weavers and therefore we should not light-heartedly support the Bill. It has been said that the handloom industry manufactures cloth in this country to the extent of 26 per cent. of the total consumption of cloth in this country. I may submit that that is not correct. 26 per cent. is the percentage of the cloth that is manufactured out of the yarn produced by mills or imported from foreign countries, but there is a large quantity of handspun yarn manufactured in this country, and if that is to be taken into consideration, this handloom industry does not only produce 26 per cent. of the total cloth but much more than 30 per cent., and in this way if you hit to a very small extent this industry even then you are hitting it hard. I would submit to Government, if they are really keen enough, why not decide to withdraw this Bill and put in another Bill raising the duty on piecegoods. The cotton millowners are not satisfied with this duty on yarn and I am sure that the spokesman of the cotton mill industry will have to admit that this is a very small measure of help, if at all, and if it is so, should we not stand up as men and ask the Government " If you are not going to give us anything which will really be conducive to the protection of the textile industry in this country, then we shall not have this ". After all how much will they get by the passage of this Bill ? According to the figures I have stated they get nothing, but even supposing that they get something it is not so high that they cannot afford to lose it, especially when they find that it is admitted on all hands that the sister industry will be hit hard and when they know that the sister industry is carried on by the poorest people in the country. Certainly the people who carry on the handloom industry have not the same resources. They have not the courage to represent the case to Government. Therefore, I submit that the cotton millowners should stand up and say " We are not going to take this Bill as it hits our fellow countrymen ". If they say so we shall put the Government in the wrong. Let the Government realise once for all that this protection of yarn is in no way a measure which protects the cotton textile industry. If the Government are sincere and consider that the protection of this industry is necessary, let them come up with a Bill for levying a duty on piecegoods. Not a word has been said by the Commerce Member nor any other Government spokesman about the duty on piece-goods ? The millowners want it, the country wants it and every Member wants it. Let Government come up with a Bill raising the duty on piecegoods and we shall unanimously support it. With these words I am sorry to say that I have to oppose this motion made by the Commerce Member.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I rise to support my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy's amendment. He comes from the same province and same division as I do. My reasons for supporting my friend Mr. Neogy are these : It seems that this Bill is the outcome of the clamour of the Bombay millowners and not of the recommendation of the Indian Tariff Board, and I consider it my duty to point out that it is only fair and just that it should be circulated and the opinions of the Provincial Governments obtained, and if that is done I have very little doubt that, barring Bombay, the rest of India would not support the Bill. That it will stifle the handloom industry goes without saying. The Dacca Division in Bengal has a large handloom industry, and its Muslins, its Dhoties and its Sarees are known all over the world. The Chittagong Division in Bengal has also a large handloom industry, and my friend, Mr. Donovan, will bear me out that the same condition prevails in the Burdwan Division also. Therefore the whole of Bengal is very much interested in the handloom industry, and anything done to injure this handloom industry cannot possibly have our support. The Honourable Member from Bihar and Orissa, Mr. Nilkantha Das, also shares the same view. The Punjab, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, Madras and Assam also think alike. It is, therefore, only fair that the Government should not thrust this Bill on us only because the Bombay millowners want it. It may placate the Bombay millowners, and they may accept it on the prudential consideration that " half a loaf is better than no bread ", but they are also evidently not satisfied with this crumb. Why should the rest of India also not have a voice in it ? The millowners may not want it but it is only just and fair that opinions should be elicited and that the Bill should not be thrust on the unwilling people of India to the annihilation of the handloom industry. Bengal is vehemently opposed to this measure as it will affect Bengal more than any other province. My friend Mr. Neogy has quoted chapter and verse and shown how indifferent the millowners are to the interests of Bengal. They had their supplies of coal from South Africa, even at a higher price than Bengal offered, which is a sufficient index of their mind. I however mean no quarrel with the millowners of Bombay, but I feel very strongly that justice demands that opinions should be obtained on a measure which is calculated to do harm to millions of poor people if it is passed. I am sorry I cannot agree with all the good things that my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta has said yesterday about the Bombay millowners. It is true that the Bombay mills have to a certain extent provided the cloth which India requires and restricted the imports from Manchester. But is it seriously contended that their object is to provide cheap clothing to India and not to fill their own pockets ? Sir, this takes me back to the year 1905, when I was known as the wrong Mr. Ghuznavi, because I was against the partition of Bengal. Lord Curzon by a stroke of the pen partitioned Bengal, and we in Bengal as a protest said we would not have any more to do with the Manchester goods and boycotted them. I had the honour of presiding at that boycott meeting held at the Federation ground in Calcutta in July 1905. About a lakh of people were present and we passed a resolution at that meeting that so far as we were concerned we would have nothing to do with the Manchester goods. And we relied on Bombay to supply our requirements. And what was the response from the Bombay people ? You are aware of how we were treated by them. We appealed to them, implored them to come to our rescue with their goods. Well, they did come, but with what end in view ? Was it to afford us relief or to profiteer ? They raised the price to double or treble the price which had been current in the market. That was the way they made money and that was how they paid back twice over to their shareholders and put tons of money into their own pockets. Not content with that they went further. They got Japan to send them goods of rough materials and they passed them on to the Bengal market as made in India. (Cries of " Shame ".) I have evidence of that. But they did more than that. At that moment their indents on Japan could not be immediately met. They therefore bought up all the Japanese stuff in the Indian market, and by tearing off 2 yards out of the piece of 40 yards and making each piece 38 yards instead of 40, marked it down as made in India and sold it at double the price. (Cries of " Shame ".) I know that for a fact. Sir, so far as Bengal is concerned we will not agree to anything that is likely to destroy home industries. The handloom industry is a great industry of Bengal, and it has to be supported at any cost. There is furthermore another matter. The industry in which Bengal is far more concerned with Japan is the pig-iron industry. I am pretty sure that if this Bill is passed the result will be that the Japanese will retaliate by increasing the duty on pig-iron and that will ruin the Bengal industry. I appeal, Sir, to the House to consider seriously whether we should not vote against the Bill of the Honourable the Commerce Member and vote for the amendment of Mr. Neogy, who only wants the Bill to be circulated and opinions obtained from all the Provinces, as to see whether the handloom industry is going to be affected by it and whether this measure is wanted. If it is the opinion of all the provinces that the handloom will not be affected and the measure is beneficial to us, we shall be only too glad to pass this Bill at the next Session at Delhi.

1 P.M.

[Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi.]

Mr. Kikabhai Premchand (Bombay : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I desire to support the Bill proposing to increase the duty on yarn imported into India. I am satisfied from a study of the Report of the Tariff Board and from my own study of the situation—no one can pursue his avocations in Bombay without being brought into intimate contact with the textile industry—that the Indian textile industry stands badly in need of a further measure of protection, and that this demand for protection can be justified up to the hilt. Cotton spinning and weaving is our one great indigenous manufacturing enterprise. It is therefore one which merits the close and sympathetic support of the Government and the Legislature. The industry has laboured, and continues to labour, under grievous difficulties. For longer than we like to remember, it was handicapped by the excise duty on cotton cloth woven in Indian mills. I will not develop that point now ; we are grateful that the excise has gone. The industry has suffered from the fluctuations in our own exchange and in the exchanges of some of our principal competitors. This is another point which I shall not labour ; the effects of all fluctuations in exchange are transitory, and given stability conditions must adjust themselves to the ratio. There is no doubt that many mills are suffering from difficulties of their own making—over-capitalisation (though it is not a general practice ; many mills have a comparatively low capital) ; the payment of excessive dividends, non-conservative finance, uneconomical management, and a too narrow range in the class of the finished product. That is to say the mill industry is a human organisation, with the defects which belong to our community ; improvement must come from within. But when the fullest allowance is given to these factors in the present depression—the variations in the exchange and the need for a better internal organisation—there still remain the basic facts that warrant this demand for protection. They are the refusal of certain competing countries to implement the terms of the Washington Labour Convention, and thereby to obtain a position of privilege in our markets ; and the period which must pass before our labour is trained to the habits of industrial efficiency, which will reduce labour costs.

We are in some respects proud of the record of this country in recognising international efforts to raise the status of labour and to improve its working conditions. I think I am correct in stating that India has more promptly accepted the recommendations of the Labour Conferences than any other country in the world ; none of us desires to go back on those decisions. On the other hand, we are painfully conscious that our humanitarian course imposes on our major manufacturing industry serious penalties. The nature and extent of these are now on official record. The Tariff Board after an exhaustive enquiry found that the competing advantage which Japan enjoys in the Indian market as the result of her refusal to implement the terms of the Washington Conference amounts to no less than four per cent. ; if a fair allowance for profit is given, as it ought to be given, the advantage is ten per cent. Whilst the special case of Japan has attracted most attention, for reasons known to all of us, this is not the only trade rival which benefits from a refusal to work in terms of the Washington Conference. I say therefore that India has a right, an indefeasible right, to a measure of protection at least equal to the advantage which other countries derive from their lower labour standard.

Much attention is devoted in the Report of the Tariff Board to the labour costs in the Bombay mills. One cause of this however is not sufficiently developed in the Report. After all, the Bombay millhand was an agriculturist, he is an agriculturist and he will continue to be an agriculturist. We cannot expect from the agriculturist who enters the mill for varying periods, interrupted by long spells of rest or work in his village, the same standard of regularity in attendance and technical skill as is manifested by the regular artisan. I am aware that the process of converting these intermittent agriculturists into regular craftsmen will be slow ; it needs not only the passage of time, but better housing and the improvement of the amenities of life in our cities. During this process the textile mills have a right to a fair measure of protection against countries with a trained and permanent corps of craftsmen to draw upon. For these reasons, Sir, I hold very strongly that the Indian industry is entitled to a further measure of protection. The only question, Sir, to my mind is that of ways and means—how can this protection be given with the greatest advantage to the industry and the least burden to the consumer ? There are certain countries whose products compete directly with the products of the Indian textile mills. In many of those countries the products in question are produced under wage conditions below the standard of the Washington Convention and below the standard that has been accepted by India. In my opinion, Sir, it would be quite equitable to impose an all round increase in the import duty on cloth also of at least four per cent. on the manufacture of those countries who have not abided by the Washington Convention. True, this would mean Imperial preference, but I would not mind it. It has been definitely stated by the millowners that cotton piecegoods of British manufacture do not compete with the Bombay industry. I therefore see no justification for imposing on the consumer a higher charge for these non-competitive goods ; they shall continue to be charged at the eleven per cent. revenue duty now in force and shall be exempt from this higher duty.

[Mr. Kikabhai Premchand.]

I am quite aware, Sir, that in making this suggestion I shall be bringing upon myself the wrath of certain elements in this Assembly. But I would urge with all emphasis that this issue should be determined not by prejudices, but by cold economic facts. There is no case for imposing on the community a higher cost for non-competing cloths. A tariff is a tax. We are justified in asking the community to pay this tax on competing cloths for the larger national interests involved ; we are not justified in taxing it on non-competing cloths beyond the revenue tariff. Nor am I frightened by the bogey of Imperial preference. (Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : " Bravo ! ") After all we are part and parcel of the Commonwealth (Hear, hear) and as I hope it is the general desire of the Honourable Members of this House to see that we shall be an autonomous Dominion ourselves (An Honourable Member : " Oh, yes "), it is to our interest to make the Commonwealth great and strong. I do not wish to take up the time of the House any longer. I only wish to impress upon the Government that the duty proposed on yarn would not by itself afford adequate relief to the industry and I do hope they will consider favourably the suggestion that a duty at 4 per cent. on cloth manufactured by those countries who have not given effect to the terms of the Washington Convention is desirable.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I thank you for giving me the chance to say a few words on this very important measure before the House. I have listened, Sir, very patiently to the speech that was delivered rather read, by the last speaker. I was listening to it very patiently, and until he came almost to the last page, when he gave us some new ideas—or shall I say old bogeys ?—, I did not, unfortunately for my lack of sharpness, perceive any new argument or any new suggestions contained in the greater portion of that paper. Leaving that aside, I listened, Sir, with very great attention to the speech that was delivered a little while ago, as indeed I always listen to speeches delivered at any time by the Honourable Leader of this House. He wanted us clearly to understand—and I hope I have understood very clearly the meaning of his words he wanted us clearly to understand that voting for the motion of Mr. Neogy to circulate the Bill for eliciting opinion would mean not merely circulation but rejection ; and he wanted us to realize that the passing of that amendment, being tantamount to rejection, would practically make us responsible, i.e., those who vote for the amendment—responsible for not affording to the millowners of Bombay the aid which they are supposed to need badly. Sir, I hope I have pretty clearly paraphrased the warning given to us by Sir Basil Blackett. I am not afraid, Sir, of the implication that sending the Bill for circulation might mean practically rejecting it ; but may I, in all humility, ask on whom rests the responsibility for putting forth a Bill which we cannot accept, which we have perforce to send round for circulation, so that we may get more opinions about it before accepting it ? It is a Government Bill, and the Government ought to have put before us a Bill on which the bulk of us, especially back benchers like me, who were not mighty enough to be placed on the Select Committee, might have the views of at least a good majority of the Select Committee. I tried to follow, Sir, their opinions. And what are they ? They are as varied as the colours of the sun-beam : and if therefore we say that we are unable to understand all these conflicting opinions of the mighty experts, that we would therefore wish to get more opinion from others, probably bigger experts (or non-experts that I would always prefer), then certainly the responsibility for producing the Bill and placing it before the House in a form which is full of such conflicting views, rests upon the Government, not upon our shoulders. I did not produce the Bill, nor Mr. Neogy, for he too like me was not on the Select Committee. Therefore I hope, with regard to Sir Basil Blackett's clear warning that if we vote for sending this Bill for circulation or opinion, we shall practically reject the passing of this Bill, that he will clearly realize that the responsibility will lie on those who have produced this Bill, not on those who are unable to comprehend the Bill even with all the very eloquent utterances on both sides of the House by various people.

Now, I turn to my very eloquent friend Mr. Chetty. Of course, naturally, being a signatory, I suppose to the majority report, he has taken great pains ; and with his usual eloquence and usual rhetoric, he has tried to explain many things that we already knew, such as how much yarn is consumed by the handloom industry, how much by the mills and son on, and he came to the conclusion that the financial weight that may be imposed upon the handloom industry is almost negligible. Sir, my friend, Mr. Chetty is a rich man, and I, as a Brahmin, wish him to become richer still. A rich man does not know how the poor man suffers. It is not his fault. Just to-day we had an example. The Finance Member is very anxious that we should consider this matter as very urgent ; he said that the problem of the mill-owners, of 300 millowners, is urgent ; and if we now circulate this for opinion, we shall be failing in our duty. I wish, Sir, that Sir George Rainy had similarly told us that the distress of 2,000 poor fellows who are to be turned out of their homes with their families is as urgent as the distress of the 300 rich people whose interests Sir Basil Blackett wants to safeguard.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member himself did not consider it urgent ; otherwise he would have raised the question in time.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am commenting, Sir, on the opinion put upon the amendment by Sir Basil Blackett, not on your decision. However, Sir, I am passing on. I was just about to say that I am a philsopher ; and I know the Biblical proverb :

" Unto him that hath, more shall be given ; and from him that hath not, shall be taken away even that which he hath."

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

I therefore do not complain, Sir, about the ways of the Government. It is always the same. But I cannot understand Mr. Chetty's argument that the poor handloom fellows will not be affected. I would like to have the opinion of the poor rather than the opinion of the rich ; and I wish, Sir, that Mr. Chetty had listened carefully to the very very good speech that was delivered from this side of the House on behalf of the handloom weaver. I think there were many more arguments, in his speech than in Mr. Chetty's. For example, one argument in his speech was this ; I do want to repeat it in detail—the question is not how much yarn the handloom weaver consumes or turns out ; the question is what is the price of the cloth that he produces, and what would be the competition between hand-woven cloth and the mill-made cloth, whether made in India or imported from elsewhere. That is one most important point ; not how much yarn, or cotton is consumed ; the whole question is whether the cloth turned out from the handlooms will get a fair selling price in the market. Sir, it is admitted—admitted in this Report—that there is going to be some kind of infliction on the handloom weaver. Nobody has denied it. Now, the whole question is this : you are here penalising the handloom weaver to some extent. Nobody denies it. Even Mr. Chetty does not deny it ; he dare not deny it ; he says it is negligible. The question is whom are you going to favour ? Are you going to favour really the hard pressed mill industry of Bombay ? There is Sir Purshotamdas' opinion, and I think he knows the feelings of the millowners of Bombay far better than anybody else. He says :

"The protection offered by the Bill therefore becomes more of an eye-wash than a reality unless an attempt is made to import coarse counts."

You are here penalising somebody, and you are benefiting nobody. This wonderful Bill favours nobody but does hurt somebody. Sir Basil Blackett threatens us that if we put it off for opinion, the responsibility will be ours. The responsibility for producing this wonderful Bill is not ours. Sir, I cannot understand the argument, because I am a simple non-official and am not an official expert ! I contend that the responsibility is entirely on the shoulders of the Government. Here the evidence before us shows that the Government have not carried out the recommendations of the Tariff Board. All that has been dealt with in detail by others. Whatever may be the cause, here we have a Bill upon which there is not that amount of unanimity of opinion, even among those who consider that it should be passed immediately. And surely as somebody else has pointed out, the millowners of Bombay have broad enough shoulders to carry their weight ; even if they are not given this shadowy protection. Give them real help. What is the use of giving some shadowy help to a set of people and for that hurting others ? This Bill seems to be therefore neither fish, flesh nor good red herring. I cannot understand why we should pass this. The straightforward course would have been—but Governments are not expected to take straightforward courses—that Government should have tackled the whole problem in a very much more brave, courageous and honest fashion. If Japan was competing in a manner not quite fair, Japan ought to be penalised, whatever may be the consequences. If other countries are competing with India, if there is genuine desire on the part of the Government of India to protect the native industries of India, the handloom or the mill industry, there ought to be a real kind of protection given by imposing heavy duties upon all foreign cloth imported into India. If we had a Government of our own we should have done it. Other Governments have done the same thing in other countries, because they love their own industries, their own trades, their own workmen, better than of course a foreign Government can love and cherish the industries and workmen of foreign country. However, Sir, there is no real remedy ; there is the evil, we admit. I for one, Sir, have nothing to say against the Bombay millowners. If they raised their prices, it was part of their human nature. Who has not done it ? What had the East India Company done in days of yore ? What has every company done ? That is the business morality of every merchant. Of course a philosopher like me or like Professor Ruthnaswamy may not like it. But the business ethics of merchants and our academical ethics are quite different. The whole ethics of the British nation has been the ethics of the business man, of the profiteer. Therefore there is no use of talking high ethics to the British Government either here or there. I repeat I have nothing to say against the Bombay millowners. Poor fellows, they had a good day ; they did not make good use of it ! They are now in trouble, in hot water. I would personally like to help the Bombay millowners, if I can without hurting anybody else. But this Bill does not help them, does not enable them to receive any help, without hurting the poor cottage handloom weaver. Therefore, Sir, I appeal to the genius of the Government Benches, to Sir George Rainy and Sir Basil Blackett, to kindly give us a better Bill which will really help the millowners of Bombay without hurting the handloom weavers of India. I join in the chorus of all who have sung that the handloom industry alone is in India a national industry. I am to-day almost in a mood to accept the Gandhian doctrine that all huge machinery is an evil. I wish that this doctrine will spread and place machine-made things at a discount, because I feel how the machineman, the millowner, will readily make use of the human element for his purposes so long as it suits him and pays him amply ; but if he can, by getting rid of his human labourers, and substituting machinery instead, get the work for two annas less, then it does not cause him the slightest pang how many are thrown out of work. Whether 2,000 or 3,000 and 4,000 men, they must go.

> " Theirs not to reason why,
> Theirs not to make reply,
> Theirs but to do and die."

That is the Capitalists' ethics for whose help indeed this Bill is before us.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not think that I should give a silent vote either in favour of the Bill or against it. But I may tell the House that I am not a millowner nor am I a handloom weaver. I come from the southern part of the Bombay Presidency in which there are not many cotton mills, but there are a good many handloom weavers and some of my voters happen to be handloom weavers. So it is my duty to see that their interests are safeguarded. Now, I find it rather difficult to understand the position of Government. Government has placed before us two Tariff Bills, one of which only is now under consideration. As soon as we have finished the consideration of this Bill, I believe that the second Bill will also be taken up. I have read the Report of the Select Committee on that Bill and I find from it that Government is in a position to forego a revenue of 85 lakhs of rupees a year. The Government proposal there seems to be to remit the import duties on certain machinery and stores. It is very difficult for me to understand the position of Government. If Government is in a position to forego an annual revenue of 85 lakhs, why should not Government give a bounty to these millowners who are crying for relief ? That is a very difficult question for me to solve. My second doubt is that we are told here that the handloom weavers will be mulcted to the tune of 12 lakhs a year. My Honourable friend Mr. Shanmukham Chetty was good enough to tell us that the loss of the handloom weavers will be the gain to that extent of the millowners. Am I to understand that the millowners are crying here for a crumb of 12 lakhs only a year ? It is said that 12 lakhs is not much in the case of these handloom weavers. It is a mere flea-bite in their case. Is it not a flea-bite in the case of the Bombay millowners who are applying for assistance in their difficulties ? These are the two points on which I should like to be enlightened by the Honourable Member who has introduced this Bill. Why should not a bounty be given to the millowners out of the 85 lakhs which we get annually by the duties on importation of machinery ? Where is the need of abolishing the import duties ? Are we to abolish these import duties for the benefit of the manufacturers of machinery in England ? Who wants this abolition of import duties on machinery and stores ? We know that there is a very strong agitation in favour of the millowners. It is true that the millowners are suffering terribly. There is no doubt on that point. I do not agree with the heavy indictment that was preferred against the millowners of Bombay by some of my Honourable friends. There may be sins of omission and commission on their part but we have to consider their industry which happens to be a very important industry in the country. If they have got a legitimate grievance and if that grievance can be redressed, it should be redressed by this Legislature. I find it difficult to understand the new habit which Government has unfortunately and dangerously for this country recently contracted. Government appoints committees ; Government appoints commissions and Tariff Boards, and spends lakhs of rupees on them. These bodies go round the country, hold inquiries and submit their reports to the Government, and when their recommendations are made, Government quietly sets aside their recommendations and proceeds with its own ideas. I find that the Government of India was pleased to appoint the Skeen Committee. They spent a good deal of money on that Committee. The Committee made certain recommendations, but the other day I found that Government opposed all those recommendations and did so successfully in another place. When the Resolution comes up here for discussion on the 13th instant, I do not know how it may fare. I find the same thing here. Government appointed the Tariff Board and they have made a report. They have suggested a remedy and now Government for its own purposes has set aside the recommendations of the Board and has proceeded to legislate after its own fashion. It is very difficult for some of the Members of this Legislature to give their votes in this predicament. We are told by the Honourable the Finance Member that if this Bill is rejected or if this dilatory motion of Mr. Neogy is passed, the responsibility will rest upon our shoulders. That is an argument to which my friend Mr. Acharya has given a sufficient answer. I do not think I should repeat his arguments. It is not we who are to blame. We do not draft these legislative measures. Government has got at its disposal highly paid officers whose business it is to draft Bills. Government has got in its custody all the necessary material. It should draft Bills in time ; the Bills should be published for the information of the public. Public opinion should be invited and if it be necessary to consult Provincial Governments, that should be done in time. But what do we generally find ? Without resort to any of these salutary measures, all of a sudden Bills are sprung upon this Legislature and if we oppose them we are considered to be bad fellows. We are dubbed as irreconcilables. It is not out of cussedness that we sometimes oppose these Bills. More often than not we oppose them because sufficient time is not given to us to consult our constituents and to understand what the opinions of the various Local Governments are. Very often sufficient time is not given to us to consider these measures in detail. As a matter of form, every Bill is referred to a Select Committee. The Select Committee meets once or twice and it presents to us a report. Sometimes we find that the report is unanimous, and sometimes we find that there are divergent opinions. Now, take the case of the Bill which is under consideration. How is it possible for a man like me to follow the Report of the Select Committee ? I find that men of equal authority are ranged on opposite sides. I find that men like Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, a gentleman whom I have known for many years and who was my colleague for some years in the Bombay Council, says that this Bill is a mere eye-wash. Now, take the case of another friend, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, who is a Muhammadan gentleman of light and leading. He says that this Bill is absolutely worthless and his opinion which is given in two or three lines is to the effect that this Bill should not be proceeded with. Take again the case of another gentleman, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta or Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar. Both of them say that this Bill is absolutely worthless and it should be dropped at once. It is thus very difficult for men like me to form their opinions. We have got very little material before us and there is no time for us to look into all the literature that is available. I submit that in view of the fact that sufficient time has not been given to the country and to the Legislature for the consideration of this measure, the amendment brought forward by Mr. Neogy should be passed by this House. I do not support it simply because I want to delay the passage of this Bill. If we receive the opinions of Local Governments in favour of this Bill, we may pass this measure in the next Delhi Session. The millowners will have to suffer very little during this period of two or three months because we are now told that the millowners are to get only 12 lakhs of rupees a year. This 12 lakhs would be the loss of the handloom weavers and whatever the loss is of the handloom weavers will be the gain of the millowners. I do not believe that the Bombay millowners are so very poor. I have known some of them. I know how many motor cars they each keep, how many bungalows they own and I know also the amount of income-tax and super-tax they pay. They are not so very poor as these poor handloom weavers are. Why should there be so much hubbub about only 12 lakhs a year ? If these two points are cleared up, I shall see my way to make up my mind as to whether I should vote in favour of the measure or against it. At present it seems to me that I shall be doing my duty if I vote in favour of Mr. Neogy's amendment and against the motion of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill.

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

Diwan Chaman Lall : Sir, it is indeed with diffidence that I speak on this motion. I do not want the impression to go abroad that the attitude that we are adopting in regard to this Bill is one of mere delay, delay in order that we should wreck this Bill or the mill industry. Among my friends who have spoken on this side of the House, some waxed very tragic like Mr. Shanmukham Chetty about the woes of this industry ; others like my friend Mr. Rahimtoola waxed very patriotic, still others like Mr. Jamnadas Mehta became quite romantic, I may say that the latter waxed in turn both patriotic, tragic and romantic about this industry. He said that as far as this industry is concerned, " we " have a great affection for it. The reason why I want to oppose this Bill is because I have no affection for this industry as it is constituted. (An Honourable Member : " Shame.") My Honourable friend says " Shame ". When I relate before you the facts connected with this industry he will perhaps cry shame on the millowners and not upon us who are opposed to this Bill. May I call the attention of my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta to what has actually been said by a Union which gave evidence before the Tariff Board ? The Union was the Gimi Kamgar Textile Union of Bombay, with which neither my friend Mr. Joshi nor I are connected. They said that the millowners have made no efforts to increase the efficiency of the mill hands. They say :

" The wide powers of dismissals, fines, leave giving, etc., though technically in the hands of the higher authorities such as the managers, weaving and spinning masters, are in practice exercised by the head-jobbers and jobbers and are in many cases abused by them."

Are these the people who have an affection for this industry ?

" It is notorious that several jobbers, head-jobbers and the women overseers called the " naikins " in the Winding and Reeling departments receive bribes or dasturi from the operatives at the time of employment and even during the continuance of their service. The rate of the dasturi varies from Re. 1 to Rs. 5 per month. Instead of taking prompt steps to stop the practice, the Agent had the audacity to tell the Union that such practice of taking bribes prevailed in all the mills and that, if he were to take notice of it and adopt measures to stop it, he would soon require to close down his mill."

Then there is the question of dismissals which take place summarily without any regard to the well-being of the workers—and it is said in the report that the dismissals that take place are the normal feature of the working of these mills. Am I to take it that these workers, who are really the producers of the wealth of this industry, but who are thus abominably treated have an affection for this industry ? Am I to take it that those of us who want to see their condition bettered have an affection for this industry ? What sort of affection has my Honourable friend ? He says that he is a " devoted servant " of this industry. Far better would it be if my Honourable friend were a devoted servant of humanity instead of being a " devoted servant " of any particular industry. Sir, the question that arises is, whether you are going to protect this industry at the expense of cognate industries, of workers and of consumers. I think my friend Mr. Rahimtoola used the expression that some of us wanted to kill the mill industry. He went beyond this and said that was a national industry. At 20 minutes past 11, I put a question to him whether it was a national industry, and at 5 to 12 when he sat down, although he had promised to give me a reply he did not. May I remind Mr. Rahimtula and Mr. Chetty who are so anxious to regard this industry as a national industry of a sentence, in Horace, " Dulce et decorun est pro patria mori "—Better for them, more proper for them, to die for their nation than to die for an industry which they consider to be merely national. If the industry is not in a better position to claim the support of the opposition and of public men in this country except by arguments of this nature, I say, Sir, that that industry does not deserve the support that it asks us to give it. On the contrary, I have facts and figures here to show that far from helping the poverty-stricken workers, this industry has been drawing enormous profits from 1917—1922, profits, I compute, ranging up to 178 per cent. I am sorry I made that mistake. The profits are not all the profits. These are but the dividends that have been distributed to the shareholders during the years 1917—1922. 178 per cent. of the total capital invested in this industry has been distributed in dividends to the shareholders of this industry. Why did not this industry, in this boom period, set apart a portion of its profits in order that it might meet a period of depression ? It was bound to follow what other industries have done. Take the jute industry of Calcutta. During the war period this industry made enormous profits. Then came the period after the war in 1921, when that industry discovered that it had produced goods 25 per cent. over and above the limit required for proper consumption, and the industry was naturally in a particularly bad way. What did those who control that industry do ? They immediately organised scientifically, and the result was that within a very short period they were in a position to pay equally good dividends after the war as they paid during the war.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Jute is a monopoly, cotton is not.

Diwan Chaman Lall : My friend says that jute is a monopoly. Is he not aware that cotton is practically a monopoly for consumption purposes in India ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : No.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Absolutely not.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Let my friend look at the import and export figures. He will have a chance of replying to my arguments when he speaks. The question that arises is this. Why did not this industry do what the other industry did ? I will tell you the reason why it did not do so. They were more concerned with their profits. They were more concerned with taking as much as they could from their shares ; they were more concerned with getting rich quickly. That was the real reason, and they know it perfectly well. It is no good coming to us and blowing hot and cold and saying, "We are nationalists ; we are patriots ; pray, for Heaven's sake, support us." The jute industry did not come with a begging bowl at the time of its need and ask us to support it in its period of depression. Why should the cotton industry now come before us and ask for protection ? I see no reason for their so doing, and I have not been able to find any reason except merely that they have been profligates. It is their financial profligacy that has brought them to their present position, and the result is—what they are asking us to do. They are asking us to impose a burden on the handloom industry, on the average consumer of coarse cloth in this country, in order that they may tide over this period of depression. Will my learned friends, who are representing the millowners in this House, give me a guarantee that they will not, as a result of this duty, be putting up the price of coarse yarn ? Do Honourable Members know that the actual amount of coarse yarn which is being used in this country is something like 260 million pounds ? The result of this duty will be, not as my friend Mr. Chetty put it, merely a burden of 11 or 12 lakhs The real burden will be on the coarser yarn, the price of which is bound to go up under these circumstances by at least one anna per pound. One anna per pound on 260 million pounds works out to about 1⅝ crores. Where is that going to come from ? Who is going to pay it ? The average consumer of coarse yarn is going to pay that sum. And who is he ? The poorest of the poor. That aspect of the question has not been mentioned in this House, because, if it had been mentioned, the reply would have been there, namely, that you are going to penalise the user of coarser yarn, penalise the poor man in the country. Who is there who wants to help the poor man of this country who is yet prepared to accept that argument ? I say, Sir, not one of these millowners—I should be very glad if they do it—not one of the millowners will be willing to give us a guarantee that he will not put up the price of coarse yarn. They cannot do it. In fact, all their plans are working on these lines, namely, that they are not going to get very great advantages out of the present duty as far as 31s. to 40s. are concerned, but that they will get a tremendous advantage by imposing an extra anna per pound on the coarser yarn which is consumed in this country.

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

Sir, in these circumstances, I want to know how it is possible for any man to help this indutsry at the expense of the poor consumer of this country. How is it, again, possible for us to help this industry at the expense of the handloom industry ? There are exponents of the creed which is being put forward on behalf of the millowners, who say that the handloom industry is not going to be hit hard. On the other hand, I have my Honourable friend, Mr. Rahimtulla, who spoke about the protection of cotton. He was really wanting to protect the wool industry. His arguments were decidedly woolly (Laughter). He said that he agrees with the argument that the handloom industry is going to be hit very hard. If the handloom industry is going to be hit very hard, should you not devise some other means of helping the mill industry ? Although you could have devised your means in your boom period, you did not do so, and you now call yourself a national industry. Precious little did you care for the nation at the time of its need. My learned friend wanted to know how it is possible for them to get something more out of the Government. What was my friend, and what were his colleagues doing at the time of political stress in this country ? Did they join hands, did they join forces with the popular parties in this country to coerce the Government into granting the rights that are the birthrights of this nation ? No. If they had joned the national forces, they would have found the method of doing it. They would have learnt that unitedly you can demand from this Government your rights, if you have any rights, but by begging from this Government all that you will get is not protection that you require but a great deal of humiliation which you are experiencing to-day in this House and in the country. Take the handloom industry. The Assam Government says—the note presented by the Assam Government says :

"I do not think the handloom industry competes with the mill industry to any extent. On the other hand, it is the mill industry that tries to throttle the handloom industry by fair or unfair means."

Here is the verdict of the Assam Government. The agricultural population of Assam uses the handloom industry produce to a great extent, and that Government says that even now the mill industry is trying by fair and unfair means to throttle the handloom industry. Are you going to give another advantage to this industry and say, "Although you are already using fair and unfair means to throttle the handloom industry, we shall go beyond that and we shall give you protection in order that you may kill that industry outright." The Punjab Government again—another agricultural province—what do they say ? They say :

"As regards question 113, the object of the proposed increase in duty on imported yarn appears to be to give a better price to the Indian millowner. If it does this, the cost of production of handloom articles will necessarily increase. It is possible that the extra cost would be shared by the consumer, but the demand for cloth in India is characterised by one feature, viz., it is a demand by a poor population for a cheap article. It seems therefore to be inevitable, if the price of yarn rises, that the demand for the handloom product will decline."

I need not quote any more extracts from the evidence that was tendered before the Tariff Board, but I think those two extracts are quite sufficient to indicate the fact that the handloom industry is going to suffer, and to suffer to an extent whch we cannot realise at the present moment. Therefore, as I suggested in my minute of dissent, we cannot be parties to what I consider to be an act of vandalism against the handloom industry.

Now, Sir, the question does arise as to why this industry has been in such a parlous state. Take the case of Japan. Japan imports its cotton, it has to pay freight from the importing country. It re-exports the goods which it produces, and it is said that the reason why Japan can compete favourably with countries like India is because the labour conditions in Japan are very much worse than labour conditions in India. A great deal has been made of the Washington Convention. It is said therein that night work by women has to be prohibited, and my friends fix upon that and say that because in Japan there is a double shift system and women work at night, therefore it gives a very unfair advantage to Japan. But do my friends realise that the wages of women workers in Japan even to-day are more than the wages paid to male hands in the mill industry in Bombay ? They have no knowledge of that. If that is the position, how is it a charge against that country that that industry is competing unfairly with the Indian industry because of the labour conditions in that country ? I admit, and I condemn the horrible condition of the workers in Japan. I admit that their condition is deplorable. But it is to be concluded that the condition of the workers in this country is not deplorable but that they are leading serene lives of cerulean happiness ? Every one of the millowners, every one of the supporters of the millowenrs knows that the mill hands in Bombay are leading the most miserable lives that any human being can lead. They know it perfectly well, but they do not want to discuss that question merely because it is not relevant to the issue as far as their own arguments are concerned. But as far as our arguments are concerned, it is the one issue that is really relevant. Now, Sir, let me take the question of Lancashire. There we have an industry in which the workers are fairly highly paid. I have an extract in my hand from a report regarding India and Piece-goods—"Lancashire Cotton Outlook" :

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

"There is one handicap to British industry in competing with the rivals which is always in evidence, the enormous increase in taxation both Imperial and local. An illustration of what this means to cotton was given by Mr. Dewhurst to the Shareholders of Williams Deacon's when he quoted the annual report of the Oldham Master Cotton Spinners' Association to the effect that for a typical mill in the Oldham district the actual percentage increase in cost over 1914 of one pound of weight of yarn was 174 per cent. for local rates, 277 per cent. for income-tax, and 640 per cent. for health, pensions, and unemployment insurance."

Even in Japan the mills have a system of health insurance which you do not have in Bombay, and here in Lancashire they have been paying 640 per cent. more than the 1914 rates per pound of yarn because of health insurance, unemployment insurance and pensions. Those charges our millowaners do not have to pay ; they do not pay those charges, and yet they are not in a position—they, who use the cotton produced in this country, they who pay practically the cheapest wages that are paid anywhere in the world—they are not in a position to compete with Japan or with China. I am really surprised that they should have brought this industry to this sorry plight. They have only themselves to blame for it. Their system of management—my Honourable friends will pardon me for referring to it, I do not want to refer to it with any bitterness, but I do want to make this point that their system of management has been faulty—let me put it at the lowest and say it has been faulty. (Hear, hear.) The managing agents—they are themselves interested often in the selling agencies. They take their little bit of profit from the selling agencies. They are often interested in the insurance companies with which they insure their mills, and in some cases—I have got a statement here—in some cases they will insure with companies which pay the largest rebates to the managing agents. Cloth is sold through agencies in which, as I have already said, the managing agents are interested ; and this is a point which is not well worth making, but nevertheless there it is, the directorates are merely the cliques of managing agents. The result is that this industry has been handed down from father to son as a heritage without a scientific outlook. In many cases this industry has been run upon an unscientific basis of finance and today it naturally finds itself in this difficulty. The report of the Tariff

Board says if they had only conserved the great profits that they made in the boom period they would not have been faced with this difficulty. They say that the profits from 1919 to 1922 inclusive were 40.1 per cent., 35.2 per cent. and 16.4 per cent. These are the profits. I know that my Honourable friend, Sir Victor Sassoon will get up, add up all the profits for the various years, he will then divide the total by so many years and he will say the result is 8 per cent., and 8 per cent. is a very small return for this industry. No. The point I want to make is this, that the total percentages, as I have worked them out, came to over 178 per cent. is for but a few years. These profits represent practically 1¾ of the total capital invested in this industry. If they had preserved these profits they would not have been in their present plight. Why should they come now on the plea that it is a national industry—a plea that they cannot substantiate—and ask the nation to support them. I would consider it a national industry if it were an industry in the hands of the State working for the people of this country—I consider it to be an anti-national industry because it is working for the benefit of the few mill-owners of Bombay and Ahmedabad. My friend Mr. Jamnadas stated that practically the whole of this industry has supported this demand for protection. He knows perfectly well that it is not so What has actually happened is this. Ahmedabad and Bombay have been very hard hit, not the upcountry mills. I am indebted for an extract I shall presently read to Sir George Rainy regarding the Delhi Cloth and General Mills. There is a statement in the Tariff Board's report of last year that these Mills paid 35 per cent. in dividends. There is the fact staring us in the face that these upcountry mills are in a prosperous condition, that they were not so badly hit as Bombay and Ahmedabad. Even in Madras there is no urgent demand for protection. (Sir Hari Singh Gour : " What mills have you got in Madras ?) " I am simply surprised at Sir Hari Singh Gour. (Laughter.) This is not the first time that he has surprised me. (Loud laughter.) Has he read the Tariff Board's Report ? If he has, he will no doubt have seen what sort of mills there are in Madras. Now, the report of the Delhi Cloth and General Mills says this : " The directors apprehended a gloomy future for the industry, if immediate relief was not given to it by the Government ". After recording their appreciation of the highly valuable services of Mr. So and So the directors declare a dividend free of income-tax of Rs. 45 per cent per annum ! (Laughter). As I said, this particular industry has been hit most in Ahmedabad and Bombay. When my friend Mr. Jamnadas makes the statement that there is a unanimous demand for the support that is being given to the industry, I would remind my friend Mr. Jamnadas of what the Tariff Board Report says. They say that they examined three out of the large group of upper Indian mills and they found that the costs of production were not placed before them. Of most of the evidence that was taken in this case, the emphasis that was laid in regard to protection came from Bombay and Ahmedabad. That is a patent fact. Nobody can deny it. Ahmedabad and Bombay are the two centres of cotton gambling and financial profligacy. These are the two centres that have been hit hard.

Now, Sir, let me refer for a minute to the question of the condition of the workers in this industry. What have the millowners done for this industry ? What is the state of literacy ? Is it not a fact that they have done next to nothing to improve the literacy of the workers in the industry ? Is it not a fact, when they complain about the inefficiency of the workers, that they took practically no steps to increase the efficiency of the workers ? Even the Tariff Board says that they wished that the millowners had taken the necessary steps in the boom period to improve efficiency. They regret that in the period of depression they are not in a position to take those steps. The reply of the millowners is that they have done all they could for improving the efficiency of the workers. It is for them to eat the humble pie now and admit that most of their trouble is due to the inefficiency of the workers. How can you have efficiency in the workers if the condition of these workers is as bad as has been painted in the official reports from the Labour Office in Bombay ? The Labour Office has stated that the condition of these workers is in the highest degree miserable. After considering 2,473 working class budgets they say that no less than 56 per cent. of the workers in Bombay subsist on food the quality of which did not reach the prison standard, the standard which is prescribed by Government for ordinary criminals in His Majesty's prisons. The general conclusion is that industrial workers in Bombay consumed a diet inferior to that prescribed by the Bombay Jail Manual. 96 per cent. of the families in Bombay were living in over crowded single rooms and 47 per cent. of the families in Bombay were in debt. Why pride yourselves on this so-called national industry ? These are the signs of " affection " these industrialists have for the 376,000 workers living on this miserable diet! I shall not refer to the question of hours of work or the question of wages. We know that the average wage that is given in Bombay to these workers is Rs. 30-10-1. We also know that it leaves practically no margin for these workers for any of the what I should call ordinary necessities of life barring food and rent and clothing. If these are the workers who are going to be forced under this new scheme that is being propounded, namely, that Indian workers in Bombay should work not two looms but four looms, then I say you are crying for the moon. My Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon knows perfectly well that recently when he tried to put that into force in Bombay there was a very serious strike and 20,000 workers marched out of his mills. Here is a telegram I have received from Bombay :

[Diwan Chaman Lal.]

" Textile workers threatened 18 per cent. wage cut. Three loom device without improved materials or labour saving appliances."

You are asking the men who are working under these miserable conditions to put in more work. I say you are crying for the moon. As I understand it the workers in Madras work one loom a day. In the United States of America they work from 9 to 12 looms a day. In Lancashire they work from 5 to 6. I have no hesitation in saying that the first thing you must do is to make the workers more efficient but at the same time I want the millowners to realise that it is primarily their duty to see that the workers are efficient. It is their duty to see that the workers get more food to eat, more clothing to wear, that they are better housed than they are at present. Lady Chattarjee in her book refers to a case in Bombay where she discovered in a room 16 by 12, 30 people, men and women in a precarious state of health. Is that humane treatment for the workers. If you want protection for your industry, your primary duty is to protect the workers who are engaged in your industry. Your primary duty is to see that the consumers in this country are not penalised at the expense of the millowners.

I hope you will pardon me if I refer to another little matter in regard to the imposition of this burden upon the average consumer in this country. It has apparently been the policy of Government in this country to go on increasing taxation not by direct means but by indirect means. The method of indirect taxation is such that it hits the very poorest of the poor in this country. The present position, as I take it, in regard to indirect taxation in 1924-25 is that 63 per cent. of our total taxation was indirect, 24 per cent. land and 13 per cent. only direct taxation. If you want to tax this country, the poor man in this country, tax him in an intelligent way, in an honest way, in an equitable way but do not go on imposing burdens upon him merely because at the present moment your millowners are crying for what I may call unemployment insurance (cheers). The millowners fear that they will be presently unemployed and therefore they come to us and ask us to insure them against unemployment. When we ask for unemployment insurance for the workers what reply do we get ? We get the reply that the matter is still under the consideration of the Government of India. Now, Sir, there is no doubt about it, and we have evidence of it, that in the past too the mill industry has been responsible for a great deal of unemployment in the handloom industry. For example, in textile, the 1911 report records a decrease in the number of textile workers by 6 per cent. in the preceding 10 years despite the extension of textile manufacture in India. That is a fact to which I want to draw the attention of Honourable Members. Why has there been a decrease of 6 per cent. during that decade in spite of an increase in textile manufactures in this country ? The reason Sir, and it is stated here, is that it is due " to the almost complete extinction of cotton spinning by hand ". That is the reason for it. And we have the evidence of the Tariff Board itself that the result of the imposition of this duty will be a burden upon the handloom industry. We have seen how the mill industry has worked in order to extinguish practically cotton spinning in this country by hand. The result of this duty will be not only to extinguish cotton spinning which is already practically extinguished, but also the cotton weaving industry by hand which is an industry in which hundreds of thousands are employed. This industry will be severely affected. Are we then going to support this measure in spite of the disadvantages that one can see accruing, accruing certainly not to the millowners but to the average man in the street ? And shall we, who have come in here on the ticket that we shall protect the interest of the man in the street, be parties to the passing of this measure ? Under no circumstances can we be parties to such a measure. I have not the slightest doubt, as I have indicated in my minute of dissent, that I would myself be a party to the discovery of a scientific system of protection, not only for this industry but for all industries, provided two things are made clear, first, that the prosperity of the industry will react favourably upon the prosperity of the workers in the industry, and secondly, that no undue burden is placed upon the consumers of this country ; and further, I may add, if it is also made clear that the time will come when this industry and all such industries will become really national, not pseudo national, and will really become the property of the nation, working not for the profit of the few but for the benefit of the people. (Applause.)

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association; Indian Commerce) : Mr. President, I suppose that in the opinion of Mr. Jamnadas Mahta, and perhaps of Mr. Chaman Lal, I stand before you as the weak-kneed representative of a spineless industry. I regret therefore that my knees must hold me up for a longer period of time than I generally take when I address this House. I am afraid that my subject is so large that I will not be able to compress it within the usual 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour which I think is generally as much as this House ever cares to listen to my voice. So my knees must be stiffened for this afternoon at any rate. I have not only to deal with my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy's remarks and the points made by him and some of the other speakers, but I will have to deal with the question of the mill industry vis-a-vis the Government. Sir, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta's speech was, to say the least of it, unusual. He appears to possess a boundless admiration for the mill industry. He has assured this House, in spite of what may have been said by Members on the Benches opposite, that we are held by the people of India in great affection ; and then he tells us that he is going to vote against the measure, which though admittedly, as he calls it, a dole, at any rate does do something to help us in our present difficulties. The fact is that whilst I was listening to Mr. Jamnadas Mehta I could not help thinking of the well-known words, " It is all very well to dissemble your love, but why did you kick me downstairs ". (Laughter.)

Mr. President, I am afraid I cannot agree with Mr. Jamnadas and Mr. Neogy on the advisability of delaying this measure which is now before the House. On the contrary, the necessity of affording the mill industry of India any kind of help, however, inadequate, is an extremely urgent one, and the urgency lies in the present situation in China. The internal troubles over there which appear to have no end are of a two-fold danger. In the first place, the closing of the home market to their products makes it necessary for the Chinese industry, working as it does under even worse and more unfair conditions than does Japan, to find a market ; and in searching for this market it is up against Japan, who in her turn has also to find an outlet for that part of her production which the continent of China used to absorb. So that, we have not only China looking to India as an outlet for her surplus goods, but Japan doing the same. Now what will be the result ? The result will be that in the immediate future we shall suffer a dumping war between these two countries. That I think is a very sound reason for pleading urgency, for that war, which appears to be just beginning, is likely to develop to its fullest extent during the next couple of months. That is why we must have any measure of protection that we are going to have now. We cannot afford to wait until all these goods have been dumped on our shores. In such circumstances the question of the costs of production is a secondary one, and we may find not only the medium counts of yarn from these countries attempting to oust the admittedly small percentage of 3 per cent. of our production which is in these qualities, but what is much more serious their lower counts driving out the 25 per cent. of our production which is now consumed by the handloom industry in the form of these lower counts. Now it is here that the duty of 1¼ annas offered is of value, amounting as it does to a protective duty of something like 13 per cent. on coarse yarn. This is no bogey which I am putting before the House. It is a very real danger. I am expecting at any time to hear that the namesakes of the firm of my Honourable friend Sir Alexander Murray will be dumping on this country not only yarn but drills and my great fear today is not so much that this infinitesimal measure of protection will raise prices to the detriment of the handloom weaver or the consumer, but that it will fail to stem the wave of surplus goods seeking so urgently a market from the Far East. Mr. President, I wish to assure Members opposite that we who are engaged in the power-driven industry have no desire of any sort to hurt much less to kill our brothers who work handlooms. If I thought that the proposed increased duty on 10 per cent. of their output would cripple their industry, which to my mind is just as much a national industry as ours is—if I thought that even under the least favourable conditions the burden of 12 lakhs on the 30 crores of finished goods which they produce would really prove a severe handicap to them I would not press this measure as I am now doing. It is because I do not believe that in practice the handloom industry will suffer any real detriment that I am so insistent. I honestly believe that as regards the yarns mentioned, the dumping countries will lower their prices by the amount of the duty proposed, as they did when the excise duty was removed, so that the handloom workers will not have to pay more for their yarn than they are paying to-day.

On the other hand, I am perfectly prepared to admit that we in the mill industry will therefore not benefit. (Hear, hear.) All we can say is that the Government will benefit to the extent of something like 12 lakhs at the expense of the Japanese and Chinese exporters. But it is in hopes of keeping out the coarse yarn which we are supplying to handlooms to-day at a loss of 10 per cent., i.e., 10 per cent. below our cost of production, that I am so strongly opposing delay. I want the House to realise that, even as it is, this proposed duty may not be sufficient to safeguard the spinning side of our industry. The loss on this side may be so great that the mills will find they suffer less by closing down and importing yarn from abroad manufactured partly from Chinese cotton and partly from American cotton and use this yarn to keep their looms busy, at the same time selling the cotton which they have got in stock, which they can do at a profit.

Now, Sir, if this deplorable state of affairs comes to pass, what would be the position ? We shall have the handloom industry and the power-loom industry competing for this foreign yarn. And the mill industry, with its representatives in China and Japan, is likely to buy largely and so put up the price of this yarn against the small handloom buyers.

Will that be to their advantage in their competition with our mill-made cloth ? I say with the greatest confidence that they will suffer a great deal more than if, as at present, they are drawing their supplies from our spinning mills, spinning largely indigenous cotton at a price which is below the cost of production.

Think, too, of the position of the workers who will be displaced from the spinning frames. It is all right to say that they can go back to their homes upcountry, but those who understand these matters assure me that as regards at least 50 per cent. of the workers in Bombay, their poor little agricultural holdings cannot keep more than one member of their family, and the others can only be made welcome if they bring back in their pockets the money that they have earned at the Bombay mills.

[Sir Victor Sassoon.]

What, then, is going to be the plight of these unfortunate men ? And, Sir, remember that I am only now speaking of one section of our industry, the one whose existence is sought to be safeguarded by this Bill, and that the position of the other side, the weaving side, is by no means a rosy one.

Now, before going back to the main lines of my argument, I want to refer to one or two points which were made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, in his speech. Mr. Neogy says, " Why not have an inquiry into the handloom industry now as to the effect of this proposed duty ? " I should have thought, Sir, the reason was obvious. The information which we want is, " What harm is this duty doing to the handloom industry ; what are the practical effects of this duty ? " What we want are facts, and not mere opinions, and you cannot get those facts until you put this measure into force, and indeed, it may take a very long time, even when these facts exist, before the necessary information can be collected, when we consider the very wide ramifications of the handloom industry, and when we realize that it took six months to inquire in a fairly cursory manner into the affairs of the concentrated power-loom industry.

Now, Mr. Neogy was to my mind rather unfair on another point in his suspicions of the Government, when he asked why counts of 31*s*. and 40*s*. were chosen for special reasons. I will later on show how I think the influence of Lancashire has shaped the general tariff policy of the Government. But as far as these counts are concerned, I frankly think Mr. Neogy has been barking up the wrong tree. Lancashire has to pay just as much duty as Japan has on these counts, and Lancashire has not.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : But it is retaliation.

Sir Victor Sassoon : I beg your pardon. The advantage that Japan has is unfair labour conditions.

Now another of the points that Mr. Neogy emphasised, and which must have appealed to the House as it did appeal to me, was the question of coal as supplied to the mill industry. Now I know the firm of Currimbhoy Ebrahim and Sons very well and have the advantage of a personal acquaintance with the head of the firm, Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy. Those of the Members of this House who know Sir Fazulbhoy must have felt, as I felt, that it was inconceivable that he should have bought foreign coal at a dearer price than Indian coal, and so I wired to Sir Fazulbhoy, and I have received his answer, which is to the effect that all that he has done is to buy 1,500 tons monthly from a local coal merchant in Bombay, and he has asked for a selected grade Lodna Bengal coal but that he has put a clause in the agreement that at his option he can take some of the Natal coal already bought for import, if economy necessitates such action. Now, Sir, that is a very different thing to saying that he has refused to buy the cheaper Indian coal and preferred to buy at a higher price. I am quite sure that if he is going to pay more for that Natal coal actually per ton of the Indian coal, it must be because the calorific value of that Natal coal is much higher ; it has more heating properties, and is therefore actually, in work, cheaper than the other : and the mill industry of Bombay is not in such a state that it can afford not to buy in the cheapest market. We have to economise all our resources, and I do not think that Sir Fazulbhoy can be blamed for buying in the cheapest market. But at any rate I have now received a second telegram from Sir Fazulbhoy, and it says that he is prepared not to exercise his option to take Natal coal, although it is more economical. I hope, Sir, that on the other hand my friend from Bengal will use his influence with the Bengal producers—I think we have one here (Laughter) : May I appeal to the Honourable Sir Alexander Murray that he will see that the actual price of Bengal coal of equal calorific value is at any rate no higher than what Messrs. Currimbhoy Ebrahim would have to pay for their Natal coal ? Sir, I have been asked to say that this would depend to a large extent on the question of freight. (Hear, hear.) I would appeal to Sir George Rainy to reduce the freight on coal from Calcutta, especially as I have a recollection that if he will look through his files, he will find that the Millowners' Association have lately been making representations to this very effect. As a matter of fact the question of coal for our industry is not as large a one as people might think, due to the fact that out of 83 mills, 72 are now operating by electricity which we get from the Hydro-Electric Works, and of the balance, five or six are now applying to get electric power ; so I am afraid that my Bengal friends must not look to the Bombay mill industry as an outlet for very much of their coal.

Now, one last word and I shall have done with Mr. Neogy. He, and I think another Member, was afraid of retaliation from the Japanese. I for one do not complain of any action which may have been taken by our Japanese competitors. Their industry has to live just as much as ours has, and their industry at the present time is in an even more difficult position than ours is, because their industry already supplies all the textile needs to their own people and therefore they have to look for an outside market. We are in a position of not even being able to supply all the needs of our home people. Now, whatever may be thought of the Japanese nation, I think it will be admitted that they are a very clever commercial nation, and I think I can assure Mr. Neogy with no inside knowledge or any special knowledge, that the Japanese nation buys our pig-iron, for instance,—he mentioned pig-iron—not because she has any special feelings of brotherly love or affection for India, but because pig-iron is a very necessary raw material which she needs and it is cheaper from India than it is from America or any other country. I shall, however, tell Mr. Neogy that Japan is at the present minute developing the production of her pig-iron and I have no reason to doubt that when she has a sufficient output of pig-iron from Korea to satisfy her own needs, there will be a duty on not only our pig-iron but on all foreign pig-iron, whether you pass this Bill or you do not. And the same applies to the other main exports of this country to Japan, for instance, cotton. Is Japan going to put a duty on all cotton ? The House must remember that as under the treaty we are debarred from singling out Japan, similarly Japan is also debarred from singling us out. To carry into effect the point mentioned by Mr. Neogy, Japan must put a duty on all pig-iron, on all cotton and on jute products and if she does so, I think that will be a case of cutting her nose to spite her face ; and therefore I do not think we need have any fear of any retaliation on that score. Now, I have done with Mr. Neogy.

[Sir Victor Sassoon.]

I am not able to deal with the remarks that have been made by some speakers, because on this side of the House owing to the accoustics I am afraid we lost the advantage of appreciating what the eloquence of Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, for instance, was about ; so I must leave that to another speaker. But I did hear, I think, that a handloom weaver only made three annas a day. If I did, surely that cannot be the normal wage of a handloom weaver all over India ; otherwise I may find my friend Mr. Joshi, and probably even Mr. Chaman Lall, asking me to try and get a loan from the Government to increase our industry, so as to be able to employ all these poor handloom weavers. For, at the present moment, if what we are told is right, it must really be a sweated industry. Even the very poorest wages paid in India—and these wages I may say are a great deal lower than what we pay in Bombay. Let me take the wages in Pondicherry, where, I find, that they pay their hands anything from 50 per cent. (higher rate) down to 33 per cent. of what we do in Bombay. Madura pays anything from 75 to 44 per cent. of what we do in Bombay. And yet, even those miserable wages will be better than the three annas a day which we are now told is all that the handloom industry is paying. Sir, if that is true.....

Mr. B. Das : What about the cost of living in Pondicherry ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : I do not care how low the local cost of living is. The real wages of those unfortunate people must be better than those of anybody earning only three annas. And if this is really the case, the great problem before this House is what to do to alter the situation that allows anybody in this country to only earn three annas a day, and before trying to attack an industry or particular part of the industry, like Bombay, which does pay an average of Rs. 30 per month to its workmen, it seems to me that there is a large beam to be taken out of somebody else's eye.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : You shift your mills outside Bombay.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Now, Sir, I would like to deal with one or two other speakers. We are very much interested in the remarks made by Mr. Alexander and I am sure we all hope he is right and that world conditions will change and that prosperity will come to this country. I have not been in this country as long as he has, but I know that for the last three years we have had fairly good monsoons, and I have always been told that things were going to be better, and they have not been. And as my informants have all been in this country for something like 30 years I cannot feel, even after hearing Mr. Alexander's remarks, as optimistic as I might be. Mr. Alexander made an assumption, which, I am afraid, I am in a position to contradict. He assumed that all the mills bought a year's stock of cotton, I take it, at the beginning of the year. Of course those mills which bought their year's supply of cotton in the beginning of this year, when cotton was down, will naturally not make a loss this year ; but that, by no means, is the general state of affairs and the House will soon realise that if you buy a year's supply of cotton you are gambling in cotton, because what would have been your position two years ago when the cotton market slumped. You would have got dear cotton on your hands and would not have been in a position to compete with mills which had not stocked their cotton and therefore were enabled to buy cheaper raw material. As a matter of fact, it is generally considered undesirable for a mill to speculate in cotton. It does so in this country to some extent ; it has to ; but on general principles, I do not think that you could count a speculative profit as a legitimate trade profit, because it might as easily have been a speculative loss.

Mr. Chaman Lall—I regret he is not in the House just now—has made certain charges against the mill industry, which I feel bound to refer to, although it may mean that I am taking more time than I had intended. He made a general statement that no efforts to increase the efficiency of the millhands had been made by the millowners. It is true that he practically contradicted that same statement, because a little later on he admitted that in my own group of mills there had been a strike because we had tried to increase the efficiency of the millhands and they did not want to have their efficiency increased. In that connection Mr. Chaman Lall says that we did not give them the necessary labour-saving devices. I can assure the House that in my group of mills they have just as good labour-saving devices as they would have in Lancashire or Japan or anywhere else. We naturally gave our men everything that they needed to enable them to look after 3 or 4 looms. We naturally, instead of letting them go and supply themselves with weft, have supplied them with facilities for it being fetched for them. The accusation is frankly inaccurate. We are trying our best to increase efficiency because it will not only increase the wage of the millhand but will enable us to reduce our cost of production which at the present minute means not that we are going to make a bigger profit but that we are going to make a smaller loss during the very critical period which we are now going through. Mr. Chaman Lall also says that millowners have approved of bribes being taken by jobbers. I can only speak for our own mills. I can only speak about what I know and we have done everything we can to stop these jobbers taking bribes. Our difficulty has been that not even one man has ever told us that he was asked for bribes. It was only when we dismissed a jobber as we did for something quite different, and after the men threatened to go on strike if he were dismissed, that we found out after he had gone that they were very glad that he had gone because he had been taking bribes from them. But they were frightened to tell us before so as to enable us to get rid of this obvious injustice. Mr. Chaman Lall then referred to the profits of the millowners. He has an extraordinary method of calculating profits. He apparently thinks that if you take the profits for a period of years—it may be 5, 10 or 15 years—and if it comes to over 100 per cent., then capital is not entitled to anything more. He apparently follows the tenets of my Mussalman friends who object to any interest being earned on money. He is entitled to his own point of view, but this is not the usual commercial point of view. When you want to know what profit an industry has made, you naturally divide the profit by the number of years and so get the figure of the yearly profit. Although Mr. Chaman Lall may be entirely right when he mentions that there was something like 175 per cent. profit for a term of years, I am equally right when I say that the average yearly profit for 10 years including the boom years is only 7½ per cent., taking into account the amount required for depreciation. Now, as the Tariff Board themselves admit, 8 per cent. is a fair return. The consumer, if I may use a slang expression, has nothing to kick about? Whatever we have taken away from the consumer in the boom years we have given back to him since. So he really owes us ½ per cent. per annum. I take it that this small measure is supposed to represent that ½ per cent. average for 10 years which we have not yet got out of the consumer.

[Sir Victor Sassoon.]

Now, Sir, I should like to deal if I may with my friend the Honourable Member in charge of this Bill and here I am in somewhat the same position as my friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta because, although I am supporting the Bill, I am going to attack my Honourable friend. My Honourable friend objects to the word "protect" and prefers the word "safeguard", the word which we altered in the Preamble of the Bill in the Select Committee. Personally I do not care which word he uses as long as it carries out the dictionary meaning of the word. What I say is this: whatever words you may be using, this Bill is not going either to protect or safeguard the industry if in spite of it the yarn industry cannot live. Can you say that you safeguard an industry if that industry dies? Some of the remarks of my Honourable friend were extremely interesting. I was reading over his speech when he moved the reference of this Bill to a Select Committee and I noticed with peculiar interest a remark of his that an Indian cotton manufacturer was entitled to come to the Indian Legislature and say: "If I am to be subjected to a restriction from which my rivals from other countries are free, then I ought to be compensated in some way, because these restrictions raise my cost of production." The Honourable the Commerce Member added that it was "a perfectly tenable line of argument". So, I take it that my Honourable friend is in agreement with his own statement. (Laughter.)

Now, Sir, the exports of our mill products to the Levant and East Africa have increased during the last year which I see is looked on with approval by certain trade journals. The reason why these exports have increased was that most of us decided that we must try and get back our lost markets and therefore we sold our products at any price irrespective of the fact whether that price showed a profit or a loss. As a matter of fact, the prices at which these goods were sold have shown a loss. I may here point out to the Honourable the Commerce Member that the exchange policy of his colleague the Honourable the Finance Member is responsible for the fact that the manufacturers in this country have found themselves at a disadvantage as compared with their competitors in other countries. (Hear, hear.)

I now take up what my Honourable friend terms "a perfectly tenable line of argument", and ask him whether this action has not raised our cost of production in terms of foreign currencies resulting therefore in a form of unfair competition and whether adequate relief should not be afforded us. Further, the Commerce Member has stated that this duty has been put on to make up for the unfair competition of Japan, but it is no secret that the Japanese themselves consider that they are seriously handicapped by the even more unfair competition that takes place in China. When I was there the mills were working two shifts of 12 hours each with half a day off every other week, and I have seen with my own eyes children of 8, 9 and 10 years working at ring frames without any pay as a favour to their parents. It sounds rather ridiculous, but the parents say that they want their children to work even without pay because after they have worked for a short time and learnt their business, they could then go to earn their livelihood.

Now, Sir, what adequate relief has the Honourable the Commerce Member offered to us. He has pointed out that there is no treaty with China such as we have with Japan, so he can put a special import duty on Chinese goods. He must know the conditions of work in China and yet there is no suggestion in his speech that he is going to investigate these points at once and give us any relief for them. He merely says that if, when the Japanese have carried out the terms of the Washington Convention, it is found that we are suffering from the imports of yarn from China, then the present duty will remain on. But it ought to be clear on his own showing that we should get additional relief from China. I consider this a very unsatisfactory statement on the part of the Commerce Member and I consider as much as my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta or anybody else in this House that the mill industry is being scurvily treated by the Government.

Mr. President, if this had been Japan, if Japan had been in the position that we are in to-day, it is easy to imagine what steps would have been taken to mend matters. I have here a bulletin from the Japanese Financial and Economic Monthly. I do not propose to follow in the footsteps of my friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar and read it all.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : You cannot afford to read the whole of it.

Sir Victor Sassoon : I would merely point out that the Japanese Government has laid down that in protecting industries half-hearted measures would do no good. If this were Japan I can see the Government in these conditions putting a penalising protective duty on high counts of yarn and cloth. I can also see the natural corollary that our mills will then turn to making yarn of higher counts and that our handlooms with adequate protection would buy this yarn and turn it into a high grade cloth instead of weaving the low grade cloth they do now—thus relieving the pressure on the mills in their output of low class cloth : then the whole industry would benefit, although admittedly this would be at the expense not only of Japan but also of Lancashire, but I suppose, no such heresy will ever be tolerated by the Government of this country.

So, as we have not got the benefit in this country of a Government like the Japanese Government and as we are poor beggars, we have to take whatever is offered to us. I know some of my friends opposite want me to join them in a heroic gesture. They want me to say, " We wanted bread, you throw us a crust ; we cast it back in your face ". But that is all very well for the politician. (Laughter.) We have to live on that crust, and if it prolongs our existence by even one hour, we cannot afford to be proud and spurn it.

[Sir Victor Sassoon.]

The position is that the mill industry is like a poor wounded man lying in the road. Mr. Jamnadas Mehta says, "This man needs an ambulance". Mr. Jamnadas is entirely right. He does need an ambulance to take him to the hospital, but all that is offered to him is a broken crutch. He cannot go far or fast on this crutch, but he takes hold of it and stumbles towards the town in the hope that somebody will help him on the road. But Mr. Jamnadas says he should not take the crutch but remain lying on the road while he apprises the municipal authorities. Unfortunately, Mr. Jamnadas cannot guarantee to us that we will ever get this ambulance or I would certainly join him. (An Honourable Member : "It might be the funeral".)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban): If you work with me you will get it.

Sir Victor Sassoon : I say on the floor of this House that unless there is a change in world conditions, this protection which is offered us is not enough. I tell the Government that it is taking a very serious risk. I tell the Government that it is taking the risk of receiving the congratulations of our foreign competitors for having so successfully crippled, if not killed, the second largest industry in this country.

And so, I appeal to Mr. Neogy not to press his amendment, because, I know that the last thing in the mind of Mr. Neogy and his friends is to do anything to wreck the Indian industry for the benefit of foreign competitors. (An Honourable Member : "Not yet".) I know that. But I must warn Mr. Neogy and his friends that if he persists in his amendment and if he carries it, it means the dropping of this Bill : it means that the Government will have the right to say to him afterwards, if anything untoward happens to our industry, "Whatever the defects of our Bill it did afford protection to the coarse yarn manufacture of the country, and by rejecting this Bill, you have given India's foreign competitors the opportunity of attacking this vital spot, and had this not happened, the industry might have carried on?" It is because I know that the bulk of the Members of this House have no antagonism to the mill industry, which does not only consist of a few millowners, not only consist of a few thousand shareholders, but consists of a population of mill agents, shareholders, and working people, and know that everything that hurts us (the masters) is not going to be borne by us alone, but is also going to be borne by the work people, I feel that I shall not have made my appeal in vain.

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I take it, Mr. President, that the Honourable Baronet who has just spoken attaches a particularly "high calorific value" to any crumbs that may be thrown by the Honourable gentleman opposite me, and possibly, he thinks that even a broken crutch supplied by the Government of India to a crippled industry possesses great "calorific value".

An Honourable Member : No, none at all.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : For, I think he and his friends have carried mendicancy to the last limit. Having themselves admitted that the measure of protection offered in this Bill is a very meagre one, I cannot understand why they are prepared to accept, with gratitude, the modicum of mock sympathy which has been exhibited on the other side of the House. (Sir Victor Sassoon : " Not with gratitude ".) Since the time of Newton, and what could never have been intelligible to him, a new calculus, it seems, has been invented, by which the same set of figures can be juggled so as to produce any kind of inference. (Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : " Differential Calculus ".) For instance, my Honourable friend Mr. Chetty, this morning, worked out figures—and he is always strong in facts and figures—and he tried to prove to us that the effect of this Bill would be to hit the handloom weavers to a very small extent only. I noticed one device. He is a great statistician, I am not. He will pardon me if I am slightly sarcastic. He employed a method which I have seen in shops like Whiteaway Laidlaw when they have a " sale " on. When they want you to buy a pair of socks for Rs. 4, they generally put it down at Rs. 3-15-0, so that when you look at it at first, you feel that you are paying only Rs. 3 and something. Similarly, Mr. Chetty compared the 6 million handloom spinners and weavers to the 4 or 5 lakhs of workmen employed by the mill industry. I observed the juxtaposition of the two figures 5 and 6, but one was in terms of lakhs and the other in terms of millions. Even if we are to accept the figures of the Honourable Mr. Chetty that only 8 per cent.—I believe that was his figure—of the handloom industry would be affected by this Bill, I think it does not require a great mathematician to find out that even 8 per cent. of 6 millions works out to a higher figure than the percentage of the 4 or 5 lakhs of people who are employed in the mill industry, who, on the computation of the millowners themselves, would suffer if this Bill be rejected. Sir Victor Sassoon said that, if Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar's figures were correct, namely, that some of the people in the handloom industry get only three annas a day, then it was time that Sir Victor Sassoon and his friends should get them employed in his own mills. Well, Sir, I would invite the mill-owners of Bombay, or anywhere else in the world, to employ the six million handloom weavers in India. He might have made a debating point, and I don't grudge him that. But can he employ this large mass of the population of India who are engaged in the handloom industry and pay them at the rate of Rs. 30 a month ? Besides, Sir, figures are elusive. I do not, first of all, accept that in most places, the handloom people get only 3 annas a day. That is a figure which I am not prepared to accept. But I will accept this, that if their wages, their earnings, are very low, they have other advantages while they live in the villages. There is, for instance, always a little land attached to their handloom industry.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : I would ask my friend to divide the production—over 30 crores are said to be the production—by the 6 million who work, and you will then get the figure.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : I do not think that sort of average appeals to me at all ; it is fallacious ; because, there are many people who may be getting only a very small wage in the handloom industry, but who may be occupied in other industries. I am not going into the mathematics of that. But I submit that their earnings from the handloom industry do not represent their total earnings. And when we calculate " real wages " we have to calculate the other advantages that are derived from their living in their villages. I hope, I need not pursue that further.

I think the Honourable Baronet is very wise in not calling this mill industry a national industry. That was the great mistake which was made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Fazal Rahimtulla. Because, what do we find here in India ? We find here, as in every country, that these vested interests are the allies of the powers that be for the time being, and the powers that be to-day are powers which are not only not national but definitely anti-national. Sir, to think of the mill industry as a national industry, I have to forget that history of repression of strikes by means of fire-arms, that history which has been written in letters of the blood of my countrymen by the class of gentlemen who sit on those benches there (pointing to the Treasury Benches), the Collectors and Magistrates of districts.

[Mr. T. C. Goswami.]

Then, as regards Japan, the Honourable Baronet told us that Japan cannot under the Treaty erect a tariff wall against India. I find in the Bill presented by the Honourable Sir George Rainy that he has hardly been able to avoid mentioning Japan prominently even in his statement of Objects and Reasons attached to the Bill. This Bill is obviously intended to hit Japan ; and may not Japan retaliate ? The pivot of this Bill is—I would like to emphasise this point though it has been brought out already—the pivot of this Bill is to be found in certain figures given in the Report of the Tariff Board at page 19. There it is shown that Japanese yarn has been coming into this country in increasingly larger quantities, whereas Lancashire has been able more or less to maintain its export to India of piecegoods. It would be idle for any side of this House to pretend that this Bill is not aimed at Japan. I have no particular love for Japan, but I think every Indian patriot ought to realise that the history of India in the future may not entirely be determined by the Government of India Act, and that even in the near future we might be at a disadvantage if we alienate the sympathies of a great Asiatic power like Japan. Further, Sir, a Bill which deliberately aims at crippling Japan and upholding Lancashire, is and must be, an object of abomination to every patriotic Indian. And why ? Because our political dependence is bound up with our economic dependence,—the big battalions of the foreign powers here are maintained for the purpose of keeping England's economic hold on this country. That is a fact which no Indian patriot can afford to forget.

And, Sir, I appeal even to the millowners of Bombay, to reject what I have called this modicum of mock sympathy and to take a truly national view of this matter. There was a time, not very many years ago, when I felt proud to walk the streets of Bombay. There was a time, not many years ago, when the names of some of the Captains of industry in Bombay were names that were hallowed in every household in India. There was a time—when I for the first time visited Bombay—I was filled with pride to discover the contrast between Bombay and Calcutta, to discover that in Bombay it was not the sola topee but the pugree and the native cap—I use the word "native" deliberately—which predominated. I tell you frankly I felt that. Then it came to me as a great surprise 3 or 4 years ago that these great captains of industry of whom we had thought so much, had so utterly mismanaged their business that Bombay was in danger of an economic collapse. Sir, we, who come from the paddy fields of Bengal, could hardly dream of the crores and millions that were supposed to have been made and lost by the people of Bombay. Now we find that the mill industry, that great mill industry of Bombay, has come with its begging bowl for a few lakhs of rupees. I do not say this in any spirit of provincial jealousy. Far from it, I say this from my heart, and I feel it very strongly, that my countrymen have mismanaged their business. As on their own admission this Bill does not give anything like adequate protection to the mill industry in Bombay, it is only consistent with self-respect, it is only consistent with a national attitude, that they should reject this offer.

I have very little more to say except this. I do not wish in the course of my speech to raise a point of order. But, Mr. President, you will remember that a few years ago, in 1924, a question was raised whether those Honourable Members who are directly interested in the vote of the House should be allowed to vote one way or the other,—a question which I shall not discuss beyond just mentioning to you. Probably the matter will receive your consideration.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, my only excuse for asking the indulgence of the House at this late hour is the great importance of the problem with which we are dealing. I do not think I need say anything to express my full and deep sympathy with the handloom weaver. I have the proud privilege of being able to say that to the best of my belief, excepting the socks, there is not even one inch of the clothing on my body which has not been made out of handspun yarn and handwoven cloth. I do not make any difference between Japanese yarn and English yarn, or any other outside yarn. To me the yarn that is not of India is foreign yarn, and even there I prefer handspun yarn and cloth to mill yarn and cloth. At the same time, I must say that the mill industry also has my full sympathy. I think my Honourable friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, did extremely well when he pointed out the great service that the cotton mill industry has done to India. What would have been the position of India if the mill industry had not developed to the extent it has developed, and if it was not supplying about 40 per cent. of the cloth that we use ? Therefore, we have to look at both the mill industry and the handloom industry as national industries, and we have to extend our sympathy and support to both. I do not wish the mill industry to be benefited or helped at the expense of the handloom industry. But I wish to see what the danger at present is which is facing the cotton mill industry. And here I would ask my Honourable friends who are interested in India's welfare to look at the question from the national point of view. To me the question at this moment, is not the acts of omission and commission of the mill industry, nor the mistakes of some millowners. If they committed these, I do not apologise for them. I regret their mistakes. If they have not improved the conditions of the working of the mills to the extent that we desire, I regret it, and I join with my Honourable friends who have spoken on the subject in appealing to them to make those conditions as good as those existing in any other part of the world. This is not the time to discuss the shortcomings of our brethren who are engaged in this national industry. I am grieved to find an attitude of hostility against the millowners of Bombay and of other places. I have been grieved to hear remarks made against them in a spirit which would lead one to think that the millowners stood by themselves on one side and the workers and others on the opposite side. The millowners too are our own brethren, as patriotic and as much interested in the welfare of the country as any of us, and those of them that are not, will not be converted to our view if we go on abusing them and regarding them as opponents of the general welfare of the community. We have to think of the problem before us as one that concerns the whole country. The millowners as well as the mill hands are our brethren, and we have to see what service both can render to the country in developing this national industry and shutting out foreign manufactures. We have to look at the question in that light. As regards the question of protection which is now before us the point is whether the mill industry has been hit hard by foreign competition. Everybody has admitted that the mill industry has not worked under ideal conditions. This may be a legitimate point of complaint. We have to tell our friends the millowners of what more they have to do. I have no quarrel with anyone on that point. But that should not be the deciding factor in determining the course of action which we are to follow to-day. I submit, Sir, the question before us is whether this national industry does stand in need of help, whether it is being hit hard by foreign competition. We have the figures given by the Tariff Board and these have been cited by many people. Japan has been sending us over 20 million pounds of yarn for many years. And China which sent us only 4,000 pounds, a year ago, is now sending more than 2 millions of pounds of yarn. These are the facts that stare us in the face. Is it for the good of India that so much foreign yarn should come into this country ? I consider it a matter of deep shame for the Government of India and the people of India that India which grows so much of cotton should allow any of its cotton to be exported to Japan and not change it into yarn and cloth. Bearing that in mind, our determination should be to wipe off this shame. I have nothing to say against our Japanese friends. I honour them for their patriotism. I honour them for having developed this cotton industry as they have developed it. I wish them all prosperity and greater power. But we have to learn a lesson from them. That lesson is that the Government in charge of the country should unite with the people in giving real protection to the industries of the country and in building them up as Japan has done during the last thirty years. Japan takes cotton from India so many thousands of miles away and brings it back to India, spun and woven, and dumps the Indian market with it at a cost below that at which the Indian manufacturer is able to spin yarn. It has done so because of the help which the Government of Japan have given and the tender care have they bestowed upon the development of the cotton industry in Japan. That is what the Government of India have to do and we have to contribute our share towards it. Our share towards it will be that we should agree to pay the penalty for the crime of omission of the Government of India and of the people of India put together in not utilising all the cotton that India grows, for allowing any part of this cotton to go out of India to Japan or China or anywhere else. That price we have to pay because the mill industry is exposed to danger to-day. We have to pay the penalty by accepting even this miserable measure of support which the Government of India is extending to this industry. We are placed on the horns of a dilemma. It is the case of a woman who has got the husband to be hit on the one side and the son to be hit on the other. We are in that perilous position. India is unable to decide what is right for her people, not being given the power by our English fellow subjects who have come by Providence to rule over us of deciding what is good for us. We are here left at the mercy of an irresponsible Government, which is neither responsible to this Assembly, nor responsible to the people of India, nor it seems responsible to God himself. In the situation, that Government decides what it shall give to India. It has got many considerations underlying its decision. We the representatives of the people have not the power even to get the Government to accept the Report of the Tariff Board which the Government itself appointed. The Tariff Board recommended that both yarn and piecegoods should be taxed. The Government have picked up the one item of yarn and they present it to us and say " You take this or perish ". We are now in this unfortunate position. If we say " We will not have it, you take it back ", then the result of it would be not merely the loss of 12½ lakhs to Bombay. I am not concerned at this moment with the small gain to Bombay, but I am concerned with this—that you are allowing the Chinese and the Japanese a great opportunity to send more and more yarn into this country and making it more difficult for the mill industry to produce that yarn and compete with the foreign manufacturer. That is the situation which confronts us. No doubt the handloom industry runs the risk of being hurt. I am deeply sorry that it is so, but let us take courage in both our hands and face the situation. If we have not the power to compel Government to put on an import duty on piecegoods, let us not reject the Bill before us. Let us accept it, knowing that it will hurt our fellowmen, the handloom weavers, to some extent. Why do I say this ? I say it in the same spirit in which we decided to use Swadeshi cloth. In the Congress of 1906 which was presided over by that Grand Old Man of India, Dadabhoy Naoroji, those who belonged to the two camps as they were then called, the moderates and the extremists, passed a Resolution that we should use Swadeshi cloth even at a sacrifice. My friend Lala Lajpat Rai was one of those who settled this matter with other friends, and from that time forward we have considered it a religious duty to our country that we should use Swadeshi cloth even at a sacrifice. I say " Let us at this juncture help the mill industry even at a sacrifice to some extent of the interests of the handloom weavers ". Let us unite and combine all our forces to force the Government to do what is right and just, namely, to put on an import duty, an additional import duty, on cotton piecegoods. But let us accept the Bill. When I ask my friends to do so, I do so with the consciousness that there will be some loss to the handloom weaver. I submit we should bear that loss. We should also remember that we do not want any cloth of foreign yarn to be manufactured in our country. I wish our handloom weavers to use more and more hand-spun yarn or if they cannot do so to use country-made yarn. I wish to discard the use of foreign yarn and foreign cloth, not that I have the smallest feeling of ill-will or any desire to hurt our fellowmen outside India. I honour them and love them as fellowmen. All that I wish to do is what they do in their own country. My Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon was perfectly right when he said that when the Japanese find that they are able to produce their own pig-iron, they will not hesitate to put on a duty on the foreign imports of that commodity. They have done so in the cases of other articles, and I expect them to do the same in the case of pig-iron if it becomes necessary for them to do so. We have to do the same here to-day. We have to shut out foreign yarn because it is a great threat to the Indian mill industry. We use all the weapons we have, even if we have to pay a somewhat heavy price for some of them. I appeal to all my friends on this side to look at the question in that point of view. I am pained that we should be in this position of helplessness before the Government. But I submit, let us not, because we feel the pain of it, because we feel the humiliation of it, because we feel the helplessness of it—let us not throw away this limited help that is coming to the Bombay industry. As I have said before, it is not the 12½ lakhs which count with me. They do not weigh at all in the balance. What weighs with me is not the gain of the Bombay mill industry to that small extent, but the danger we are exposed to of Japanese and Chinese manufacturers dumping their yarn in this country. They are in a position perhaps to reduce the cost price even further, and they may do so. Already you have heard that yarn of coarser kinds is coming from China. If they can send in more and more yarn and make the life of your industry more miserable and uncertain, where shall we be ? You must remember, as Mr. Jamnadas Mehta reminded us, that the cotton mill industry has grown up in India without any help from the Government of this country. It is a matter which cannot be disputed. It has grown in spite of the handicap which the Government placed upon it in the shape of the cotton excise duty. Now the industry has been freed from that incubus and it is struggling against other heavy odds. Let us by all means point out all the reforms needed in the management of our mills. Let us fight our friends of the Bombay industry on that account. Let us fight them in the interests of the labourers, the mill hands. Let us use all our strength to get them to do whatever justice demands. But let us be just. Let us study the conditions under which they are working ; and remember they are working for the nation, for the country ; that they are the servants of the motherland as much as we are. Let us see that we deal with them also justly. At the present moment the great danger is that if we do not put on this duty it will be easier for Japanese and Chinese merchants to dump their yarn in large quantities in our country. And when that has been done you will be yielding to the temptation to use that foreign yarn because it is cheaper. You are thinking of the loss to the handloom weaver. Did you forget the higher cost when you preached that hand-spun yarn should be used ? Do I not pay a higher price for cloth made of hand-spun, home-spun yarn than I would if I bought the foreign cloth ? But if there is a body of opinion which has deliberately decided to encourage hand-spun yarn and cloth, let that body of opinion remember the situation at this moment and decide the question from the true national point of view. It is quite easy for any foreign manufacturer to reduce his price and thereby compete with our own products. Will you yield to the temptation of the cheaper cost of cloth, or will you remember that this is an insidious poison which will poison the body politic of industry in India ; and remembering that, look at the question in the correct light and decide, even though it be with pain, with keen regret that we are not in a position to help the Bombay mill industry in the right way, in the way which would not inflict injury on the handloom industry. But decide that you will, though with very unwilling hearts, with a consciousness of your duty to the mill industry and to the country, accept this measure, accept it with a sense of sorrow and of shame that we have not the power to put the right measure on the Statute-book, and that we are compelled by the circumstances in which we are placed, to accept this faulty and half-hearted measure. (Applause.)

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : I should like at the outset of my speech, Mr. President, to clear away a small misunderstanding which occurred yesterday. More than one speaker was inclined to censure me somewhat severely under the belief that I had described the cotton mill industry as a national industry, and implied that the handloom industry was not a national industry. I was not conscious of any sense of guilt on the subject because I was pretty sure I had not used the words complained of. But I thought it better to await the reporter's notes of my speech, and I have found that the phrase " national industry " does not occur anywhere in my speech. The phrase " national interest " does, and on each occasion in the same context, when I was urging upon the House that in the conflict of interests which undoubtedly exists between the two industries it was in the national interest that in this case the interests of the cotton mills should be preferred. Obviously, unless I did hold that view, I could not have brought forward this Bill at all.

It would clearly be impossible for me, Mr. President, after the number of most interesting and able speeches to which we have listened from all sides of the House advocating many different points of view, to attempt anything like a complete survey of the debate. It will be necessary, therefore, for me to limit myself to the more important and obvious points with which I ought to deal. Indeed, quite naturally in the circumstances, the debate has taken a somewhat discursive course, and at a good many points cotton yarn has not been the subject which has held the most prominent place in the minds of speakers or in the mind of this House. But I think the House will recognize that, if I were to deal with all the questions that have been raised, I am afraid before very long, Sir, you would be asking how much longer my speech was going to go on. Now my opponents, the supporters of the motion moved by my friend Mr. Neogy, can be classified in three categories. There are those who genuinely apprehend that the consequences to the handloom industry may be very serious. There are those again who are apprehensive as to the consequences that the passage of the Bill may entail in the way of possible retaliatory action from another country. And there are those who will have nothing to do with the Bill because the Government of India ought to have done something else or something more. I will try to say something about each class. I desire in anything I say to speak with great respect of those who have urged the claims of the handloom industry, urged them with obvious sincerity and obviously under a deep impression of the injury which that industry might suffer if the Bill is passed. I believe myself after giving all the attention I can to the subject that those apprehensions are exaggerated. But if they are not exaggerated, then all I can say is that far from it being a reasonable thing to condemn this Bill as doing nothing at all for the mill industry, if it is going to inflict very serious injury on the handloom weavers it must equally give very substantial assistance to the mill industry. That is in the nature of the case. The only means by which this additional duty can operate is by raising the price of yarn, and to the extent that it raises the price, the mills will gain, and the handloom industry will suffer. That is unquestionable. But, as I have already said, I have endeavoured to place clearly before the House the reasons which led the Government of India to think that only a comparatively small quantity of the yarn used by the handloom weavers would be raised in price. I do not want once more to go over the ground which I have already traversed, and it is the more unnecessary to do so as my friend, Mr. Chetty, put the substance of my argument with admirable clearness and brevity. But I would like to deal with just one point in this connection. It has been suggested that if we put on this 1½ anna duty on cotton yarn, what is there to prevent—it is said—the millowners combining to put up prices against the handloom weaver ? Well, I think the correct reply to that question is that there has been nothing in the previous history of the mill industry to suggest that such a combination is a probable development. Those who have studied attentively the Report of the Tariff Board will remember that on one point after another the Tariff Board drew attention to the necessity of greater combination amongst the millowners to protect their own interests, and pointed out how much they might do by combination to make themselves more prosperous. These passages in the Tariff Board's Report quite clearly indicate that a combination on the part of the millowners to exploit the public or to exploit the handloom weaver is not a development about which we need have any great apprehension. Indeed I should feel more hopeful about the future of the industry if I had more hope that the millowners might be able to combine. In moments of pessimism, I have sometimes been tempted to think that the laudable pursuit of overawing the Governor General in Council is almost the only inducement strong enough to bring them together. May I express the hope that perhaps the practical experience of combination they have had in recent months may not be without a salutary effect, and that we may in the future witness a closer combination of the millowners, not for the purpose of exploiting the public, and not for the purpose of inflicting an injury on the handloom weaver, but for the natural and proper objects for which trade combinations exist. I should like now, Mr. President, to deal very briefly with the apprehensions which have been expressed by certain speakers as to the consequences which the passage of this Bill might entail owing to action by other countries. I should like to deal with this very briefly, because it is not a matter about which much can wisely be said. Quite clearly, when India is claiming for herself the rights to administer her system of tariff duties having regard solely to the interests of India, and irrespective of other interests, then quite clearly we must expect that other countries also who are concerned will claim and will exercise the same right. Indeed to expect anything else would be absurd. Therefore, if the Imperial Japanese Government is of opinion that it is to their national interest that the duty on pig-iron should be raised, I imagine that unquestionably they will take action accordingly. But what I am prepared to say is this, that we have no reason whatever to believe at present that there is any measure in contemplation which would amount to discrimination against India. Were such a measure contemplated, that of course would raise the whole question about the trade agreement, just as the same question would have been raised had the Government of India accepted the proposal put forward by Mr. Noyce for a differential duty against Japan. But we have at present no reason whatever to anticipate discriminatory action. We have seen a good deal in the newspapers which indicates that the pig-iron interests in Japan are agitating on the subject, just as the cotton mill interests of this country have been agitating here. What the result of that agitation may be, it is quite impossible for the Government of India to forecast, but what I wish to bring out at this point is that, at present, the Government of India have no reason to anticipate any discriminatory action directed against India. I will now come to the third category of my Honourable opponents, that is to say, those who hold that they will have nothing to do with the Bill, because the Government of India have refused to do something else or something more. Now I have the greatest personal regard for all the Members who have taken this line, but will they forgive me if I say that I cannot admire the method in which they conduct their thinking? It is an attitude with which I find it entirely impossible to sympathise, although their heroism or romanticism may perhaps deserve a certain amount of admiration. But I could not help feeling some sympathy with my friend, Sir Victor Sassoon, when he pointed out that it was all very well for those who were not directly interested to take a high line about these things and to say that unless one can get something really worth having, one will refuse to have anything at all. I would most seriously ask the House not to come to their decision on this question in a spirit of that kind, because I do very deeply feel that it is an attitude, however natural, which is not quite worthy of this House. After all, there is a serious question to be decided. Irrespective of what the Government might have done, the House has definitely to answer the question to-day whether they will accept the proposal in the Bill or will reject it, or will adopt the dilatory motion of my friend, Mr. Neogy, which, as the Honourable the Leader of the House pointed out, would be practically equivalent to rejection. I must retrace my footsteps for a moment because Mr. Belvi made an appeal to me, about one point—I think he asked about two points but I only got one of them down clearly. His question was this : " Why are the Government of India prepared to find a sum of Rs. 85 lakhs by way of removing or reducing duties if they were unable to provide the same sum in bounties ? " Well, I would like to draw attention to the fact that the Tariff Board proposed both a bounty and the removal of the duties, and they also proposed the removal of a large number of the duties in a form which was practically equivalent to a direct bounty to the cotton mill industry ; that is to say, a good many of the duties were not to be removed altogether but special arrangements were to be made by which the cotton mills would be allowed to import their stores free of duty or to obtain a refund after importation.

[Sir George Rainy.]

I think I explained in one or other of the speeches which I made earlier on these subjects that the Government of India were unable to agree either to the bounty or to an arrangement by which the cotton mill industry should import free of duty stores on which other industries had to pay duty, and for that reason they found it necessary to modify the Tariff Board's proposals and to go as far as they could in the direction of removing the duties altogether, so that there would be no discrimination between industry and industry. That is the reason why the Government of India were prepared to sacrifice a good deal of revenue by removing the duties, and were not prepared to grant a bounty to the cotton mill industry, or to give a refund of duty in a form which was equivalent to a bounty. My friend, Mr. Goswami, spoke with some bitterness about what he believed to be the underlying intention of the Bill which, he said, was aimed at Japan and conceived in the interests of Lancashire. Now, Mr. President, after all what are the actual facts ? Here we have before us the recommendation of Mr. Noyce in the Tariff Board's Report, that a differential duty should be imposed against Japan both on cloth and on yarn. What would have been the effect of such a duty ? It would obviously have been in effect a measure of direct British preference. What did the Government of India do ? They rejected that proposal and what they actually did was this. Although the Tariff Board had found that Lancashire was in no way concerned in the competition which was injuring the Indian mills the Government of India have nevertheless proposed a duty which affects the imports from Great Britain and from all other countries in exactly the same way as the imports from China and Japan. If that is acting in the interests of Lancashire, it seems to me it is action which cannot be prompted by much intelligence, but if it is action, as I most sincerely say it is, Mr President, which the Government of India are taking in what they conceive to be the interests of India, what then ? However much my friends on the other side may think we are wrong and I honour and respect their opinions—I do ask that they will believe that those of us on this side who have to incur a great deal of responsibility in these matters are honestly doing our best in what we conceive to be the interests of India. (Applause.) I am not in any way ashamed to claim that, Mr. President, and I believe the time will come when the great majority of the people of India will concede our claim. I would like, in conclusion, Mr. President, just to remind the House once more of the decision which it falls to them to make. I endeavoured in my opening speech on this debate to state the case as fairly as I could and not to plead any point higher than it could fairly be pleaded. Undoubtedly the House has a decision to make and must come to a conclusion whether the danger to the cotton mill industry, if the duty is not imposed, exceeds the danger to the handloom industry if it is imposed. That is the real question which the House has got to decide to-day and nothing that may be said about the Government of India being really responsible can in fact prevent the House from deciding it. It will decide it. I do not disclaim responsibility on behalf of the Government of India for the position in which the House has to record its vote to-day. That would be an absurd thing to do. But, nevertheless, the House has a responsibility of its own which in the nature of things it cannot devolve on anyone else. Things are what they are ; the consequences will be what they will be. Why then should we deceive ourselves ? And I would again impress upon the House what my Honourable friend the Finance Member said this forenoon. If we put this question off, if we say we have not yet enough information to enable us to come to a decision, we shall nevertheless in fact decide it and decide it in the negative. Events will not wait for our tardy consideration. We cannot foretell what the next few months may produce. I do urge, Mr. President, that the information before this House is probably as much as we are ever likely to get on these complicated questions. I quite agree that if we ask Local Governments to express their opinions about the effect on the handloom industry, we shall get a great many opinions, some of them valuable, some of them perhaps not so valuable, but in the end, we shall not know a great deal more as to the probable effect of this duty than we know at present. I would, therefore, as strongly as I can, urge upon the House, first, that the time has now arrived when the question ought to be decided, and, second, that there is no real escape from decision by way of delay, and that in fact and to all purposes if my friend Mr. Neogy's motion is carried, the House will have decided in the negative and the Bill will practically be dead. I will not at this late hour, Mr. President, weary the House longer with further remarks. I think that the question has been debated in a very full and very interesting manner and I hope that those Members to whose appeals for information I have not been able to reply will understand the reason that I am unwilling to weary the House at this time by a long speech. (Applause.)

[Sir George Rainy.]

Mr. President : The original question was :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

(A division was called for.)

Diwan Chaman Lall : Before you put this amendment to the vote, may I request you, Sir, to give a ruling on the point raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Goswami, as to whether those Members who have pecuniary interest in this measure are entitled to vote or not ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, may I refer to May's Parliamentary Practice, page 368:

"In the Commons it is a rule that no member who has a direct pecuniary interest in a question shall be allowed to vote upon it : but in order to operate as a disqualification, his interest must be immediate and personal and not merely of a general or remote character. On the 17th July 1811 the rule was thus explained by Mr. Speaker Abbot. This interest must be a direct pecuniary interest and separately belonging to the persons whose votes were questioned and not in common with the rest of His Majesty's subjects or on a matter of State policy."

I understand, Mr. President, that your predecessor ruled that they could vote, though, I understand, Honourable Members who had an interest refrained from voting on their own responsibility. May I submit that directors of mills would certainly have a direct, immediate and personal interests ? Whether it would apply to shareholders or not is another question, but certain managing directors and agents of mills have a direct and personal interest. I leave it, Sir, to the Chair to decide.

Mr. President : What is the ruling that the Honourable Member wants ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : I want your ruling, Sir, whether they can vote or not ?

Mr. President : What is the Honourable Member's contention ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : My contention is that they are not entitled to vote.

Mr. President : My predecessor has already ruled on a similar occasion that they are entitled to vote. It is entirely for them to consider whether in the circumstances in which they are placed they should vote or not.

The original question was :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The Assembly divided:

AYES—37.

Acharya, Mr. M. K.
Aiyangar, Mr. C. Duraiswamy.
Alexander, Mr. William.
Ayyangar, Mr. K. V. Rangaswami.
Ayyangar, Mr. M. S. Sesha.
Belvi, Mr. D. V.
Chaman Lall, Diwan.
Chunder, Mr. Nirmal Chunder.
Das, Mr. B.
Das, Pandit Nilakantha.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
Dutta, Mr. Srish Chandra.
Farookhi, Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Goswami, Mr. T. C.
Iyengar, Mr. A. Rangaswami.
Iyengar, Mr. S. Srinivasa.
Jogiah, Mr. Varahagiri Venkata.
Kidwai, Mr. Rafi Ahmad.
Mehta, Mr. Jamnadas M.
Mitra, Mr. Satyendra Chandra.
Mohammad Ismail Khan, Haji Chaudhury.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi Sayyid.
Naidu, Mr. B. P.
Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Pandya, Mr. Vidya Sagar.
Prakasam, Mr. T.
Rao, Mr. G. Sarvotham.
Shafee, Maulvi Mohammad.
Shervani, Mr. T. A. K.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Narayan Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Ram Narayan.
Sinha, Kumar Ganganand.
Sinha, Mr. Siddheswar.
Suhrawardy, Dr. A.
Sykes, Mr. E. F.

NOES—68.

Abdoola Haroon, Haji.
Abdul Haye, Mr.
Abdul Qaiyum, Nawab Sir Sahibzada.
Abdullah Haji Kasim, Khan Bahadur Haji.
Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nasir-ud-din.
Anwar-ul-Azim, Mr.
Ashrafuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nawabzada Sayid.
Ayangar, Mr. V. K. Aravamudha.
Ayyangar, Rao Bahadur Narasimha Gopalaswami.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Bhuto, Mr. W. W. Illahibaksh.
Blackett, The Honourable Sir Basil.
Coatman, Mr. J.
Cocke, Mr. H. G.
Cosgrave, Mr. W. A.
Courtenay, Mr. R. H.
Crawford, Colonel J. D.
Crerar, The Honourable Mr. J.
Crofton, Mr. R. M.
Dakhan, Mr W. M. P. Ghulam Kadir Khan.
Dalal, Mr. A. R.
Dalal, Sardar Sir Bomanji.
Donovan, Mr. J. T.
Dunnett, Mr. J. M.
Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Raja.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J.
Gour, Sir Hari Singh.
Haigh, Mr. P. B.

Haji, Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand.
Hla Tun Pru, U.
Irving, Mr. Miles.
Ismail Khan, Mr.
Iswar Saran, Munshi.
Jayakar, Mr. M. R.
Jinnah, Mr. M. A.
Joshi, Mr. N. M.
Jowahir Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Kabul Singh Bahadur, Captain.
Keane, Mr. M.
Khin Maung, U.
Kikabhai Premchand, Mr.
Kirk, Mr. R. T. F.
Kunzru, Pandit Hirday Nath.
Lamb, Mr. W. S.
Malaviya, Pandit Madan Mohan.
Mitchell, Mr. D. G.
Mitra, The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath.
Muhammad Nawaz Khan, Lieut.-Sardar.
Mukherjee, Mr. S. C.
Parsons, Mr. A. A. L.
Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir.
Rahimtulla, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim.
Rainy, The Honourable Sir George.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Roy, Mr. K. C.
Ruthnaswamy, Mr. M.
Sams, Mr. H. A.
Sarda, Rai Sahib Harbilas.
Sassoon, Sir Victor.
Shah Nawaz, Mian Mohammad.
Siddiqi, Mr. Abdul Qadir.
Singh, Rai Bahadur S. N.
Tirloki Nath, Lala.
Tonkinson, Mr. H.
Wright, Mr. W. T. M.
Yakub, Maulvi Muhammad.
Young, Mr G. M.
Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member from Bengal wish to proceed with his next amendment ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : No, Sir.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The Assembly divided :

AYES—68.

Abdul Haye, Mr.
Abdul Qaiyum, Nawab Sir Sahibzada.
Abdullah Haji Kasim, Khan Bahadur Haji.
Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nasir-ud-din.
Aney, Mr. M. S.
Anwar-ul-Azim, Mr.
Ashrafuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nawabzada Sayid.
Ayangar, Mr. V. K. Aravamudha.
Ayyangar, Rao Bahadur Narasimha Gopalaswami.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Bhuto, Mr. W. W. Illahibaksh.
Blackett, The Honourable Sir Basil.
Coatman, Mr. J.
Cocke, Mr. H. G.
Cosgrave, Mr. W. A.
Courtenay, Mr. R. H.
Crawford, Colonel J. D.
Crerar, The Honourable Mr. J.
Crofton, Mr. R. M.
Dakhan, Mr. W. M. P. Ghulam Kadir Khan.
Dalal, Mr. A. R.
Dalal, Sardar Sir Bomanji.
Donovan, Mr. J. T.
Dunnett, Mr. J. M.
Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Raja.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J.
Gour, Sir Hari Singh.
Haigh, Mr. P. B.
Haji, Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand.
Hla Tun Pru, U.
Irving, Mr. Miles.
Ismail Khan, Mr.

Jayakar, Mr. M. R.
Jinnah, Mr. M. A.
Joshi, Mr. N. M.
Jowahir Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Kabul Singh Bahadur, Captain.
Keane, Mr. M.
Khin Maung, U.
Kikabhai Premchand, Mr.
Kirk, Mr. R. T. F.
Kunzru, Pandit Hirday Nath.
Lamb, Mr. W. S.
Malaviya, Pandit Madan Mohan.
Mitchell, Mr. D. G.
Mitra, The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath.
Mohammad Ismail Khan, Haji Chaudhury.
Muhammad Nawaz Khan, Lieut. Sardar.
Mukherjee, Mr. S. C.
Parsons, Mr. A. A. L.
Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir.
Rahimtulla, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim.
Rainy, The Honourable Sir George.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Roy, Mr. K. C.
Ruthnaswamy, Mr. M.
Sams, Mr. H. A.
Sarda, Rai Sahib Harbilas.
Sassoon, Sir Victor.
Shah Nawaz, Mian Mohammad.
Siddiqi, Mr. Abdul Qadir.
Singh, Rai Bahadur S. N.
Tirloki Nath, Lala.
Tonkinson, Mr. H.
Wright, Mr. W. T. M.
Yakub, Maulvi Muhammad.
Young, Mr. G. M.
Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir.

NOES—37.

Acharya, Mr. M. K.
Aiyangar, Mr. C. Duraiswamy.
Alexander, Mr. William.
Ayyangar, Mr. K. V. Rangaswami.
Ayyangar, Mr. M. S. Sesha.
Belvi, Mr. D. V.
Bhargava, Pandit Thakur Das.
Chaman Lall, Diwan.
Chunder, Mr. Nirmal Chunder.
Das, Pandit Nilakantha.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
Dutta, Mr. Srish Chandra.
Farookhi,, Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Goswami, Mr. T. C.
Iswar Saran, Munshi.
Iyengar, Mr. A. Rangaswami.
Iyengar, Mr. S. Srinivasa.
Jogiah, Mr. Varahagiri Venkata.
Kidwai, Mr. Rafi Ahmad.
Mehta, Mr. Jamnadas M.
Mitra, Mr. Satyendra Chandra.
Mukhtar Singh, Mr.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi Sayyid
Naidu, Mr. B. P.
Pandya, Mr. Vidya Sagar.
Prakasam, Mr. T.
Rang Behari Lal, Lala.
Rao, Mr. G. Sarvotham.
Shafee, Maulvi Mohammad.
Shervani, Mr. T. A. K.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Narayan Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Ram Narayan.
Sinha, Kumar Ganganand.
Sinha, Mr. Siddheswar.
Sykes, Mr. E. F.

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I venture now, as I did in the Select Committee, to place a suggestion before the Honourable Sir George Rainy that in view of the fact that the handloom industry would be handicapped to a certain extent by the duties we are imposing, particular care should be taken in the various provinces to help that industry as far as possible. That was not included in the Report of the Select Committee because it was that that was a matter which was within the competence of the Local Governments. At that time, Sir, our suggestion was a general one, but I should now like to place a specific suggestion before the Honourable Member for Commerce.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The vote is against us. What is the use ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : If this duty hits the handloom weavers to the fullest extent, they will lose about 12 lakhs of rupees on their total earnings, which are believed to amount to more than 30 crores of rupees. Now, this sum may well be placed at the disposal of the Local Governments for the development of the handloom industry. Our duty is not done when we have said that it should get cheap yarn, even though the yarn is sold in this country at a price below that at which it can be produced in indigenous mills. No industry, not even the handloom industry, has a right to ask that it shall get its raw product in such a way as to kill indigenous industries. But it might well ask that the total amount which it would have to pay might be used in such a way as to benefit it ultimately. There are certain improvements that have been proposed by various people interested in the handloom industry. At this late hour I should not like to go into the matter at any length, but I do think that it is one deserving of the serious consideration of Government. Government is willing to part with Rs. 85 lakhs of its revenue, partly to help the millowners, but partly also to simplify the tariff. It can therefore well afford to forego 10 or 12 lakhs of its revenue and place it at the disposal of the Local Governments so that it might be used for the development of the handloom industry.

(At this stage several Honourable Members rose in their places.)

Mr. President : I had allowed Honourable Members sufficient latitude on the consideration stage, and I hope they will not make any speeches on this motion now.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I just want to say that I strongly support what has been said by my Honourable friend, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.

(At this stage Mr. B. Das rose in his seat.)

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member support the motion ?

Mr. B. Das : I will support it, but subject to certain observations. I am a protectionist and therefore I have no other alternative but to support this Bill and vote for the same. Government have put us in this predicament that, while we are very inadequately protecting the mill industry, we are at the same time killing another important industry—the handloom industry. I find that no Provincial Governments have sent in a note of warning to the Central Government or have protested against this measure. If industries are a transferred subject and no Provincial Governments have come forward with their opposition or protests to the Central Government, it is for them to find subsidies and bounties to protect handloom industries in their provinces, and my Honourable friend, Sir George Rainy, would have done better if he had also introduced a measure of bounties to protect the mill industry than by introducing a measure which will do the greatest harm to another very important industry.

[Mr. B. Das.]

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I say only one word ? I was certainly somewhat amused that my Honourable friend, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, after having voted against the handloom weavers, now lavishes sympathy upon them and wants the Central Government out of the revenue which is going to be foregone under another Bill to put some more funds in the hands of the Local Governments for the benefit of the handloom industry. When you have hit them directly, it seems to me useless to think of trying to prop them up indirectly.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would only say a single word. I think the Honourable Member who made this suggestion as regards the use to which the increase of revenue arising from the cotton duties might be put, cannot possibly expect me at this moment, without any previous notice on the subject, to express any opinion about his suggestion.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration. I do not think....

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. President : Under what Standing Order ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : I suggest it to you, Sir.

Mr. President : Why should the non-official section of the House be always in a hurry to get away early. The Chair expects their co-operation in getting through as much business as possible.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : There is a conference at 5 o'clock of Hindus and Muslims and we have got to attend it. For that reason alone I most reluctantly submit to you that the House might adjourn now.

Mr. President : My remarks do not apply to this particular occasion, but it is a general remark which I hope Honourable Members will bear in mind. The House will now stand adjourned till 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 8th September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 8th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Sir Denys de Saumerez Bray, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., C.B.E., M.L.A. (Foreign Secretary).

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Secretary of the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that at the meeting of the Council of State held on the 7th September 1927, the Council rejected the motion that the Bill to repeal and amend certain provisions of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, as passed by the Legislative Assembly, be taken into consideration."

Mr. President : I have received a few short notice questions from Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. I have admitted them as short notice questions and the Department has agreed to answer them ; but the Honourable Member is not here to put them.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : Mr. President, may I put them ?

(No answer was given.)

THE INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, as reported by the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

I do not think it is necessary that I should say much in support of this motion. The general principle of the Bill has already been accepted by the House and the amendments made in Select Committee are purely minor and of an unimportant character. It will suffice, I think, if I merely reiterate the main points about the Bill, namely, that it is an essential part of the fiscal policy of the Government of India that the materials of industry and machinery should be made as cheap as possible and that therefore the duty should be kept as low as possible ; in the second place, that all industries should as far as possible be treated alike and that no one industry should be allowed to import free the articles on which other industries have to pay duties, but in the third place that when the time comes to give practical effect to the policy of Government it is permissible and legitimate to give precedence to those industries which are passing through a period of depression. Therefore, in selecting the particular articles from which the duty is proposed to be removed, we have chosen those the removal of the duty on which is likely to assist the cotton textile industry.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Sir, I move.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move under Standing Order 44 that the Bill do stand recommitted to the Select Committee.

My reasons, Sir, for making this motion are briefly these : the effect of the Bill as reported by the Select Committee would be to cause a diminution in the revenues of the Government of India by a sum of Rs. 85 lakhs. This Bill has been definitely undertaken in order to give relief to the Indian textile industry. It is admitted that the total relief that the Indian textile industry can possibly get under this Bill is only Rs. 42½ lakhs and therefore we are asked to surrender from the revenues of India another sum of Rs. 42½ lakhs in order that the textile industry may benefit only to the extent of Rs. 42½ lakhs. I submit, Sir, that there is no warrant for this surrender of revenue and I submit that the Select Committee have not bestowed sufficient attention on the matter in order to see that only so much is taken out of the revenues of India as is absolutely necessary to give the relief which it is necessary to give to the textile industry. It will be recollected, Sir, that the special Tariff Board itself did not recommend that a general remission of duty upon all machinery such as is proposed in the present Bill should be given in order that the textile industry might benefit. The Tariff Board itself only confined its recommendation for relief to the duties on machinery pertaining to the textile industry. It was the Government in its Resolution declaring the policy of the Government in regard to the Tariff Board's recommendations that stated that this matter should be further examined. In paragraph 11 of the Resolution the Government of India have said as follows :

> "The removal of the import duty on machinery and on the materials of industry was recommended by the Fiscal Commission and is in accordance with the principle of the Resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly in 1923 that the fiscal policy of the Government of India may legitimately be directed towards fostering the development of industries in India. In giving effect to this principle as revenue considerations permit, the Government of India are prepared to give precedence to articles used chiefly by industries which are passing through a period of depression, but they would be unwilling to differentiate between industry and industry by allowing one industry to import free of duty articles on which other industries have to pay duty."

Sir, it is the Government of India that decided to expand the recommendations of the Textile Tariff Board with a view to have the remission of import duty on all machinery imported into this country. It is not stated that other industries, whose machinery will be freed from duty under this Bill, asked for this relief or that in pursuance of the recommendations of the Indian Fiscal Commission and the Legislative Assembly in 1923 the time has arrived to remove the duty upon all the class of machinery that is now comprised in the Bill. On the other hand, we find that in respect of such machinery under some parts of the Schedule at least, the Government have found that there has been an agitation in this country with a view to the development of indigenous industries and have found themselves compelled to put down amendments to withdraw certain classes of goods, imported machinery and machine made goods from the operation of this relief of duty. That shows, therefore, that the idea that there should be a general remission of duty upon all machinery is an idea which came into the minds of the Government of India unaffected either by the recommendations of the Tariff Board or by any demand from the people of this country. Sir, the Resolution of the Government of India having specifically referred to "revenue considerations", I consider it the duty of this House to examine whether it is necessary to make this large sacrifice of revenue for the purpose of affording a small relief to the textile industry. In doing that, I want to make it perfectly clear that we on this side of the House do not by any means want to take away any benefit which can properly be given to the textile industry by removing import duties upon stores or mill machinery. But what we do want to make clear is that the Government should not take advantage of this with a view to remove duties on other goods for purposes which, so far as we can see, we cannot divine.

Sir, it has been stated that it was difficult for the Select Committee to make a distinction between one class of machinery and another, and therefore when you want to relieve a particular kind of machinery on which duty is now imposed, it will necessarily have the effect of relieving the duty upon the same kind of machinery which might be imported for the use of other industries also. Sir, that is a matter upon which, I submit, this House has not had any guidance from the Honourable the Commerce Member. Neither the Tariff Board nor the Government in their Resolution have taken any such ground for putting this clause into the Bill. The Government definitely say that they would be "unwilling" to differentiate between one industry and another by allowing one industry to import machinery free of duty while making the other industry pay duty. It is not because it is not possible to make this differentiation in regard to the import duties, but because the Government are unwilling to make the differentiation. I say, Sir, that so far as we are concerned, while we are willing that the textile industry should have this relief, we are not willing that the revenues of this Government should diminish by more than the amount of this relief, for the extra revenue might otherwise be employed for far more profitable purposes.

The next point that I have got to make, Sir, is this, that so far as the difficulty of framing a Schedule which will give the necessary relief to the textile industry without making it necessary for the Government to relieve other machinery from duty is concerned, I say, Sir, the matter should be examined further. The Select Committee should have done their best to see that articles which could legitimately be kept out of the Schedule are kept out so that needless sacrifice of revenue is not made. I do not see, Sir, from the proceedings of the Select Committee that any attempt has been made to do this, and I want it to be distinctly understood that I do not want in making this motion to make any proposal of a dilatory character. All that I say is that this matter requires further examination and that this Bill should be recommitted to the Select Committee so that they may see that the actual relief that the textile industry gets is the actual loss of revenue that the exchequer has to bear. This is a point, Sir, which has not at all been examined, because we also find that the Schedules have been framed, no doubt, in a hurry,—and I can understand the difficulties of the Honourable the Commerce Member,—and therefore they do require re-examination. I find that the Honourable the Commerce Member himself has had to put down amendments in regard to the printing industry, in regard to the industry of type founders and various other classes of goods which they had included and which he now finds would be adversely affected by the proposals embodied in the original Bill. I therefore, think, Sir, that very much more attention has to be bestowed on this matter than it has been possible for the Select Committee to do, and I do hope that the Government will accept my motion and have this matter re-examined again by the Select Committee.

[Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar.]

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I rise at this stage, because I want to tell the House, and especially my friend Mr. Rangaswamy Iyengar, that the point which he has just now mentioned did not escape the attention of the Select Committee. The first point that struck us in the Select Committee was, whether the revenues of India and the budget position as forecasted by the Honourable the Finance Member, could stand this substantial decrease in revenue which would, for the six months now to be gone through, amount to 42 lakhs of rupees. But we felt, Sir, that as the Government came out with the suggestion of this remission of Rs. 85 lakhs, it was not for the Select Committee to go into the financial side of the question. We took it for granted that the Government of India had satisfied themselves that the revenue and the budget position did admit of this substantial reduction, and I propose, Sir, simply to leave this matter here Perhaps if the Honourable the Finance Member thinks it necessary, he might enlighten us further on this matter.

But the main question raised by my friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar is, whether the whole remission of 85 lakhs indicated or involved in this Bill will go to the benefit of the textile industry. The reply to it that was definitely given to us in the Select Committee by the Honourable the Commerce Member was ' No '. I do not think that the Government of India claim that they have yet a scientific method of adjusting taxation, and I say—subject to correction by the Honourable the Finance Member—that a truly scientific system of adjusting taxation has yet to be devised. A reference to the Schedules attached to the Bill, especially under Item 8 of the Schedule, will show that the items marked 18A, B, C and D do not include only items of machinery concerning the textile industry, and the Honourable Member in charge told us that these items 18-A, B, C and D which were taken from the present Tariff Act, were settled by a committee of experts and that it would be dangerous and cause a lot of confusion if any changes were made in them. Sir, it is easy to say on what items we want to have reduction in import duty, but it would be very difficult for the customs authorities to distinguish those items that we really want for the textile industry from others of a very similar kind required for other industries, and hence the Select Committee accepted the explanation of the Honourable Member in charge when he almost pressed us not to disturb the various items included under 18-A, B, C and D. The only inevitable result is and must be that you must include in some of the items articles which would not benefit the textile industry.

Now, Sir, I was one of those who had doubts about some items like types, lead, etc., and I made it a condition when I signed the Report that if from further information which I was trying to get I found that it would be wrong to exempt some items from the existing duty because similar articles were manufactured locally, the Honourable Member in charge would agree to my moving relevant amendments in this House when the Select Committee's Report came up before it. Whatever information I received either by letter or telegram, I have passed on to the Honourable Sir George Rainy, and the House will see from the amendments Nos 1 and 4 on the list of business that he has been good enough to give notice of relevant amendments. My friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar is quite right in saying that there is a strong feeling that the import duty on some of the articles in this Bill should be increased. But as the Honourable Sir George Rainy rightly pointed out to me in the course of correspondence on this subject, this is not the time for it, nor is this the Bill for increasing the import duty on some of the articles from 2½ per cent. to 15 per cent. I therefore, feel, Sir, that it is not possible to attempt any increase of duty in this Bill. Personally, as a member of the Select Committee, I feel that if the Government of India offer to remit 85 lakhs of rupees from this form of taxation, they must have made sure that the Budget and their finances can stand it. The Tariff Board recommended a remission of import duty on articles which affected the textile industry, and my friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar does not dispute that it would be undesirable to do so. You cannot do it unless you include the other articles which are indicated in items 18-A, B, C and D of the present Tariff Act. And hence I believe that, even if this Bill was recommitted to the Select Committee, it would be difficult for the Select Committee to make any change in the Bill unless the House were ready to wait for the best part of a year and the Government of India put up another committee of experts to distinguish and separate the items which affect the textile industry and other items coming under 18-(A), (B) and (C). I therefore feel that, unless further considerable delay was to be tolerated in this matter—and even then I am not sure that it would be feasible to separate these items very accurately—I feel it is for this Assembly to decide whether they would pass this as it is presented or not. If they do not mind delay, and there might be immense delay, probably even then it may not be feasible to separate these items. I therefore feel that the House has got to make up its mind whether it is going to accept this Bill as it stands or drop it.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment which has been moved by Mr. Rangaswamy Iyengar, and I generally endorse the observations which he has made in regard to the desirability of referring this measure back to the Select Committee. I would particulary refer to one or two items which have not so far been mentioned by the previous speakers. It is a welcome feature of the amended Bill, as it has now emerged from Select Committee, that the proposal to admit types and other things duty free has been omitted. I really wonder how the Honourable the Commerce Member came to make provision for the admission of types and connected things duty free when an inquiry is pending into the question whether the type-making industry is to be given protection. I hold in my hand a press communiqué issued on July 29th to the following effect :

" That the Indian Tariff Board has received an application from the Hindustani Type Foundry, Allahabad, asking that measures be taken to assist the type-making industry in India either by lowering the existing 15 per cent. import duty upon the metals from which their type is made, or by increasing the present 2½ per cent. duty upon imported type."

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

On that a questionnaire has been circulated by the Government, and the last day for receiving written applications with regard to this matter was fixed as the 20th August last. I do not know, Sir, whether the inquiry has yet been completed. If I mention this point it is only for the purpose of showing that there has been some hurry on the part of Government to bring forward this measure, and I therefore think when we have got this evidence that the Government has not bestowed sufficient attention on all aspects of this Bill, there ought to be some more time given to the Select Committee to scrutinise it.

Sir, on the previous occasion I referred to the artificial silk yarn upon which the duty is proposed to be reduced from 15 per cent. to 7½ per cent. I am sorry to find that the Select Committee has not omitted this provision altogether. It is some relief to me to find, however, that there are two Honourable Members of the Select Committee who have submitted a minute of dissent saying that they do not agree that this reduction of duty should take place. Sir, one of the grounds on which this reduction of duty was sought to be justified by Sir George Rainy was that it would not in any event affect the indigenous silk industry at all because the price of artificial silk yarn is very low and the duty 7½ per cent. would in any event be a very low figure. Sir, this is an argument which to my mind cuts both ways, because if it is after all a very unimportant reduction so far as the manufacturers of indigenous silk in India are concerned, it is at the same time a very unimportant reduction also from the point of view of other people. That is to say, the import cannot be influenced to any very large extent by this reduction of duty. Sir, I was looking into the figures regarding the import of artificial silk yarn in India and comparing the figures for 1920-21 with the figures for 1925-26. I find that the increased import during these six years stands at about 30 times, that is to say in 1925-26 the quantity was 30 times that which came in 1920-21. I dare say that, in spite of this duty, the import has progressed at a very rapid pace. I do not know whether my Honourable friend considers that, even in the face of these figures, there is a very sound case for reducing the duty any further. He pointed out that the proposal for this reduction originated with the Bombay Chamber of Commerce and that the Bombay Millowners' Association also agreed with the proposal. But it is very unfair, I submit, on the part of Government to expect this House to come to a judgment on such an important question only on the authority of the opinion of the Bombay Millowners' Association and the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. We should have thought that here at least was a sufficiently important question which should merit the careful consideration of the Tariff Board. We have undoubtedly the ex-president of the Tariff Board in the person of the present Commerce Member, but even then I am not prepared to allow him to usurp the functions of the Tariff Board. I bow to his great authority in tariff matters. But still I venture to submit that it is highly improper on the part of Government to bring up such tariff proposals which have never been before the country in the past, and spring a surprise on the country by including this small item in a very big Bill so that proper attention could not be paid to such an item. Sir, on the point as to whether this imported artificial silk yarn has at all had any prejudicial effect on the indigenous silk industry, I do not know whether my Honourable friend, Sir George Rainy, cares to read the Bengal papers. I have read one letter in the press coming from a place called Plassey. The name perhaps is not quite unfamiliar to the Honourable Member. It happens to be one of the centres of the struggling silk industry in Bengal. And here is an appeal made to the legislators of this House by a man who evidently knows very much about this subject. The appeal is to oppose the Government in their proposed reduction of this duty. This is what it says :

"The Government are not taking into consideration one very important question in this connexion. The condition of the Indian Silk Industry (I mean the industry of natural silk) will be seriously jeopardised, if further facilities are given to those European industries which are backed by enormous capital and do not, therefore, need any preferential treatment from the Government of India. In other silk-producing countries, the culture of silk is encouraged and the industry protected and developed by State bounty. But the attitude of our Government in this respect is too well known."

Then later on the writer proceeds to observe as follows :

"The heavy influx of artificial silk in our markets at this stage has been gradually driving out the natural silk from its own field of local consumption.

I therefore bring the real facts to the notice of our legislators, so that they may not pass this question over without due consideration, when it will come up for discussion in the Assembly at its next session."

Sir, I do claim that some attention is due to this opinion from Bengal.

Sir, there are few other provinces which are interested also in this question. Bihar and Orissa, for instance, Assam, and the Central Provinces, not to mention the two important Indian States of Mysore and Kashmir. I do beg of Government to have a little more time to consult all these Local Governments, if not the State, before they come to any decision on the matter. From this point of view also I think that the matter ought to be referred back to the Select Committee.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, the Honourable the Mover of this amendment desires the recommittal of this Bill for two main reasons. One is in regard to the individual items included in the Schedule, some of which he desires to be re-examined on protectionist grounds.

The other purpose in moving this amendment is in connection with the effect of the Bill on the finances of this year and of the following years. I will leave in the very capable hands of my Honourable colleague the Commerce Member the defence of the relief of taxation in regard to particular duties, including artificial silk, which have been raised by speakers thus far. I would only gently chide Mr. Neogy for his attack on the Government for rushing this measure. That is not the complaint that has generally been made against the Government over the way in which it has dealt with the Cotton Tariff Report. The Honourable Member who moved the motion quite rightly said that this measure has a very serious effect on the general financial position and I make no complaint that he desires that the connection of this Bill with the Budget for the year and for future years should be examined in public in this Assembly. The effect of this Bill is to threaten a reduction of something over Rs. 40 lakhs in the year 1927-28 and something between Rs. 80 and Rs. 90 lakhs in the year 1928-29. That is certainly not an entirely pleasant proposal from the point of view of the Finance Department at any time. We are of course always in a difficulty with a Tariff Bill. When a Tariff Report comes out which cannot be dealt with at the beginning of the year at the time of the Budget, and it is proposed in the middle of the year to deal with it, and additional revenue comes in, the hard-hearted Finance Member is accused of pocketing for his own benefit out of the hard-earned savings of the people money which should otherwise be applied, and it is suggested that it is not so much the stricken industry in question that is being protected as the exchequer of the Government of India. If, however, the opposite happens the Finance Member is quite rightly assailed for allowing his budget estimates of the year to be upset in the middle of the year by loss of revenue, which is given up not on grounds connected with the finances of the country but on fiscal grounds. We are in a real difficulty in the matter, and it is only possible to deal with each case as it arises. In this case, the Tariff Board recommended, among other things, that the duty on certain machinery and mill stores should be abolished in the interests of the cotton mill industry. They suggested that it should be abolished only for the purposes of the cotton mill industry and not generally. That involved special treatment of a particular industry and is open to general objections on the ground of principle. It is not desirable that you should have an import duty, which is supposed to fall equally on all, and then not collect it on a particular industry while allowing it to continue to fall on other industries. That is particularly so when prima facie the duty is objectionable in principle. A duty falling on machinery, so long as it is imposed purely for revenue purposes, is obviously in the nature of a tax imposed on the raw material. It adds to the cost of the finished product, and is therefore open to objection. It has been clear for some time that our very high revenue tariff as it was left after the big rise that took place in 1921-22 is objectionably high in certain directions in a way that is damaging to the interests of industries in general in the country, and we had been looking forward for some time to the opportunity of being able to reduce particular duties at some future date. That could only be done, of course, if revenue is available for the purpose. Here, we found ourselves faced with the recommendation of a Tariff Committee, which was to reduce these duties in the interests of a particular industry. We did not find ourselves in a position to accept all the recommendations of that Committee, and that perhaps strengthened the reasons for accepting these particular recommendations if we could possibly do so. We felt we could not possibly do so in the form proposed by the Tariff Board, that is, give a specially privileged position to one particular industry as compared to the others. We were faced, therefore, with the question, " Could we afford something over Rs. 40 lakhs this year and something over Rs. 80 lakhs next year " ?

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : And in subsequent years.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : And in subsequent years. First of all, as regards this year, as the House is aware, there is no margin as a rule in the Indian Budget. It is not framed with a view to ending with any large surplus. A predecessor of mine once said that nothing is laid aside each year in the Budget against a rainless day, and I am sorry to say that I had not the foresight to lay anything aside against a Rainy day. (Laughter.) What was the poor Finance Member to do ? We could not possibly postpone, as proposed by the Mover of this motion, any question of assistance to the cotton mill industry until the next Budget. That is the effect of this motion for recommittal, because it is obvious that the matter could not be taken very much further during the present Session if an attempt was made to recommit the Bill for the elaborate purpose proposed by those who have spoken in favour of this motion. The only thing therefore to do was either to regret our inability to assist the mill industry altogether, or to do what we regarded as wrong in principle, namely, to give a privileged position in the matter of customs duty to a particular industry, or to set free from duty as many of these articles of machinery as possible in the interests, first of all of the mill industry, and secondly of the industries of the country as a whole. We found ourselves faced, therefore, with this position, and there was no margin. Fortunately, however, my Honourable friend Sir George Rainy promises to return to me, at any rate so far as this year is concerned, some portion of the 40 odd lakhs that we are giving up in the form of additional receipts from the Railways. I cannot, of course, at this stage, and still less could I at the stage when a decision had to be reached, foresee how the year was going to work out. Up to date there is no particular reason to suppose that the estimates of revenue generally will be exceeded. There is no particular reason either to suppose that the estimates of expenditure will fall far short, if at all short, of what was provided for. In the particular matter of railway receipts, as things stand at present, there does appear to be a prospect that Sir George Rainy will give me back on the swings what he is taking away on the round-abouts. As regards next year, it is obviously impossible at this stage to make any useful guess as to what the situation will be. If things go well, we shall certainly find ourselves in a better position than we were at the beginning of this year. The automatic effect of the sinking fund provision is always to leave some margin at the beginning of the next year. On the other hand, this year we are, as the House is aware, giving considerable hostages to fortune in the matter of the provincial contributions. All that I can say as regards next year is that this 80 lakhs is an additional Rs. 80 lakhs over and above the Rs. 1½ crores which we have to find either by economies or by some other means in order to balance the Budget next year without calling for the renewal of the provincial contributions. I cannot, I think, usefully say more than that, but my object in rising to-day is to make clear to the House that the matter has been very fully and carefully considered by the Government of India and by the Finance Department, and that, all the pros and cons being weighed, we did feel that the recommendation made by the Tariff Board in favour of the cotton mill industry was one which we could not reject and that the only way in which we could accept it, or which would be in accordance with principle, would be to allow such remission as we gave to apply to machinery imported for the purpose of all industries and not only to machinery imported for the purpose of one particular industry.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I rise to support the amendment of my Honourable friend, Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar. The net result of the Report of the Select Committee is to open the question of the tariff schedule at many points, and as my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas has pointed out, since this Report was known abroad a number of complaints have been received with regard to the Report and an amount of valuable material bearing on the points covered by the Report has also been received. Now, Sir, I quite admit that the proper moment for reopening the tariff schedule is really the month of February, that is, once a year. But if the Honourable the Commerce Member thinks that certain matters are so urgent that the tariff schedule may be reopened even in the middle of the year, then I contend he cannot insist upon opening at one end only. It must be reopened at either end, namely, in the direction of reduction as well as in the direction of enhancement, where reduction may be necessary or where enhancement may be necessary. There may be some delay, of course, if this Bill is recommitted to the Select Committee. But I think that the delay is unavoidable, and that delay is necessary in view of the contest that lies on many of the points covered by the report of the Select Committee.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

My Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, has already referred to the complaint in relation to the type foundry industry, and I have received a similar complaint from the Bombay type foundry industry. I will just place before the House a resolution passed at a meeting of the type foundry owners of Bombay on Tuesday, the 30th August 1927. The Resolution is as follows :

" This meeting of the Type Foundry Owners in Bombay, held on 30th August 1927, strongly protest against the amendment of the Indian Tariff Act of 1894, so far as it affects Types, Leads, Lead and Brass Rules.... by the proposed removal of duties thereon as the same will be detrimental and suicidal to the infant Type Foundry industry of this country and request the Government that with a view to protect and strengthen it, the existing duty on the above articles be enhanced to at least 15 per cent. ad valorem ".

The House will at once see that the ground of contest lies as wide as from the total removal of the duty to enhancing the duty to full 15 per cent. The field is very large, and the contest is, of course, very keen. Therefore, it could not be said that if you keep the duty only at 2½ per cent., or I will go further and say, if you keep it at 7½ per cent., the objection is not removed, for, as has been pointed out, I think, in the representation by the Chairman of the meeting of the Type Foundry Owners in Bombay to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Commerce Department, the fact is this. Even if you raise the duty to 7½ per cent. instead of removing it altogether, still a large disadvantage remains to this industry and in this way. There is, in the first place, the 12½ per cent. disadvantage owing to the ratio, and then, really speaking, the duty should be, as in other cases, at full 15 per cent. But instead of that, instead of having it at 15 per cent., if you only keep it at 7½ per cent., it comes to this ; there is 12½ per cent. owing to exchange, 15 per cent. not being there, that means a total of 27½ per cent., and you propose to remove the disadvantage to the extent of 7½ per cent. That means that the industry remains at a disadvantage still to the extent of 20 per cent. That, I think, is a legitimate complaint. The reasons for reopening the subject and having the full revenue duty are, briefly, these. At present, the raw material of this industry is taxed at 15 per cent., but curiously enough, whereas the raw material is taxed the finished products are not taxed if the duty is totally removed. This type foundry industry is altogether new to this country. It has come into existence practically since the war and it has already begun to feel the pinch of competition with the German imports. Therefore, it is up to the Government to enhance the duty to the full 15 per cent. on the type foundry materials, so that protection may be given to the home industry. That, I suppose, makes out a case for reopening the question. No one is satisfied with the removal of the duty, no one is satisfied with the imposition of 2½ per cent. duty, and no one will be satisfied even if the duty is imposed at 7½ per cent. The demand is for full 15 per cent., and that is a question which I submit deserves to be considered in the Select Committee.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I claim no infallibility for the Select Committee, but as one of its members, I must say that the Committee was not quite as negligent of the various interests which the Bill is concerned with as one might think from the speeches of the Honourable Members who have opposed the motion of my Honourable friend, Sir George Rainy. The question of the type industry was specifically considered, as has been asknowledged by my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy. The Select Committee agreed to delete the word " type " from paragraph 8, Item 18-C. of the Schedule to the Bill. As regards the rest of the things to which Mr. Kelkar has referred, the opinion of the type foundries was specially invited, both from Allahabad and Bombay, and it is in accordance with the opinions forwarded by them that the Honourable the Commerce Member has agreed to delete certain items from paragraph 8, Item 18-C. namely, brass rules, galleys, etc.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Did you concede the full demand of that industry ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : We have conceded that in our speeches.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : You did, but Mr. Kelkar does not. As regards Mr. Kelkar's question, I will answer it presently. I have not explained the situation fully yet. There is the question of increasing the duty on type and other things so as to help the Indian type industry. That was a point the consideration of which was not omitted by the Select Committee. We were, however, informed by the Honourable the Commerce Member that the subject had been referred to the Tariff Board and that if the Board recommended that protection should be given to this industry it would. We would thus have another opportunity of discussing the matter and of increasing the duty should that be considered necessary. The Select Committee only concerned itself with seeing that the duty was not lowered below the existing level. We were not willing that, pending the grant of protection to the type industry, the little benefit that it enjoyed by the imposition of the duty of 2½ per cent. on foreign type should be taken away from it. We only agreed that the question of protection should be considered at a later stage when the Tariff Board presented its report.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : We had no option.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Because we did not know what the amount of protection would be that would be needed by the indigenous industry.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

Then, Sir, as regards artificial silk that was a point that was raised in this House and also considered by the Select Committee, and I for one thought that even those who had objected to the lowering of the duty on artificial silk yarn agreed that there was no harm in the course adopted by Government. It was pointed out both in the House and in the Select Committee that the difference between the prices of real and artificial silk was so great that there could scarcely be any reasonable fear that artificial silk would be used in place of real silk. An Honourable Member says that we were in the region of opinions, and not of facts, when it was accepted by us that real silk sold at 5¼ rupees per pound while the price of artificial silk was 1-12-0 per pound.

Sir Victor Sassoon : " I buy it at that rate. " The members of the Select Committee who know these things and who are connected with commerce and industry including my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas did not challenge these figures. It did not seem therefore to the members of the Select Committee that any harm would be done to the indigenous silk industry if artificial silk were subjected to a lower duty. On the contrary it seemed to us that so long as there was no competition between foreign and home products it might be well to let cheap artificial silk come in, so that the handloom weavers might benefit thereby.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : You are a friend of the handloom weavers.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I believe we shall prove to be better friends of the handloom weavers than those Honourable Members who wished to help them yesterday at the expense of the indigenous industries.

The third point is that the Select Committee considered whether any of the exemptions proposed in the Bill would hurt the handloom industry. That was a point to which special attention was devoted by my Honourable friend Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyengar and after he had gone through paragraph 8 Items 18-A. and 18-B. I at any rate thought that he was satisfied that the handloom industry would be under no greater disadvantage than at present.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : There is a dissenting minute by Mr. Duraiswami Aiyangar.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I was quite surprised when I saw this dissenting minute. We went through paragraph 8, 18-A and 18-B item by item and I do not remember that any objection was urged on behalf of the handloom industry to the inclusion of any item mentioned in this paragraph.

Lastly, with regard to the financial question I may say that, as explained by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, we simply took the point of view that our revenues could bear a loss of 85 lakhs. We knew that the Tariff Board had recommended an exemption to the extent of 50 lakhs. Now it was evident on the showing of the Tariff Board themselves that the exemption of duty could not be entirely confined to the textile industries. It seemed to be impossible to devise any way which would not be open to objection of exempting particular articles from duty and confining the benefit of the exemption only to millowners. It was evident therefore that, while the textile industry would gain largely as a result of the recommendations of the Tariff Board, other users of machinery would also benefit partly. Now the Tariff Board recommended that an exemption of about 50 lakhs should be granted. We may take it, considering the benefit that would have accrued to other industries, that we would have had to make an exemption of about 65 or 70 lakhs. Thus at the outside there may be an unjustifiable loss of revenue to the tune of 15 or 20 lakhs. On that point too the Select Committee considered the matter as carefully as it could within the short time at its disposal. It examined Mr. Lloyd of the Central Board of Revenue and after hearing both what he and Sir George Rainy had to say we came regretfully to the conclusion that there was no means of altering the Schedules to the Bill before us in such a way as to benefit the textile industry and at the same time to save the State from an appreciable loss of revenue. That, we were told, would have involved such an elaboration of the tariff and such a prolonged inquiry as would have prevented us from giving that help to the textile industry which it needed and which we were all desirous of giving to it. It was after taking all these things into consideration, that the Select Committee made the recommendations contained in its Report. It may be that the Select Committee was mistaken in one or two respects but it did not do its work half as perfunctorily as one may suppose from the speeches of Honourable Members who have attacked its Report.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I rise to support the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar. Before doing so I would like with your permission, Sir, to refer to a short notice question of which I had given notice. I understand, Sir, that it has been placed on record that I was absent when the question was reached when as a matter of fact I did not even know that the question was admitted ; if you will permit me.....

Mr. President : Is it for this purpose that the Honourable Member has risen ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : If you will permit me, Sir.....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member restrict himself to the motion before the House ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Very well, Sir. I confess, Sir, that the result of the division yesterday was very disappointing to me. But if it disappoints it does not discourage, because I believe that truth must be adhered to all along and always. To-day, Sir, I wish to raise two or three questions of importance in connection with this Bill. This is the second Bill which professes to give some protection to the mill industry. I think, Sir, the principles of protection were laid down by the Fiscal Commission and were subsequently followed by Sir George Rainy himself in the Tata iron and steel inquiry, and if I am not very much mistaken the main principle was that if, as a result of an inquiry, you decided to give protection to any industry, then you should give adequate protection. Inadequate protection, it was stated, was worse than no protection at all. Consider the strain on the consumer ; consider your finances ; consider the question from every point of view ; but once having decided to give protection give adequate protection or none at all ; that is the right principle of protection ; if you do not give adequate protection you waste so much public money. You penalise the consumer without any advantage and in the end the industry gets no real assistance. The consumer consents or must consent to some temporary sacrifice and inconvenience, because as a result of the internal competition that will set in on account of protection he will get the protected article much cheaper.....

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

12 Noon.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must speak to the motion. The motion before the House is that the Bill be recommitted to the Select Committee.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : And I say, Sir, that it should be recommitted. This Bill does not give any real protection to the mill industry as it professes to do. I am pointing out that any measure which does not give adequate protection is against the findings and recommendations of the Fiscal Commission.

Mr. President : I am afraid it is too far-fetched an argument for the purposes of the motion.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Is it far-fetched to show that this Bill gives no adequate protection and is therefore against the principle of protection ?

Mr. President : I have already said so.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : It is far-fetched ; very well. Then even if the Bill violates the principles of protection I should not say anything.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must confine himself to the motion before the House. I have often noticed that the Honourable Member begins from the commencement of the history of the question on which he speaks.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : With all respect, Sir, that is not correct.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member confine himself to the motion before the House ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : And I submit with the greatest respect that I am entitled to show that the Bill does not give adequate protection.....

Mr. President : And the Chair has ruled that the Honourable Member is not entitled to do so on this particular motion.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Thank you, Sir. If I must be ruled out of order my only course is to show that this so-called protection, must not be given on other grounds. It has been stated that the full effect of this Bill on the revenues of this country would be a loss of 95 lakhs a year while the benefit to the mill industry would be only 50 lakhs. The figures given by the Tariff Board show that this country manufactures about 680 million yards of yarn and uses 700 million pounds of yarn for the manufacture of cloth ; so that the stores and machinery used for the manufacture of yarn and cloth are 686 million pounds plus 705 million pounds ; which means that first of all in the process of manufacturing the yarn and secondly in the process of manufacturing cloth out of that yarn, the machinery and stores required will be spread over 1,400 millions of pounds of yarn. And the relief according to the Tariff Board in a full year is 50 lakhs, which is 5 millions of rupees. So the relief to the mill industry for 1,400 million pounds of yarn will be 5 millions of rupees, which works out at barely half a pie per pound of yarn. And if the reduction of the cost of production by half a pie per pound on yarn is the only protection that is given to this industry for the loss of 85 lakhs of revenue, I do not think that the tax-payer should be mulcted out of that 85 lakhs of rupees. Because, if there is any object in protection, the object is that the industry should be able to stand against foreign competition as a result of the reduction in the cost of production by the remission of duty. But I have still to learn that a reduction of half a pie per pound in the cost of production will have the remotest chance of assisting the industry in competing with foreign imports. And if that is not so, Sir, the result of the remission of duty on machinery and stores which we are asked to make to-day, amounts only to so much remission of taxation, and this Bill is not a measure of protection but a measure of relief to the tax-payer. Therefore, it becomes necessary to see whether it is desirable that a remission of taxation should be undertaken at this stage, and if it must be undertaken, whether these particular articles ought to have priority or whether there is any other claimant who demands and deserves priority. I submit that on a proper consideration of the case it will be found that if this measure is merely a measure for relief of taxation, then, Sir, between those who are to benefit by this measure and those other claimants to relief, the House must give priority to the latter. There is the poor man who pays the salt tax ; there is the man who is being penalised by the half anna postcard and high railway rates and fares ; and there is lastly the tax-payer who is being mulcted to the tune of 5 crores a year in the name of debt redemption. These people, Sir, I claim have a prior right to relief than the importers of machinery, the result of which relief will be that foreign manufacturers, mainly English, will be the real gainers by this measure. In ancient times, Sir, all roads used to lead to Rome. In modern times, in India at least, all measures lead to the relief of England. That is the misfortune of this country. This is the third time in the last eight months, Sir, that a measure which pretends to give protection to an Indian industry is being used really for the purpose of benefiting the alien manufacturers and importers. If you must give relief, have you examined whether these other claimants to whom I have referred have a better claim than the importers of machinery and manufacturers abroad or not ? The House must without hesitation come to the conclusion that if the mill industry benefits only to the tune of half a pie per pound—which works out to a relief of something like Re. 1 in Rs. 288—if that is the only shadowy and imaginary reduction in the cost of production to the mill industry, and if the measure is really to operate to the relief of importers of foreign machinery and of foreign manufacturers, then, Sir, I submit this House ought to halt and consider whether priority in the matter of relief should not be given to more deserving claimants than those who are being benefited under this measure. That is the submission which I make to this House. Lastly, I associate myself with my friend Mr. Kelkar in what he has said about type foundries and the disabilities under which they are labouring. As my friend Mr. Kunaru has said, the matter is under the consideration of the Tariff Board and therefore we have no alternative but to wait. And I agree with my friend Mr. Kunzru that whatever could be done in the Select Committee has been done and the amendment standing in the name of the Honourable the Commerce Member also indicates that that question has been considered. But apart from that, Sir, I do not see the slightest reason why this 85 lakhs of rupees should be given away. The Indian treasury is not overflowing with money, I understand, but if it is and relief to the tax-payer can be given, I submit once for all that the claimants to whom I have referred must be given priority.

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, I was somewhat surprised at the attitude of some of the speakers on this occasion. It was said by my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta that the mill industry is in great trouble at present. I feel, Sir, that if the mill industry is in great trouble at present, it is due to the fact that the cloth which is being produced is dearer compared to the purchasing power of the consumers. If we agree to this that the main difficulty of the mill industry is due to the fact that the poor people do not possess sufficient purchasing power, I think, Sir, the method of protection which is adopted in this Bill is the right method of protection. This is a method of protection by which cloth is likely to be cheaper than to-day and if we cheapen cloth, there will be greater sale of cloth and on the whole the mill industry will begin to prosper. I am therefore surprised that those who want that the mill industry should prosper should on some ground oppose this measure.

Then, Sir, I am also surprised at the solicitude shown by some members of the Swaraj Party for the revenues of the Government of India.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Not for the revenues, the tax-payers, please.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Tax-payers. All right. Now, Sir, the tax-payers' taxes are being reduced, not increased, and if their solicitude.....

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Which is the tax-payer ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I am coming to that point. Sir, they are therefore solicitous about the revenues of the Government of India and I am in one sense glad that after all the members of that Party have begun to take interest in the welfare of the Government of India. (Laughter.) Now, Sir, there is the question of the reduction of taxation and which form of taxation should have priority. I am one of those people who believe that the indirect taxes of the Government of India are much larger compared to the direct. The Taxation Committee's Report has made it clear that the indirect taxation has gone up so much that the Government of India should take steps to reduce that. In conformity with this suggestion of the Taxation Committee's Report, the Government of India's proposals are at least much better than other proposals which have been approved of by the members of the opposing party. Now, Sir, there is no doubt that if the salt tax had been reduced instead of the tax on machinery being reduced, I should have preferred it. (Hear, hear.) But let the Members who oppose it remember that if the salt tax was not reduced the responsibility for that at least partly was due to the fact that many members of that party were not present at the time of the voting.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is merely criticising the Party and not the Bill.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Sir, I was only showing that if the salt tax was not reduced.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I am not going into that matter. But, Sir, leaving aside the salt tax (Laughter), let us take taxation as a whole, and from that point of view the proposals of reducing taxation on machinery which enters into production is a much better reduction of taxation than any other taxation that may be reduced.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Not even postage ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Well, Sir, you will not allow me to discuss postage. But if you ask my opinion in one word as regards postage, I feel that the reduction of taxation which enters into production of articles consumed by the poorest people must be given priority.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Chair has noticed that some Members of this House have made particular questions their own and they refer to them over and over again, no matter what the question under discussion is.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Unfortunately, Sir, this question of the priority of taxation did crop up. So, both from the point of view that cloth will be cheapened if we adopt this Bill and from the point of view that the indirect taxation of the Government of India will be reduced, as recommended by the Taxation Committee, I hope, Sir, that this House will adopt this motion.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, my Honourable colleague, the Finance Member, has already dealt with one aspect of the motion for recommittal moved by my friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar. I shall therefore confine myself to the other aspect of the case and the reasons given by various Members why the Bill should be recommitted. One of these reasons came to me with a certain shock of surprise, because it had not occurred to me that intemperate haste was a plausible accusation which could be brought against the Government in this matter. The Honourable Mover suggested that the Schedule to the Bill had been hastily compiled, that it appeared that the matter had not been fully considered, and in particular that it had not been considered to what extent the sacrifice of revenue by the removal of the duty on particular articles would actually accrue to the benefit of the cotton mill industry. Now, Mr. President, I took some pains when I moved the motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee to explain that, so far as the various materials are concerned—I put aside for the moment the question of machinery—that so far as these materials are concerned, the list of stores contained in the Tariff Board Report had been carefully scrutinised by the Government of India in order to select those articles where the removal of the duty would benefit the cotton mill industry substantially, that is to say, where the cotton mills were the principal consumers. I gave one or two examples in that speech to illustrate the kind of test that the Government of India had applied in arriving at the list embodied in the Bill. One of them I gave was aniline and alizarine dye, where the sacrifice of revenue is about Rs. 25 lakhs and where it is expected that three-fourths of that sum would accrue to the benefit of the cotton mill industry. But there are several other cases that could be given. There is the case of starch where the port of Bombay takes 87 per cent. of the imports and where it appears extremely probable that the cotton mills take over 80 per cent. of the total imports. Another case is tallow. The port of Bombay takes 84 per cent. of the imports. There again the natural inference is that the reason why so much of the tallow goes to Bombay is the requirements of the cotton mills I could give several other examples, but I do not want to go into too much detail. On the other hand, we excluded from the Schedule those materials where the removal of the duty would probably accrue mostly to the benefit of other industries. As an example of that, I might take soda ash where Bengal takes 58 per cent. of the imports and Bombay less than 15 per cent. It is obvious that if we removed that duty the greater part of the benefit would not go to the cotton mills. Therefore, we left that duty alone. Another example was caustic soda, where Bombay took only 18 per cent. of the imports, and it was obvious that the cotton mills were not the principal consumers. Now, all that was done before the Government of India published their Resolution on the 7th June. If there had been any strong reason why the duty should not be removed from any of these stores, I should have expected that long ere this the matter would have been made very plain, and that in all probability when the reference to the Select Committee was moved Members would have risen to point out that it was not desirable that the duty should be removed from particular articles. Then, again, I should have expected that when the Bill returned from the Select Committee, notice would have been given of a number of amendments suggesting that the duty should not be removed from some of these stores. But what is the actual state of affairs ? I do not think any Honourable Member raised a question of that kind in the discussion for a reference to the Select Committee. The only omission from the list of which notice has been given is that of artificial silk yarn. Therefore, I think, Mr. President, that no case has been made out at all as regards a recommittal of the Bill with regard to the particular stores which are enumerated in the Schedule to the Bill. As regards the artificial silk yarn, I think it will be convenient if I defer anything I have to say until the motion for the omission of this item is moved by one or other of the two Honourable Members who have given notice of amendments. In any case, that is a matter which the Assembly could perfectly well decide for itself. It is a very simple question whether or not the duty on artificial silk yarn should be reduced from 15 per cent. to 7½ per cent., and there would be no necessity on that particular matter to refer the Bill back to the Select Committee.

[Sir George Rainy.]

I come now to the question of machinery. Before dealing with the point raised by my friend Mr. Kelkar about printing materials, I should like to say a word on the more general aspect of the case. Here, again, the proposals of the Government of India were made public on the 7th of June last, and if there had been a strong feeling on the part of manufacturers in India that their interests were likely to be seriously injured by the removal of the 2½ per cent. of duty on machinery, I should have expected that to-day Members would have been springing up from all over the House with specific proposals or with specific objections to the removal of the duty from a particular kind of machinery. I have listened with interest to the debate of to-day, but except as regards the printing materials such as type, brass rules, and so on, I have not heard any specific case brought forward, and I think it is a fair inference in the circumstances that it is not likely that the removal of this duty will materially injure any manufacturing industry in this country. Nevertheless, it will always be open to the manufacturers of any particular kind of machinery to approach the Tariff Board or to approach the Government of India and to raise the question whether, in fairness, some duty ought not to be imposed on the particular kind of machinery they make.

I will now come to the point raised by my friend Mr. Kelkar as regards the printing materials, of which the most prominent example is printing type. That was a question which definitely came before the Select Committee, and I was particularly anxious to meet the wishes expressed by various Honourable Members on that point because probably it was not realised at the time when our Resolution of the 7th of June was published that our proposals covered printing machinery and materials. Very likely a good many of the type-making firms did not realise what was intended until the Bill was actually published. Therefore, in the Select Committee I agreed that the status quo should be maintained where possible. The Committee itself omitted printing type from the Schedule and I undertook to make inquiries to see whether it would be administratively possible to maintain the status quo with regard to certain other items also. I made these inquiries and the result is the amendment to the Bill which now stands in my name. The effect of the amendment is merely to maintain the status quo with regard to the articles. In the circumstances, that seems to be fair and reasonable. But my friend Mr. Kelkar says that the Select Committee ought to have gone further and therefore he would refer the Bill back to the Select Committee in order that they may reconsider the matter. What he desires the Select Committee to do is to consider the question of imposing a protective duty, in the interests of the type manufacturers, on these various articles which are enumerated in my amendment. Mr. President, this seems to me to be quite outside the scope of the Bill. I am not raising a point of order ; it is a point of substance. After all, this Bill is a Bill for the reduction and removal of duties. On the question of the amount of protection that may be required by the manufacturers of types in India, there is really no information of any kind before the House except that my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar has told us what the type manufacturers think they ought to get. I think it is quite clear, Mr. President, that if the Bill was referred back to the Select Committee, they would find themselves in a position in which they could make no recommendation whatever. As Mr. Neogy has pointed out, there is already an application in connection with the manufacture of type pending before the Tariff Board. Obviously, the thing to do is to wait until the Tariff Board have considered that matter and, meanwhile, to maintain the status quo.

I do not think it is necessary, Mr. President, that I should reply in detail to the speech of my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, which was definitely a speech, not in favour of the motion for recommittal, but against the consideration of the Report of the Select Committee. I would only say this that, as far as I can make out, all classes have his sympathy except the consumer, and he is prepared to assist the Bombay millowners provided it is done in exactly the way that he considers is the best. But if it is not done in that way, then it is impossible to secure his vote. I fear I must, therefore, abandon the hope of securing his vote for the motion I have moved to-day.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Mr. President : The original question was :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, as reported by the Select Committee be taken into consideration."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" That the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be recommitted to that Committee."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question now is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, as reported by the Select Committee be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : If Honourable Members desire that the Chair should determine the result of voting by voices properly, they should cry out " Aye " or " No ".

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Schedule do stand part of the Bill."

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I move :

" In paragraph 8 of the Schedule to the Bill, in the proposed item 18-C, the words ' brass rules ' and the words ' leads, wooden and metal quoins, shooting sticks and galleys ' and the words, ' metal furniture,' be omitted ".

This amendment, Mr. President, is closely connected with a consequential amendment in this Bill which will be moved later. As I explained a few minutes ago, the object of this amendment is to maintain the status quo in the case of the various printing materials enumerated in the amendment. If this amendment is not passed, the effect will be that the 2½ per cent. duty will be removed from these materials. It is considered desirable that the duty should be retained for the present in order to avoid prejudice to the manufacture of printing type and similar articles, an industry which has recently been started in India. At least one firm connected with that industry has an application pending before the Tariff Board for protection. The Government of India consider that in the circumstances it is fair that the status quo should be maintained.

Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that paragraph 10 of the Schedule to the Bill be omitted :

Sir, paragraph 10 states :

" After Item No. 43, under the heading ' yarns and textile fabrics ' the following item shall be inserted, namely :

43 A|Artificial| silk, yarn and * * * silk thread Ad valorem|7½ per cent."

Sir, this particular item came under the general heading " yarn and textile fabrics " which occurs in Item 100 of the present Tariff Act. The import duty levied thereon was 15 per cent. ad valorem. Now, this particular Item is singled out of that particular denomination for favourable terms, namely that the import duty of this particular Item should be reduced from 15 per cent. to 7½ per cent. I invite the attention of the House to the fact that no case has been made out by the Government for this partial treatment of this particular item. At a previous stage of the debate, when this Bill was referred to the Select Committee, I invited the attention of the House to the fact that this particular item needed some examination, rather a close examination. I naturally expected that the Honourable the Commerce Member, when he moved his motion to-day, would give us further information about this particular item, especially in virtue of the fact that two amendments have been tabled for discussion on this matter. But I was disappointed. I might also at the outset submit to the House that so far as this particular item is concerned, though it came directly after the Tariff Board Report, it has no relation whatever to the findings of the Tariff Board Report ; because nowhere in the Tariff Board's Report is any mention made of this particular item, artificial silk yarn and silk thread. The matter was not before the Tariff Board at all. But, in response to a request on my part for information upon this matter, the Honourable the Commerce Member was pleased to tell us in a previous stage of the Bill that this originated from a request made by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. This occurred about 16 or 17 months ago. Later, the Honourable Member also added, that in April of this year when he was conferring with the millowners of Bombay, mention was also made of this fact. But in the Government of India Resolution which was first published upon the recommendations of the Tariff Board—which virtually turned down the recommendations of the Tariff Board—this matter was not mentioned at all. The House might also remember that there was a deputation of the millowners of Bombay which waited on His Excellency the Viceroy and we were informed that, in the course of the deputation, certain further extension of articles to be exempted from import duty were set forth by the millowners. We are not aware—at any rate it has not been mentioned—that in that deputation either, was any mention made of this particular item of artificial silk yarn and silk thread. I take it, it was not mentioned at all by the deputationists. But all the same, closely after that deputation when the Government of India issued a communiqué, dated the 7th June, the following passage was incorporated in that communiqué :

" The Government of India are anxious however to do whatever is possible to minimise the burden on the handloom industry. With this object and also to facilitate the diversification of the mill production they have decided to include in the proposals to be placed before the Legislature a reduction from 15 per cent. to 7½ per cent. on the duty on artificial silk yarn which is being used in increasing quantities both by the handloom weavers and by the cotton mills ".

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

Now, this is the first information that we had about the intention of the Government of India to bring in this particular item for this favourable treatment. Now, as I said, it is incumbent upon this House to see whether any case has been made out for the singling out of this item or for the favourable treatment of this item. My submission would be that absolutely no case has been made out for this favourable treatment. The House will also consider whether the sacrifice of revenue involved in this reduction of import duty is justified under any circumstances. In response to my request for information, it was said the other day that the total imports of artificial silk yarn from Italy amounted to 6 million lbs. and from the United Kingdom, about 6,50,000 lbs. And we were also informed that the price of this artificial silk yarn or thread was about Rs. 1-12-0 a lb. Now, on a rough calculation of the import duty which this kind of yarn was paying to the Government, it comes to about 15 lakhs of rupees ; and this suggested reduction of that by one-half will involve a sacrifice of about 7½ lakhs. Now I would ask the House to consider whether really there is any case made out for this sacrifice of 7½ lakhs of rupees. Now it may be possible ; in fact, it will be commendable if the textile industry is protected by this introduction of a new item. I have been at some pains to get information as to whether this artificial silk yarn or thread is really used by the cotton mills of Bombay or elsewhere, or if it affords any relief at all to the textile industry. I was told that it does not really benefit the textile industry at all. In fact, it does not give any relief whatsoever to the mills of Bombay or elsewhere in India. But I have been told that this artificial silk yarn is used somewhat, in mills for the purpose of giving some finish to the piece-goods that are produced in the cotton mills of Bombay and elsewhere. Now, the only question then would be, whether there being no relief at all to the millowners and there being this advantage if at all in giving finish to piece-goods manufactured in Bombay,—whether to secure that end this large sacrifice of about 7½ lakhs of rupees is necessary. I commend that matter to the House.

It was also said by the Honourable Sir George Rainy that by the introduction of this new item the branch of trade likely to benefit is the production of yarn and that the great bulk of that trade is in the hands of Italy. In support of that we were given the figures I have already brought to the notice of the House. Now I would submit that this measure, while not benefiting the millowner, while making it if at all available to the millowners to give some finish to their piece-goods, it does not at all benefit any other community or any other section of the people of India. But we were told in the Government communiqué, that I just now read out, that the object was to minimise the burden on the handloom industry. I really am unable to follow that nor has the Honourable the Commerce Member made it plain to me or anyone else in this House as to how this introduction of this new item is going to minimise the burden on the handloom industry. If, as I take it, he means to say that this handloom industry, seeing that under the earlier Tariff Act that was passed yesterday with the high percentage of duty on yarn provided therein, may find relief in this imported artificial silk yarn for their use,—if that is what is meant by the Honourable the Commerce Member then I submit that is to argue in a vicious circle. If the handloom industry is to get relief, then the opposition that was put up yesterday should not have been negatived. Now to say that by the introduction of this new item you hope to relieve or minimise the distress of the handloom industry upon which a burden is really cast by the passing of yesterday's Bill,—I submit that argument is not right.

Now the next object to which the communiqué refers is to facilitate a diversification of the mill production. In fact, I am not aware of any diversification which will result in the end ; and I submit that both the objects which are specifically mentioned in this communiqué of Government have not been made out. Let us consider for a moment what could have been the intention, if at all, of introducing this new item. We were told yesterday by the Honourable the Commerce Member, and we know also from statistics, that so far as medium counts of yarn are concerned, China is importing very largely, and so far as silk also is concerned, we know as a matter of fact that we have increasing imports of silk goods from China. We were told yesterday that Italy takes no doubt the lead in imports of artificial silk yarn and the United Kingdom comes next. Now I have a shrewd suspicion that the intention of this may be to hit China and to prefer the United Kingdom and Italy in the long run. That is my view. It was with that view in my mind that I put the question to the Honourable Member at an earlier stage of the discussion of this Bill ; but I have not been replied to by the Honourable Member ; and my misgivings to-day are not yet satisfied. I repeat that it looks to me as if the intention is more to hit China and to prefer Italy and the United Kingdom. It looks like a preference of the West to the East and I need not dilate upon that further or enlarge the argument. That seems to me the thing which underlies this proposal.

I may also suggest, as was pointed out by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy, that he has received certain communications from Plassey. So far as Bengal, Assam and Bihar and Orissa are concerned, there is no doubt the silk industry is thriving now. Now it would indirectly hit the silk industry also. We were told the other day by the Honourable the Commerce Member that the relative prices of these two seem to be so far apart that it was not possible to conceive that the one industry would be hit by the other, because when silk piecegoods sell at Rs. 5¼ a yarn, artificial silk yarn sells at Rs. 1-12-0 a lb. Now the Honourable the Commerce Member forgot this important fact, that when there is this counterfeit thing largely coming in, there will be a great impetus given to the introduction of artificial silk cloths and the vast bulk of the people of this country will take more and more to the fabric, artificial silk, in preference to the indigenous silk. Now that is a point which cannot be overlooked, and that is a point which I dare say was overlooked by the Honourable the Commerce Member. Our apprehension in that direction is that the genuine silk industry will be very badly hit by the introduction, in this nice fashion, of a lower duty on this artificial silk yarn and thread in this country. Whether it hits the handloom industry or any other industry, there will be this additional temptation for the people, by the greater facility of this import of artificial silk, to take to that kind of fabric in preference to the genuine indigenous silk in the country. Might I also submit that in my own constituency there are three places where silk and silk fabrics are very largely manufactured, and my apprehension is that in addition to the other disadvantages which accrue from the introduction of this particular item it will directly hit in the long run the indigenous silk industry of India. I would also submit that if at all this will be giving an indirect temptation to people in this country to prefer this counterfeit thing to the genuine silk article. And by way of substantiating what I said a few minutes ago about my apprehension that China will be hit, I would refer this House to the item—Item 134 of the present Tariff Act—articles which are liable to duty at 30 per cent. ad valorem—silk piece-goods and other manufactures of silk not otherwise specified 45A. Now, silk from China to-day has to pay a duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem. With this additional facility of importing artificial silk from Italy and artificial silk yarn and thread from the United Kingdom at a diminished rate of duty of 7½ per cent., I submit it has been shown clearly how it affects silk imports from China.

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

Lastly, Sir, I would submit that, in addition to the fact that this sacrifice of revenue involved in these proposals has no corresponding advantage by way of giving relief to the millowners, it actually has the prospect of directly hitting our own indigenous silk industry and would force us to favour Italy and the United Kingdom at our expense. With these words Sir, I move this amendment.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I intervene in this debate only to elicit certain information from the Honourable the Commerce Member. Representing as I do a part of the country which is vitally interested in the indigenous silk trade I would like to know how the proposal before the House benefits the handloom industry and the silk industry. My Honourable friend who has just spoken has shown rather exhaustively that the retention of this item in the Bill is not going to benefit the millowners to any appreciable extent. As a matter of fact the Bill if passed will give very little protection to the textile industry. I am afraid, on the contrary, the artificial silk yarn from the United Kingdom and the Continent will flood the Indian market and will injuriously affect the indigenous silk industry in this country. The statistics of the sea-borne trade of India show that an enormous quantity of artificial silk is being imported into this country from the United Kingdom, Germany, France and Italy. That being so, I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Member to an extract from the Bihar and Orissa Administration Report of 1925-26, which describes the condition of the silk trade at Bhagalpur, the place in which I am particularly interested. It reads :

"The Silk Institute at Bhagalpur has achieved great success in introducing new kinds of silk for use by the Bhagalpur weavers, who formely only used tassar and wove plain silk cloth or a mixture of cotton and silk called bafta. The institute has developed the use of mulberry, eri and muga silk, and with the assistance of the late Mrs. Kilby produced a number of charming designs in coloured silk. A trade in these is being slowly built up both in India and abroad, while a large number of fly-shuttle looms are now being used in Bhagalpur town."

Under these circumstances, Sir, I would be opposed to any measure that would in any way impair the indigenous silk trade. Sir, I support the amendment.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I rise to support this amendment. I am not going to repeat what I said this morning on the subject ; but I would refer to one observation made by my Honourable friend Mr. Kunzru. He said that the principal consideration that weighed with the Select Committee was that this Bill to a certain extent relieved the handloom weaver, for the reduction of the duty on artificial silk would act as a relief to them. Sir, my Honourable friend after doing his best to injure the handloom industry, is now anxious to mete out step-motherly affection. Yesterday he made a proposal that Rs. 12 lakhs should be set apart for the benefit of the handloom industry, in the provinces a proposal which on the accepted official interpretation of the Devolution Rules, I think, it would be difficult for the Government of India to give effect to. Here is another proposal of my friend Mr. Kunzru to give some indirect relief to the handloom industry. Let us analyse the position for a moment. Mr. Kunzru is anxious that the indigenous yarn industry should be protected. That was the reason why, I think, he voted in favour of the measure that we passed yesterday. At the same time he is prepared to agree here to a measure which would enable artificial silk to be imported at a cheap rate and which would enable it to compete more or less successfully with that very indigenous yarn which he wants to protect. I do not know whether my friend is aware of the inconsistency of his position.....

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : He is more consistent than you.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : My Honourable friend further stated that, as the difference in the price of artificial silk and real silk was very great, and as Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas did not think that the reduction of duty would affect it in any way, he did not see any reason to object to this proposal.

Sir, so far as the question as to whether the difference in the price of indigenous silk and artifical silk yarn is very great or not it is a question of fact undoubtedly, and when I read out a complaint from a silk centre in Bengal that artificial silk had, as a matter of fact, done a lot of injury to the indigenous silk industry that, I submit is also a question of fact. But my Honourable friends Mr. Kunzru and Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas fancy that they are quite safe in coming to the conclusion that the indigenous industry will not be injured at all. Sir, I repeat what I said this morning that we want facts, and not the theory of Honourable Members while we are dealing with this serious question.

Sir there is one point to which reference was made by my friend Mr. Shesha Ayyanger. and that was whether this reduction in duty is likely to benefit England at all. The Honourable Member in charge the other day pointed out that it was Italy which exported artificial silk yarn in larger quantities, and although England came second, the difference between England and Italy in point of import was very great. As a matter of fact, he pointed out that in the year 1926-27, Italy had exported about six times the quantity that England exported to India. Sir, I have looked up the more recent figures. Take the seven months of the year 1927, January to July, the latest period for which figures are available.

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

In this period of seven months, England has exported 8,25,000 and odd pounds, whereas Italy has exported 17,34,000 and odd pounds ; that is to say, the proportion is not 6 to 1, but 2 to 1, and as a further evidence that England is fast recovering her position, I would refer the Honourable Member in charge to the figures for January and July respectively. In January last England exported 1,31,000 and odd pounds to India, while in July she exported 1,85,000 and odd pounds. In the case of Italy, in January last she exported 6,17 thousand odd and in July only 2,59 thousand odd. If this rate of progress goes on, I for my part will not be able to hold my Honourable friend so very innocent as he wanted us the other day to believe him to be in this matter. Sir, I have already stated that, if you take the figures for the last six years, you will see that the import of artificial silk yarn has increased by over 30 times. I will give the exact figures to the House. In 1921-22, the total import of artifical silk yarn was 70,000 lbs. In 1925-26 the total has gone up to 26,70,000 lbs. Sir, that does not look as if the import is being hampered by a duty of 15 per cent. Sir, the question is whether we are going to give any further encouragement to the import of artificial silk yarn. I can speak from my personal observation that, as a result of this increasing quantity of artificial silk yarn coming to this country, the whole market of Bengal is flooded with cheap shoddy fabrics, which undoubtedly compare very favourably in price with the indigenous silk but which are far less durable. And I know it is a fact—I can bear personal testimony to it—that as a matter of fact on account of cheapness these articles are displacing Bengal silk to a certain extent. My Honourable friend the Member in charge may point out that a very large quantity of Indian silk yarn is imported and that a very large quantity of raw silk is imported into this country for the purpose of manufacture. But I want him to remember that, so far as Bengal is concerned, we utilise a very large quantity the indigenous silk yarn that we produce. That is to say, that argument ought not to apply to Bengal, whatever weight it may have in reference to the other provinces. Sir, the misfortune of this industry is, so far as Bengal is concerned, that it is not represented in this House by a man like Sir Victor Sassoon. It has not got friends like Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas or Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru. It is Bengal's misfortune not to be represented in this House by stalwarts like the Victor Sassoons and Purshotamdas Thakurdases and Kunzrus. But that, I humbly submit, should not weigh with the Government in coming to a decision on this question. Sir, the tragic history of a well-known Bengal industry has formed the theme of numerous political speeches. I have the honour to belong to that city which was famous for its muslin. Sir, muslin exists now in the perorations of our political leaders and my fear is that, if Government were to proceed at this rate, heedless of what the result might be of their action on the indigenous silk industry in Bengal, the Bengal silk industry also might survive only in the perorations of my Honourable friend Pandit Kunzru's eloquent speeches. Sir, it is a misfortune that, when we are discussing this question which affects three or four provinces of India not very strongly represented in this House, that we should miss the commanding presence of men like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, whose clarion voice was raised yesterday in support of the millowners' interests. I do hope, Sir, that, although they are absent from the floor of the House

1 P.M.

(An Honourable Member : " Here he comes.") We will have their support when we go into the lobbies.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy has said many things in excitement which I am sure he will regret on calmer reflection. He need not be sorry that Bengal is not strongly represented here. Bengal could not have a more pertinacious defender of lost causes than my Honourable friend. He represented me as having said many things which I never said. All that I said in my first speech was that nobody in the Select Committee, not even those who have appended minutes of dissent, expressed any dissatisfaction with the position as it was explained to them in the Committee, either with regard to the handloom industry or with regard to artificial silk. Men who are not experts like me had therefore to accept that position, and we came to the conclusion that there was really no objection to the lowering of the duty on artificial silk. He also knows—in fact I told him expressly—that in view of the facts he wished to bring out, I for one would have no objection to a reconsideration of the matter, but that there was absolutely no reason, in order to reconsider the question of silk, to ask that the Bill should be recommitted. I wish to remind by friend of these facts, as within half an hour he seems to have forgotten them. I do hope.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is the Honourable Member in order, Sir, in referring to a conversation which took place outside the Chamber ?

Mr. President : Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I do hope, Sir.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : If you permit him, Sir, to refer to these conversations, I am entitled to reply.

Pandit Hiday Nath Kunzru : I am not referring, Sir, to anything said by Mr. Neogy. I only hope, Sir, that he will have a more retentive memory in future.

As regards artificial silk, the Honourable the Commerce Member will certainly explain the position again, and if the situation in Bengal is as parlous as it has been stated to be by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy, there is no one who would not give a chance to the silk industry of Bengal. Nobody wishes that cheap foreign imitation stuff should come into competition with the real stuff of this country. But my Honourable friend, in the eloquent speech which he delivered, never told us what the respective prices of artificial silk and real silk were.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I accept your statement.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The Honourable Member tells me that he accepts my statement. Well, then, if real silk is three times as dear as artificial silk, it does as a matter of fact seem difficult to accept that artificial silk is coming into competition with real silk. I am afraid my Honourable friend contented himself merely with the cutting which he read out to us. He did not pursue the matter further. He did not ask the men concerned in the silk industry in Bengal what the position was.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : They are not organised as your friends of the mill industry of Bombay.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : These people do not belong, he says, to Bombay. That is all the more reason why my Honourable friend, who is exclusively concerned with Bengal, should have taken care to inform himself of all the facts bearing on the subject. He should have known that he would be the sole and valiant defender of Bengal in this Assembly and he ought to have come well armed—panoplied from head to foot—so that he might be able to resist all attacks. If he has not done so, he must bear a portion of the blame along with the Members of the Select Committee.

[Mr. Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

Mr. K. C. Neogy : What was the Servants of India Society doing ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The Servants of India Society took as much care as it possibly could to acquaint itself with the facts in company with members engaged in commerce and industry.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Give us the facts then.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : There was an opportunity, Sir, for discussing this subject when this Bill was referred to the Select Committee, but my Honourable friend was not one of those who discussed this matter.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I did refer to it in my speech.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Not, Sir, in one-tenth of the detail in which he has referred to it now. If the matter was so serious, of such first class importance, if it affected Bengal in the way in which he now thinks it does, it was his clear and imperative duty on the very first day to sound a note of warning and ask us to consider it not merely from the point of view of Bombay but also of helpless Bengal. Having omitted to do that, not having taken sufficient care to acquaint himself with all the facts, he has no right now to turn round upon us and attack us for mistakes which really are his own.

Before I sit down, I should only like to say that in view of the facts which he has pointed out, or rather the facts which he has alleged, I should have no objection for my part to the matter being reconsidered. The Honourable the Commerce Member, too, a few minutes ago, said that that was a matter which stood by itself and could be considered separately on its own merits. I hope he will find it possible to allow it to be reconsidered. Nothing will be lost if we do not reduce the duty on artificial silk at once, particulary as it was not recommended by the Tariff Board.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I apologise to the House and to my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, for having been absent for a few minutes when this discussion came on. I am really sorry for it, as I think it is the duty of every Honourable Member of this House to be in attendance while the House sits. I submit that the proposal before the House deserves the sympathetic consideration of Government. I do not wish, nor do I need to go into facts and figures, as was done by my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy. I am content to say that artificial silk is coming to India in increasing quatities, and no facts and figures are needed to show that it must compete with the indigenous silk industry. I am in favour of every step being taken by Government to shut out foreign stuff ; particularly when it is imitation stuff and worthless stuff Government should take every step to shut it out from the country by all legitimate means. We have to remember on the one hand, that the people are cheated by these stuffs which do not last long, and on the other, that we have to encourage the indigenous industry and we ought to take every step that may be necessary towards that end. I do hope on these general grounds the Honourable the Commerce Member will re-consider this question, and if the facts and figures at present available may not help us to solve the question, I hope that he will allow the matter to stand for the present where it does, remove the clause to which Mr. Neogy's remarks relate, and deal with the matter later on when the need for action has been made more clear.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I should like, Mr. President, to explain, if I can, what exactly this proposal means. The material which is called artificial silk is altogether a new textile material, and it is only in the years since the war that it has come into general use. In the first years after the war, some 5 or 6 years ago, its price was almost as high as the price of real silk, but in the course of the last 5 or 6 years the price has dropped with extraordinary rapidity, and at the same time, the material has become very popular and is now used on a scale which begins to approach the scale on which the older and more familiar textile materials are used. All over the world, you are beginning to find in constant use fabrics of various sorts made—not entirely of artificial silk—but more commonly of a mixture of artificial silk with other materials, and particularly with cotton. So far as India is concerned, it is these mixed goods made partly from artificial silk and partly from cotton that we are chiefly concerned with. The imports from other countries of these piecegoods have increased very rapidly and between the years 1924-25 and 1926-27 the imports of these piecegoods have more than doubled. The attraction of them is largely this, I think, that the mixture of the artificial silk gives a better and more decorative appearance to the fabric and therefore it is more attractive to the purchaser. At present both these mixed piecegoods, made partly of artificial silk and partly of cotton, and the artificial silk yarn that is imported into this country are dutiable at 15 per cent. But both the cotton mills in Bombay and elsewhere and also some of the handloom weavers particularly in Southern India have begun to manufacture these piecegoods made of a combination of cotton and of artificial silk, and the manufacturer has to pay on the artificial silk yarn that he uses the same rate of duty as is imposed on the imported fabric which competes with what he makes. All that is proposed in this particular time in the Bill is to reduce the duty on the artificial silk yarn from 15 to 7½ per cent. so that the manufacturer in this country, whether he be a handloom weaver or whether it be a cotton mill will have a definite advantage in competing with the imported piecegoods. Now, more than one speaker has expressed a desire that India should rely as far as possible on the materials she herself produces. If that is the intention the only way in which that could be done would be not only to impose a very high duty on the artificial silk yarn (I should think that at least 100 per cent. would be necessary), but you will also have to impose a duty on a similar scale on the piecegoods made from the combination of artificial silk yarn with other materials. That would be a very drastic proposal indeed—to compel the consumer to wear only the materials actually produced in India, especially when the fiscal measures necessary to introduce this compulsion would have to be very severe.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On artificial silk the duty is 30 per cent. in Japan.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : If my Honourable friend suggests that in order to equalise matters some reduction ought to be made in the duty on silk, whatever its merits, it is hardly germane to the discussion at the present moment. I should like to repeat once again the figures I gave on the former occasion as regards prices. Five or six years ago artificial silk yarn and real silk yarn were selling at not very dissimilar prices Today the price of artificial silk yarn is about one-third of the price of real silk yarn. In these circumstances it seems to me that, as regards competition with real silk, the reduction in the duty from 15 to 7½ per cent. can only have a negligible effect. It will make very little difference indeed from that point of view. But it may make a quite appreciable difference to the cotton mill and to the handloom weaver if they can get a little cheaper the material which they require in order to produce the kind of piecegoods that the consumer is more and more beginning to demand. I think, Mr. President, that the Government of India were perfectly justified in putting forward this proposal in the belief that it would not injure any interest in India and that it would be an appreciable benefit both to the handloom weaver and to the cotton mills.

Before sitting down I will only refer very briefly to the suggestion that the Government of India have acted with the desire to benefit some interests outside India. If Honourable Members are deterimined to cherish these suspicions it is very defficult for me to say anything that will persuade them to the contrary. But surely in this matter the reason for taking action is obvious. As I have already told the House, the original suggestion came from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. At that time the Government of India were unable to accept it The next development occurred when I visited Bombay in April and interviewed the Committee of the Bombay Millowners'Association and asked their opinion upon it, any they gave their opinion then and there unhesitatingly in favour of the proposal. I do not recollect in the least whether it was actually mentioned on the occasion of the deputation to which one Honourable Member has referred. But if it was not, the reason was that it had already been discussed between myself and the Bombay Millowners' Association. Apart from that the Government of India had no discussion with anybody else at all. I do hope that Honourable Members will not vote under any impression of that kind, for which there is really no justification of any sort.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That paragraph 10 of the Schedule to the Bill be omitted."

The Assembly divided :

AYES—35.

Abdoola Haroon, Haji.
Aney, Mr. M. S.
Ayyangar, Mr. M. S. Sesha.
Belvi, Mr. D. V.
Bhargava, Pandit Thakur Das.
Chaman Lall, Diwan.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
Farookhi, Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb.
Goswami, Mr. T. C.
Gour, Sir Hari Singh.
Iyengar, Mr. A. Rangaswami.
Iyengar, Mr. S. Srinivasa.
Kelkar, Mr. N. C.
Kidwai, Mr. Rafi Ahmad.
Kunzru, Pandit Hirday Nath.
Lahiri Chaudhury, Mr. Dhirendra Kanta.
Malaviya, Pandit Madan Mohan.
Mehta, Mr. Jamnadas M.
Moonje, Dr. B. S.
Mukhtar Singh, Mr.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi Sayyid.
Naidu, Mr. B. P.
Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Prakasam, Mr. T.
Rang Behari Lal, Lala.
Rao, Mr. G. Sarvotham.
Sarda, Rai Sahib Harbilas.
Shafee, Maulvi Mohammad.
Siddiqi, Mr. Abdul Qadir.
Singh, Kumar Rananjaya.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Narayan Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Ram Narayan.
Sinha, Kumar Ganganand.
Sinha, Mr. Siddheswar.

NOES—52.

Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Nasir-ud-din.
Alexander, Mr. William.
Ayyangar, Mr. V. K. Aravamudha
Ayyangar, Rao Bahadur Narasimha Gopalaswami.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Blackett, The Honourable Sir Basil.
Bray, Sir Denys.
Coatman, Mr. J.
Cocke, Mr. H. G.
Cosgrave, Mr. W. A.
Courtenay, Mr. R. H.
Crawford, Colonel J. D.
Crerar, The Honourable Mr. J.
Crofton, Mr. R. M.
Dakhan, Mr. W. M. P. Ghulam Qadir Khan.
Dalal, Mr. A. R.
Dalal, Sardar Sir Bomanji.
Donovan, Mr. J. T.
Dunnett, Mr. J. M.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J.
Haigh, Mr. P. B.
Haji, Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand.
Irving, Mr. Miles.
Joshi, Mr. N. M.
Kabul Singh Bahadur, Captain.
Keane, Mr. M.
Khin Maung, U.
Kikabhai Premchand, Mr.
Kirk, Mr. R. T. F.
Lamb, Mr. W. S.
Mitra, The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath.
Mohammad Ismail Khan, Haji Chaudhury.
Moore, Mr. Arthur.
Mukherjee, Mr. S. C.
Murray, Sir Alexander.
Parsons, Mr. A. A. L.
Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir.
Rahimtulla, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim.
Rainy, The Honourable Sir George.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur, M. C.
Ruthnaswamy, Mr. M.
Sams, Mr. H. A.
Sassoon, Sir Victor.
Singh, Rai Bahadur S. N.
Sykes, Mr. E. F.
Tonkinson, Mr. H.
Wright, Mr. W. T. M.
Yakub, Maulvi Muhammad.
Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad.
Young, Mr. G. M.
Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir.

The motion was negatived.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I move :

" That in paragraph 10 of the Schedule to the Bill, in the proposed Item 43-A, the words ' Artificial silk yarn and thread ' be substituted for the words ' Artificial silk yarn and silk thread '."

The Select Committee in this particular Item, Mr. President, made a modification intended to change the definition. The original definition in the Bill referred also to artificial silk warps. We were advised, however, that the warps ought not to be specially mentioned. This advice came from those who had actual experience of the trade and the Committee decided it would be better to mention in the definition only artificial silk yarn and thread. Unfortunately, however, the actual wording of the amendment made in the Select Committee did not correctly carry out the intention, and as the entry stands in the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee it would almost certainly be interpreted as referring to artificial silk yarn and silk thread that is not artificial silk thread but real silk thread. It is quite clear that it was not the intention to interfere at all with the duty on the real silk thread. It is for this reason that the amendment proposes that the entry should read " Artificial silk yarn and thread ". If that wording is adopted, I do not think there can be any doubt. Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I move :

" That in paragraph 11-A of the Schedule to the Bill for the proposed Item 54, the following be substituted, namely :—

' 54. The following PRINTING MATERIAL, namely, type, leads, brass rules, wooden and metal quoins, shooting sticks and galleys and metal furniture '."

This amendment, Mr. President, is entirely consequential on an earlier amendment which has already been passed by the Assembly. I do not think it requires any further explanation, and I therefore move it.

The motion was adopted.

The Schedule was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

THE BAMBOO PAPER INDUSTRY (PROTECTION) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move that the Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the bamboo paper industry in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Sir, it will not be necessary, I think, that I should say more than a very few words in support of this motion. The Bill was referred to the Select Committee unanimously and the Select Committee has presented a unanimous report without making any changes in the Bill. In my speech on the motion to refer the Bill to the Select Committee, I explained fairly fully the objects of the Bill and I do not think I need go over the same ground again.

Sir, I move.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, while supporting the motion that the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be taken into consideration, I wish to address certain remarks to this House. I may at once say that they arise out of paragraph 5 of the Report. I have not tabled any specific amendment for this purpose, but I think that will not be taken as an objection to my making a few remarks on the Bill. What I am now seeking to obtain in my remarks is not necessarily by any amendment of any of the clauses of the Bill as now reported upon by the Select Committee, but I contend that what I want to be secured can be obtained by executive action. I consider that this is the proper occasion for me to make those remarks. If I lose this opportunity, I fear there will be no occasion for bringing this point to the notice of the Honourable the Commerce Member. Sir, as I have already said, my remarks arise out of paragraph 5 of the Report. Without disclosing any of the secrets of the Select Committee, I may say that I mentioned the point that I am going to state to the Select Committee then and there, and I told the Honourable the Commerce Member that I would take up this point in the House, if in the interval I got sufficient material to rely upon. After having gathered sufficient material, I am now satisfied that the point that I am going to place before the House is a reasonable propostion. In the first place, I may at once say that I am pleading for the refund of certain excess duty which was levied upon a kind of paper about which I contend there should have been absolutely no doubt as to its quality and its consequential exemption from the levy of that duty. I want two things, first, a refund of duty to all importers on imports of newsprint, white or coloured, which were allowed to be cleared on payment of the old schedule duty but on which subsequently the customs authorities have made demands for payment of less charge in consequence of the revised ruling of February 1927 for reasons stated ; then, refund of duty on all imports of newsprint, white or coloured, on which the importers have been made to pay the provisional duty of one anna per lb. pending the final decision of Government in this matter, as the customs officers actually collected from them duty in the way indicated above and reasonably they have been expecting the law to be amended.

Now this Bill is a very good thing because it removes one positive injustice. The House will remember that this Bill is giving justice to those people who have suffered injustice during a recent short interval. The Act of 1925 definitely gave protection to certain kinds of paper imported. That went on till 1926. In that year doubt was raised and opinion was sought for from headquarters as to what the proper action was and the Government confirmed the existing state of things. The thing went on then for one year more and only in February last—1927—was another ruling given, I suppose on the authority of the law officers, which goes contrary entirely to the original intentions of the Tariff Board, which recommended the exemption, the original intentions of the Act of 1925, the interpretation put upon the measure by the then Commerce Member, and I say again, the interpretation that is now being embodied in the tariff schedule by the present Bill. So you will remember, Sir, that from the time of the original recommendation of the Tariff Board up to this moment and hereafter of course for as long as may be, there has been one continuous thread of intention running all along except for a brief period of four or five months. So we are now by this Bill removing that injustice and putting the thing beyond doubt. But what I am saying is this. If you are removing one injustice you should take the occasion for removing also another injustice, namely, the refund of duty which was unreasonably collected under an alleged doubt. The Government have shown in this case that they have a sufficiently elastic conscience, but my grievance is that they have an elastic conscience only in one direction. They can make their conscience elastic enough to recover excess duty though previously no duty was to be levied. They can come in on the scene at any time, give notice and demand the recovery of less charge. On the other hand, I ask why should that economic conscience not be elastic enough to give a refund where a refund is legitimately due.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

Now I will take the sub-clauses of paragraph 5 with regard to which I am making my remarks. Sub-clause (2) of paragraph 5 says there was a doubt, but until the Tariff Board had investigated the question it could not be said that this was clear beyond all doubt and for this reason it was impossible for the Government, at the time the ruling of 1927 was published, to announce that they intended an amendment of the law. Now, if there was a doubt, I contend in the first place, that the benefit of the doubt should not be taken by Government but should have been given at once to the importers of paper. With regard to paragraph 3, it is stated that there is a practical difficulty in the way of giving a refund. If refunds of the difference between the two rates of duty are now to be given, there is no guarantee that the benefit will reach the ultimate consumer and there is no reason why the importer who has been paid the price which includes the duty at the protective rate should receive a refund from Government. Now, Sir, this argument is based upon the supposition that those who are concerned in the refund are only merchants, that is, people who have imported paper but have passed it on to other consumers, not having used it themselves. But I think there is another class of people whom I can name and, if this line of argument in this part is to be assumed to be correct, it necessarily follows that those other people of whom I am now speaking ought to get this refund. Take the case of a newspaper man who does not do any job work, who imports paper for his newspaper and can prove at any time most reliably that he has consumed the imported paper for the purposes of his newspaper alone. In that case I contend that this line of reasoning does not apply. This line of reasoning applies strictly to people who are merchants and importers of paper for sale, who have passed the goods off their hands and according to the assumption made here have recovered the duty as well as the price. But it can be shown in the case of people who consume their own paper that the duty has been paid by them and that it has not been shared by any one else and that they have consumed the whole quantity of paper themselves. This is an outstanding and clear case against the line of reasoning adopted in paragraph 3.

Then paragraph 4 says : " Why should we make a discrimination between this class of people and the other class ? " My simple answer to that is that it is quite right and fair that discrimination should be made where discrimination can be made and where it is equitable to make it. If the line of reasoning in this part is to be accepted, it means only this : that if we have committed one wrong, let us commit another wrong in addition. But I may at once reply to that by saying that two wrongs never make one right. Now it has been obvious all along from the Reports of both the Tariff Boards and from the proceedings in this House in 1925 as also the action subsequently taken in 1926—it is absolutely clear that there should have been no doubt as to the exemption which was due to certain kinds of paper. Newsprint is a case in point, and I will show at once that there should have been absolutely no difficulty, no doubt, as to the exemption to be given to newsprint. The Tariff Board Report of 1925 (paragraph 18) says :

" With few exceptions the important Indian newspapers are printed on newsprint, a kind of paper which contains about 70 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp " which means at least 5 per cent. higher than the point about which there seems to be some contention.

If newsprint by common consent generally contains 70 per cent. of wood pulp, then surely that paper should have been allowed to be exempted merely by the description of it, without its being subjected to any chemical or other analysis. The present Tariff Board of 1927 has also said :

" It might be fairly claimed that it was the intention in enacting the Bamboo Paper Industry Act to exempt from the protective duty such printing paper as fulfilled these conditions."

" These conditions " means that the paper should contain more than 65 per cent. of wood pulp ; and from the first Report I pointed out that by common consent newsprint is acknowledged always to contain more than 65 per cent. Therefore, under these circumstances, objection should not have been taken to the paper coming in being exempted from the protective tariff duty. Now, what is the justification for Government for doing this in this case ? They are making a profit out of their own doubt. Who raised that doubt ? It was not the executive Government which of course was entitled to pass orders and issue rulings on a question like this, but I suppose somebody, some interested people in Calcutta, raised the question again in 1927, and I am told that the law officers of the Government gave that opinion. But when the Statute is there and when the intentions can be ascertained and verified from point to point from 1925 up to now, I do not know why the Government should have listened to the interpretation put by its law officers. Nobody would have sued them if they had continued their old action as in 1926. Therefore, Sir, here is a case in which the interpretation was right till 1926, that is for more than a year ; it was again confirmed in 1926 and remained valid till February 1927, and it is now, as we see here, going to be confirmed by the present Bill. Therefore, here is a small period of, what shall I say—shall I call it insanity between long periods of sanity. And who is to suffer for this spell of a doubt, a missma, created by the Government themselves unnecessarily ? Why should the importer suffer for the doubt created by the Government themselves ? It is the Government who should suffer and not anybody else. But, Sir, it is not a case of suffering by Government in having to pay out what has been illegitimately collected, but it is a case of suffering by the importer for a fault for which he is in no way responsible. This small interval of invalidity between long periods of validity reminds me of a story of a fastidious Treasury Officer. We all know that pensioners have got to produce life certificates when they present themselves to receive their pensions. Now it so happened in this real story which was narrated to me, that a pensioner went before a Treasury Officer and presented two life certificates. One was for January and another was for March. The Treasury Officer said : "I admit you were alive in January by the certificate ; I admit also that you were alive in March. But what proof is there that you were alive in the month of February of that year ?" The present case is almost similar to that. Exemption was valid before 1925, it was valid in 1925, it was again valid in 1926, and even now by the present Bill, which will last for a long time, the exemption will remain valid. When was it invalid, Sir ? For the brief period of February to September. That is, on the face of it, absurd, and I do not know why Government should not show their large-heartedness by paying out money which has been illegitimately collected. Remember, that Government in this case has not made small profits. In one case which has come to my knowledge, one person in May and June has paid about Rs. 6,000 duty. Now, that is certainly a large sum, and Government are not entitled to recover so much from an importer simply because a certain doubt had arisen at a certain time. (An Honourable Member : "Illicit gain.") Yes, certainly it is a case of illicit gain, it is a case of wrongful loss to a certain party and wrongful gain to Government. I would in this connection, Sir, allude to the remarks made by my friend Colonel Crawford in March last, he had raised that specific point then. If that was not a regular notice of asking for repayment from the importer to the Customs House, it was certainly a notice given by Colonel Crawford on behalf of importers generally to this House or to the Honourable the Commerce Member. Therefore, I contend, Sir, that this refund should be given, and it can be given under section 40 of the Sea Customs Act. The Sea Customs Act says this :

3 P.M.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

"No customs duties or charges which have been paid and of which repayment wholly or in part is claimed in consequence of the same having been paid through inadvertence, error or misconstruction shall be returned unless such claim is made within three months from the date of such payment ".

This, Sir, is a negative statement of the position. The section says that no payment shall be made unless a claim has been put therefor within three months. Putting it as a positive statement, therefore, we can say that if a claim is made within three months of payment, then the party becomes entitled to a refund. And I lay stress upon the reasons which are referred to in the section. Inadvertence, error and misconstruction. And I base my claim for this refund upon these facts. It is an error. It is a misconstruction. Perhaps it may not be inadvertence. But it is error and, even apart from that, it is misconstruction, which of course now has been clearly proved by the present Bill. For these reasons I bring this claim for refund—and it is a substantial claim—to the notice of the Commerce Member and I hope he will consider my arguments and set the matter right, which he can do without my moving any amendment therefor, by executive action.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Sir, I do not want to follow the remarks of my Honourable friend which were always interesting and at times humorous but I wish to say that I have considerable sympathy with this claim for refunds. The point I do wish to raise is one in connection with the Schedule to this Bill. Item No. 156 deals with writing paper. But nothing is said about envelopes. I understand that envelopes have been included in the term " writing paper " by a customs notification, but we all know that notifications are liable to be altered and therefore I wish to say that I consider it would have been much more satisfactory had the word " envelopes " been included and I should like an assurance from the Honourable Member in charge that it is the intention to include envelopes in that heading, not only to-day but continuously. Many of my lawyer friends could make out a very good case that envelopes are not writing paper and I have no doubt they could make out an equally good case that writing paper is equivalent to envelopes. But at any rate I understand in the trade it is looked upon as an omission that writing paper is referred to and not envelopes and I therefore trust the Honourable Member will have some assurance to give to the House on that subject.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I shall try to be very brief because, if I may make a confession, I share the feeling that I know is deeply felt in most hearts in this House that it would be a good thing if the Rainy part of the season were soon over. (Laughter.) I have listened to the siren strains from my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar on the other side of the House, in which he has endeavoured to soften the stony hearts of not only, I think, the Commerce Member but possibly of the Finance Member also over this question of retrospective effect. Now, Mr. President, the Report of the Select Committee in which this matter was very fully discussed is dated the 31st August 1927. It is now the 8th September and, as no notice of an amendment has been tabled, I think I may take it that the House generally has been satisfied with the reasons given by the Select Committee that in one case retrospective effect should be given to the amendment of the law (Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : " Oh, no."), while in the other case it was not right or expedient to do so. The reasons are fully stated in the Report of the Select Committee and I do not wish to go through them again. My friend, Mr. Kelkar, said he would take them seriatim, but there was one to which he did not refer, unless my ear misled me. First he dealt with Item No. 3, and he rejected the argument in that paragraph on the ground that it was not only a question of the importer, that is, also of the merchant who imported for sale to others, but also of the direct importer who imported paper simply for his own use. But I did not hear him refer to Item 4 which is to this effect that, if refunds were to be given only to those who imported for their own use and not for sale, it would mean an unjustifiable discrimination between one class of importers and another.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : I referred to that and said discrimination would be justified.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I apologise to the Honourable Member for unintentionally misrepresenting him. I did not hear that reference. But I am afraid I cannot at all agree with him that the discrimination would be justified. Then the Honourable Member said that, although he did not give notice of any amendment, he believed that the importers could obtain what they wanted by executive action. I am very doubtful whether that is in fact the case, and I think the Honourable Member must take the views expressed in the Report of the Select Committee as being the views of the Commerce Department and of the Government of India, and I am afraid I can hold out no hope to him that he will get what he wants. If, however, the point he is raising is a question of law, if he suggests that under the law an importer will be entitled to a refund, that is a totally different matter and obviously not one for discussion in this House. If the importers have their remedy under the law, then they must be left to exercise it.

[Sir George Rainy.]

My Honourable friend Mr. Cocke mentioned a small point in connection with entry No. 156 in the Schedule. I understand the point is this, that he desires that envelopes should be specifically mentioned in the definition of " writing paper " so that there should be no doubt that they were included. Had this point been brought to notice at an earlier date, it might have been possible to amend the Schedule. I do not think it is necessary myself, for I have examined the ruling of the Central Board of Revenue, which seems to me to show clearly that the present interpretation of the law by which envelopes are included in writing paper is correct. But, as I say, I might have been prepared to consider an amendment had this matter been brought to my notice earlier. I should regard it as extremely dangerous to make an amendment on the spur of the moment at the eleventh hour. One is so apt to overlook particular points and one may quite inadvertently make an unintended change in the law with very curious results. I am quite prepared, however, to consider the matter, and if it appears there is likely to be any doubt on the subject, in all probability there will be a Tariff Bill in the cold weather Session, and the necessary steps can be taken then.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the bamboo paper industry in British India, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2, 3 and 4 were added to the Bill.

The Schedule was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN SECURITIES (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill to amend the Indian Securities Act, 1920, for certain purposes, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Sir, this Bill has been considerably reduced in scope by the Select Committee. I do not pretend, Sir, to be entirely satisfied with the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee.

But on the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread I am content to take this Bill as it stands for the time being and to consider at leisure whether further action should be taken to secure the full objects with which the Bill was originally introduced.

The Bill, as originally introduced, had two main purposes in view. In the first place, a judgment of the Madras High Court, known as the Bapuli judgment, revealed two defects in the existing law relating to Indian securities. In the case of promissory notes declared to be payable on demand, although the loan to which they relate may have been notified for discharge, the Government under that judgment is found to be liable to pay the principal as well as the interest up to the date of the demand by the holder, and it is optional with the holder of the promissory note to defer the demand as long as he pleases and the Government are not entitled to dispute it. That obviously is an unsatisfactory position from the point of view of Government. A loan may be at a high rate of interest and the Government may use its powers to notify the loan for repayment with a view to re-borrowing the amount in question at a lower rate of interest. That is a thing which is frequently done. It is obviously undesirable that the tax-payer should continue to be liable for interest at the higher rate indefinitely and that the holder should be able to secure to himself that higher rate indefinitely simply by not making a demand for the payment which the Government have notified that they are ready to make. Both as regards the principal and as regards interest, there are difficulties. As regards the principal, the position under that judgment is that the Government are required to retain all the books for an absolutely indefinite period until the demand is made and a time may come when it may be very difficult, if not impossible, to prove that the payment has actually been made or not. The Select Committee, after considering these, came to the conclusion that they did not desire to relieve the Government from the liability to pay the principal however long the demand might be deferred, 100 years or more. But as regards the interest, they have agreed that it is desirable that the Government should cease to be liable to pay any interest beyond the date notified by the Government as the date on which they are prepared to repay the principal. If the holder does not demand repayment of the principal on the date on which the Government offers to repay, the principal remains for him to take whenever he wishes, but interest does not continue to accrue against Government beyond the date named by the Government. The second difficulty that was felt to arise was that the elaborate safeguards for the protection of the Government and other claimants prescribed under the Indian Securities Act can be circumvented by the legal representative of the deceased holder of a lost Government security if he obtains a certificate under the Indian Succession Act. Government on the recommendation of the Advocate General proposed to alter the Indian Securities Act with a view to filling up that possible lacuna in the law. The Select Committee think it desirable that the Government should reconsider this question, and if they find that the civil courts issue succession certificates without the enquiry required by section 10 of the Indian Securities Act, the Select Committee recommend that the Government should consider the desirability of amending not the Indian Securities Act but the Indian Succession Act.

The Government propose in accordance with the recommendation of the Select Committee to consider that matter and if they think fit no doubt further legislation will be introduced at a later date. The result is that the Bill is reduced to a very small compass and I think after the explanation I have made the House will have no difficulty in passing it.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 3 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. Aney.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative): Sir, I rise to move the amendment that stands in my name. The amendment is as follows :

" That in clause 3, in the proposed section 18-A for all the words occurring after the word ' after ' the following be substituted :

' a period of three years from the date on which a notice for receiving the amount due on such security would be issued '."

The main object of this amendment is this. The Bill that was originally brought and referred to the Select Committee provided in clause 3 enacting a new section proposed to be a substitute for section 18 of the Securities Act, that the Government should be absolved of all liability for principal and interest after six years after the date on which the amount on the security was due or, became payable. That was the provision in the original Bill. When this matter was referred to the Select Committee, I made it clear in my speech that that was an iniquity, that the liability of the Government subsisted so long as the actual payment was not made and was of a permanent nature in a way under the Act ; and it would not be equitable to those who hold the security that, after a certain date on which the amount was due, they should be deprived of the right of receiving the amount due on the security and that Government should be entitled to claim without any payment on discharge for principal and interest as well. That point was discussed in the Select Committee and in the Select Committee for reasons which have been stated in the report it was conceded that so far as the principal was concerned, the liability of the Government should remain there so long as the payment was not made. But as regards interest it was agreed that there should be some period of limitation beyond which the right of the security holder to claim interest on the amount should cease. On that point I find that there seems to be some misunderstanding. As to what was actually agreed in the Select Committee I am glad to find that we have not to rely merely on impressions or frail memories. It has been very lucidly put in and summarised by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett himself in a memorandum which was issued by him and circulated to the members of the Select Committee. He stated there in paragraph 2 the exact position which was agreed to in the Select Committee when this matter was first discussed in March last, in the following words :

"Some of the members of the Committee were not willing to agree to Government putting in a plea of limitation in respect of the principal. They were ready to allow such a plea in respect of interest as they realized that it was in the interest of Government and the tax-payer that loans obtained at higher rates of interest should be converted into loans bearing lower rates and that such operations would be defeated if any security holder should continue to hold securities and claim higher rates of interest for long periods extending after the date on which the securities were due or notified for discharge."

That was the position agreed to. I want to make it clear that this clearly indicated that the Committee was not prepared altogether to dispense with but was only inclined to retain some period of limitation for which the interest was to accrue and accumulate even after the amount on the security was due or became payable. But under the clause as it now stands in the report of the Committee all interest will automatically cease after the day on which the amount due on the security becomes payable. Now what I claim to bring about by my amendment is that there should be a period of three years limitation during which the interest should be allowed to accumulate, and after that period the claim of the security holder for interest should cease. That is the change which I want to bring about. If the original Bill had been passed into law there would have been a period of 6 years limitation during which the interest would have accumulated. (An Honourable Member : "No.") That is not merely my understanding of the Bill but the only legal and sensible consequence of the clause. If there was a period of limitation for 6 years after which the liability of the Government was to cease, it meant that for that period of 6 years interest would necessarily accumulate, if no actual payment was made to the creditor during the period, and the person entitled to the security would have been also entitled to claim the amount of interest due on it during that period also. Thus the Honourable Members would realise that in my amendment I am making a concession in favour of the security holders more modest than what the Government was prepared to make when I simply urge that at least, so far as the interest is concerned, a period of three years should be allowed during which the interest can accumulate, and after that it should altogether cease. That is the real significance of the change which I want to bring about in the Bill as amended by the Select Committee in the interests of the numerous security holders. I think I have made my position sufficiently clear and I commend this amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, although I was not present at the final meeting of the Select Committee at which the Report was decided upon and signed, I believe I am correct in saying that what my Honourable friend Mr. Aney suggests is not only not feasible but is very far from being customary in commercial circles. My friend, Sir, suggests that when Government loans fall due for repayment, if the lender, the man who holds the Government scrip, chooses to leave his money with Government, even though Government are prepared to pay back the debt, interest should continue to run for a period of three years practically at the discretion and at the pleasure of the lender. What, Sir, would happen in connection, we will say, with the Bombay Development Loan which bears interest at 6½ per cent. free of income-tax and which is due for repayment in 1935 ? The rate at which Government can borrow to-day is 4½ per cent., and I will take it for granted that in 1935 the rate will be the same. Now everybody who holds the Development Loan scrip will stick to it for three years and continue to earn interest at 6½ per cent. free of income-tax. And if my friend's amendment is carried it will only amount to this, that if the rate of interest is lower than the rate carried by the loan which is due for repayment everybody holding that loan will simply not present it. On the other hand, if the rate of interest current at the time happens to be higher, they will all hasten to the Government treasury and get their money back. I am afraid it is an absoluely one-sided proposition, and I hope my Honourable friend will not press this amendment.

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Mr. T. Prakasam (East Godavari and West Godavari cum Kistna : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I support the amendment moved by Mr. Aney. It is an elementary rule that a cause of action cannot start and end at the same moment. What is proposed in clause 3 of the Bill is that the cause of action should start the moment the Government notify that they are ready to pay the amount, and that it should be taken that the lender is not entitled to claim any interest from that moment. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas has been stating something about a loan which is fixed to be repaid after a particular period. That stands on a different footing altogether from the on demand pro-notes that the Government take in their favour from the people. What would be the case with regard to such notes ? Government issue a notification, and not even a letter to each individual informing him that they are ready to pay. We know how many people would notice notifications, how many of the villagers who would be investing their monies in these loans, would be noticing them. With regard to such cases—I am sure there are a large number of cases existing on that basis—I think it cannot be contended by the Government with any reason that the starting of the cause of action and the closing of the cause of action should be at the same time. It is a very unreasonable position and I hope the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill would see the error that this clause involves. It is a very reasonable request that is made in the amendment that there should be a period of at least three years after the cause of action starts. After lending the money to the Government people believe that it is a Government pro-note which is as good as a real estate. The people concerned may be somewhere and they may not be able to notice all these notifications and they should not be put to the inconvenience of losing interest from the moment that the notification is published. For these reasons, I support the amendment.

Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder (Calcutta : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I think there is a great deal of misconception as to the scope of clause 3. As a matter of fact, it is opposed to all juristic principles that a creditor should be in a position to compel the debtor to pay interest even though the debtor is not only willing to pay back the money, but makes a tender. I use the word ' tender ' advisedly, because publishing a notification is the only way in which a Government wishing to repay a loan can make a tender. With regard to all that Mr. Prakasam has said, if you just imagine how a Government loan is repaid, you will find out that there is nothing much in his argument. In the first place, Sir, it is only the Government promissory notes which provide that Government may not before a particular date pay off the amount. In that case, when Government wish to pay off that loan, I suppose Government will give at least notice of 5 or 6 months or even more. In fact, the thing will be provided for in the Budget, and so forth. So there is no chance of the thing being done, of Government repaying a loan, without the people at large knowing anything about it. Having regard to all these circumstances, however much I may regret it, I think I must differ from Mr. Prakasam.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I would appeal to my Honourable friend, Mr. Aney, to withdraw his amendment. I think he is under a misconception. There is no question but that in the original Bill the intention was that there should be a period of limitation in regard to the interest and also that interest should cease to accrue after the date mentioned by the Government as the date on which they would offer to make repayment. There is no change in that matter from the original Bill. The change is in regard to the principal. The Honourable Member has, I think, confused limitation with accrual. There is no provision now in the Bill that the interest which was due at the date mentioned as the date of repayment should not be payable to the holder, without any limitation running. What we propose is simply this that after that significant date interest should cease to accrue, and that is, I think, quite in accordance with the legitimate position as between creditor and debtor as was well expressed by Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder, namely, that the debtor having offered and made a definite tender of repayment from that date, he should not be liable to continue to pay interest if the creditor for his own purposes does not take repayment then and there.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in clause 3, in the proposed section 18-A, for all the words occurring after the word ' after ' the following be substituted :

' a period of three years from the date on which a notice for receiving the amount due on such security would be issued '."

The motion was negatived.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE VOLUNTEER POLICE BILL.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Mr. Crerar on the 24th August :

" That the Bill to make provision to enable volunteer police forces to be constituted temporarily and employed locally for the purpose of preserving the public peace and protecting persons and property, and to define the powers and duties of such police,

[Mr. President.]

be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. J. M. Dunnett, Mr. M. Keane, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. D. V. Belvi, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Mr. Abdul Haye, Colonel J. D. Crawford, and the Mover ; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.''

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir I regret I cannot support this motion. I have no hesitation in saying that the motive behind the Bill and the abstract principle underlying it are both laudable, but the Bill as presented and the time at which it has been presented force me to raise a series of objections to the Bill. My objections fall under three heads. My first objection is that the Bill is inopportune. This is not the time for such a Bill to be put on the Statute-book. My second objection is that it is liable to be used or abused for communal and political purposes and therefore it should not be proceeded with. My third objection is that the Bill is unworkable and therefore useless. In my judgment it cannot be made workable unless the Honourable the Home Member agrees to radical changes being made in the Bill including that part of it which he considers to be of the essence of the measure.

I will take the last point first. The answer given to me by the Honourable the Home Member on the last occasion, i.e., when he moved the motion for referring the Bill to the Select Committee, was to the effect that the word '' temporarily '' in the Preamble was of the essence of the measure. I was sorry to see that the reporter of an important Anglo-Indian paper ridiculed my enquiry. There are some persons here in the Press Gallery who are always ridiculing Members on this side of the House. I do not make any grievance of it, but I would like them to listen first before indulging in any ridicule of that kind. Happily or unhappily, I do not stand alone on that point. I have in my hand the opinions given by competent authorities to whom the Bill was sent for opinion. Many officers of Government share my views not only about the dangers of communal and political troubles being accentuated if the provisions of the Bill are put into operation in the present state of public feeling in the country but they also take objection to the word '' temporarily ''. Sir, the Bill provides that a volunteer force is to be recruited '' temporarily '' to meet emergencies. I have carefully read the speech which Sir Alexander Muddiman made at the time when he introduced the Bill. I have carefully read the Statement of Objects and Reasons and I have also listened to the speech made by the Honourable the Mover of the Bill on the last occasion in this House. I find no indication in any of these speeches and statements how a temporary force is going to be trained before any emergency has arisen. A force can be created only when an emergency has arisen. It is admitted on all hands that a force which has not been properly trained and disciplined will be of no use for the emergency. We have not been told how this force will be trained or disciplined in time to meet that emergency. My submission is that the whole thing is left entirely in a nebulous form. The word '' temporarily '' is extremely vague, and it does not define what is meant by it. Therefore, if an emergency arises and if a force is recruited temporarily for the purpose and if that force is not a trained or disciplined one, it will be of no use whatsoever. If a force is to be trained only during the emergency period, then probably by the time the force is trained, the emergency will have passed away. Therefore, I submit that the word " temporarily " practically makes the provisions of the Bill unworkable and useless for the purpose for which they are intended. I contend that under the provision of this Bill, the training is to be given after the force has been recruited. Without training, a force of this kind would be useless. Nay, some authorities hold that it would be more embarrassing than helpful.

My second contention is that this is inopportune. We are in the midst of a communal wave and also, I may say, in the midst of a political conflict. In this country, the Government and the people of the country are not identical. The Government is not made by the people. The people have no hand in the constitution of the Government. The Government is not responsible to the people. We often find that the interests of the Government and the interests of the people are not identical. The Government of this country is conducted by an official hierarchy, which is recruited mostly from outside. The Government is one which is imposed on us from outside. Under these conditions, it is only natural that those people who are struggling for emancipation, for making this Government responsible to the people, who are struggling for self-government being introduced into this country, should often find themselves in the unhappy position of being up against the official hierarchy that is ruling the country. Their interests not being identical, the conflict, as has been shown on many occasions by actual experience, is very keen and bitter. Under these circumstances, there is a mutual distrust between the two parties which is only inevitable and I should say natural. The people do not trust this Government fully and the Government does not trust the people fully. As a result of this mistrust the people are all divided into two sections—one in favour of the Government and the other against it. These latter are Nationalists. Most of the people support the Nationalist party and the Nationalist demands, and whenever there is a cry of disorder and anarchy there is a conflict of opinion between the Nationalist forces and the Government forces. What the Government is pleased to call disorder and anarchy is considered to be perfectly legitimate and essential for the political progress of the country by the other side. Therefore, we are not always at one in interpreting disorder and anarchy. We may illustrate this from the history of the non-co-operation movement. In the days of the non-co-operation movement we found that the Government was ranged on one side and the people on the other. When in 1905 our countrymen in Bengal started the Swadeshi movement, and started the boycott of foreign cloth they had to start picketing shops which sold foreign cloth. In 1921, in pursuance of the non-co-operation programme, the vast majority of educated people who supported that programme started picketing not only the foreign cloth shops but also the liquor shops. Therefore, it is obvious that in this political struggle there are two parties whose interests are diametrically opposed to one another, whose view of law and order and whose view of anarchy and disorder are at variance with one another. Under these circumstances it is natural for both parties not to trust each other fully.

Now, Sir, this point has been raised by several officials to whom this Bill was sent for opinion. They do not like this Bill because they suspect that the recruitment of this force might strengthen the anti-Government forces, i.e., those forces which they consider to be anti-Government. They think it is possible that recruitment might take place with political motives and might embarrass and harass the Government. On the other side, we also are suspicious that recruitment might take place with the object of suppressing the political movement on the ostensible ground of disorder and anarchy under conditions which we consider to be unjustified. I mean to say, that though we on our side may not consider that there is any disorder or anarchy to be put down or suppressed the Government may hold a different view and may use the forces raised by virtue of this measure against us to suppress what they consider disorder and anarchy. Under these circumstances we in this part of the House are not prepared to be a party to the giving of any power to Government which might be used against us in the prosecution of our political movement. Therefore, although it is said by several Governments and several authorities that the measure being permissive there is no harm in making an experiment, I for one am not prepared to take that view. We know from experience how permissive measures have been turned into repressive measures ; how once a permissive measure has been placed on the Statute-book it has been used for the purposes of repression. Therefore, I very seriously doubt whether, under the present circumstances, this measure is a sound one to be put on the Statute-book at least from our point of view.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Some analogies were given by Sir Alexander Muddiman in his speech when introducing the Bill and those analogies have been repeated by several people whose opinion was sought and who have given their opinions. There is the analogy of the General Strike in England and the situation that arose thereunder when the people made an appeal for the maintenance of law and order ; and it is said a similar condition in this country might arise. In fact, some people have said that the non-co-operation movement was a movement of that kind. I submit the analogy does not apply at all. In England the people and the Government are one. The Government is made by the people and the people are responsible for that Government, while the Government itself is reponsible to the people. In India that is not the case. Neither is the Government responsible to the people nor are the people responsible to the Government. Therefore, that analogy does not hold good at all. There is no question of a civic sense of duty. I grant that it is desirable to arouse and develop a civic sense of duty. But this sense of duty can only have full play when both sides recognise their responsibility to each other, when they are for practical purposes one. Under the present circumstances this civic sense of duty is liable to be interpreted in different ways by the two parties and therefore I submit the analogy of England has no application. In fact the analogy of those countries which have got self-government does not apply to India, in any case ; and that analogy not being applicable, I submit the object with which the Bill is introduced is not fulfilled. I might perhaps take some risk in the matter if I found that the Bill gave us something tangible and valuable. We are asking every day for the Indianisation of the services, for the Indianisation of the Army and for the Indianisation of the police ; and if there be any chance of an auxiliary police force being recruited and raised under this Bill to be used for emergency purposes, perhaps we might find ourselves in a position to support this measure to some extent. But that is not the case. No attempt is being made in this case to recruit men to an auxiliary police force to be trained and disciplined and kept in readiness for all emergencies. That is not the case here. If there were advantages of real discipline and training one might be tempted, even to take the risk that this trained and disciplined force may be used against ourselves, we take that risk when we plead for the Indianisation of the Army. An Indianised army may be used against us by this Government, but then the corresponding advantages that we will have a trained Army ready when we get self-government. But even that much is not granted by this Bill. When on the last occasion I raised the question, the Honourable the Home Member clearly said that the word "temporarily" was of the essence of the Bill. Therefore, I find nothing in the Bill which would tempt me to give my support to it. The objections I have raised go practically to the root of the Bill and I believe that no amount of changes in the language of the Bill are likely to reconcile us to the Bill as at present framed. Some of my friends are of opinion that instead of the District Magistrate and Superintendent of Police being the authorities to recruit this police force and select members, there should be appointed a board of representatives of the people who in conjunction with the District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police may recruit and select the members of the force. Sir, I am not so simple as to believe that Government is likely to agree to this, and therefore I think it will seem no useful purpose to raise that point in the Select Committee. If, however, the Honourable the Home Member is likely to give us any assurance to that effect, perhaps some of us might be able to change our views. But my objection that the Bill is liable to be used for communal and political purposes, will stand still. In this opinion I am supported by a large number of officials who have given their opinions on this Bill. I submit therefore that the Bill is inopportune. Perhaps it may be useful to have a Bill of that kind at some other time. At present it is liable to be abused and it is liable to increase the mistrust which already exists between the Government and the people.

I therefore oppose the Bill, but before I conclude I desire to show by reading to you some of the opinions of Local Governments and other officials consulted how my views are supported by them. At the outset, Sir, I may state that in the opinions received, no opinions have come from the Bombay Government and the Madras Government. I learned on inquiry that no opinions have as yet been received from those Governments. Those are important parts of the country which are entirely unrepresented so far in these opinions. The whole of Southern India have submitted no opinions—at least those opinions have not been given to us and I was told only yesterday that they had not yet been received in the office. So we have to confine ourselves to the opinions of Local Governments in Northern India and I will take first the opinion given by the Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province, at page 5. You will see, Sir, that he says there :

"I have come to the conclusion that it would not be likely to serve any useful purpose in this province. Volunteer forces have been employed in times of disturbance to assist in the maintenance of order but they have usually been levies employed under their own Khans and it has not been found necessary to give them any particular powers. If an additional force were required it could still be employed in this way and I do not think anything would be gained by enrolling them as volunteer police."

The next opinion is that of the Judicial Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province. He distinctly says :

"So far the District Magistrates of Kohat, Bannu and Hazara have sent in their opinions. They are opposed to the Bill, though on different grounds. While according to the District Magistrate of Kohat the measure is unsuited to his district, consisting, as it does, almost entirely of a rural population, the District Magistrate of

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Bannu considers it unnecessary in view of the existing provisions of the Police Act which in his opinion are quite sufficient for all practical purposes and should be allowed free operation. The District Magistrate of Hazara, on the other hand, holds that it is open to serious objection for two reasons, viz. (1) that the public morality is extremely low ''—

—that is his own opinion—

'' and the existing forces of law and order are regarded with aversion rather than with sympathy and therefore the civic sense has not yet reached such a stage as to make the introduction of a measure of this kind safe and (2) that in any crisis such a Force would only be an added source of anxiety. ..... My own opinion continues to be that the Bill is totally and completely unsuited to the people and conditions of the North West Frontier Province.''

Then, Sir, we come to the opinion of the Inspector General of Police, North-West Frontier Province. Quoting from one officer he says :

'' ..... The scheme in practice would be productive of extra work, embarrassment and anxiety to the Superintendent of Police in times of trouble. The third officer, Mr. Lawther, in the first place objects strongly to the omission of any provision for the exercise of control over Volunteer Police Forces by the Inspector General of Police, and further points out that the civic sense, involving, as it must, a repression of sectarian and communal prejudices, does not and cannot exist in the India of to-day. I fully agree with Mr. Lawther and would add that it follows that, without this civic sense, the scheme for the creation of a Volunteer Police Force is not within the range of practical politics.''

Then, Sir, we come to the Government of Bihar and Orissa who are very strongly opposed to this Bill. They say in paragraph 2 as follows :

'' His Excellency in Council considers that the Bill as introduced in the Council is still open to the objections put forward in Mr. Sifton's letter and sees no reason to differ from the opinion expressed by Sir Henry Wheeler's Government in that letter that the Bill is unworkable and impracticable, at any rate in Bihar and Orissa.''

Every one wants to save his own province from the effects of this Bill.

Then in paragraph 4 the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bihar and Orissa says :

'' Further the temporary nature of the Force has been emphasised. The force is to be embodied only to meet an emergency and this means that in the stress of meeting a difficult situation the District Magistrate and Superintendent of Police will have to find time to select, enrol and organise it. It would be difficult to create discipline in such a force even if it were of a semi-permanent nature ; being merely temporary means that it will be entirely untrained and its value will consist merely of its constitution of ' men of good will '.''

Then in the last paragraph, paragraph 6, he says :

'' His Excellency in Council would, however, prefer, that the Bill should be dropped forthwith ; experience in Calcutta and Delhi shows that when suitable material is available, the existing law makes it possible to create an emergency force; when such material is not available, the Bill will either be a dead letter or if used will be a source of danger rather than of protection ''.

There is another letter, Sir, on this file from the Government of Bihar and Orissa, which says :

'' The objects of the Bill are, accordingly, on the one hand, to provide a material accession of strength to the regular police for the preservation of the public peace and the protection of life and property, and on the other, to exploit the value of co-operation by the public and to encourage the growth of a civic sense. The Bill, therefore, contemplates the introduction by the District Magistrate of a volunteer police organisation for use in cases of emergency.

The scheme apparently takes its origin from the striking success of special constables in England during the general strike of 1926. The Local Government are convinced that the analogy is misleading."

Then he says :

"It is true that the non-co-operation activities five years ago bore some resemblance to the general strike in England, but it cannot be supposed that, if the proposed Bill had been law at the time, any considerable body of voluntary police would have enrolled for restraint of that movement. Nor is such a national emergency contemplated in the Government of India's letter as the occasion for the use of volunteer police. The proposal instead is for the local enrolment of volunteers to cope with local disorder."

"Experience of local disorder in more recent years is confined to communal fighting, mostly between Muhammadans and Hindus, and more occasionally, between landlords and tenants. To deal with such trouble locally enrolled volunteers would be peculiarly unsuited. A force intended to preserve the peace, where communities are in a state of severe tension, must be impartial and that is precisely the element that is lacking when feelings are running high. Where trouble arises concerning kurbani or the passage of Hindu music near a mosque, neither Hindus nor Muhammadans would be available, who would be untainted with partisan feeling."

4 P.M.

Then, Sir, there is another paragraph about training and discipline. The Chief Secretary says :

"Such material is entirely lacking in Bihar and Orissa, save in one or two localities where there are settlements of ex-sepoys. Before, therefore, the Indian volunteers could be anything but a public danger, there must be weeks of training without which, the force, however well-meaning and patriotic, would be little better than a rabble. It is certain that any District Officer of experience would prefer to rely in trouble upon a small but disciplined force rather than on the same force diluted with untrained volunteers. The force must therefore be raised several weeks ahead of anticipated trouble or be useless when the emergency comes."

Then also he says :

"In actual practice the Local Government believe that the Act would be a dead letter in the province. Considerable odium attaches in India to the name of police, which, thanks to the rhetoric of the politically-minded classes, is regarded as an executive arm...."

What else it can be passes anybody's comprehension. It always is an executive arm, the police in all countries. But what follows is mere significant. The police

"Is regarded as an executive arm of a foreign bureaucracy. The call to support the police would not evoke a patriotic response, for the civic sense is not created by, but is a condition precedent to, the call to public duty. The young men of the intelligentsia, even if they were impartial, would not readily join in the event as constables, while the men of the lower classes would be at heart partisans in the event of any communal trouble, and their enrolment would equally embarrass the authorities in dealing with it."

Then, Sir, finally he says, towards the end of paragraph 4:

"For the above reasons, the Local Government are opposed to the general principles of the Bill and regard it as unworkable and impracticable, at any rate in Bihar and Orissa."

Then he says :

"It has been pointed out above that, if the force is to be trained (and without training it would be useless) it must be raised in advance of the emergency for which it is to be used."

Then finally the verdict is given in these words :

"For the above reasons His Excellency in Council after consultation with the Ministers is not in favour of the proposed Bill."

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

So here not only the Local Government but also the Ministers are against this Bill.

Then, Sir, we come to a straight opinion from Madras, which of course is not accompanied by the opinion of the Madras Government. It is the opinion of the Madras Chamber of Commerce. They say on page 9 :

"The Bill provides for the raising of a temporary police force; but to be of practical value in time of emergency it is considered that the Volunteer Police should be a more or less permanent force. Without training or discipline a volunteer force, either military or police, is of very little assistance to the Regular Forces and it is reasonable to suppose that in many cases emergencies would be of so temporary a nature that by the time sufficient Volunteer Police were collected, appointed and equipped, the need for them would have passed."

Then we come to Burma. The opinion of those consulted by His Excellency the Governor in Council is in full agreement almost unanimously in favour of the Bill.

We then come to the United Provinces. They are decidedly against this Bill, at least their officers :

"The most important change in the Bill is the insertion of the word "temporarily" in the Preamble. This has made it clear that there can be no question of constituting a volunteer force as a permanent reserve, but it is not clear whether the intention is that the force should be raised only to meet a definite emergency. Under clause 3 (1), the District Magistrate may constitute the force for such period as he may fix, * * * * The limit set by the use of the term 'temporarily' in the Preamble is somewhat vague, but there appears to be nothing to prevent the constitution of the force for a period of years even though the district is not faced with any emergency."

This opinion is absolutely unfavourably to the wording of the Bill.

"But if the intention is that the force should be enrolled to meet an emergency, and disbanded when that emergency is over, the Governor in Council considers that the Bill will serve no useful purpose."

There is another letter from the Government of the United Provinces. I would read a few sentences from page 11 :

"The Governor in Council is not sanguine, however, that these objects are likely to be secured by the legislation now proposed."

In sub-paragraph (3) of paragraph 3 of the same letter they say :

"The occasions on which a volunteer force, even if forthcoming, could safely be employed are also few. It would be quite impossible to use volunteers to assist the regular police in dealing with communal troubles. As the Government of India are aware, it is difficult enough to keep the regular police free from communal bias. Volunteer constables would be unreliable and would merely add to the anxieties of the local authorities. In the conditions at present obtaining, a general strike such as has occurred recently in England is hardly a contingency with which it is necessary to reckon. Volunteers might be of some assistance in dealing with local strikes in a town such as Cawnpore, provided that the strikes were not political in origin ; but even this is doubtful. When such strikes occur, opinion is usually divided amongst the educated classes, and few persons belonging to these classes are willing to risk an encounter with turbulent mill hands. Volunteers have occasionally been found useful at large customary fairs, but it is questionable whether their utility would be much increased by formal enrolment."

In the next paragraph, they discuss the question of discipline. I do not propose to read it. In the 4th paragraph they say :

"For these reasons the Governor in Council does not think that legislation on the lines suggested would materially help the administration."

Then, Sir, we come to the letter of the Inspector General of Police of the United Provinces :

" I am nevertheless unable to withdraw my general objection to the Bill as expressed in paragraphs 1, 3 and 8 of my letter (of such-and-such date) and I may say that all Deputy Inspectors-General fully agree with me in this opinion."

He goes on to say :

" It is very uncertain whether volunteers will come forward, and, if they do come forward, whether their motives in doing so will not be such as will embarrass rather than assist the authorities."

That is their fear. Then in paragraph 2 he gives a very decisive opinion against a temporary force :

" As I have stated in paragraph 2 of my previous letter, it seems to me to be quite useless to wait until an emergency arises before volunteers are enrolled and this view is supported by actual experience in England. * * * * There is a further consideration applicable to India though not to England which makes it important to have Voluntary Police here enrolled for a period of some duration. This is that if Voluntary Police are to be taken on only during the continuance of an actual emergency, it will not be possible for the Local Government to prescribe sufficiently long notice of resignation under section 8 to prevent volunteers resigning at such short notice as to embarrass the authorities who were relying on them. If, therefore, there is to be any chance of a Volunteer Police Force in this country being of any use in time of trouble, English experience as well as common sense support the view that the force must be enrolled for a specific period, as in the city of London, and trained on a quasi-permanent basis."

So, Sir, this opinion is almost decisive. Then, Sir, we come to the opinion of the Commissioner of the Fyzabad Division. He says on page 14 :

" In my opinion, the Act as drafted....."

Mr. President : Order, order. These are too long quotations. Is it not possible for the Honourable Member to state in his own words the substance of the opinions he is quoting ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : With due deference to the Chair, the opinions of these officials, quoted in their own words, are much more important than any words that I can use. I do not want to take the responsibility of abbreviating them, or amplifying them or paraphrasing them.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member knows that all these papers have been circulated to every Honourable Member of this House, and I would suggest to the Honourable Member that he should state the substance of these opinions in his own words instead of making long quotations.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Well, Sir, I know that some Honourable Members do not read all the papers that are given to them. (An Honourable Member : " Question ? ")

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I for one did not read them and did not care to read them.

Lala Lajpat Rai : It may be questioned, but I know it. I myself do not read all the papers. In deference to the Chair, I am not going to read all the extracts, but I am going to read only a few lines from each letter.....

Mr. President : I have been listening to the speech of the Honourable Member for nearly half an hour, and all that he has been doing is to read the opinions of each Local Government at length (An Honourable Member : " Of each officer ")—of each officer as well. However, I should like the Honourable Member (An Honourable Member : " Finish it ")—to be more brief.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Lala Lajpat Rai : The Honourable Members on the Government Benches would of course like that I were to sit down, but I am not going to comply with their request. I have got to discharge my duty. However, in deference to the Chair, I shall remember the advice that has been given and shall not read long extracts but only give the substance of each opinion recorded in these papers. The Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow whose letter consists of two printed foolscap pages summarises his objection in the following words :

" To sum up, the proposal is sound in theory as regards the development of a civic sense, and I welcome the implied recognition of the Government of India that the existing police force needs strengthening. The Bill if passed into law might be useful in the event of a grave emergency arising, but cannot be justified on that ground alone as emergencies can be dealt with by Ordinance.....

Finally, if the Bill becomes law, I would urge that its provisions are not applied to this district....."

Every one says that his own district and his own province should be exempted from the evil effects of this Bill :

" without much fuller and maturer consideration, and without further exploration of general opinion."

On page 19 the District Magistrate of Aligarh raises strong objections to the local use of police force locally enrolled. He says :

" I very much doubt whether the time is yet ripe for giving it effect in the general manner suggested ".

Then I come to Assam. The Chief Secretary to the Government of Assam says :

".... but the opinions expressed on the details of the Bill indicate clearly that the measure is not likely, in present circumstances, to be of any great practical value in Assam..... In the opinion of most of the officials and of some of the non-officials consulted, the volunteer police force will be a hindrance rather than a help in times of political or communal disturbances, when the feelings of partisanship will be too strong for their sense of discipline."

Then he says that the opinion in that province is divided. There is one opinion in this case, from which with your permission I shall read to the House, a few sentences. The Superintendent of Police, Sylhet, says :

"The Swarajists and Congress Party will welcome the Bill, if the force is constituted independent of the regular police so that they may better organise their own volunteer corps. The Bill is being construed by them as an attempt to counteract their activities."

The Deputy Commissioner says :

" My personal views on the proposed Bill are distinctly unfavourable."

The Commissioner of the Assam Valley Division says :

" So far as Assam is concerned I think the proposals not likely to be fruitful .... In all racial, communal and quasi-political disturbances the individual sentiments of the persons likely to form the Volunteer Force will be engaged and the force in consequence would be untrustworthy."

I have almost come to the end. The Deputy Commissioner of Darrang says :

" My own opinion is that the time is not yet ripe for introducing such a measure in India."

Then comes the opinion of Mr. Chaliha, Chairman of the Local Board of Sibsagar, a Congress leader :

" Though the proposed objects of the Bill are innocent and even commendable, its provisions are such that it may be utilised against the liberty of the subject and the political advancement of the country unless the men enjoying popular confidence only be recruited and unless the people are given a voice in the decision whether there is such emergency as to call for mobilisation of the volunteer force or whether the force collected is to be disbanded."

Then there are unfavourable opinions of officers of the Bengal Government and Ajmer-Merwara which I will not read.

Well, Sir, I have not read the opinions which are favourable to the Bill. There are some officers who say that the Bill is innocent, it is permissive and that it may be tried. But I hardly find any very strong opinion in favour of the Bill. I maintain that the objections I have urged are very cogent against the Bill and judging from the opinion of the official world so far as it has been expressed in these opinions, the balance of opinion is against the Bill. Their opinions are based on different grounds. Our decision is also based on different ground but there are common grounds also, for example, about the temporary character of the measure, about the inadequacy of the provisions for training and discipline and the danger of its being used for communal and political purposes. On these grounds, Sir, I submit that the Bill is not a timely measure and should not be pressed. I hope the Honourable the Home Member will withdraw the Bill and introduce it at some more favourable time, in a more favourable atmosphere. The present atmosphere is not one in which it is likely to be received with that amount of sympathy and good will, as are necessary for the success of the Bill. I therefore oppose the Bill.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I also desire to state my objections to this Bill and shall do so in the briefest possible manner. I consider that this Bill is a piece of political strategy on the part of the Central Government. I consider also that the unsophisticated opinions of the various Local Governments reveal to us that this is neither a sound administrative proposition nor a genuine national proposition. Nobody on this side of the House will be opposed to a genuine attempt to establish a volunteer force on a national and permanent footing for the training of men in civic duites, but that is not really, as I understand it, the purpose or structure of the Bill. Judged, therefore, by the purpose and structure of the Bill, I consider that this is a very half-hearted and strategic attempt on the part of the Government to set up something which is bound to fail. They will then tell us : Behold ! Here is a thing they have been clamouring for that we have given to the people of India. They have been asking for it but they are not able to work it, and therefore there is no use of giving anything further ". Whatever denials or repudiations may come from the other side, to my mind strategy is undoubtedly at the back of this measure. Let me say at the outset that I agree with the Central Provinces Government when they point out that, if you really want in an emergency that there should be a trained volunteer force, unless it is a permanent force, you cannot have any such thing. Where is the training to come from. The Honourable the Home Member said the other day in answer to Lala Lajpat Rai's question that it will not be within the scope of the Bill to take steps to establish a permanent force. Then again, I agree with the opinion of the Commissioner of Police in Calcutta and the Governments of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa that this force will not be of the slightest value in times of communal harassment and trouble. For, as was pointed out very forcibly by the Government of Bihar and Orissa, you do not want a local police drawn from the very factions which are warring with one another to operate as an emergency or temporary force in addition to the ordinary police force. In the ordinary police force it may be taken for granted that owing to years of training there is some measure of discipline and obedience to rules. But, if you call a temporary force into existence and try to train it, you can understand how defective it must be and how it must aggravate those very local troubles which it will be the purpose of this particular force to deal with. Therefore, Sir, I certainly prefer the opinions of the Local Governments, though it is a company which I find myself very rarely in. The only doubt which crossed my mind when I read the papers was, why is it that these Local Governments are against it ? May there not be something good in it after all ? But the real purpose of this Bill was soon obvious and I discovered that the Central Government was much more astute than the Local Governments and wanted to lay the responsibility upon the people of this country, and that therefore it was nothing but a political manœuvre which must be resisted by the popular party. There is no administrative necessity and no national purpose behind it. And to go and make this volunteer police force subordinate to the officers in charge of police stations, sub-inspectors and the like, that is really impossible. This is a kind of Aman Sabha which will be brought into existence. As to the men of good will to whom Sir Alexander Muddiman referred in his speech when he introduced the Bill at the Delhi Session, we know how the men of goodwill will be manufactured. We know what sort of use this volunteer force will be put to. Just those troubles which it is sought to reduce this volunteer force will aggravate. That is my fear. Of course I have not the great experience that lies at the back of the Government of India, but I do think we have got common sense ; we have also our own experience, and while the heavy responsibility weighs down the shoulders of the Government of India on the other side, we do not forget that the responsibility on our shoulders is no less, and that responsibility compels me to say that this is not a measure with which a popular party can be at all in agreement. Give us an honest, straightforward volunteer force, with full liberty to elect a Committee of this House to organize it. Give us a volunteer force which we can honestly call a national force, and then I can see something in it. Or if it is to be trained as a permanent force there may be sound administrative purpose in it. But there is no national purpose behind this force. From the administrative point of view I prefer the wisdom of the Local Government to that of the Central Government. From the national point of view I prefer Lala Lajpat Rai's wisdom and my own misgivings and doubts to the wisdom enthroned on the opposite side. Therefore,

[Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar.]

Sir, I feel bound to oppose this Bill unless of course the Honourable the Home Member agrees, of which there is very little chance, to go back upon what he said the other day about making this volunteer police force a permanent force and agrees to make all the other changes in the Select Committee which it will be our object to make. As he is not in agreement with our views it is a futile proposition for us to co-operate with Government in this particular measure and say that it may contain the germs of a really national citizens' guard out of which we may be able to make something at some remote point of time. We have seen how much we are able to make out of anything. I have not the slightest doubt whatever that it will be an impossible position if the District Superintendent of Police and the District Magistrate are given the powers which are proposed to be given in this Bill, if it is expected that really men of repute, men who have got public spirit, are to work as volunteers. I do think this is a method of sorting out those followers of the Government, and this Bill will add a large army of those who will be very anxious to have these honorary appointments in addition to the army of title-holders. It is nothing but a political Bill, nothing but an attempt to gather up an army of followers for the Government. Therefore, Sir, however much I may desire that there should be a national police, however much I may desire that there should be a proper volunteer force, I regret I am constrained to oppose this measure, having regard to its purpose and structure as revealed in its provisions, and having regard to the opinions which have been expressed by the Local Governments as to the utter inutility of such a piece of fragmentary legislation that is sought to be put upon the Statute-book.

Mr. M. Keane (United Provinces : Nominated Official) : Sir, the arguments of my Honourable friend opposite seemed to me at least to be singularly unconvincing ; his speech was amusing but not convincing. He said that this legislation is a piece of political strategy. His mind is much too acute not to see where that leads. Having told us in the same breath that every Government in India had opposed this piece of political strategy, he was of course reduced to the position that the Government of India had not even trusted the Local Governments with the secret of this piece of strategy ; otherwise of course the Local Governments also would support them in their desire to introduce this Machiavellian scheme ; the Government of India did not want to share the secret. You, Sir, will remember who was the originator and the author of this Bill, Sir Alexander Muddiman. I leave it to the House to say whether he was likely to be a Machiavelli ; that was not his character. In regard to my Honourable friend, the Lala Sahib from the Punjab, Lala Lajpat Rai, I realise that he is opposed to the Bill, and strongly opposed to it, but I was left very vague as to his own individual reasons for opposing it. For the first time, as far as I know, he has based his opinions, his convictions, entirely on the opinions of those whom we are accustomed to hear described as bureaucrats. His supporters in every case were the police officers ; he read with great gusto and great commendation the opinions of these officers and he insisted almost in defiance of the Chair in quoting their very words, so that no portion of the honey might be lost. He took a very high line over this very small Bill. He told us that Government and the people are not identical. That alone was sufficient to stamp the Bill as bad and something to be rejected. But Government and the people were not identical when we had the yarn Bill the other day and yet it was carried by the help of the people. The argument that the Government and the people are not identical would be a reason why we should take no Bill on the floor of this House.

[Mr. M. Keane.]

Lala Lajpat Rai : I never said that.

Mr. M. Keane : If we take this very high line regarding Bills, we shall never get any Bill. Neither of the speakers who has taken the floor hitherto has attempted to discuss the principles of the Bill itself. These long quotations will not do. We have had before from all over the country very many opinions on the ratio and everything else. But that did not prevent Members of the Assembly from taking each matter into consideration and examining the Bills for themselves.

This Bill, as we know, has two aspects. There is one aspect ; the point of view of encouraging the growth of a civic sense. From the second aspect, we desire to create something that will be a help to the police. These two aspects have to be remembered. I need not delay over the first aspect. The Honourable Lala Sahib admitted that it was desirable to encourage the growth of a civil sense and through all those letters that he read it will be found that in every single one of them the desire of the Local Governments is to the same effect. They all bless that particular principle underlying the Bill, namely, the effort to create a civic sense. It is realized, everyone can see it, that the civic sense is growing up about us. It is to be seen everywhere at the present day. Some of its manifestations are due to Western influences but some are indigenous. This civic sense is growing. The seed is there and now we are told that we should let the seed wither and die. There is a call, though no doubt it is a feeble one ; are we going to turn our backs on it and pass on our way ? We cannot afford being told later—and you know that we have been told so on many other occasions—that when the opportunity was there when we had the seed, we did not help to nourish it. If there is no public opinion behind this thing, then the seed will fall on stony soil, but the fault will not be ours. We will have nothing to reproach ourselves with. The departure is a new one ; no man can guarantee success, but we can, at any rate, make our profession of faith. The Local Governments have without exception expressed approval of that particular principle of the Bill.

Now, I will turn to the other purpose of the Bill which has been criticised in some detail and to which most attention has been given in the letters which the Honourable Lala Sahib has read, I mean the purpose of creating a force that will be helpful to the police in times of emergency. The two purposes are not mutually exclusive in any way. You can encourage the growth of a civic sense as well as create a police force that will be useful. Now, the Local Governments, in whose minds the utilitarian purpose of the Bill was uppermost, have, I admit, received the Bill coldly, to say the least of it. But it is natural if you come to consider it that men whose daily duty is the task of administration and who, as we know perfectly well, have at the present time a very inadequate staff, would first like to know what is the practical aid they are going to get from the Bill rather than look to the intangible, possibly visionary aim to which I have been referring, namely, education in civic sense. That certainly is a point of view that must be considered. One was bound to get such opinions as were quoted from police officers by the Honourable Lala Sahib. These opinions are undoubtedly in many cases opposed to the Bill. For instance the Inspector General of my own Province said that now that the Government of India are determined to go on with this Bill, his duty really is to see how far its dangers are to be minimised. (Laughter.) I forget his exact words, but I think this is the gist of what he said. This position is perfectly understandable. I am ready to quote and give all due weight to these opinions, because I want the House to consider why such opinions are given and why it is not necessary for us, as the Honourable Lala Sahib has done, to accept them unquestionably. What I want to show is that the position of the police officers is perfectly understandable. They are accustomed to deal with a trained force, with men who can and who know how to obey orders. They believe that if a volunteer force is given to them, it will be certainly composed of men, who in their opinion will be untrained men over whom their control will be small, men for whom the Bill provides very few and very inadequate punishments. Naturally they are doubtful about the utility of such a force. That, I can see and every one can see. Their opposition has been hardened by one special consideration of our own time, a consideration that is colouring the thoughts of every one at the present time, that is the communal situation. There is no question that the officers who have dealt with this point have throughout envisaged only a situation in which this volunteer police force will be suddenly brought into operation, suddenly constituted to meet an emergency that has just arisen. This whole point, I think myself, has been to a great extent misunderstood by the police officers who have given these opinions and they have all been deceived, as I think the Honourable Lala Sahib has been deceived by the intrusion of the word " temporarily ". I cannot say exactly what is in the mind of the Government of India in this matter. (Hear, hear.) But as far as this Bill goes, this word " temporarily " has to be read with the clause in the Bill which lays down that the force will be constituted for such period as the District Megistrate may fix. It is not a force to be constituted only to meet an emergency. If it were so, Sir, I quite agree that it would be open to many of the objections raised by Honourable Members on the opposite side. I visualise the force as being brought into operation in normal times (Hear, hear), a force for which there would be time enough to give it training, so that when they are called upon to act, they will not act as a rabble or a mob, but will act as a trained and a disciplined force. There will be opportunity for the District Magistrate to see whether the men who offer themselves for recruitment are suitable or not. He will have an opportunity of testing their character before selecting them and of seeing that they are not men who have suddenly come forward under the spur of some partisan or communal or political feeling to join the force That force in being created will be created temporarily to the extent that it will be for such time as may be fixed and that fixation of time would of course depend on such rules as the Local Government may make subject to the orders of Government of India. The rules of the Local Government have to be considered and these rules will show to what extent, for how long, and on what occasions, the force will be constituted, and if that is examined, if that is considered, I think it will then be clear that many of the criticisms which the Honourable the Lala Sahib has read out are robbed of their sting, practically every one of them. (Applause.)

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : What about the criticisms of the Honourable Lala Sahib about our distrust of one another. He said that we are incapable of trusting one another and that no useful purpose would be served by having a volunteer force at this time of communal trouble.

Mr. M. Keane : My Honourable friend here asks me what will be the position if they cannot trust one another. My answer there also would be that that would apply mainly if it were a force that would be called up at the very moment the emergency arose. Then I say that the force probably would be stimulated and spurred by feelings from which they could not free themselves, feelings born of their own environment, communal feelings. But this force would be called up in normal times, they would have been enrolled together, their feeling of solidarity would already have been established, their comradeship in the same way cemented, and they would have acquired by that very enrolment beforehand and by their training a feeling of solidarity and comradeship that would, one might reasonably hope, mitigate at least the asperity of communal feeling.

I have little else to say, Sir, and I do not want to take up the time of the House at this late hour. I merely want the House to consider what this little Bill aims at and to take the gift horse which is being offered to us, not to look it in the mouth.

Mr. T. Prakasam (East Godavari and West Godavari cum Kistna : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I thought the Honourable Mr. Keane was delivering a Sermon from the Mount after six years of struggle in this country. He started by saying that this small Bill will create a civic sense of duty in Indians. He says that the seed shall be sown now and if this opportunity is not availed of, it may be that the Government and the gentlemen who are supporting this Government will be finding this seed thrown on a stony soil and it will never grow. If Mr. Keane had been in India and if he had watched the events since 1921 (Honourable Members : " He has "), he would have seen what civic sense the Hindus and Muhammadans and the members of all other communities in India possessed and how, not under the orders of the Government but under the orders of the great national organisation, they formed the national volunteer force in 1921 which discharged the duties of all the police and even the military for a period. (Laughter.) Laughter comes from the opposite benches. If they remember that the Governors of Provinces could not get men to take their luggage to the railway stations, then, my Honourable friends would not be laughing. It was the national volunteer force that discharged the duties of the police and the military that made it impossible for the Governors and other officials to command even coolies to take their luggage to the stations during the period of repression. (Continued laughter.) You will laugh as long as the system of government continues to be what it is and until you are forced to vacate your seats. And may I say, Sir, how it started ? You will please note that Lala Lajpat Rai, though he made his appeal to withdraw this Bill in the gentlest possible way, has been criticised by Mr. Keane. Lala Lajpat Rai is one of the biggest leaders of India, who violated your law, your unjust law that was promulgated in 1921 declaring the national volunteer forces unlawful ; he was one of those who courted imprisonment and who had suffered imprisonment on that account. You forged the Criminal Law Amendment Act in 1921 with a view to kill the national life in the country, with a view to destroy the national police and the national volunteer force that had been organised under the ægis of the Congress. Well, Sir, it must be said, to your credit, that with all the forces you could command you could suppress the movement. You succeeded also in suppressing the great non-co-operation movement which was based on non-violence and which meant no offence to any of you, no injury to any of you ; after you succeeded, there was a change in the programme and policy of the Congress ; that great man who has departed, the late Mr. C. R. Das, changed the programme and he created a new situation by forcing Congressmen into the Councils and by making dyarchy impossible in Bengal. When you found that that was a greater force than the boycott from without, you wanted to kill that force also and you sent about 110 men as detenus beyond the seas to rot in the Mandalay forts ; and last Session we were all complaining here that a Member of this Assembly, who was one of the detenus, a Member who had been summoned by the Viceroy to attend the Assembly, was prevented from doing so. Here he is present to-day and you will find that he represents the national force of India, and that there are men outside also whose civic sense of duty has not been killed by all your efforts and with all the forces at your command. Now, you are satisfied that the Hindus and Muslims who walked hand in hand, chained through the streets of India when they were members of a national volunteer force are disunited. You imprisoned them both ; both suffered for the sake of the country, for the freedom of the land ; and when you saw that Hindu-Muslim unity, upon the basis of which this great movement of Swaraj was started, would take you to the end of your business in India, you thought you should put a stop to that unity. You tried to break it up. (Laughter.) It is not a matter for laughter. I have been one of the unfortunate or fortunate men who had witnessed many centres of the Hindu-Muslim riots, starting from the first one at Multan in 1922 ; (An Honourable Member : " Riots now in Nagpur ".) Yes, it is going on now in Nagpur to our shame and sorrow, I say it. And then, Sir, when they saw that Hindu-Muslim unity was so strong that if it continued it would be difficult for them to resist the force of it, agencies were set on foot to break up this Hindu-Muslim unity. That was what I saw in certain centres ; that was the result of my investigation also on the spot ; and they now see to their satisfaction and to the satisfaction of all those who are not interested in the freedom of this country that Hindus and Muslims are breaking each other's heads, are killing each other and destroying each other and this land. Now, they find that this is the opportune moment to introduce this " small " Bill, giving all the power to the District Magistrate to bring into force this army, so that this army might be used against our own people even in these communal riots. Is it not a matter of shame to us that this Bill should be forced on us and that we should have to say that this Bill will be misunderstood and that this would lead to difficulties ? This is what Lala Lajpat Rai has said. On that account, so much criticism has been levelled against him. Now, Sir, I say that this Bill is a calculated measure ; it is in keeping with the policy that was started in 1921. It is introduced now with a view to remove the last spark of nationalism in this country. (An Honourable Member : " No, no.") I hear a voice " No, no "; very good. But you must take the whole thing in continuation and see. What is the position of a District Magistrate now in this land ? He was the Governor before 1920.

[Mr. T. Prakasam.]

Mr. President : Order, order. Before the Honourable Member proceeds further with his observations, I should like to know what attitude the Government propose to take with regard to this Bill in view of the opposition to it from the non-official side.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Mr. President, I am indebted to you for giving me the opportunity at this stage to explain the position of Government, and I think it would conduce both to the convenience and economy of the time of the House if I indicate the impressions which have been made upon me by the speeches of the Honourable gentlemen opposite and the conclusions to which they lead me. I am naturally considerably disappointed that so many Honourable gentlemen opposite should oppose this measure. But I hope that I am logically justified in drawing from their speeches the inference, which is some balm and consolation to me, that there is evidently a substantial degree of satisfaction with and confidence in the existing permanent police force. I certainly consider that Honourable gentlemen opposite, though they are not very frequently in the habit of expressing that opinion, have a very strong justification for doing so. In particular, I notice with satisfaction that my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai has not limited himself to language from which I could draw any general inference of that kind, but has actually quoted the words of a considerable number of distinguished police officers with high approval.....

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : On a point of order, Sir. Is the Honourable Member making a speech or is he going to tell us whether he wants to proceed with the Bill or not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Well, Sir, I do not intend to make a speech at any length, but I think I may be permitted to make a statement which will reasonably convey the actual position.

The Bill has, I think, been in many respects misunderstood or not quite correctly represented. There is nothing in the Bill about an emergency, and there is a provision, with regard to the point raised by my friend Lala Lajpat Rai that the Bill is a temporary one, which I think ought to be intelligible enough. There is a provision which enables the District Magistrate to continue such a force from time to time. Well, in brief, the measure was frankly an experimental measure. Its object was to have a Bill as elastic as possible which would enable a Local Government to feel its way, to initiate a scheme in its jurisdiction or in any part of it, and if the experiment showed promise of happy success, to continue it.

Then, Sir, I should like to say one word more with regard to the suggestion made by more than one Honourable gentleman opposite, that the Bill really represents a strategic or a tactical or a political device. To a large extent that has been replied to and I think adequately replied to by my Honourable friend Mr. Keane. Really, I think Honourable gentlemen opposite, will, on reflection, be prepared to agree that, having regard to the history of this Bill, it is really far less a matter of politics than of a personality. The personality is that of my predecessor,

Sir Alexander Muddiman, against whom charges of political duplicity and Machiavellian intrigue are not likely to carry conviction either in this House or in any place outside it. And, Sir, I venture to say that I am entitled, if Sir Alexander Muddiman is acquitted on that charge, as I contend he is entitled to be unanimously acquitted on that charge,—I think, Sir, that, as in a sense I inherited this Bill from him, I am entitled myself and personally to share in that acquittal. Because I must most positively and vehemently disavow that in proceeding with this measure I was animated by any calculations of that nature. Sir, it must be obvious to the House, I think, from the nature of the measure, from the terms in which it was introduced by the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman and from the attitude which Government have observed throughout, that there was no intention to proceed with this Bill unless it received a substantial degree of support in the various quarters of the House. The Bill has not received substantial support. On the contrary it has received a large measure of opposition. It would be useless to proceed with the measure in those circumstances and, therefore, Sir, I wish to indicate on behalf of the Government that they have no intention of proceeding further with this measure.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member ask leave to withdraw this motion ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir.

The motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : With your permission, Sir, I desire to make a statement regarding the Government business for next week. We propose to ask for orders from you, Sir, that the House should not sit on Monday, the 12th, in order that that day may be devoted to the sitting of the Select Committee on the Criminal Law Amendment Bill. On Wednesday, the 14th, we propose to bring up any Government business which may remain over for disposal from to-day's list, and thereafter, a motion may be made for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Inland Bonded Warehouses Act. Motions will also be made to take into consideration and, if passed, to pass the Indian Divorce (Amendment) Bill and the Assam Labour Emigration (Amendment) Bill, as passed by the Council of State, and the Bill to amend section 59 of the Indian Income-tax Act, which was introduced on Monday last. Thereafter, if time permits, time will be given for further consideration of the Report of the Select Committee on the amendments to the Standing Orders.

Tuesday, the 13th, and Thursday, the 15th, have been allotted for non-official Resolutions and Bills, respectively.

It is proposed, subject to your orders, Sir, that the House should sit on Friday, the 16th, in oder to take into consideration the Report of the Select Committee on the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, to the passing of which during the present Session Government attach considerable importance, and this Bill will, if not disposed of on the 16th, be taken again on Monday, the 19th, and thereafter we propose to finish any business left over from the list of Wednesday, the 14th.

The House will observe that no time has been allotted for further consideration of the Gold Standard and Reserve Bank of India Bill and for taking into consideration the Imperial Bank of India (Amendment) Bill. Informal discussion of all possible alternative methods of constituting the Bank and forming a directorate has, as many Members of this House are aware, been proceeding actively since last Friday. Various interesting suggestions have been under consideration. But meanwhile a week has passed and the possibility of finding time for the further consideration of these two Bills during the current Session has been rapidly receding into the distance. The House knows that the Government have throughout regarded the shareholders' plan as the one which offers the most satisfactory solution of an admittedly complex problem. The alternatives all raise troublesome and indeed controversial points and the Government would be reluctant to ask the House to adopt any plan when practical working and implications have not been fully investigated and cannot be confidently provided. It is obviously desirable that the solution to be finally adopted should be adopted after the fullest consideration. In these circumstances, the Government have regretfully come to the conclusion that the best course in the interests of all concerned is not to proceed with the Bills at present.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I should like to know, Sir, whether there is any chance of this Bill being proceeded with in the Delhi Session ?

5 P.M.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I do not think that I can add anything to the statement that I have made. That is a question of prophecy.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : Is it certain, Sir, that there is any probability of this Bill being proceeded with at all ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I should not like to say "Yes" or "No" to that question. I cannot add anything to the statement that I have already made.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan) : I cannot understand why the Government after deliberately agreeing to a State Bank, are now reopening the question about a Shareholders' Bank.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I do not think there is anything in my statement which justifies the Honourable Member's remark about the re-opening of the question of the State Bank. I think that if Honourable Members will carefully consider the statement that I have read they will come to the conclusion that that gives them all the information that is available.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : Sir, I should like to say that this is really not a correct procedure on the part of the Government. No explanation has been given for this extraordinary step that appears to have been adopted. I do not know who is responsible for it. There is not the slightest doubt that Members in this part of the House have at great expenditure of time and at great pains co-operated over this in order to establish a national Reserve Bank, a State Bank with elected Indian majority on the directorate on a wide franchise. I think the Honourable the Finance Member—the Leader of the House—and Members on the other side must have been aware of the very strenuous efforts which have been made by non-official Members on this side of the House in order to co-operate with this Government in promoting a State Reserve Bank of a popular type and in bringing it to a successful conclusion. Under these circumstances, Sir, it is a matter of the greatest surprise, it is a matter of painful amazement to us, that the Government have felt themselves obliged not to proceed with the Bill " for the present." It is, if I may say so, a euphemistic way of saying that it is very unlikely that they will proceed with the Bill. I can draw my own inference, and Members on this side can draw their own inference. The gentlemen of the Joint Select Committee have sat for over two months over this Bill, any number of public opinions have been received, Members of this House have given it the greatest possible attention, and this has been the piéce de resistance of the Simla Session of the Assembly. In these circumstances I do not know on whose initiative, on whose responsibility, the House is to be treated in this fashion. I would say, Sir, that this is a procedure against which we must most emphatically protest. The Government have trifled with this House and its liberties, and have flouted its views. We have exhausted the limits of co-operation in the matter of the State Bank. Members of this House and the public outside will know that there is no use whatever in co-operating with the system of Government which is such as to abort a Bill which has been put on the agenda, upon which plenty of work has been done, and which is practically lost to us. We have had no intimation of this before, and no respect has been paid to this House and its rights and dignity. Therefore, Sir, I consider this as a bolt from the blue. One can guess where that bolt from the blue emanates. I say, Sir, that this really makes it impossible for any one to predicate co-operation hereafter on the part of Members of this House with the Government in any business. If this is the way in which we are to be treated, I would respectfully venture to ask you, Sir, to see whether the time has not come for the Standing Orders to be so amended that, when the Assembly is seized of a Bill, the Assembly should have the right to proceed with the Bill notwithstanding any unwillingness on the part of Government to proceed further with the Bill. Members on this side are in a weak position....

Mr. President : It is not the practice of this House to subject statements made by Government Members to any lengthy debate. Honourable Members are entitled to put questions with a view to elucidate these statements. I have allowed the Honourable Member, under the special circumstances of this case, to make a brief statement, by way of protest and resentment on behalf of non-official Members at the attitude of Government, but I hope Honourable Members will not go further and use this occasion for a lengthy debate on the statement.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : Very well, Sir. That is not my intention at all. I only want to express our most emphatic protest, against this signal insult to this House. I think we should like to express our strongest resentment at the way in which we have been treated by the Government, whoever it is, or whichever part it is, because the Government is a corporation. I warn the Government, we consider ourselves to have been treated in the most scurvy fashion.

Mr. T. Prakasam : May I know, Sir, whether instructions have been received from the Secretary of State that the Bill should be withdrawn ?

Mr. President : The Chair has no information on the subject.

Mr. T. Prakasam : May I ask the Honourable the Leader of the House through the Chair, Sir ?

(At this stage all the Members of the Congress Party walked out of the House.)

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member, the Leader of the Nationalist Party, want to enter a separate protest ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : I just want to associate myself with the protest that has been made by the Leader of the Congress Party.

THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I move that the instructions given to the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, to present its Report within seven days be withdrawn and that the Select Committee be instructed to present its Report by the 14th September 1927. It has been found impossible, since the passing of the motion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee, to arrange for a meeting of the Select Committee. I understand that to-morrow and the following day a large number of the Members of that Committee would find it inconvenient to attend. It is proposed that this Committee should meet on Monday next. That is the reason why I propose that the time for the presentation of the Report should be extended.

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 13th September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 13th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Sardar Gulab Singh, M.L.A. (West Punjab : Sikh).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

TRANSFER OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING HOUSE OFFICE TO DELHI.

913. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Railway Clearing House office is to be shifted to Delhi in September 1927 ? If so, why have such orders been passed when the Resolution, of which notice has been given by Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, has not yet been discussed in the Assembly ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Clearing House office is being moved to Delhi at the end of this month. The accommodation at Lahore, though it could be made to serve the purpose as a temporary measure, was very cramped, in fact, I understand that some of the clerks there had even during the hot weather to work in verandahs. It was therefore most desirable to transfer the office to its permanent location as soon as possible after the question of its location had been decided.

HIRE OR PURCHASE OF BUILDINGS AT DELHI FOR THE RAILWAY CLEARING HOUSE OFFICE.

914. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that the building or buildings have been hired or purchased at Delhi for the Railway Clearing House office contrary to the Financial Commissioner of Railways' reply in the Assembly in the last Session on the 25th March 1927 that in Delhi the Government has its own building which can be occupied at a little or at no cost ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We have purchased one building for 3 lakhs of rupees after ascertaining that there was no Government building in Delhi which could be made available to us for this purpose. It was only a hope which I expressed in the speech to which the Honourable Member has referred, and it has been now found impracticable of realisation.

DEMOLITION OF SOME PARTS OF THE BUILDINGS OF THE LATE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY.

915. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that some parts of the late Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway buildings are being demolished ? If so, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the Honourable Member refers to the general office building of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway at Lucknow, the reply is in the negative except that a small bungalow has been condemned as dangerous and is being demolished.

TRANSFER TO LUCKNOW OF THE EMPLOYEES OF THE LATE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY.

916. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any opportunity of bringing the late Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway employees back to Lucknow ? If so, when and how ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to my speech in this House on the 25th March, 1927, in which I explained how the Government and the East Indian Railway Administration were endeavouring in a number of ways to return old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway men to Lucknow and other up-country stations.

OPENING OF PRIMARY SCHOOLS FOR MUSLIMS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

917. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that in view of the comparative fall in the number of Muslim pupils in the primary schools of Ajmer-Merwara the representative of the Provincial Muslim League, Rajputana, waited on the Education Member and submitted a memorandum to the Government of India in October 1925, in which, among other suggestions, numerous centres of Muslim population were pointed out as fit places where primary schools for Muslims could be opened ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state if any schools have since been opened in any of those centres ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to my reply to part (b) of his question No. 849 which was asked in this House on the 5th September, 1927.

DEVELOPMENT OF PRIMARY EDUCATION AMONG MUHAMMADANS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

918. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the memorandum by the Provincial Muslim League, Rajputana, submitted to the Government of India in October 1925, reminded the Education Department that in April, 1920, the Honourable the Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara strongly approved of the formation of a small Committee to develop primary education among Muhammadans ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Education Department has not as yet done any thing towards the carrying out of the promise of the Local Government ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

NUMBER OF STUDENTS REFUSED ADMISSION INTO THE GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL AND THE MOINIA ISLAMIA HIGH SCHOOL IN AJMER.

919. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to furnish the information as to how many students were refused admission during the session by the Headmasters of the Government High School and the Moinia Islamia High School which are the two Government Schools in Ajmer ? How many of these were Muhammadans ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : A statement, showing the particulars required by the Honourable Member in so far as they are available, is laid on the table.

Name of School.	Number of boys who were refused admission during the session.
	Hindus.	Muhammadans.	Total.
1. Government High School, Ajmer*	97	16	113
2. Moinia Islamia High School, Ajmer ..	5	26	31
	102	42	144

*For July 1927 only.

N. B.—The present session commenced only from the 1st July 1927.

NUMBER OF MUHAMMADAN AND MAHRATTA TEACHERS IN THE GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, AJMER.

920. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to furnish the information as to how many Muhammadan teachers other than Persian and Urdu Maulvis and the Drill Instructor, were on the staff of the Government High School, Ajmer, on 1st April 1917 and on 1st April 1927 ?

(b) Will the Government be further pleased to state how many Maharatta teachers were on the staff on these two dates, respectively ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) and (b). A statement giving the information required by the Honourable Member is laid on the table.

Government High School, Ajmer.

———	On 1st April, 1917.	On 1st April, 1927.
Number of Muhammadan teachers (other than Persian and Urdu Maulvis and the Drill Instructor).	3	1
Number of Mahratta teachers	2	5

SUPERVISING STAFF OF THE BOARDING HOUSE OF THE GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, AJMER.

921. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact the Assistant Headmaster, Government High School, Ajmer, is also the Superintendent of the boarding house attached to the School and has an Assistant Superintendent under him who also is a Hindu ? Are there any Muhammadan boys in the boarding house ? If so, why has not a Muhammadan been appointed to hold one of the two posts of the Superintendent and the Assistant Superintendent of the boarding house ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The answer to the first two queries is in the affirmative. There are only 18 Muhammadans as against 86 Hindus and 12 Jains in the boarding house.

ENTERTAINMENT OF UNPASSED GIRL CLERKS IN THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS OFFICES.

922. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 1330, dated 22nd March 1926, relative to the employment of unpassed girl clerks in some branches of Army Headquarters, will Government please state whether such clerks are still being entertained in these offices ? If so, why ?

(b) Are passed candidates available to replace them ?

(c) If so, what is the justification to further employ them ?

(d) Was it the opinion of a late Quartermaster General in India that girl clerks were more of a hindrance than a help to Government ?

(e) Why do the branches of Army Headquarters and the Railway Board engage them in preference to duly qualified clerks ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) A few lady clerks who are unpassed are still employed because no passed lady clerks are available.

(b) Only passed men clerks are available.

(c) Lady clerks are considered to be more suitable for the work on which they are employed.

(d) No, Sir.

(e) For the reason given in my answer to part (c).

I am informed that the only ladies at present employed in the Railway Board's office are two typists and one stenographer.

GRANT OF HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCES TO THE CLERICAL STAFF OF THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS, ETC.

923. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) With reference to the reply on 22nd March 1927 to starred question No. 1109, relative to the grant of house rent allowances to the clerical staff of the Army Headquarters, will Government please state whether the amounts have since been worked out ?

(b) If not, why not ?

(c) Has the expert inquiry been instituted ?

(d) If not, when will it be done ?

(e) Will Government please say when the labours of the expert inquiry are likely to be finished ?

(f) Who are the personnel of the inquiry ?

(g) Is it a fact that the 2nd Innes Committee recommended some reduction from the officers' establishment of the Army Headquarters ?

(h) If so, has any effect been given to these recommendations ?

(i) If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes. The net extra cost is estimated at Rs. 1½ lakhs.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) and (d). The officer conducting the inquiry was expected to arrive by the last mail and will begin his inquiry immediately.

(e) Probably by the middle of November.

(f) The inquiry is being conducted by Mr. H. N. Heseltine, C.I.E., an officer of the Finance Department, who retired in 1918 after 37 years' service, and is an expert in office establishments.

(g) Yes.

(h) Yes.

(i) Does not arise.

GRANT OF NOT-ENTITLED OR INDULGENCE PASSAGES TO CIVILIAN CLERKS OF THE ARMY DEPARTMENT AND ARMY HEADQUARTERS HAVING AN INDIAN DOMICILE.

924. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that under Army Regulations, India, Volume X, civilian clerks of the Army Department and Army Headquarters are entitled to not-entitled or indulgence passages to the United Kingdom and back to India ?

(b) If so, will Government please state whether the rule is equally applicable to civilian clerks having an Indian domicile ?

(c) If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) A not-entitled passage is a passage to which no one is entitled, but all civilian clerks in the Army Department are eligible for not-entitled passages if vacant berths are available. Under present conditions, the supply of entitled passages is barely sufficient to meet requirements : and there are no berths left over for not-entitled passages, which exist now only in name.

(b) The question of domicile has never been raised in this connection.

(c) Does not arise.

LEAVE RESERVE FOR THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

925. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that the principle of the leave reserve for the clerical establishment of the Army Headquarters has been accepted by the Government ?

(b) If so, when is it proposed to give effect to this principle ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). The question is under the consideration of the Government of India, and a decision will be reached after the report of the officer, who is inquiring into the clerical establishments of Army Headquarters, has been received.

SEPARATE COMPARTMENTS FOR EUROPEAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN AND INDIAN CLERKS IN THE SPECIAL TRAIN RUNNING BETWEEN SUMMER HILL AND THE SIMLA GOODS SHED.

926. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that a special train composed of three bogie carriages runs on week days between Summer Hill and Simla Goods Shed to transport clerks of the Army Headquarters residing at Summer Hill ?

(b) If so, will Government please state whether there are any orders under which Indian clerks and Superintendents are not allowed to travel in the same compartment with their European and Anglo-Indian fellow clerks ?

(c) Are Government aware that there is a widespread discontent among the Indian clerks that they are made to travel with menials and domestic servants of the European and Anglo-Indian clerks in the same compartment ?

(d) Are Government prepared to issue orders to stop this practice ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) No, Sir, there is no separate reservation for European, Indian or Anglo-Indian clerks.

(c) The answer is in the negative. Government are not aware of any widespread discontent among the Indian clerks. These clerks are not made to travel with menials or domestic servants.

(d) Does not arise.

RETENTION OF THE OFFICE OF THE MASTER GENERAL OF SUPPLY IN SIMLA DURING THE WINTER.

927. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that, with the exception of the Master General of Supply Branch, other Branches of Army Headquarters, either wholly or partly, move down to Delhi during the winter months ?

(b) If so, will Government please state why this Branch is differently treated in the matter of the move ?

(c) Are Government aware that there is widespread discontent amongst the officers and clerks of this Branch that while their confreres in other Branches of Army Headquarters go down to Delhi, they are forced to spend the snowy months in Simla ?

(d) Is it a fact that on this account a large number of applications for privilege leave for winter months are received from the civilian clerks of this Branch ?

(e) Is it a fact that generally medical certificates are called for from the clerks before leave is granted ?

(f) If so, why cannot leave earned and admissible be granted without medical certificates ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) There is not sufficient accommodation at Delhi for all the Branches of Army Headquarters, and there is nothing to be gained administratively by bringing the Master General of Supply's Branch down to Delhi for the winter.

(c) There is no discontent amongst the officers, and Government are not aware of any widespread discontent among the clerks.

(d) No, Sir. On the contrary, the majority of applications for privilege leave are received, and granted, during the summer months.

(e) No, Sir.

(f) Does not arise.

ABOLITION OF THE EXAMINATION SYSTEM FOR RECRUITMENT TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT AND ATTACHED OFFICES.

928. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that a proposal for the abolition of the examination system for recruitment to the Government of India Secretariat and attached offices is under contemplation ?

(b) If so, when will the decision be arrived at ?

(c) Is it a fact that the proposal is to revive the old system whereby recruitment used to be made on the nomination basis ?

(d) If so, what will be the fate of those candidates who have already qualified for appointments in the respective divisions at the examinations held by the late Staff Selection Board and the Public Service Commission ?

(e) Do Government propose to issue orders to the effect that these men should be given preference to outsiders ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b), (c), (d) and (e). Do not arise.

ALLEGED USE OF A TIME-EXPIRED PASS BY THE SUPERINTENDENT, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE. T. DIVISION, FOR HIS JOURNEY FROM MADRAS TO TRICHINOPOLY.

929. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Has the attention of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, India, and of the Government of India been drawn to resolution No. 2, passed by the Bangalore Railway Mail Service Association on the 31st October, 1926, and published at page 310 of the General Letter for November 1926 issued by the All-India Postal and R. M. S. Union, Madras Circle ?

(b) What are the " card passes " referred to ?

(c) Were they issued before or after 1st April 1926 ?

(d) If before the 1st April 1926, how were they current after the 1st April 1926 when passes had been withdrawn ?

(e) Is it true that the Superintendent, R. M. S., T. Division, travelled under cover of such a time-expired pass from Madras to Trichinopoly on the 18th September, 1926, in a first class compartment and was challenged by the Travelling Ticket Examiner, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, at Tanjore ?

(f) When was this time-expired pass actually withdrawn from the Superintendent ?

(g) Did the Superintendent use that pass from the 1st April 1926 up to the date of withdrawal ?

(h) If so, did he deduct in his travelling allowance bill the railway fare covered by the free pass ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government have no information on the subject. Enquiries are being made and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

RETENTION OF EXCESS CLERKS IN THE OFFICES OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES AND THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

930. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that orders have been issued that no clerk should be retained excess in the offices of the Superintendents of Post Offices and the Railway Mail Service ?

(b) When were the orders issued ?

(c) Is it also a fact that Superintendents are asked to certify in their diaries that no excess clerks are retained in their offices ?

(d) Is it a fact that one K. Ramaswamy Pillai was retained in the office of the Superintendent, R. M. S., T. Division, Trichinopoly, in excess from January 1927 to June 1927 ?

(e) Have Government taken notice of this irregular retention ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(b) 7th March, 1927.

(c) Yes.

(d) Information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

(e) Action will be taken if necessary.

APPOINTMENT OF VENKATASWAMY, POSTAL MAIL OVERSEER, NELLORE DIVISION, AS A MAIL GUARD IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, TRICHINOPOLY.

931. *Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (1) Is it a fact that one Venkataswamy, postal mail overseer, Nellore Division, has been appointed a mail guard Trichinopoly Railway Mail Service in May 1927 ?

(2) If so, will Government kindly state if the appointment is permitted by the rules of the Department ?

(3) Has the appointment blocked the promotion of van peons to the post of mail guards ?

(4) Is it a fact that this Venkataswamy travelled in the mail van with section T.-2 Out Set No. 3 on the 28th May, from Trichinopoly to Egmore on a requisition given by the Sub-Record Clerk, Trichinopoly R. M. S. ?

(5) What appointment did he hold on the date in the Railway Mail Service and why was he allowed to travel at Government cost from Trichinopoly to Egmore ?

(6) Is it true that the present Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, T.-Division, was in 1924 Superintendent of Post Offices, Nellore Division ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (1) Yes. But he did not join.

(2) Yes. Direct recruitment is permitted.

(3) Does not arise, in view of the reply to (1).

(4) and (5). Information has been called for and will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

(6) Yes. Up to 1st September, 1924.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE PROSPECTS AND TERMS OF SERVICE OF SUPPLY AND TRANSPORT STORE-KEEPERS IN THE INDIAN ARMY SERVICE CORPS.

932. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Will the Government please state the total number of candidates that offered themselves for the clerical and storekeepers' appointments respectively at each of the last two examinations for recruitment in the Indian Army Service Corps of Supply and Transport clerks and storekeepers ?

(b) What is the total number of qualified candidates on the waiting list for clerical and storekeepers' appointments respectively ?

(c) Is it a fact that the storekeepers have to prove their knowledge of book-keeping in addition to passing the usual test which is common for clerks and storekeepers ?

(d) Is it a fact that the storekeepers have to deposit a cash security of Rs. 1,200 which is not demanded from clerks ?

(e) Is it also a fact that the scale of pay of storekeepers is much lower than that of clerks ?

(f) When do the Government propose to improve the prospects and terms of service of the Supply and Transport storekeepers to attract a sufficient number of qualified candidates ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) 750 candidates applied for clerical appointments and 62 for storekeepers' appointments in the last examination but one. The numbers for the last examination were 738 and 180, respectively.

(b) 127 for clerical appointments and none for storekeepers' appointments.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes, because storekeepers have charge of valuable Government stores. Interest on this security is paid annually to the storekeeper.

(e) No, Sir. The initial pay of clerks and storekeepers is the same. The prospects of the clerks and of those storekeepers who are employed in the M. T. Branch are slightly better than those of storekeepers in the Supply Branch.

(f) A sufficient number of qualified candidates already apply for appointment as storekeepers ; the remainder of the question does not therefore arise.

APPOINTMENT OF CANDIDATES WHO PASSED THE QUALIFYING TEST FOR CLERKS FOR THE INDIAN ARMY SERVICE CORPS AS SUPPLY AND TRANSPORT CHECKERS.

933. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that a large number of candidates who passed the Indian Army Service Corps examinations for clerical appointments as early as in March, 1926, have not so far been provided ?

(b) How many posts of Supply and Transport checkers have been filled since March 1926 ?

(c) Were all or any of these posts of checkers which were offered to passed clerks accepted by any of them ?

(d) Do the Government propose to issue instructions to the effect that in future all vacancies of checkers should first be offered to passed clerks that have not so far been appointed ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) 43.

(c) Three of the candidates who passed the qualifying test for clerks have been appointed checkers.

(d) Yes.

AGE LIMIT PRESCRIBED FOR DEPARTMENTAL PROMOTIONS IN CERTAIN SERVICES.

934. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Will the Government please state whether any age limit is prescribed for the promotion of postal officials from the grade of Inspector to that of Superintendent, or for departmental nomination for the All-India Accounts and Audit Service, or for promotion from the ministerial appointment of a Superintendent in the Secretariat to that of Assistant Secretary ?

(b) Is it a fact that departmental candidates holding permanent appointments in the second division of the Secretariat are not considered eligible candidates for examination for the first division of the Secretariat if they are above thirty ?

(c) If so, when do the Government propose to remove this restriction ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I understand that promotion to the grade of Superintendent of Post Offices is allowed to postal officials after they have passed the departmental examination. Ordinarily no one is nominated for the examination whose age exceeds 31 years. There is no age limit prescribed for the promotion of subordinates to the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, or of members of the ministerial establishment to the rank of Assistant Secretaries in the Departments of the Government of India.

(b) Yes.

(c) Government do not consider that it is in the interests of the public service that clerks in the Secretariat should continue year after year to prepare and enter for examinations till an advanced age, and the age of 30 appears to represent a reasonable limit.

GRANT OF PERMISSION TO ASSISTANTS OF ATTACHED OFFICES TO APPEAR AT DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATIONS FOR PROMOTION AS SECRETARIAT ASSISTANTS.

935. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Will the Government state the nature of work usually entrusted to (a) second division clerks of the Secretariat (b) assistants of attached offices and (c) assistants of the Secretariat ?

(b) Is it a fact that the duties of attached office assistants are more like those of the Secretariat assistants than of those of the second division Secretariat clerks ?

(c) Is it a fact that second division Secretariat clerks are usually considered eligible for departmental examination for the Secretariat assistants and that the attached office assistants are not permitted to appear at departmental examinations for promotion as Secretariat assistants after passing the usual examination ?

(d) When do the Government propose to remove this treatment accorded to the attached office assistants ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman on the 15th September, 1925, to Mr. Mahmood Schamnad Sahib Bahadur's question No. 943.

(b) No, Sir. I should say it was a matter of opinion.

(c) No purely departmental examinations are now held for promotion to the upper division. All candidates who are eligible under the rules, whether outsiders or departmental, are examined together and the successful candidates come on to a common list from which selections are made for appointments in the upper division.

(d) Does not arise.

REVISION OF THE PAY AND PROSPECTS OF FIRST DIVISION ASSISTANTS IN ATTACHED OFFICES.

936. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that the following educational qualifications were prescribed for admission to the Staff Selection Board examination in 1920, namely—First division Secretariat, University Degree, first division attached offices, University Degree, second division Secretariat, Intermediate ?

(b) Is it also a fact that the following educational qualifications were prescribed for admission to the Public Service examination in 1926—First division Secretariat and also attached offices, Intermediate, second division Secretariat, Matriculation ?

(c) Is it a fact that the educational qualifications and also the nature of work expected from attached office first division is more like that of the Secretariat first division than the Secretariat second division ?

(d) Is it a fact that the scales of pay and allowances (specially the maximum pay) of first division attached offices is not better than those of the second division Secretariat ?

(e) Is it a fact that the prospects of departmental promotion to the first division Secretariat are better for the second division Secretariat than for the first division attached offices ?

(f) When do the Government propose to revise the pay and prospects of the first division attached offices to bring them nearer to the first division Secretariat ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) For the examination conducted by the Public Service Commission, Ministerial Selection Branch, in November, 1926, the Intermediate standard of any University or the Senior Cambridge was prescribed as the minimum educational qualification required of outside candidates for the first and second division.

(c) No exact comparison can be made as conditions vary so widely.

(d) The scale of pay for first division assistants in an attached office is Rs. 120—8—160—10—350 and, in certain offices Rs. 220—12—440.

The scale for second division Secretariat clerk is Rs. 100—8—172—efficiency bar—180—8—300 with a special grade of Rs. 300—25—350. The special grade is confined to those who show special merit and capacity and fulfil certain other conditions of service : it is also subject to a limit of 10 per cent. of the permanent staff. It will be seen that the two scales are not strictly comparable.

(e) It is open to an attached office assistant, who is duly qualified, to apply for a post in the Secretariat first division.

(f) The Government of India do not propose to take any action in the matter.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF ATTACHED OFFICES.

937. *Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Will the Government please state the date on which they received the representation from the attached offices for revision of their pay ?

(b) What has been the cause of delay in announcing the decision and what is the present stage of the case ?

(c) When do the Government propose to issue orders and when do they propose to give retrospective effect from the date on which they received the representation or the date from which they sanctioned increase in the scale of pay of attached office stenographers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The representation was received in June 1926.

(b) and (c). It was necessary to obtain the views of all Departments of the Government of India in the matter. Orders declining to undertake any general revision of pay were issued on the 5th September, 1927.

†938.*

† Not asked at the meeting, but the question and the answer thereto will be found at pages 4231—32 of these proceedings.

CARRIAGE, FREE OF CHARGE, BY THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RAILWAY OF CLOTHES AND OTHER NECESSARIES OF LIFE FOR THE SUFFERERS FROM FLOODS IN GUJARAT.

939. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) If their attention has been called to a message from the Free Press of India under the caption " Karnatak Workers for Flood Areas " published in the issue of the Indian Daily Herald of Bombay in its issue of the 22nd August, 1927 ?

(b) If so, whether it is true that the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Company has refused to carry clothes and other necessaries of life for the benefit of sufferers from the floods in Gujarat from the Karnatak, free of charge ?

(c) If they will lay on the table the correspondence on this subject between Dr. N. S. Hardikar and the said Railway Company ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have received an extract copy of the article referred to from the Honourable Member and are making enquiries the result of which will be communicated to him.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE OF INDIAN APPRENTICE ENGINEERS OF THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

940. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Is it a fact that under the rules in force on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway all apprentice engineers on that line are entitled to receive travelling allowance at the rate of Rs. 4 per night ?

(b) Are Indian apprentice engineers paid travelling allowance at that rate ?

(c) If not, will Government give reasons why this is not done ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The rule draws no distinction between Indians and non-Indians.

(c) Does not arise.

TOTAL NUMBER OF APPOINTMENTS ON RS. 500 AND OVER ON STATE RAILWAYS.

941. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of appointments carrying a salary of Rs. 500 and above in the Railway Departments under the Government ?

(b) How many of these appointments are held by Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) in general and by Biharis in particular ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix ' F ' in the Report on Indian Railways, Volume I, for 1925-26. Anglo-Indians are not shown separately from other Indians in this Appendix ; but, as I explained to the House the other day, we propose to separate the figures in future. Our statistics do not show the provinces from which employees come.

TOTAL NUMBER OF CIVIL ENGINEERS IN THE RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.

942. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) What is the total strength of civil engineers in the Railway Departments under the Government ?

(b) How many of these railway civil engineers are Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) ?

(c) Is any of these Indian civil engineers in the Railway Department a Bihari ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The permanent engineer officers number 310, of whom 87 are Indians, excluding statutory Indians. Government do not know how many are Biharis.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIANS AS RAILWAY CIVIL ENGINEERS.

943. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of posts of railway civil engineers that fell vacant within a period of the past five years and also the number of Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) who were appointed as such ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of posts of railway civil engineers that are likely to fall vacant in the coming five years ?

(c) Will all these posts be filled up by qualified Indians ? If not, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) 39. 19 Indians, excluding statutory Indians, were appointed.

(b) 60 approximately.

(c) They will be filled in accordance with the regulations published with Railway Board's Resolutions No. 2058-E., dated 15th July, 1926, and 4048-E., dated 6th July, 1927, which appeared in the Gazette of India, dated 17th July, 1926, and 9th July, 1927, respectively.

APPOINTMENT OF QUALIFIED INDIANS AS RAILWAY CIVIL ENGINEERS.

944. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Are the Government aware that a large number of Indians including some Biharis having qualified themselves for the posts of railway civil engineers from British Universities are sitting idle for want of employment ?

(b) Will the Government state the number of applications from Indian candidates for the above posts ?

(c) Is there any such application from a Bihari candidate ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government are aware that some Indians have returned from abroad having qualified as civil engineers in British Universities.

(b) and (c). Appointments are made in accordance with the regulations referred to in the reply given by me to the Honourable Member's previous Question. Under these regulations all applications are dealt with by the Selection Committees appointed by Provincial Governments and consequently the Government of India do not know exactly how many applications were received by the Bihar and Orissa Committee. I might, however, mention that out of a quota of 7 candidates for the Indian Railway Service of Engineers allowed to the Bihar and Orissa Province for the 1926 examination, that Province nominated only 4 candidates. None of these qualified at the examination.

INDIANISATION OF THE RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.

945. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Is it a fact that the Government are pledged to Indianise the Railway Department? Are the Government prepared to announce and to definitely direct the Railway Board that qualified Indians being available, all vacancies in all grades of the Railway Department shall in future be filled up by Indians ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The policy of Government is that recommended by the Lee Commission in paragraph 42 (d) of their report. I would refer the Honourable Member to the Railway Department's Resolution No. 2658-E., dated 15th July, 1926, in which it was announced that those recommendations of the Lee Commission were accepted by Government.

REPAIR OF BREACHES OF THE LINE ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

946. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Are Government aware that the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company expected to repair the breaches of the line due to the Orissa floods in three weeks ?

(b) When are they going to resume regular traffic ?

(c) Did the Engineer, Bengal Nagpur Railway, suddenly reduce the wages of labourers working on the breaches to 8 annas per day, thus making about 2,000 men leave work three or four days ago ?

(d) Do Government propose to ask the Company to raise wages so that the distressed people of the locality may find it possible to work ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Our latest information is that the Bengal Nagpur Railway Administration expect through running to be restored by the 15th of this month. They originally hoped to repair the very extensive breaches on the East Coast line earlier, but have been much hampered by further floods from the Baitarani river.

(c) and (d). Government have received no information to this effect and do not propose to address the Railway Administration on the subject.

RETRENCHMENT ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

947. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : Have the Railway Board issued any new orders this year for retrenchment to the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No. The Honourable Member is possibly referring to letters which the Railway Board issued this summer to all Railway Administrations suggesting an investigation by them of methods whereby they could obtain economy in administrative charges and in their expenditure on the repairs and maintenance of rolling stock. I am having copies of these letters placed in the Library.

RETRENCHMENT ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

948. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Were there any complaints purporting that the present retrenchment in the Bengal Nagpur Railway is contemplated as a measure of retaliation against the recent strike by means of (i) representation or deputation ; (ii) meetings and resolution ; (iii) criticisms in the Press ?

(b) If so, what are those complaints and how were they met ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have received no complaints to this effect, though, I believe, that there have been suggestions in one or more papers to the effect that the contemplated reduction in the staff of the Kharagpur workshops is a measure of victimization. I am, therefore, very glad to be able to take this opportunity of stating publicly that this is not so. The reductions are entirely due to the fact that there is not now, and is not likely to be for a very considerable period, sufficient work in the Kharagpur workshops to keep the present number of men there employed.

As I have explained in reply to a question recently put by Mr. Joshi, no question of retrenchment arises.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government are aware that Mr. Towers, the Works Manager of the Kharagpur Shops, issued instructions to the foremen that those people who had acted as blacklegs during the last strike should not be retrenched at any cost ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware of it, but if any such instructions were issued they were quite without authority.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will the Government inquire whether such instructions were issued and what steps do Government propose to take to deal with the officer who issued such instructions ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As I have said, I am not aware that such instructions have been issued. I will make inquiries.

RETRENCHMENT ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

949. Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) How many men have been discharged during the last six months in the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

(b) How many of them had put in more than three years' service or regular work ?

(c) How many permanent employees have been discharged under the present policy of retrenchment ?

(i) How many in 1926, and (ii) How many in 1927 up-to-date ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). I presume that the Honourable Member is referring to discharges from the Kharagpur workshops. If so, as has been explained in replies recently given to the Honourable Mr. Joshi, 178 men were discharged prior to the issue of the recent notice of reduction in establishment and it is proposed to dispense with the services of about 2,000 more either by voluntary resignations or by discharges. Government are not aware how many of the men who have been formerly discharged had put in more than three years' service but, as is explained in the notice, a copy of which has previously been laid on the table, the reduction will be made, in the first place, from men approaching or past 55.

(c) No employees have, so far as Government are aware, been discharged during the two years mentioned as a measure of retrenchment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government are aware that during the last two months, when proposals for economy were being considered, the Bengal Nagpur Railway engaged more than 300 new men ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not think I have received any information to that effect, Sir. If the Honourable Member will give me the information in his possession, I shall be glad to inquire.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Was any assurance given that men working more than three years would not be discharged ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No assurance was given to that effect, but as was explained in the notice, the methods adopted to effect the reduction are as follows :

> First of all, voluntary resignations, which were acceptable up to the 7th September ; thereafter people who were approaching the age of retirement, that is to say, men of the age of 54 or 55 ; thereafter by selection from persons according to their work, men who had done the best work naturally being retained. I did however bring to the notice of the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, as the result of a question put to me by some Honourable Member when last the subject came up before this House, the suggestion that he should, other things being equal, give preference in retention to those people who had had done a good many years of good service on the railway.

RETRENCHMENT ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY CONSEQUENT ON THE INTRODUCTION OF PUNCHING AND THE DISC SYSTEM.

950. Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Did the Loco.-Auditor, Bengal Nagpur Railway, introduce punching and the Disc system ?

(b) What was the retrenchment achieved in introducing that system ?

(c) Is the system working ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Information has been called for from the Bengal Nagpur Railway and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt

RETRENCHMENT ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY CONSEQUENT ON THE INTRODUCTION OF ADDRESSOGRAPH AND GRAPHOTYPE AND ACCOUNTING MACHINES.

951. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Has the Loco.-Auditor introduced any Addressograph and Graphotype machine, and accounting machine for compilation of pay sheets, etc. ?

(b) What is the entire cost of the establishment of those machines ; and what is the price of the machinery ?

(c) What retrenchment has the new machinery arrangement effected ? Will the Government please give an exact estimate ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: Information has been called for from the Bengal Nagpur Railway and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

EXPENDITURE ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY FOR SUPERIOR AND SUBORDINATE SUPERVISING STAFFS.

952. Pandit Nilakantha Das: Will the Government give statements comparing in the Bengal Nagpur Railway the estimated expenditure between 1920-21 and 1926-27 :

(i) for the maintenance of superior supervising staffs under the heads

(a) Engineering, (b) Loco. Carriage. (c) Traffic, (d) Agency, (e) Audit, (f) Stores, (g) Watch and Ward ; and

(ii) for the maintenance of subordinate supervising staff under the heads

(a) Engineering, (b) Loco. Carriage, (c) Traffic, (d) Audits, (e) Agency, (f) Stores ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: As I explained on the 7th instant in reply to a question by Mr. Joshi, the final figures for 1926-27 are not yet available ; but I will supply the Honourable Member with the information required as soon as they come in.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: Will the Honourable Member lay the information, when received, on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: I will see what the size of the statement is, Sir. If it is not long, I will lay it on the table ; otherwise I will place it in the Library.

CASES OF ASSAULT BY SUPERIOR OFFICERS ON WORKERS AND LABOURERS IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

953. Pandit Nilakantha Das: (a) Are the Government aware of the statement of the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, in the supplement to Bengal Nagpur Railway, Gazette No. 8 of 19th February 1927, that "undoubtedly such cases (of assault by superior officers on workers and labourers) do occur, and inevitably must occur owing to the frailties of human nature, but any proved cases of physical violence and gross and excessive abuse will be promptly dealt with" ?

(b) How many cases of assault, bribery, victimisation, ill-treatment and harassment have since come to the notice of the Agent, and how have they been dealt with ?

(c) How, in this connection, has the Agent dealt with the persons concerned in the recent case Mr. Mclaren versus Mewaram (A.I case No. 1035 of 1927, in the Court of Md. F. Karim, Deputy Magistrate, Midnapur) ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: I have called for the information, and will communicate with the Honourable Member when it is received.

ALLEGED ORGANISED CONSPIRACY OF MUHAMMADANS TO MURDER HINDUS.

954. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the large Hindu meeting in Delhi held on 26th August 1927 where a resolution referred to an organised conspiracy of Muhammadans to murder Hindus ?

(b) Do the Government contemplate in any way moving in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have seen references to the meeting.

(b) Government do not accept the fact that there is any such conspiracy.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR AND THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

955. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Is it a fact that the late Department of Industries and the Public Works Department were amalgamated into the newly formed Department of Industries and Labour in 1923 as a measure of retrenchment ?

(b) Is it also a fact that the two Departments still remain as separate units with separate establishments, etc., with a common Secretary ? If so, why so ?

(c) Do Government propose to merge them into one ? If so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, partly in pursuance of the recommendations of the Inchcape Committee, and partly as a measure of general administrative convenience.

(b) Yes, because this arrangement has hitherto been found convenient.

(c) There is no such intention at present.

MAIL SUBSIDIES TO THE BRITISH INDIAN STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY AND THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

956. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : 1. Will the Government please state if any subsidies are given to the British Indian Steam Navigation Company and the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for :

(a) carrying overseas Imperial Mail to Europe, and

(b) Indian Mails in Eastern waters including ports in India and Burma ?

2. If so, will the Honourable Member please inform this House of the total amount of such subsidies per annum ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : 1 and 2. The subsidy paid to the British Indian Steam Navigation Company annually is Rs. 15,18,000, while a sum of £22,000 is paid annually to the British Government as India's share of the subsidy payable to the P. and O. Company.

DISCONTENT CAUSED BY THE PROMOTION OF MR. T. MANSER, ASSISTANT ENGINEER, TO THE 1ST DIVISION OF THE TELEGRAPH ENGINEERING BRANCH.

957. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Are Government aware of the discontent which the recent promotion of Mr. T. Manser, Assistant Engineer, to the 1st Division of the Telegraph Engineering Branch has caused ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. Manser superseded 13 Deputy Assistant Engineers in 1925 and 10 Assistant Engineers in 1927 ?

(c) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the qualifications possessed by Mr. Manser which entitled him to such a whirlwind promotion by selection ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) Yes.

(c) Promotion from the 2nd to the 1st Division of the Engineering Branch is a matter of pure selection. In the case of Mr. Manser, his promotion to the 1st Division was made by Government after consultation with the Public Service Commission. The Commission reviewed the cases of all men senior to Mr. Manser in the 3 Engineering Branches and advised that he was the most suitable man for promotion.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly tell me whether it is a fact that all such departmental promotions depend entirely on the recommendations of the Head of the Department, and that, outside this as also the files of the applicants before them, the Public Service Commission are in no position whatever to give an independent and impartial opinion on the comparative suitability of the qualifications of the candidates.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The answer to the first part of the Honourable Member's question is in the negative. It is not a fact that these promotions depend entirely on the opinions expressed by the Head of the Department. With regard to the second part, the Public Service Commission are undoubtedly in a position to arrive at a correct judgment after examining the various records placed before them.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Arising out of that answer, Sir, will the Honourable Member please state whether it is a fact that the Public Service Commission, realising their difficulties, are not very desirous of continuing to make such selection promotions in Departments ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether he sends materials to the Public Service Commission for them to arrive at the conclusion that certain officers who are considered fit for promotion have done certain meritorious work in his Department ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am sorry I did not catch the Honourable Member's question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there any way whereby the Honourable Member's Department places sufficient materials before the Public Service Commission sitting here now, to come to the conclusion that a certain officer is fit for promotion as has worked meritoriously in his Department ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Complete materials are supplied to the Public Service Commission to enable them to arrive at conclusions in the matter.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Does the Honourable Member send in the names of certain officers working under him saying that they are fit for promotions, because they have done meritorious work in his Department ; and, with regard to this case brought to notice by Colonel Gidney, will the Honourable Member please state whether certain promotions were made on the recommendation of the Honourable Member ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No recommendations were made by me personally. Recommendations were made by the Head of the Department, and all the relevant papers were placed before the Public Service Commission.

REVISED RATES OF PAY FOR CERTAIN INDIAN ARMY DEPARTMENTS.

958. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will the Honourable Member kindly inform me whether it is a fact that further revised rates of pay have been sanctioned for certain Indian Army Departments, e.g., the I. A. O. C., I. A. S. C., M. E. S., and I. M. L., with effect from the 1st June, 1927 or any other date ?

(b) If the answer to this is in the negative, will the Honourable Member please state whether any such proposals have recently been submitted to the Secretary of State for India for sanction ?

(c) Will the Honourable Member please state whether the I. M. D. is an integral part of the British Army in India, and is, in all respects, a Department similar to all other Departments in the Army ?

(d) If the answers to parts (b) and (c) are in the affirmative will the Honourable Member please give me details of the proposals and state his reasons why the I. M. D. were omitted ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No.

(b) Certain proposals have recently been submitted to the Secretary of State, but I am afraid I cannot give details of these proposals until his sanction is received.

(c) I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given to part (a) of his unstarred question No. 130 on the 31st August, 1926. The Indian Medical Department is an integral part of the Indian Army, not of the British Army in India. It differs from all other departments of the Army in being directly recruited from the domiciled community in India.

(d) My Honourable friend is aware that details of the proposals cannot be disclosed before they have been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The latter half of this part of the question does not arise.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Arising out of the answer, will the Honourable Member kindly state why, if the Indian Medical Department is a purely Indian service, it is employed purely for European troops ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am not aware, Sir, of having said that the Indian Medical Department was a purely Indian service; I said it was an integral part of the Indian Army.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I ask a supplementary question ? If it is an integral part of the Indian Army, why is it confined to the Domiciled Community, and why are Indians not generally admitted ?

REVISED PENSIONS FOR THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

959. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) With reference to my unstarred question No. 220, dated 25th March, 1927, will the Government please state when they hope to publish the revised pension rates for the Indian Medical Department ?

(b) Is the Honourable Member aware of the great discontent that prevails among the members of the I. M. D. because of this delay in putting them into operation ?

(c) Will the Honourable Member please state if it is a fact that the revised pension rates of other Departments such as the I. U. L., etc., were sanctioned from the 1st October, 1925 ?

(d) Will the Honourable Member please state if the revised rates of I. M. D. pensions have been submitted to the Secretary of State for India with a recommendation that these be given retrospective effect from the date of sanction or 1st April, 1927 ?

(e) Has the Honourable Member recently received a cablegram from the Secretary of State for India asking for further information regarding the difference of the dates of retrospective effect between the I. M. D. and other Departments ?

(f) Is the Honourable Member prepared to give this House an assurance that the new pension rates of the I. M. D., whatever they be, will be given earlier or at least with equal retrospective effect as has been given to all other similar Departments ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a), (d) and (f). The proposals of the Government of India are being submitted to the Secretary of State. I am afraid I cannot give any information about the correspondence that has taken place until the final orders of the Secretary of State are received.

(b) No, Sir.

(c) Yes.

(e) The answer is in the negative.

GRANTING OF MARRIAGE ALLOWANCE TO MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

960. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member be so good as to state whether the Government of India has come to a decision regarding the granting of marriage allowance to members of the I. M. D. as is being allowed to all other similar Departments ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No final decision has yet been reached, but the Government have under consideration a proposal to grant marriage allowances to warrant officers of the Indian Medical Department when on leave out of India.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Sir, has not this question of granting marriage allowances to the Indian Medical Department been under the consideration of the Government of India for the past three years ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I cannot say offhand how long it has been under consideration.

NUMBER OF ANGLO-INDIANS SELECTED FOR THE I. C. S. FROM 1922 TO 1927.

961. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) With reference to the Honourable Member's reply to my supplementary question in connection with question No. 492, dated 29th August, 1927, will the Honourable Member please state the number of Anglo-Indians selected for the I. C. S. from 1922 to 1927 ?

(b) If the reply to (a) is " None ", will the Honourable Member please state why the claims of a single Anglo-Indian have not been considered fit to correct communal irregularities as is the avowed policy of the Government regarding 25 per cent. of all such appointments ?

The Honourable Mr J. Crerar : (a) None

(b) Government have never undertaken to do more than consider the claims of minority communities generally, and much necessarily depends on the qualifications of the candidates of various communities available. The claims of Anglo-Indians who, though not successful in the competition for open vacancies, qualify sufficiently highly in the examination will receive careful consideration along with the similar cases of members of other minority communities.

ABANDONMENT OF THE GAYA-SHERGHATTY RAILWAY PROJECT.

962. Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : Will Government be pleased to state the circumstances which led them to take up the Gaya-Sherghatty Railway project and the reasons for giving it up ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The new re-survey of the project was taken up in pursuance of the Government of India's policy of developing the country by means of railways. It has been found that there is not sufficient traffic to justify a broad gauge line, but the project will probably be re-examined at some later date as a narrow gauge line.

NUMBER OF EUROPEANS, ANGLO-INDIANS, BIHARIS AND INDIANS OTHER THAN BIHARIS EMPLOYED IN DIFFERENT DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

963. Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of (a) Europeans and Anglo-Indians, (b) Biharis, (c) Indians other than Biharis, employed in different Departments of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The number of Europeans and Anglo-Indians in the different Departments of the Government of India Secretariat on 31st December last was 173. The number of Indians was 781. I have no information as to the number of Biharis included in the latter figure.

PUBLICATION OF AN ARTICLE REGARDING SHIVAJI IN THE Peshwa, A DELHI MONTHLY.

964. †Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : (a) Are the Government aware of the great indignation prevailing among the Hindus on account of the wild assertions made by the Delhi monthly Peshwa with regard to the great Hindu leader Shivaji Maharaj and his mother ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why the printer, publisher, and others connected with the aforesaid vilifying article have not been yet prosecuted ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have received a representation on the subject. It is still under consideration.

ALLEGED ASSAULT ON AN INDIAN CLERK OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

965. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the incident reported in the Forward of Calcutta, dated the 6th August, 1927, under the caption " Indian Clerk of E. I. Railway Assaulted " ?

(b) Is it a fact that Ardhendu Babu who was assaulted has been placed under suspension by the higher railway authorities ? If so, why and, by whom, and do Government contemplate asking the authorities concerned to reconsider his case ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I have seen the paragraph mentioned by the Honourable Member.

(b) The matter is entirely within the competence of the Agent, East Indian Railway, and Government see no reason to interfere with his discretion.

EXPENDITURE DURING THE CURRENT YEAR ON THE INDIAN AUXILIARY AND TERRITORIAL FORCES.

966. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member-in-charge of the Military Department be pleased to state the amount that Government are going to spend on the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces during the current year ?

(b) How much of the said sum will approximately be spent on (1) ammunition for the said Forces, (2) camp expenses, (3) salary of the men, (4) pay of the European instructors ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) About Rs. 68,62,000 on the Auxiliary Force and Rs. 22,78,000 on the Territorial Force. These figures do not include any part of the 10 lakh programme which is involved by the acceptance of the proposals of the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee, and most of which will be incurred next year.

(b) The figures are approximately as follows :

Ammunition—

Auxiliary Force 3 lakhs, 90 thousand.
Territorial Force 92 thousand.

Camp Expenses—

Auxiliary Force 2½ lakhs.
Territorial Force 95 thousand.

Salaries of Men—

Auxiliary Force 30 lakhs, 44 thousand.
Territorial Force 5 lakhs, 37 thousand.

Pay of European Instructors—

Auxiliary Force 20 lakhs, 29 thousand.
Territorial Force 10 lakhs, 71 thousand.

RELEASE OF MOHAMMAD AKBAR KHAN, CONVICTED UNDER SECTION 121 OF THE INDIAN PENAL CODE.

967. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if Mr. Mohammad Akbar Khan, an inhabitant of the District of Hazara in the North-West Frontier Province, as reported in the Ganabani, a Bengali weekly of the 28th of July, 1927, has been convicted under section 121-A of the Indian Penal Code, on the 27th April 1923 and sentenced to 7 years' rigorous imprisonment and whether he has been transferred to the District Jail at Raipur in the Central Provinces ?

(b) Is it a fact that in view of his excellent conduct in jail, the local jail authorities recommended his release, on the expiry of half the term of his sentence, to the Jail Remission Board ?

(c) Is it a fact that the District Magistrate of Hazara, of which he is a resident, reported, when referred to by the Jail Remission Board, that there was nothing against Mr. Akbar Khan being released as recommended ?

(d) Is it a fact that the recommendation was set at naught on the adverse report of the District Magistrate of Peshawar ?

(e) Is it a fact that Mr. Akbar Khan was convicted for conspiracy with Dr. Nur Mahammad and Ruknuddin and that both of these persons have long returned to India and that no cases have been brought against either of them and that the order of suspension of the pension of Risaldar Ruknuddin has been withdrawn ?

(f) Under the circumstances, do the Government contemplate releasing Mr. Akbar Khan now ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I have not seen the publication quoted, but the facts are generally as stated by the Honourable Member.

(b) The jail authorities forwarded his nominal roll to the District Magistrate, Hazara, in the ordinary course with a view to putting his case before the Advisory Board, but made no recommendation in the matter.

(c) The District Magistrate, Hazara, made no recommendation in his favour.

(d) The District Magistrate, Peshawar, made no recommendation in the case.

(e) No, but the evidence in the case showed that he had been in correspondence with Ruknuddin and possibly with Dr. Nur Muhammad. Neither of these has been prosecuted.

(f) No.

APPLICABILITY OF THE GOVERNMENT SERVANTS' CONDUCT RULES TO THE PRESIDENT, DEPUTY PRESIDENT AND OTHER SALARIED OFFICERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

968. Mr. E. F. Sykes : Are the Honourable the President, the Deputy President and the other salaried officers of the House subject to the Government Servants' Conduct Rules ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable the President and the Deputy President are not subject to the Government Servants' Conduct Rules. (Hear, hear.) The Secretary and other salaried officers as officers of the Assembly are not subject to the rules but they are so subject if they are also persons in the civil service of the Crown in India to whom the Government Servants' Conduct Rules apply under section 96-B of the Government of India Act.

NEW PENSION RULES, ETC.

969. Mr. D. V. Belvi : (1) Will Government be pleased to state if the consideration of the proposed new rules regarding the grant of pension, provident fund and gratuity under the Fundamental Rules to employees in the subordinate Government service has now been completed by the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India ?

(2) If not, for how many years has the matter been under consideration and when is the consideration expected to be completed finally ?

(3) Has the attention of the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India been drawn to the answers given by the Bombay Government on the subject of the new Pension Rules in reply to interpellations on the 23rd October 1924, on the 2nd March 1925 and on the 28th July 1925 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (1) No.

(2) A draft was prepared at the end of 1923, but further consideration was postponed in view of impending changes in the control of the various services. Local Governments have now received full authority to make rules prescribing conditions of service, including pension, provident fund and gratuity, for all services and officers under their control, and it is understood that they have such rules under their consideration. It is expected that similar authority will be delegated to the Government of India shortly.

(3) The Government have perused the questions and answers referred to.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT, SIMLA.

970. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (1) Will Government please state separately :

(a) What is the number of sub-postmasters, clerks, postmen, mail peons and runners in the Simla Post Offices and how many of them are Muslims ?

(b) What is the total number of Inspectors in Simla Town and how many of them are Muslims ?

(c) For how long has there been no Muslim Inspector in the Simla Postal Department ?

(2) What action do Government propose to take to give Muslims their due share in the Postal Department of Simla—the seat of Government ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra :

			Muslims.
1. (a)	Sub-postmasters	17	Nil
	Clerks	82	9
	Postmen	199	3
	Mail-peons	51	5
	Runners	28	3

(b) Two. Neither is a Muslim.

(c) Since 1922. There is one Muslim Sub-Town Inspector since 1919.

2. Government do not propose to take any action in the individual case of Simla, apart from the action which is already being taken in the Indian Postal and Telegraphs Department as a whole to give effect to the general policy of Government in the matter of representation of minority communities in various services which has been explained on the floor of this House on several occasions.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

971. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that all posts which fell vacant in the office of the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, during 1927, have been given to non-Muslims exclusively, in spite of the fact that an assurance was given by the Director-General in his letter No. A.M.-65|26, dated the 25th September, 1926, to the address of the Anjuman-i-Islamia, Simla, and by the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra in reply to my unstarred question No. 229 of 26th March, 1927, with regard to the representation of Muslims in the Postal Department ?

(b) Will Government please state how many fresh candidates were employed in the office of the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, since January, 1927, and how many of them were Muslims ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a tabular statement showing separately the total number of appointments and the number of appointments held by Muslims in each scale of pay, in the office of the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, as it stood on the 1st August 1927 ?

(d) What action do Government propose to take to ensure that the undertakings given by them from time to time with regard to the representation of Muslims in Government service, are strictly acted upon ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) Three, of whom one was a Muslim.

(c) A statement is laid on the table.

(d) Government do not propose to take any action as they have no reason to apprehend that their instructions in regard to the representation of minority communities in Government service are not being acted upon in this particular office.

Tabular statement showing number of appointments in the office of the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs as it stood on 1st August 1927.

Number of appointments.	Hindus.	Christians.	Muslims.
2 appointments on Rs. 500—700 ..	2	..	..
2 appointments on Rs. 350—450 ..	2	..	..
16 appointments on Rs. 250—350 ..	14	2	..
129 appointments on Rs. 80—250 ..	120	3	6
2 appointments on Rs. 150—200 ..	2	..	..
58 appointments on Rs. 50—140 ..	43	1	14
TOTAL 209	183	6	20

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Do not the figures stated by the Honourable Member show that the directions given by the Government of India are not carried out by the Department ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The answer is in the negative. I am afraid the Honourable Member was not listening when I replied to the main question. In reply to part (b) I said that three fresh candidates were taken, of whom one was a Muslim.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE CENTRAL PRINTING OFFICE.

972. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) How many appointments have been newly created in the superior ministerial establishment of the Central Printing Office on account of the recent organisation in April last ?

(b) Of the above how many appointments and in what grades have been offered to such Muslims, Hindus and Christians who were not already serving in that office ?

(c) Do Government recognise the principle of employing members of the minority communities in their services ? If so, why was this opportunity not availed of to avoid the preponderance of Hindus by recruiting more Muslims who are in a hopeless minority in the said office, as stated by the Honourable Member in reply to my starred question No. 905 (d), dated 14th March, 1927 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra :

(a)	Superintendents	Two
	Assistants	Five
	Clerks	Eight.
(d)	Muslims	One Assistant and one clerk.
	Hindu	One clerk.
	Christian	One Superintendent and one clerk.

(c) The desirability of preventing an undue preponderance of any community is kept in view and as the figures I have just given indicated, only one out of the five new appointments was offered to a Hindu.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member has in his answer to question No. 971 admitted the fact that he has not in his Department a sufficient number of Muhammadans, do Government propose now, for the benefit of the country and in the interests of the Department, to give effect to the rule of 33 per cent. of the appointments being given to the Muhammadans, which was declared by His Excellency the Viceroy in December 1925 ?

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER, PRINTING, STATIONERY AND STAMPS.

973. Mr. Abdul Haye : In view of the fact that there is no Muslim employed in the office of the Controller, Printing, Stationery and Stamps, as stated by the Honourable Member in reply to my starred question No. 905 (a) (i), dated 14th March, 1927, are Government prepared to issue instructions to take the earliest opportunity to recruit Muslims when fresh vacancies occur in future ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Controller of Printing, Stationery and Stamps is already aware of the policy of Government in the matter of the appointment of members of minority communities in public offices and will give due consideration to the claims of qualified Muslims along with those of other minority communities as yet unrepresented in his office, if and when an opportunity for fresh recruitment arises.

QUALIFICATIONS, LENGTH OF SERVICE, PAY, ETC., OF EACH MEMBER OF THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, DELHI.

974. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the names, qualifications, length of service, pay and scale of pay of each member of the clerical establishment in the Government of India Press, Delhi, as it stood on the 31st March, 1927 and on the 1st August, 1927 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the rules and principles on which the promotion of the staff has been granted in the revision of pay introduced from the 1st of April, 1927 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The answer is in the negative. The compilation of such a statement would require an amount of clerical labour and expense disproportionate to its value.

(b) The promotions were made with due regard to seniority consistently with efficiency.

DISCONTENT AMONG THE MUSLIM EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, DELHI.

975. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that great discontent is prevailing among the Muslim employees of the Delhi Press for want of their representation in the higher scales, viz., Assistant Manager, Head Assistant and Accountant ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, are Government prepared to take necessary steps to remove such discontent ?

(c) Is it a fact that out of four posts recently created in the scale of Rs. 80—140 none has been offered to any Muslim ?

(d) If the answer to part (c) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether no Muslim possessing the qualifications necessary for the discharge of the duties of those posts was available from inside or ouside the Press or from other Government Presses ?

(e) Was the advertisement inviting applications for those posts published in the leading newspapers of all communities ? If not, why ? Will the Government please state the names of the papers in which the advertisement (if any) was published ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Does not arise. In any case it is not the policy of Government in making promotions from one grade to another within the authorised establishment of an office or a service to give any special consideration to the question of communal representation in each grade.

(c) Yes.

(d) No Muslim possessing the necessary qualifications was available in the Government of India Press, Delhi, and none of the eight Muslims who applied from outside possessed the necessary qualifications.

(e) The advertisement inviting applications for the posts was published in the Pioneer, the Civil and Military Gazette and the Hindustan Times papers which were believed to have a wide circulation among members of the various communities at or about Delhi.

PERSONNEL OF THE PRESENT GOVERNING BODY OF THE LADY HARDINGE COLLEGE.

976. Sir Hari Singh Gour : 1. (a) Will the Government be pleased to give the personnel of the present Governing Body of the Lady Hardinge College including the office bearers ?

(b) Is there any vacancy in the Governing Body ?

(c) If so, since how long ?

(d) How many meetings of the Governing Body were held in the course of the last 12 months and how often do they meet ?

2. (a) With reference to the speeches made by some of the Honourable Members on the Resolution on the 5th March 1925 criticising the management and affairs of the Institution, will the Government be pleased to state what remedial measures have been taken to improve the affairs of the Institution and with what result ?

(b) If not, why not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : 1. (a) A statement showing the present personnel of the Governing Body of the Lady Hardinge Medical College has been placed in the Library.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) Three meetings were held during the last 12 months. Ordinarily only two meetings are held in a year.

2. (a) Seven additional members have been added to the Governing Body, namely,

(a) three members of the Indian Legislature ;

(b) one prominent businessman of Delhi ;

(c) one prominent Indian resident of Delhi ;

(d) one Medical officer, Delhi ; and (e) one prominent Indian lady of Delhi.

For the expeditious despatch of business a sub-committee of the Governing Body has been formed and meets once a month.

(b) Does not arise.

Appointment of Qualified Indian Ladies to the Superior Staff of the Lady Hardinge Medical College and Hospital.

977. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) With reference to the Government reply given in February 1924 undertaking to give preference to Indian lady candidates duly qualified for any post falling vacant on the superior staff of the Lady Hardinge Medical College and Hospital, will the Government be pleased to state the number of vacancies since occurring and the appointments made thereto ?

(b) How many applications were received ; how many of them were from Indian ladies and why were Indian ladies not appointed to those vacancies ?

(c) Is it a fact that the post of a Nursing Superintendent on the superior staff of the Institution has fallen vacant ? If so, are Government prepared to see that an Indian lady duly qualified is appointed thereto ?

Charges to Patients and their Relatives by the Lady Hardinge Hospital, Delhi.

978. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Is it a fact that on the celebration of the foundation day of the Lady Hardinge Medical College and Hospital in March last the Principal announced that about Rs. 25,000 was the year's income from the Hospital alone ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Institution charges patients or their relations for consultation and operation even during hospital hours and that such charges range from Rs. 5 to 200 per operation ?

(c) Is it a fact that charges are made even for the use of Serai cubicles depriving guardians of poor patients of their right to use the Serai free of charge ?

(d) Is it a fact that this Institution was mainly founded by contributions received from the Indian people with a view to afford facilities for medical aid to Indians of all ranks, especially the poor ?

(e) When were the rules relating to charges made and were any Indians on the Governing Body at that time ?

(f) Do Government intend to see that these rules are once more placed before the Governing Body when the Indian members in their full strength are present to consider them ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to Questions Nos. 977 and 978 together. The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member when received. As regards both these questions I should like to point out that the affairs of the Lady Hardinge Medical College, including appointments to the staff, are dealt with by the Governing Body and not by the Government of India.

AUDIT OF THE ACCOUNTS OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL BY A GOVERNMENT AUDITOR.

979 Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Is it a fact that the audit of the accounts of the Lady Hardinge Medical College and Hospital are made only by Chartered Accountants and not by the Government Auditor ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Government contributes about 3 lakhs of rupees towards its annual expenditure, and do Government intend to see that the accounts of the College are audited by a Government Auditor ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Institution prepares and publishes only a quinquennium report ?

(d) If so, are the Government prepared to see that an independent annual report of the Institution is published ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Lala Duni Chand's question No. 882 on 19th February, 1926.

(c) A short report is also issued annually as part of the annual report of the Countess of Dufferin's Fund.

(d) Does not arise.

TERMS AND TENURE OF APPOINTMENTS OF THE PRINCIPAL AND BURSAR OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL.

980. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what are the terms and tenure of the Principal and Bursar of the Lady Hardinge Medical College and Hospital ?

(b) For how long have the present Principal and Bursar been in charge of their present posts ?

(c) Is there any rule limiting their tenure to a certain number of years ? If not, are Government prepared to consider the advisability of limiting it to a number of years ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Principal is a member of the Women's Medical Service and receives from the College an allowance of Rs. 400 a month for her duties as Principal and a teaching allowance of Rs. 250 a month as Professor of Obstetrics. The Bursar is employed on a contract of 4 years, which is renewable at the discretion of the Governing Body. The pay of the present Bursar is Rs. 700 a month. The tenure of the posts of Principal and Bursar is not fixed.

(b) The Principal and the Bursar have been in charge of their posts from 9th September, 1921 and 7th September, 1918, respectively.

(c) No. The matter is primarily the concern of the Governing Body.

EMPLOYMENT OF ITS GRADUATES BY THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

981. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many lady graduates the Lady Hardinge Medical College has turned out since its institution and what facilities are offered to them for employment in the Institution itself ?

(b) Has any scale of pay been fixed for the recruitment of such graduates in the Institution ?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to place on the table a statement on the subject ?

EMPLOYMENT OF GRADUATES OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE BY COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN'S FUND.

982. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Is it a fact that no scale of pay for the recruitment of graduates of the Lady Hardinge College has been fixed by the Dufferin Fund for employment in the Institutions maintained by that Fund ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the negative, are Government prepared to see that graduates of this College are given facilities for employment by that Fund ?

(c) How many applications for admission to the College were refused during the last two or three years and on what grounds ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I will reply to questions Nos. 981 and 982 together, Sir. The information asked for is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member when received.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Will the Honourable Member kindly consider the desirability of placing the information on the table seeing that it affects a large number of people other than the questioner himself ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am not sure whether the House is interested sufficiently in the details of the internal administration of the College. But if it is the wish of the House, I shall certainly consider the suggestion to place the information on the table of the House.

THE COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN'S FUND.

983. *Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Dufferin Fund was instituted with a view to afford medical aid to the women of India by medical women ?

(b) Is it a fact that for this purpose medical women have since been recruited ?

(c) Is it a fact that Government makes an annual contribution of about Rs. 4 lakhs towards this Fund ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the amount of money invested by this Fund in Government or other securities ? What is its annual income therefrom ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Dufferin Fund does not yet fully meet the requirements of medical aid in the country ?

(f) Are Government prepared to revise their scheme of operations with a view to make this Fund more widely useful and better fulfil the aims and objects for which this Fund was instituted ?

(g) How many European medical women and how many Indian medical women are employed by this Fund ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The exact amount of the annual grant is Rs. 3,70,000.

(d) The Honourable Member is referred to the report of the Association for the year 1926, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

(e) Yes.

(f) As the Honourable Member is aware Medical Administration is a provincial transferred subject and it is for Provincial Governments to consider how the activities of the Association can best be extended.

(g) Of the 44 officers of the Women's Medical Service, maintained by the Countess of Dufferin's Fund, there were 24 Europeans domiciled, and 20 Indians domiciled, on the 31st December, 1926.

EMPLOYMENT OF THE INDIAN GRADUATES OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE BY THE COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN'S FUND.

984. *Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Is it a fact that one of the main objects in instituting the Lady Hardinge College was to provide for the graduation in Medicine of Indian women so that they may be employed by the Dufferin Fund and thus restrict the importation of outside medical women ?

(b) Is it a fact that in instituting the Lady Hardinge College the view of the founders and donors was that Indian women should be qualified so that they may render medical assistance to their own country women by being employed by the Dufferin Fund ?

(c) If the answer, to parts (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, how far have those objects been attained and promoted and what facilities have Government given to Indian graduates of the Lady Hardinge College to employ them in Dufferin Fund Institutions ; and if not why not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). The main object of the founders of the College was to provide for the training in medicine of Indian women so that they may render medical assistance to their own country women through, as well as outside, the Women's Medical Service. It was no part of the policy of the founders to prohibit the employment of doctors from outside India except in so far as the supply of trained doctors from the College reduced the need for resort to outside sources.

(c) Government have asked for information as to the number of medical graduates turned out by the Lady Hardinge Medical College and the number now employed under the Countess of Dufferin's Fund and Local Governments, and will supply it to the Honourable Member when received. The Government of India do not make appointments to the Women's Medical Service maintained by the Countess of Dufferin's Fund, and cannot, therefore, undertake to provide facilities for the graduates of the College to join that Service.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Will the Honourable Member kindly lay the information on the table as soon as it is received, instead of supplying it to the Member ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I shall place the statement in the Library of the House, and I think that will meet the requirements of the Honourable Member.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : No, Sir. What we really want is that the public should know as to how far graduates of this college receive patronage at the hands of the Government

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Very well. I shall consider the suggestion. It will all depend on the size of the statement which we have called for.

Enquiries by the Royal Commission on Agriculture into the Agricultural Resources of Ajmer-Merwara.

985. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Will Government be pleased to state if the Royal Commission on Agriculture will make any inquiries into the agricultural resources of Ajmer-Merwara in view of the frequency of famines and years of scarcity in that province ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The Commission will enquire into agricultural conditions generally throughout British India including Ajmer-Merwara.

Issue of Instructions to the Director of Public Information to fill Future Vacancies in his Office by Mussalmans.

986. Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : Will Government be pleased to state if any instructions have been issued to the Director of Public Information asking him to fill up all the future vacancies in his office only by Mussalmans ? If the reply be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to lay the said letter on the table and state their reasons for issuing it ?

The Honurable Mr. J. Crerar : As a temporary measure orders of this nature were issued in September 1925 in view of the fact that there were no Muslims in the office. The orders were superseded in February 1926 by the general orders relating to representation of minority communities, which apply to all offices of the Government of India Secretariat.

MURDER OF SWAMI SHARDHANAND THE RESULT OF AN ORGANISED CONSPIRACY.

987. *Mr. Siddheswar Sinha :(a) Is it a fact that police officers investigating the murder case of Swami Shradhanand were supplied with certain documents supporting the allegation that the said murder was the result of an organised conspiracy ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state what use was made of the said documents ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to publish them ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Certain documents were furnished to the police officers investigating the case.

(b) After careful examination it was found that they afforded no ground for suspecting the existence of an organised conspiracy.

(c) Government do not propose to publish the papers.

†988.*

STOPPAGE OF MAIL TRAINS OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY AT SOMPETA IN THE GANJAM DISTRICT.

989. *Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is it a fact that the people of Sompeta in the District of Ganjam in the Presidency of Madras made a representation, supported by the District and Divisional officers of Government, to the Bengal-Nagpur Railway authorities, that in view of the commercial importance of Sompeta and by reason of the location of civil and criminal courts and the Government Sub-Treasury, the mail trains be stopped there for a short time and the railway authorities declined to accede to their representations ? Have any steps been taken in the matter ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have received no intimation, except that given in the Honourable Member's question, of any such representation, but have sent a copy of his question to the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway. They cannot themselves undertake to interfere in time-table arrangements.

EXEMPTION FROM INCOME-TAX OF THE INCOME FROM THE AHMEDABAD MILLS TILAK SWARAJ FUND USED FOR CHARITABLE EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES.

990. *Sir Victor Sassoon : Is it a fact that exemption from income-tax has not been granted under section 4 (3) (ii) of the Income-tax Act in respect of the income from the Ahmedabad Mills Tilak Swaraj Fund which is used for charitable educational purposes ? If so will Government be pleased to enquire and state the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government are calling for a report whether the Income-tax Officer has passed an order such as is described and, if so, whether an appeal has been made to the Assistant † Not put at the meeting, but the question and answer thereto will be found at pages 4282—83 of these proceedings.

Commissioner and disposed of. If and when it is ascertained that the Income-tax Officer has passed such an order and that it has been upheld by the Assistant Commissioner the Government will call for a report as to the reasons for such decision, and communicate the result to the Honourable Member.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Are Government aware that the Income-tax Officer at Ahmedabad, in investigating the claims, insisted on being informed as to what sort of education was being given at the free day and night schools run by the Labour Union, and asked that the subjects taught should be mentioned in detail ? Further, that a list of books prescribed for each school of the free day and night schools was to be forwarded to the Income-tax office ; that subsequently a teacher of the school was asked to be sent to the office.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must not put several questions all at once.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I can at once say that the answer to all is in the negative. (Laughter.)

Sir Victor Sassoon : Will the Honourable Member take steps to see that inquisitorial methods should not be continued ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That is a hypothetical question.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member kindly enquire if the allegations in the supplementary question are true ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have undertaken to call for a report.

Mr. B. Das : On the point referred to by Sir Victor Sassoon ?

CHECKING OF ILLICIT TRAVELLING ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

991. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that various measures are under trial to eradicate the evil of illicit travelling on Indian Railways, and that as a result, on the North-Western Railway the Divisional and Audit Travelling Ticket Examiners were amalgamated in 1926 and put under special Travelling Ticket Examiners, whose posts were specially created for supervision, regulation and control of Travelling Ticket Examiners' activities ?

(b) Is it a fact that in view of the higher class of work required of these special Travelling Ticket Examiners, selection was made by an examination held by a Senior European officer of the Indian Finance Department ?

(c) Will Government please state if this new measure has proved successful in checking illicit travelling ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) It is a little too early to say yet.

GRANT OF HONORARY KING'S COMMISSIONS TO SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

992. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will Government please state what is the total number of sub-assistant surgeons serving at present in the Indian Medical Department ?

(b) Will Government please state how many sub-assistant surgeons of this Department, who are on the effective list, hold honorary King's commissions ?

(c) Is it a fact that according to Army Instructions these sub-assistant surgeons are to be awarded honorary King's commissions at the rate of 1 per cent. of the total strength of the military cadre ?

(d) Is it a fact that vacancies in these commisions are not filled as usual on transfer to the pension establishment but on the death of the previous holder of the commission ?

(e) If the answer to part (d) be in the affirmative, will Government please state if this method of filling vacancies on death is at present adopted by Government in any Department other than the I. M. D. ?

(f) While granting these commissions at the rate of 1 per cent. of the strength of the military cadre, do Government take into consideration only the strength which is on the effective list or does it also include those who have been transferred to the pension establishment ?

(g) Have Government ever granted such honorary commissions to a sub-assistant surgeon of the I. M. D. who was on the pension establishment ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) 891.

(b) Four officers on the effective list hold honorary King's Commissions. The balance to make up the required percentage are at present on the retired list.

(c) Yes ; the proportion of one per cent. is fixed on the total strength of the active list, including sub-assistant surgeons in civil employ.

(d) The practice in the past has been as stated by the Honourable Member, but vacancies will in future be caused by retirements and steps are being taken to make 5 promotions against the 5 retired officers who now hold honorary King's commissions.

(e) Does not arise.

(f) Only the effective strength is now taken into account.

(g) When the scheme was first introduced the claims of certain pensioners were considered and a number of pensioners were included in the original awards. Only sub-assistant surgeons on the active list are now eligible.

ADEQUATE REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN DEPARTMENTS AND OFFICES SUBORDINATE TO THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

993. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) With reference to the Honourable the Finance Member's reply to my questions Nos. 896—900, 903, 910, and 911 on 14th March, 1927, will Government be pleased to state the date on which the instructions regarding adequate representation of Muslims and other minorities in Government offices (alluded to by the Honourable Sir Charles Innes on the 27th January, 1927 in his reply to Maulvi Mohammad Yaqub's unstarred question No. 3) were issued by the Honourable the Finance Member to the Heads of Departments and officers subordinate to the Finance Department (Civil and Military) ?

(b) Do those instructions relate to the fresh recruitments in all grades of services in the offices subordinate to the Finance Department ?

(c) Do those instructions govern the cases of (i) recruitment in temporary posts and (ii) promotion from the lower to the higher grades ? If not why ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the total number of appointments made in the permanent and temporary vacancies as well as promotions given from the lower to the upper grades during the period from the date of issue of Government instructions referred to above, to 31st July, 1927, separately in each grade and in each office subordinate to the Finance Department and how many of such vacancies have been filled by Muslims in each grade and in each office by direct recruitment or promotion as the case may be during the period in question ?

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE MILITARY TEST AUDIT DEPARTMENT.

994. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will Government please state the date on which the reorganization of the Military Test Audit Department was sanctioned and the number of officers, accountants and clerks at present employed therein ?

(b) What is the number of men who were not before in Government service who have been recruited to these appointments ?

(c) What is the number of Muslims appointed to each of these ?

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE INDIAN ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT SERVICE AND THE SUPERIOR SERVICE OF THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

995. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that several posts in the Indian Accounts and Audit Service and superior service of the Military Accounts Department are filled in annually by selections from the Assistant Accounts Officers, etc. ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government state the number of appointments thus made and the number of Muslims thus promoted during the period from the date of introduction initiating the above system of promotion to the 15th August, 1927 ?

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS AS ASSISTANT ACCOUNTS OFFICERS, ETC.

996. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that a certain percentage of vacancies in the appointments of Assistant Accounts Officers and gazetted ranks of the Sub-Accounts Service of the Military Accounts Department is filled in by promotion of qualified officials by selection ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the total number of such appointments between the date of introduction of such scheme and the 31st July, 1927, and the number of Muslims appointed to these posts ?

PAUCITY OF MUSLIMS IN THE SUPERVISING STAFF OF THE SUBORDINATE ACCOUNTS SERVICE AND IN GAZETTED APPOINTMENTS.

997. *Mr. Abdul Haye : Are Government aware of the fact that great discontent and disappointment is prevailing among the Muslim employees in the offices subordinate to the Finance Department on account of the treatment meted out to them in the matter of promotions owing to the paucity of Muslims in the supervising staff, S. A. S., and gazetted appointments ?

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS TO NEW POSTS IN THE SUBORDINATE ACCOUNTS AND CLERICAL SERVICES IN THE OFFICES OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL AND THE ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, CENTRAL REVENUES.

998. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that a number of new posts in the Sub-Accounts and clerical services has been sanctioned by Government for the offices of the Auditor General and the Accountant General, Central Revenues ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the claims of the Muslim community will be duly considered in filling up those posts in the light of the Government instructions alluded to by the Honourable Sir Charles Innes in his reply to Maulvi Muhammad Yakub's unstarred question No. 3 on the 27th January, 1927 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I propose to reply to questions Nos. 993 to 998 together. I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 24th of last month to Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim's question No. 244. General instructions regarding the measures to be adopted for securing adequate representation of minority communities in Government offices were issued in February 1926 and these were immediately communicated by the Finance Department to the heads of departments and offices under it. The instructions were intended to be applied to all future recruitment, but not to departmental promotions, which must always be regulated by considerations of seniority and merit. No useful purpose would, therefore, be served by collecting the detailed information asked for by the Honourable Member regarding the appointments made by promotion. With regard to appointments made by direct recruitment, considerable trouble would be involved in collecting particulars and these cannot afford useful information until the instructions have been in force for some time longer.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Have the Government ever enquired what effect was given to the instructions issued, or collected any statistics to show what action has been taken on the instructions issued by them ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That is a general question which I think should be addressed to my Honourable colleague the Home Member and probably put down ; but I can say that the Members of Government are constantly watching the effect of those instructions on the offices in their particular charge.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do I understand the Honourable the Finance Member to say that he has issued a circular to his Departments bringing to their notice that 33 per cent. of Muhammadans should be appointed according to the declaration made by His Excellency the Viceroy in December 1925, or does he mean only the instructions given to some of his head officers to act upon what he said in his instructions on the 2nd February 1926, as he has stated himself ? Which is correct, the former or the latter or both ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I gather, the Honourable Member's question is, does he understand something ? I am afraid I cannot answer him.

ADEQUATE REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE INDIAN STORES DEPARTMENT.

999 Mr. Abdul Haye : With reference to reply given on the 14th March, 1927, by Government to my starred question No. 907, will Government be pleased to state whether any steps have since been taken by Government to make adequate representation of Muslims in the Indian Stores Department ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The claims of minority communities are always prominently kept in view in making selections for gazetted appointments in the Indian Stores Department.

Since the Honourable Member's question No. 907 was answered in March last three outsiders have been selected in India for appointment to gazetted posts in the Indian Stores Department. One of these three is a Muslim who was declared by the Public Service Commission to be qualified for the appointment offered to him.

REVISION OF THE POSTAL AND TELEGRAPH CODES.

1000. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) With reference to Government reply on the 14th March, 1927, to my starred question No. 902, regarding the revision of the Postal and Telegraph Codes, will Government be pleased to furnish the information asked for in sub-clauses (d), (e), (f), (i) and (j) of the question No. 902 separately for the work entrusted to the staff under Mr. S. P. Verma, and Messrs. P. N. Mitra and B. B. Bhattacharjee, reviewing the situation as it stood on the 28th February, 1927, and on 31st July, 1927, respectively ?

(b) Are the three officials named above solely employed for the Code Work or are they required to do some other work as well ?

(c) Have Mr. S. P. Verma and the staff under him previous experience of the executive or audit side of the Posts and Telegraph Department ?

(d) What will be the probable cost of compilation of the Codes and by what date is the work to be completed ?

(e) Has any such costly Code ever been compiled by the Government ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

SAFEGUARDING OF THE INTERESTS OF MUSLIMS IN THE CENTRAL OFFICE OF THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

1001. Mr. Abdul Haye : 1. (a) Will Government kindly lay on the table a statement showing the number of Hindu, Muslim and Christian clerks in the Copying, Personnel, Operating, Way and Works, Commercial, Rates and Outstanding Branches of the Headquarters office of North Western Railway ?

(b) What action, if any, do Government propose to take to safeguard the Muslim interests in the Central Office of the North Western Railway ?

(a) Is it a fact that the number of Muslim clerks in the Personnel Branch of the Headquarters Office is on the decrease ever since the amalgamation ?

(b) What was the number of Muslims in this Branch before amalgamation and what is it now ?

(c) Is it a fact that not a single Muslim has been recruited in this Branch since January, 1925, whereas almost every vacancy, temporary or permanent, has been filled up by Hindus ?

(d) Will Government please state the number of Hindu clerks recruited since January, 1925 ?

(e) Is it a fact that two clerks coming from Multan side, who are still temporary in class II, have been given officiating chances in class III thereby depriving a confirmed senior Muslim clerk in class II ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I propose, with your permission, Sir, to answer questions Nos. 1001, 1003, 1006 and 1009 together. The information in the possession of Government with regard to communal representation on the North Western Railway will be found in Appendix F in Volume I and Appendix C in Volume II of the Report on Indian Railways for 1925-26, a copy of which is in the Library. The statistics were formulated in this form after consultation with, and acceptance by, the Central Advisory Council for Railways, and Government do not consider it desirable to supplement them by details regarding individual offices. The policy of the Government of India regarding the representation of minority communities was communicated to the North Western Railway Administration as to other Railway Administrations, and Government have no reason to believe that it is not being carried out by them.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : A supplementary question, Sir. Have the Government any reason to believe that these directions have been complied with ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They have no reason to believe that they have not been complied with.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : On a point of order, Sir. Before questions Nos. 1002 (a) and 1012 (d) are put, I would like to have a ruling from the Chair whether they are matters of public concern as described in Rule 14 (1) ?

Mr. President : If they did not relate to matters of public concern, they would not have been admitted.

SUPERSESSION OF MUSLIM BY HINDU CLERKS IN THE HEADQUARTERS OFFICE OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

002. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that Uma Chand is closely related to the Superintendent in charge of Establishments at the Headquarters Office of the North Western Railway, and that he has been given class IV superseding many Muslims senior to him ?

(b) Is it a fact that all the clerks employed with the Retrenching Officer are Hindus and one of them has been given class IV in preference to a senior better qualified Muslim clerk ?

(c) Is it a fact that not a single Muslim clerk in the Personnel Branch of Headquarters' Office is in class IV, the only Muslim in that class having been transferred and replaced by a Hindu clerk on the same pay ?

(d) Will Government please state the number of Hindu and Muslim clerks in all branches of the Headquarters Office, as it stood at the time of amalgamation, and as it stands at present ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information.

RECRUITMENT OF MINORITY COMMUNITIES IN THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE HEADQUARTERS OFFICE OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

†1003. Mr. Abdul Haye : Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of asking those responsible for the recruitment of the staff in the clerical establishment of the Headquarters Office of the North-Western Railway to abide by the instructions contained in the Government of India, Home Department Memorandum No. F.-176|25-Ests., dated 5th February, 1926, regarding the recruitment of minority communities ?

SELECTION OF A HINDU FOR THE POST OF JUNIOR INSTRUCTOR AT LYALLPUR, THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1004. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that a competitive examination of booking clerks from all North Western Railway Divisions was held in the beginning of July last to select candidates for the Junior Instructor's post at Lyallpur ?

(b) Is it a fact that a Muslim who stood first in that test was not appointed to the post because he was drawing Rs. 60 per mensem and that it was not considered desirable to give him Rs. 150 per mensem ?

(c) Will Government please state the original pay at the time of selection of the Hindu candidate selected for the appointment in Lyallpur School ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Enquiry is being made and I will let the Honourable Member know the result.

PROMOTION OF A MADRASI CLERK OF THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF AUDITOR, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1005. Mr. Abdul Haye : Is it a fact that a Madrasi clerk of the Chief Auditor's office drawing Rs. 68 per mensem with only a year's service has been given Rs. 140 in the Agent's Office of the North Western Railway ? If so, will Government state the reason ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information. The matter is entirely at the discretion of the Agent and there is no reason to believe that in filling up the appointment he did not satisfy himself that the nominee was fully qualified for the duties.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, will you permit me to put my question No. 988 ?

---

† For answer to this question see answer to question No. 1001.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member just disappeared when the question was about to be called. I cannot permit him to put it now.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I was going to look up a reference necessary for that purpose.

Mr. President : Order, order.

HINDU AND MUSLIM CLERKS IN THE PERSONNEL BRANCHES OF DIVISIONAL OFFICERS ON THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

†1006. Mr. Abdul Haye : Will Government please state separately the number of Hindu and Muslim clerks together with their pay and period of service in the Personnel Branches of Divisional Officers on the North Western Railway ?

EMPLOYMENT OF AN OUTSIDER AS SUPERINTENDENT, COMMERCIAL BRANCH, OF THE HEADQUARTERS OFFICE OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1007. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that the post of the Superintendent, Commercial Branch of the Headquarters Office of the North Western Railway, which is about to fall vacant is to be filled by an outsider ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will the Government please state what are the educational qualifications of this outsider to fill the vacancy, and what is his previous experience in the Commercial Branch ?

(c) Was due consideration given to the claims of the deserving senior Muslim clerks ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information, and are not prepared to interfere with the discretion of the Agent in the matter.

MUSLIM TRAFFIC INSPECTORS AND JUNIOR ASSISTANT OFFICERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1008. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that there is not a single Muslim Traffic Inspector on the whole North Western Railway whereas there are many Hindu Traffic Inspectors ?

(b) Is it a fact that three posts of Junior Assistant Officers on the North Western Railway have been recently given to Hindus and none to Muslims ?

(c) Are Government prepared to enlist successful Muslims for similar appointments until communal inequalities are removed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am making enquiries and will communicate with the Honourable Member.

MUSLIM AND HINDU CLERKS IN THE OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICER, PERMANENT WAY BRANCH, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

†1009. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will Government please state the present number of Muslim and Hindu clerks in the office of the Executive Engineer, Permanent Way Branch, North-Western Railway, Lahore ?

† For answer to this question see answer to question No. 1001.

(b) Is it a fact that the five new vacancies in this office were filled up by Hindus only and not a single Muslim was taken ?

EDUCATIONAL QUALIFICATIONS OF B. BAHADUR SINGH AND OTHER SPECIAL TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1010. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will Government please state the educational qualifications of B. Bahadur Singh and other Special T. T. Es. of the North-Western Railway ?

(b) Is it a fact that B. Bahadur Singh was selected Special T. T. E. when he was getting Rs. 150 per mensem ?

(c) What was his relative position as regards seniority at the time ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government understand that one is a graduate and two have passed the Matriculation Examination, the gentleman mentioned not being one of them.

(b) Yes.

(c) He was selected in preference to seven seniors.

HINDU AND MUSLIM CLERKS IN THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

1011. Mr. Abdul Haye : 1. Will Government please state the number of Hindu and Muslim clerks with their respective educational qualifications, period of service, if any, and pay they draw, who have been recruited to the Railway Clearing Accounts Office, by :

(a) transfer from the Chief Auditor's Office ; and (b) fresh appointment ?

2. Will Government please state the number of Hindu and Muslim clerks who have been taken in the upper grade in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office ?

3. How many Hindus and how many Muslims have been taken as accountants without passing the examination ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The compilation of the information for which the Honourable Member asks would involve a great deal of trouble which Government are not prepared to impose on the authorities concerned.

STARTING SALARIES FOR GRADUATES AND MATRICULATES IN THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE OFFICE OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY AT LAHORE.

1012. Mr. Abul Haye : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what are the starting salaries for graduates and matriculates in the clerical establishment of the North Western Railway offices at Lahore ?

(b) Is it a fact that Prem Chand, B.A., who was appointed on Rs. 80, is now drawing Rs. 130 per mensem with less than a year's service ?

(c) Is it a fact that one Jagdish Lal, who is only a matriculate, was appointed on Rs. 80 direct ?

(d) Is it a fact that Kanshi Ram, who is an F. A., was appointed direct on Rs. 100 and is now getting Rs. 150 although he has not a year's service at his credit ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I am not aware whether there is any special rule or practice laying down starting salaries for graduates and matriculates in the clerical establishment of the North Western Railway offices at Lahore, but I am making enquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

(b), (c) and (d). The matter is entirely at the discretion of the Agent and Government are not prepared to interfere with that discretion.

INADEQUATE REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF AUDITOR OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1013. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that of the 16 senior accountants in the grade of Rs. 270—20—450 in the Chief Auditor's Office of the North Western Railway at Lahore, no one is a Muslim ?

(b) Is it a fact that there are only two Muslim junior accountants as compared with 20 Hindus ?

(c) Is it a fact that there are three Muslim accountants in lieu of clerks as compared with 18 Hindus (in the grade 80—10—250—20—270) ?

(d) Is it a fact that there is one Muslim I.C.G. in grade I as compared with 4 Hindus and 8 Muslim I. C. G.'s in grade II as compared with 27 Hindus ?

(e) Is it a fact that there are three Muslim stock verifiers as compared with 12 Hindus ?

(f) If the above facts are correct, do Government intend to redress the grievances of the Muslims as regards inadequate representation ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would refer the Honourable Member to the last sentence of the reply just given to his questions Nos. 993 to 998.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The Honourable Member says he has answered this question in his answer to questions Nos. 993 to 998. But if Members of the Assembly are not satisfied with the action taken by the Agent of the Railway, do Government propose, for the benefit of the country.....

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I suggest that it would be for the benefit of the country if the Honourable Member understands what is said before he puts questions. I was not talking about Agents of Railways but about the Auditor's Office at Lahore—a different matter.

REMOVAL OF STATE PRISONERS AND DETENUS IN BURMA TO THE MARY'S SCHOOL BUILDINGS AT MANDALAY.

1014. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of Burma on the suggestions of the Superintendent of Jail, Deputy Commissioner of Mandalay and of official and non-official visitors recommended to the Government of India that State prisoners and detenus confined in different Jails in Burma should be removed and lodged together in Mary's School buildings at Mandalay which have been purchased by the Burma Government ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Government of India also approved of the scheme subject to a Bengal Government official visiting and approving the site ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Lowman was sent to Mandalay to see the site and then reported that it was not desirable to keep all the State prisoners and detenus together ?

(d) If the answers to the previous questions are in the affirmative and if on the above suggestion of Mr. Lowman this scheme was abandoned, will Government please explain why Mr. Lowman was sent at all to Mandalay at a considerable expense ?

(e) Is there any truth in the allegation that Mr. Lowman disapproved of the scheme only because of the altercations he had with the State prisoners in the Mandalay Jail ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) A proposal on these lines was submitted by the Government of Burma.

(b) The Government of India approved the proposal in the first instance, but subsequently modified their views.

(c) Mr. Lowman visited Mandalay, but the Government of India are not aware of the nature of his report. The decision referred to above was taken on general grounds.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) The Government of India are not aware whether Mr. Lowman reported in favour of or against the scheme.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Sir, with your permission I will ask a short notice question of which I have given notice.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Before Mr. Mehta asks his short notice question, may I, Sir, be permitted to put my question No. 988 ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member knows that his question was on and he at once disappeared when it was about to be called. It is not right that the Honourable Member should get up now and again and ask that he should be allowed to put that question. He should at least have asked the Chair before we was leaving. Mr. Jamnadas Mehta.

Construction of the Vasad-Borsad-Katana Railway.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to say whether the construction of the Vasad-Borsad-Katana Railway has been started ; if not, when do Government propose to start it ?

(b) Do Government realise that thousands of people in Gujarat have become homeless and have been otherwise ruined by recent floods ?

(c) Are Government prepared to expedite the starting of the construction work of the Vasad-Borsad-Katana and other railways in Gujarat with a view to give relief to the stricken people ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Owing to negotiations with the Baroda Durbar, from whom a final reply was only received on the 29th August, sanction has not yet been given to the construction of the Vasad-Borsad-Katana Railway, and the agreement of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Company has still to be obtained on one outstanding point. The Railway Board are, for the reasons mentioned by the Honourable Member, most anxious to start the construction of this line at the earliest possible date, and they have asked the Agent of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway to communicate the agreement of his Company on this point by telegram as quickly as he can. They propose then to instruct him to commence the construction forthwith.

The Railway Board will examine whether there are any other projects in the afflicted area which can be taken up immediately, if necessary, by advancing their place in their construction programme.

POSTPONEMENT OF THE DISCHARGE OF WORKMEN FROM THE KHARAGPUR WORKSHOPS UNTIL AFTER THE PUJA HOLIDAYS.

Diwan Chaman Lall : In view of the possibility that men discharged from the Kharagpur workshops may find it difficult to set about getting work during the Puja holidays, are Government prepared to ask the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway to postpone such discharges until the holidays are over ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I should first explain that the date chosen for the discharge of men from the Kharagpur Workshops was originally selected in the interests of the men, many of whom might be expected in the ordinary course to go to their homes during the Pujas. But the Railway Board recognise that the holidays may add to the difficulty of discharged men in finding new work immediately, and as soon as this possibility was mentioned to me by Mr. Acharya, we wrote to the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, asking him if he could arrange to give the men who are being got rid of their pay up to the end of the Pujas in addition to whatever other benefits they might be receiving. We also told him that, unless there were serious practical difficulties, we should like him to do so and that we were prepared to sanction any departure from the rules which this might occasion. We have since learnt that he has agreed. This course, I think, will be more advantageous to the men than postponing their discharge, since while getting pay up to the end of the Pujas they will be able to use the Puja holidays in search of work.

12 NOON.

With your permission, Sir, I should like to supplement this reply by apprising Honourable Members of the latest information which I have received of the position at Kharagpur. It is contained in a telegram which the Railway Board received yesterday from the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway—the telegram being dated the 11th September. The telegram runs as follows :

"Last two days Kharagpur shop men have turned out but have done no work adopting a policy of passive resistance. On the other hand there have been isolated cases of intimidation and assaults on subordinate supervising staff. At Labour Union mass meeting yesterday (Saturday) leaders recommended continuance of policy of passive resistance, that is, all men surging up to shops but not working. In opinion of District Magistrate and Cole (Mr. Cole is the Chief Mechanical Engineer of the Railway) feeling of tension great and growing. Cole considers shops should be closed as, if men remain idle and tension grows, serious disturbances in shops will take place resulting in probable serious damage to property. If shops remain open and serious disturbances occur inside, which District Magistrate thinks probable, he cannot guarantee protection of person or property. He considers that if shops close he will be better able to control probable outbreaks. Have discussed matter fully with the District Magistrate and Cole and I agree that closing of shops is the lesser evil as likely to lead to less trouble and in view of situation now arisen have decided to close shops till situation clears."

The date on which the shops were closed is not mentioned in this telegram ; but I understand from another telegram received by the Railway Board from an official of the Labour Union, that they were closed on the 12th September :

"On September 16th arrangements are being made to pay men their August wages, settlement of all men on reduction commencing the following day. All men down for discharge will be paid up to the end of the Puja holidays, viz., 11th October—vide my letter of yesterday's date. I am intimating that shops will be opened as soon as the men's leaders will give assurances that men are willing to work."

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask what were the reasons which led these workers to go into the workshops and adopt passive resistance ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I understand they were advised to do so by their Labour Union.

Diwan Chaman Lall : What were the grievances behind this action taken by the workmen ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am aware of no grievances except the general grievance that a reduction in the staff is being carried out.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask whether any damage was done to property in the workshops by any of these men who were not willing to work there ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not think we have received information of any damage in the workshops. As I mentioned there have been one or two cases of intimidation of which we have had notice.

QUESTIONS NOT ASKED AT THE MEETING, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONERS, AND ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

PURCHASE OF PAINTS, VARNISHES AND ENAMELS OF EUROPEAN MANUFACTURE BY THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

938. Mr. N. C. Chunder : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether a notice was advertised by the Controller of Stores, North Western Railway in the Statesman (of Calcutta) of the 23rd August, 1927, inviting sealed tenders for the supply amongst other things of paints, varnishes and enamels of European manufacture ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to explain whether European manufacture means or includes articles manufactured in India by European firms or companies ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether :

(a) Paints
(b) Varnishes
(c) Enamels
} of indigenous origin

are available ? If so, why have no tenders been invited therefor ?

(d) Are the tenderers bound to despatch samples to the office of the said Controller if so required to do ?

(e) Has the said Controller ever called for and examined samples of paints, varnishes and enamels of indigenous origin ? If so, with what result, if not, why not ?

(f) Are quotations being obtained from England for paints and varnishes ?

(g) Will Government state why quotations are not being obtained from England for enamels ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) Paints, varnishes and enamels of indigenous origin are available. Tenders, however, were not invited for these as the North Western Railway obtain their supplies of indigenous paints and varnishes through the Indian Stores Department.

(d) Yes, one of the terms of the call for tenders was that samples if required must be despatched to the office of the Controller of Stores, Moghalpura.

(e) Yes. Trials have been made with such material and as a result practically all paints and some of the varnishes are of indigenous origin. An indigenous enamel has not so far been tried which has been found suitable for the requirements of the Railway.

(f) Yes.

(g) Quotations are being obtained from England for enamels.

AMOUNT OF HONORARIUM TO BE PAID TO THE ARCHITECT OF INDIA HOUSE IN LONDON.

988. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the honorarium agreed to be paid to the architect of India House in London ?

(b) If it be a percentage on cost what will it amount to on the estimated cost ?

(c) Did Government call for designs for the building by a public advertisement ? If so, in what papers, English and Indian, were the advertisements published ? If not, why not ?

(d) What steps have the Government taken to see that India House is an example of the best type of Indian architecture ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: (a) and (b). The fee of the architect is fixed by the Royal Institute of British Architect as a percentage on the cost of the building, and the Institute's rules do not permit an architect to undertake work for less than the authorised fee. The percentage is ordinarily 6 per cent., and this would amount to about £16,500 on the estimated cost of India House.

(c) No. The design was prepared by Sir Herbert Baker, who was selected as the architect for the building. The Government of India do not consider that anything would have been gained by the procedure suggested.

(d) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to a similar question by Mr. Neogy on the 1st September.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Delay by Railways in the Disposal of Applications for Sidings by Collieries.

105. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the recommendation recorded by the Indian Coal Committee in paragraph 71 of their Report that undue time should not be taken by the Railway Administration in disposing of applications for sidings by collieries on Assisted Siding Terms, and in the eventual construction thereof after they are sanctioned ?

(b) Are Government aware that even this recommendation of the Indian Coal Committee is not being worked up to at present—that unusual time elapses (i) between the first application for siding and the decision thereon, (ii) between the decision and the preparation of plans and estimate, (iii) between the deposit of money for sub-grade work and final construction of siding and (iv) between the construction and the refund of unspent balance of the money deposited by the applicants ?

(c) Are Government aware that, in the case of the Dobary No. 3 Siding on the East Indian Railway, application was made in June 1921, was sanctioned on 5th March, 1923, and the plan and estimate were submitted on 11th March, 1924, i.e., after one year, and the cost of sub-grade work having been deposited in June 1924, the siding was actually opened for traffic in January, 1927 and the refund of the unspent amount of the deposit is still outstanding without earning any interest meanwhile, in spite of repeated reminders by the party ?

(d) Is it a fact that in 1921, the Indian Mining Federation initiated a proposal which was supported in the minute of dissent of the Indian Coal Committee, that a special machinery should be set up to consider all applications for siding from the collieries in the Bengal and Bihar coalfields ? Should the reply to the questions (b) and (c) above be generally in the affirmative, are Government prepared to accept such a proposal for setting up a special machinery ? If not, do they propose to enforce on the railways concerned the observance of a time chart indicating the maximum permissible interval between the different stages during the pendency of an application for siding till its final completion ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Government are aware that in some cases delay has occurred in the provision of sidings. In the first place, compliance with an application must sometimes be withheld until the Railway Administration is satisfied that the colliery's business has grown or will grow sufficiently large to justify the outlay by the Railway on a siding. Secondly, after a decision to build the siding is arrived at, time is often lost in reconciling the conflicting interests of various parties. Thirdly, after the money for the sub-grade work has been deposited, delay may occur in the acquisition of the land. Government have received no complaint that delay occurs after construction in refunding the unspent balance of money deposited by applicants.

(c) In the case of Dobary No. 3 siding the Railway Administration Reports that the siding was opened in September 1926, not January 1927, as stated by the Honourable Member. Government have received no representation that the balance of the deposit has not been refunded but are enquiring.

(d) Government are aware of the proposal made by the Indian Mining Federation in 1921, but cannot find any reference to it in the minute of dissent in the Indian Coal Committee's Report. Government are not prepared to adopt the proposal of the Indian Mining Federation. When delay occurs in the provision of a siding, the causes are often not under the control of the Administration. For this reason the enforcement of a time table as proposed by the Honourable Member is not considered practicable.

RENT FOR COAL DEPÔTS IN ALL THE CALCUTTA STATIONS, ETC.

106. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that rent for coal depôts are not identical in all Calcutta stations (Sealdah, Howrah, Howrah-Punjab line and Uitadingi) nor are the non-mechanical facilities the same in these stations ? If so, do Government propose to set up a permanent machinery to equalise facilities and rents among these stations with a view to fostering the trade in soft coke in the Calcutta city and suburbs ?

(b) Is it a fact that the pilferage from coal and coke wagons arriving in Sealdah is markedly higher than that with regard to the same traffic arriving in other Calcutta stations ?

(c) Is it a fact that at Sealdah the contents of coal wagons booked to non-depôt holders are allowed to remain on the railway yard without any wharfage being charged, to the greatest injury of the registered depôt holders who have to pay heavy rent for depôt spaces.

(d) Is it a fact that non-depôt holders at Sealdah are allowed to take deliveries of coal from wagons booked to them under " To Pay " system, without paying the railway freight, and is it a fact that the Eastern Bengal Railway authorities could not realise a large amount of freight owing to the latitude permitted in delivery referred to above ; if so, will Government be pleased to state the total amount that could not be realised and the amount of such outstanding as at the 15th of August, 1927 ?

(e) Is it a fact that the wagons booked to registered depôt holders at Sealdah are in many cases not placed alongside their respective depôts, but are placed sometimes a long way off the depôts ? If so, are Government prepared to ask the Eastern Bengal Railway authorities to adopt the method prevailing on the East Indian Railway system at Howrah and other Calcutta stations that wagons booked to a registered depôt are placed alongside the respective depôts and are not considered as " placed wagons " until they are so done ?

(f) Is it a fact that when wagons are placed at Sealdah coal yard no signature is obtained by the railway staff of the consignees as well as of the depôt holders noting the time of placing of such wagons ? If so, are Government prepared to enforce the practice that such signature shall be invariably taken at Sealdah at the time of placing of wagons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member on receipt.

EMPLOYMENT OF GOVERNMENT SERVANTS BY THE ROYAL TURF CLUB, CALCUTTA.

107. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many employees of the Calcutta Customs Appraisers Department and of other Government offices in Calcutta are working in the Calcutta Races Totalizator or in any other branch of the Royal Calcutta Turf Club and are receiving remuneration for such services from the said Turf Club ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to call for a list from the Royal Calcutta Turf Club of Government servants employed by the said Club in connection with the races and other duties who receive remuneration for services rendered ?

(c) Are Government employees permitted to accept such services ?

(d) Are the Government aware that instances have occurred that Appraisers of the Calcutta Custom Office, employed in race work, have left their duties as early as 12 Noon on race days (especially in the winter season when races start early) neglecting their duties inasmuch as they locked up in their drawers for days and days the customs import passes for appraisement with the regrettable consequence that the goods relating thereto incurred heavy demurrage to the great loss of the importers ? If not, are the Government prepared to enquire into the matter and inform the House of the result of their enquiry ?

(e) Do the Government propose to take steps to prohibit Government servants from accepting services elsewhere to the detriment of the public interest ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

DISMISSAL OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

108. Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : 1. Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state, if it is a fact :

(a) that railway companies reserve to themselves in their agreements with their employees a power to dismiss them on one month's notice " for any reason " whatsoever ;

(b) that such dismissals have been held to be wrongful by the subordinate Judge of Nagpur in Lenlage vs. the Great Indian Peninsula Railway decided in 1924 ;

(c) that such dismissals are a matter of frequent occurrence even now ; and

(d) that the payment of bonus is considered to be a matter of grace and favour on the part of the employees ?

2. Have Government considered the question of instructing all railway companies to alter the agreement so as to make a railway servant liable to dismissal only for proved misconduct ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : 1. (a) No provision is made in the agreements for dismissal with notice. Provision is made for termination of service on notice being given by either side ; the period of notice varies from one to six months.

(b) Government have no information.

(c) Employees are discharged under the terms of the agreement when in the interests of the Railway Administrations their services are no longer required.

(d) Presumably the Honourable Member is referring to service gratuity. If so, a gratuity is granted as a reward for good, efficient, faithful and continuous service. The grant of gratuity is at the discretion of the Railway Administrations and it cannot be claimed as a matter of right.

2. The agreements provide for dismissal for proved misconduct only. If the Honourable Member is referring to discharges under the terms of the agreement Government do not propose to alter the agreements as suggested by him.

POLICE ESCORTS FOR REMITTANCES OF GOVERNMENT TREASURE SENT BY RAILWAY.

109. Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article entitled " Safety at lonely stations " at page 3 of the issue for January 1927 of the Indian Railway Magazine ?

(b) Is it a fact that even guards of cash " carrying trains " have no police protection given to them ?

(c) Are the Government prepared to consider the advisability of allowing the use of fire-arms to all station masters and railway guards ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the article referred to.

(b) Police escorts accompany all remittances of Government treasure sent by railway except remittances of nickel, copper and bronze coin.

As regards private treasure, consignments weighing more than 54 maunds are only conveyed in owners' charge. Whether any protection is required for smaller consignments is under consideration.

With regard to railway earnings remitted by train, arrangements have been made to reduce such remittances as much as possible by payment into local treasuries. No police protection is, as a rule, given.

(c) On certain specially dangerous sections of railway, arms are given to the staff, for example on the Quetta and Rawalpindi divisions, but Government do not consider that there is any necessity to allow the use of fire-arms to all station masters and railway guards, particularly, as in many cases, such fire-arms would prove to be a greater source of danger than advantage to the person concerned.

ACCIDENTS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

110. Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article entitled " Buried alive " at page 10 of the Indian Railway Magazine in its issue for May-June 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that it is the third accident of its kind on the South Indian Railway during the last three years ?

(c) Is it a fact that as the result of a departmental enquiry an European engineer was reduced and a maistry prosecuted ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the ages of the victims and the amounts of compensation awarded to them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) to (d). Enquiries are being made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member.

ACCIDENTS DUE TO THE NON-FENCING OF RAILWAY LINES.

111. Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the two accidents mentioned at pages 129 and 130 in the July issue of the Indian Railway Magazine ?

(b) Is it a fact that a large portion of the railway line at Thirumathikunnam, the place of accident, is unfenced ?

(c) Has the Governor General in Council issued orders under section 13 of the Railways Act to have all railway lines fenced ?

(d) If so, do Government intend to take any notice of the negligence ?

(e) Are the Government prepared to take action to ensure that the members of the Local Advisory Committees should be asked to be present at all enquiries into accidents attended with loss of life ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to state if any and, if so, how much, compensation has been awarded to the victims in the aforesaid two accidents ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Such information as we have goes to show that the line is fenced at this spot, but I am making enquiries.

(c) No.

(d) I am not sure that I understand what alleged act of negligence the Honourable Member refers but, as I have said, I am enquiring whether the line is fenced at this spot.

(e) The question of the possibility of associating representatives of the public with enquiries into accidents has been carefully considered by Government, but with the advice and consent of the Central Advisory Council the proposal to provide for such association has been dropped.

(f) I will enquire whether any compensation has been paid and let the Honourable Member know. In one of the cases mentioned there seems, prima facie, no reason for any such payment.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF CLERKS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

112. Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : (a) Are the Government aware that at the last Session of the Legislative Assembly Government stated that the revision of the pay of clerks on the South Indian Railway was under contemplation ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Agent of the South Indian Railway said in answer to the deputation of the members that waited on him recently that it was not proposed to revise their salaries ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state which of these statements is correct ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (c). At the last Session of the Legislative Assembly it was stated that the question of revising the starting pay of junior clerks was under the consideration of the South Indian Railway Company. This was certainly a correct statement of fact at the time it was made.

(b) Government have no information, but will enquire

GRANT OF ALLOWANCES TO THE OFFICERS AND CLERKS OF THE TELEGRAPH OFFICE, SIMLA, MOVING WITH THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA BETWEEN SIMLA AND DELHI.

113. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the allowances that are being paid to the staff of the attached offices of the Government of India, namely, the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs and the Military Accountant General ? Are these allowances paid on the ground of the nature of work in the offices mentioned or on account of the higher cost of living in Simla and Delhi or on account of the move of the two offices with the Government of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that three-fourths of the staff of the Simla Government Telegraph Office move with the Government of India Headquarters ? If so, will Government kindly mention the number of such persons concerned and the grade they belong to ?

(c) Do not the officers and clerks of the Telegraph Office, Simla, face the same hardships as those in the two attached offices of the Government of India mentioned in part (a) above ?

(d) Are these officers and clerks of the Simla Telegraph Office paid the same allowances that are paid to the staff of the two attached offices ? If not, why not ?

(e) Do these telegraph employees receive the same treatment in regard to joining time when they move down to Delhi or up to Simla as the employees of the two attached offices ? If so, why is the distinction made in respect of the allowances and why is the Simla Allowance Code applied to the telegraph employees in one respect and not in another ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The establishment of the offices of the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs and of the Military Accountant General receive allowances under the Simla Allowance Code. These allowances are paid in consideration of the expensiveness of living in Simla and of other disadvantages to which these establishments are subject as a result of their having to move with the Government of India.

(b) Yes.

Office Superintendent	1
Telegraph Master, General Service	3
Telegraphists, General Service	28
Clerks	15
Munshies, ...	3
Time keepers	2
Compositors	6

(c) The Office Superintendent and the General Service Telegraph Masters and Telegraphists, Simla, are provided with free quarters and thus protected against excessive house-rents. With this exception the reply is in the affirmative.

(d) No. The Telegraph Office staff receive allowances specifically sanctioned for them by the Government of India. The allowances are based on the recommendations of the Telegraph Committee of 1921.

(e) No. The telegraph employees are granted joining time under the Supplementary Rules while the establishments of the Director-General's and Military Accountant General's offices are granted joining time under rule 18 of the Simla Allowances Code. The restrictions until recently imposed on the grant of joining time to the former have been removed.

The second part does not arise.

GRANT OF FREE QUARTERS OR HOUSE-RENT IN LIEU THEREOF TO THE SIGNAL ROOM CLERKS TRANSFERRED FROM OLD DELHI TO NEW DELHI.

114. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that the services of the signal room clerks of the Simla-Delhi Telegraph Offices are not transferable except on promotion ; if so, will the Government please state whether the signal room clerks transferred from Delhi Old Secretariat to New Delhi have been either provided with free quarters or house-rent allowance ? If the answer be in the negative, will Government please state if they propose now to redress their grievance by granting house-rent or free quarters ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The answer to the first part of the question is that signal room clerks are transferable from one station to another either on promotion or on revision of establishment or in the interests of discipline.

The answer to the second part is in the negative.

In respect of the third part Government do not admit that the clerks concerned have a grievance. Signal room clerks are not entitled to free quarters nor to house-rent allowance.

LONG HOURS OF WORK OF ASSISTANTS AND CLERKS EMPLOYED IN THE FINANCE AND COMMERCE DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

115. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the prescribed hours of work in the Government of India Civil Secretariat Department are generally from 10-30 A.M. to 4-30 P.M.?

(b) Is it a fact that in some of the Departments (e.g., the Finance and Commerce) assistants and clerks are generally in office much beyond the prescribed hours, i.e., up to 6 or 7 P.M. ?

(c) If the answer is in the affirmative, will Government please state what this is due to ; is it due to the fact that they have to wait till their officers leave or because the work is excessive or because the staff is insufficient ?

(d) If the reasons are not any of those specified above will the Government be pleased to state what the reasons are ?

(e) Are the men who stay late in office paid any remuneration for the extra labour ; if so, what ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes, except on Saturdays when the hours are usually 10-30 A.M. to 2 P.M.

(b) and (c). No. Assistant and clerks sometimes have to stay late in office when work is heavy. I am not aware that this is generally the case.

(d) Press of work.

(e) The staff of the Secretariat are whole-time servants of Government and no extra remuneration is paid for occasional overtime work.

DISCHARGE AFTER NINE YEARS' SERVICE OF 23 TEMPORARY COMMISSIONED OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

116. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that on the 1st September, 1926, 23 temporary commissioned I. M. S. officers were served with notice of discharge from the Service after having served the Indian Army for 9 years ?

(b) Was this discharge effected by Army Order Z.-2396-2 (D.M.S.-1-B), dated Simla, 23rd April, 1926 (limitation of the period of service of temporary commissioned officers of the I. M. S.) ?

(c) If so, will the Government please state if, when these temporary officers were entertained, they were informed of this intention on the part of the authorities and have they no vested interests in their service ?

(d) Have any Europeans been enlisted in India as temporary I. M. S. officers and have they also been discharged at the end of 9 years or have they been retained and given a higher rate of pay during their service and promoted ?

(e) Is it a fact that in place of these discharged 23 temporary I. M. S. officers 24 new junior temporary officers were engaged ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The annual contracts of 23 officers lapsed on or about the date mentioned and were not renewed. These officers had served altogether for 9 years on annually renewed contracts.

(b) Yes, Sir. Except that the document referred to by my Honourable friend was a memorandum and not an Army Order.

(c) No, Sir. As I have stated on previous occasions these officers were originally engaged on annual contracts, subject to renewal at their option as well as that of Government for further periods of a year at a time. They have therefore no vested interests beyond what is represented by the annual contract. They were entitled to such notice of non-renewal of their contracts as is laid down in the terms of the contract. That notice was duly given to all of them.

(d) Europeans have been recruited as temporary I. M. S. officers on the same terms as Indian temporary I. M. S. Officers, but I cannot say whether any of them were actually recruited in India. The second part of this question does not arise.

(e) The temporary officers whose contracts were not renewed were replaced by the same number of newly recruited officers with temporary commissions. As I have informed the House, Government are re-examining this question, though they can give no undertaking that the 9 years' rule will be modified.

GRANT OF GRATUITY OR SOME FORM OF PENSION TO TEMPORARY INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE WHEN THEY ARE DISCHARGED.

117. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that temporary I M. S. officers engaged in England receive £1,000 as a gratuity on the completion of 5 years of temporary service, and that this gratuity is increased if further temporary service is rendered ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member please state if there is any difference in the duties performed by the European and the Indian temporarily engaged I. M. S. officers ?

(c) If the answer to part (a) is in the negative, will the Government please state the reason for this difference in treatment ?

(d) Are Government prepared to sympathetically consider the granting of a similar gratuity or some form of pension to Indian temporarily engaged I. M. S. officers when they are discharged ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No, Sir. As I have explained fully in my reply to Diwan Chaman Lall's question No. 806, no temporary I. M. S. officers are engaged in England, but the terms of appointment to permanent commissions in the I. M. S. now include the option of retiring after 6 or 12 years service with a gratuity of £1,000 or £2,500 instead of pension. Indian officers recruited to the permanent service now have this option equally with Europeans. No temporary officer, whether Indian or European, whether recruited in England or in India, is entitled to a gratuity under the terms of his contract.

(b), (c) and (d). Do not arise.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL.

Mr. President : I have received the following notice of a motion for adjournment of the House from Diwan Chaman Lall :

"I beg to give notice of the following motion of adjournment to discuss a matter of recent and urgent public importance, namely, the affront offered to the Legislative Assembly by the Government in withdrawing this Session the Gold Standard and Reserve Bank Bill before the Assembly had had an opportunity of discussing the remaining clauses of the Bill."

The matter proposed to be discussed seems to me to be in order, and I have to ask whether the Honourable Member has the leave of the Assembly to move the adjournment.

(No member stood up to object.)

As no Honourable Member takes objection I intimate that leave is granted and that the motion will be taken up at 4 P.M.

APPOINTMENT OF MUNSHI ISWAR SARAN TO THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

Mr. President : I have to inform Honourable Members of this House that I have appointed Munshi Iswar Saran to the Library Committee in place of Diwan Bahadur R. Ramchandra Rao who has ceased to be a Member of the Legislative Assembly.

RESOLUTION RE INDIANISATION OF HALF THE CADRE OF OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further discussion of the following Resolution moved by Dr. B. S. Moonje on the 25th August 1927, and also the amendment moved thereto by Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. The Resolution is :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that as a beginning in the direction of preparing India for self-defence immediate steps be taken to bring about the Indianisation of half the cadre of officers in the Indian Army, unanimously recommended by the Skeen Committee, within a period of fifteen years, and to carry out the unanimous recommendations of the Committee with regard to the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst and the recruitment of Indian officers in those arms of the defensive forces, paid for out of Indian revenues, from which they are at present excluded."

The amendment of Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar is :

"That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

'Subject to the revision of the whole scheme of the defence of the country in any future constitution for India acceptable to the people of India, and while feeling that the recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst Committee, specially relating to the continuance of British recruitment, do not satisfy Indian public opinion, this Assembly is of opinion that the acceptance of the unanimous recommendations of that Committee will mark a definite beginning in the Indianisation of the Army in India, and it therefore recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to accept those recommendations and give immediate effect to them'."

Rai Sahib Har Bilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : Sir, I do not intend to speak on the military situation of Asia as affecting India, nor how, as time passes, the awakening of China, Persia and Afghanistan and their gradual evolution as powerful military states have darkened the prospects of people of this country living peaceful lives, nor, how the increasingly estranged relations between Russia and England are rendering the military and political outlook so far as this country is concerned less and less satisfactory. That has been done by my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje. I wish to say a few words as to the alleged difficulty in the way of the Indianisation of the Army ; but before I do so I wish to say a few words with regard to what my Honourable friend, Colonel Crawford, said the other day with regard to the Skeen Committee. He said that the Skeen Committee was a failure because it mistook its task. Instead of concerning itself primarily with the efficiency of the Army, it concerned itself with the question as to how many Indians should be appointed to it. He also said in rather an apologetic tone, as if he was telling a truth which was unpalatable but which must be told, that the efficiency of the Army was not compatible with the increasing Indianisation of the Army, for British officers were unwilling to serve under Indians because of differences of social life.

As to the first point, I believe nobody here thinks that the Skeen Committee, which was presided over by such a distinguished soldier as General Skeen, the Chief of the General Staff, and on which there was also an eminent officer like Mr. Burdon, Secretary to the Government of India in the Army Department, did not pay heed to the question of efficiency. The fact is that my Honourable friend, and gentlemen of his way of thinking wish to keep the Army in India as a close preserve for Britishers, and whenever any proposal is made to give the Indians their due share in the defence of their country, the cry is always raised, " efficiency in danger." But, Sir, it is time that Colonel Crawford realised that this cry " wolf, wolf " no longer deceives anybody now.

As regards the second point, my Honourable friend is mistaken if he thinks that Indians believe in the danger which he tries to foreshadow. The English are a very practical people, and no people in the world know how to bow to the inevitable with greater grace. So long as they know that they can dictate their own terms, they will do so, but the moment they come to know, that they cannot have things all their own way, they will fall into line and accept the situation. When they know that they cannot have all the prizes in the Army, they will be content with what they can get and serve India. But, Sir, if the worst comes to the worst, and if when Indians are placed in command of battalions and regiments, the English officers refuse to have anything to do with the Army, though we shall be very sorry, we shall not be dismayed. We shall regard this as one of the ills which the body politic of India is heir to. We are anxious to enlist in the service of our country all the assistance that we can get from British officers, but if they still do not come, we shall not go into mourning ; we shall not sit in ashes and sack-cloth mourning our fate. They will not find us with tears in our eyes and hands folded beseaching these so many achilles sulking in their tents to come and command us. Sir, we Indians, Hindus and Muhammadans and Anglo-Indians, have sufficient suitable material in this country which, when trained, will help us to create an army which would be quite sufficient for the defence of our country. I wonder if my friend Colonel Crawford knows that General Sir Ian Hamilton says in his Scrap Book on the first part of the Russo-Japanese War :

" Why, there is material in the North of India and in Nepal sufficient, and fit, under good leadership, to shake the artificial society of Europe to its foundations ".

[Rai Sahib Har Bilas Sarda.]

Another military writer writing in the Contemporary Review a few years ago, said :

"If the Prussian conscription were applied in India, we should, without counting reserves or land'wehr or any force not summoned in time of peace, have two and a half millions of soldiers actually in barracks, with 800,000 recruits coming up every year—a force with which not only Asia but the world might be subdued."

Now, Sir, when we have got such material, and if we can get trained officers, there is no reason why we should not be able to have an army adequate for our purposes. Perhaps Colonel Crawford knows that it was not with the help of British officers that the Indian Army put a stop to the ever victorious march of Alexander the Great and later inflicted the disastrous defeat on the celebrated Greek King and General Seleukus and wrested half Western Asia from him, was it because the army was led by British officers that it hurled back the untold legions of Semaramis the Great of Assyria and inflicted a defeat on the Assyrian army from which it never recovered, or again when King Sobhogsen defeated Antiochus the Great. The nation that achieved such brilliant triumphs may be safely taken to possess suitable material for an efficient army. We have also got amongst us here descendents of those who founded in India an empire in the 16th century which was the strongest of its time. Thus we have got material for officering the army in this country which, when properly trained, would be quite adequate for the defence of our country.

Now, Sir, the chief difficulty alleged to be in the way of Indianization of the Army is the paucity of suitable youngmen who could be trained as officers for the Army. As I have said, there were in India, before the English came to this country, large armies commanded by Indians who showed great powers of command and who achieved great military feats which throw lustre on the history of India. It is only since the British Raj has been established that armies in India have ceased to be commanded by Indians, not because sufficient and suitable officers have not been forthcoming, but because it has been the policy of the British Government to train Indians for military service or to give them even the smallest control over the Army. It is perfectly true, Sir, that military science has made wonderful advance in these days and that a person has to undergo long training before he is fully equipped to be an efficient officer. But when Europeans who commanded European armies before these developments took place are now able to adjust themselves to the changed circumstances and are able to command modern armies, there is no reason why Indians who are regarded as a highly intellectual race should not also be able to adjust themselves to the changed circumstances. When India can produce good soldiers, there is no reason why with proper training she should not be able to produce officers to command the army. Are there any countries with large armies where the armies are officered exclusively by foreigners. Is human nature then so radically different in India from that in the rest of the world that it can produce only soldiers but not officers even when training is available ? Sir, I think there is sufficient material present in Rajputana to furnish a large part of the Army with officers ; so is the case with the Punjab, Maharashtra, Oudh and other provinces. We must not judge of the capacity of Indians for military service from the students who go up for the Sandhurst examination. Even Sir John Maynard, formerly Member of the Executive Council of the Punjab, who served for

ERRATA.

In line 20 from the bottom of page 4244 of Volume IV, number 60, of the Legislative Assembly Debates, dated the 13th September, 1927, before the words " to train Indians " insert the word " not ".

In the 7th line from the bottom of page 4245 of the same debates, for the word " discontent " substitute " discount ".

40 years in India has assured us—I read from the Skeen Committee's Report :

"in the Punjab alone there are many boys who do not appear for the Sandhurst examination but are of better quality than the accepted Sandhurst candidates, whom he himself had seen ".

It is only because the people do not think that Government is anxious that youngmen in India should take to the profession of arms that there is this alleged paucity. If the people of India are convinced that it is the genuine desire of Government that Indians should take their proper share in the defence of their country, the military colleges and schools which would be established for the purpose would be flooded with young men who will be found to be able to hold their own against young men of any other country.

Sir, the recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst Committee are neither generous nor liberal. And even if the recommendations in their entirety are given effect to, it is very doubtful if half the officers of the army will be Indians even after 25 or 30 years. We can well understand the caution and hesitation of Government in the matter, considering the great stake that England has in the country, for England's world position depends upon India not breaking away from her. And, Sir, when it is the avowed policy of Government to give self-government to this country, is it not wise and prudent that Government should win and retain the good will of Indians by conceding to them the right of defending their own country and by training them to do so. What is therefore important at the present time is that a real beginning in a right earnest spirit be made and, though the recommendations of the Skeen Committee are far from satisfactory, still the country accepts them as a proof of the genuine desire of Government to set the country on the road which will lead to the position when Indians will be able to defend their own country.

Two things, however, are necessary for the success of this scheme. The system of recruitment which has been recommended is over-cautious and in fact unsatisfactory. The scheme laid down in pages 29 and 30 of the Report appears to aim at securing what in present-day political parlance may be called " safe men ". Government should show greater trust in the people if the scheme is to have a chance of success. Secondly, Government should lose no time in moving the universities and other educational authorities suitably to modify the courses of study so as to enable young men so inclined to take to the profession of arms. And Government will find that in ten years' time suitable material would in a much larger degree be available than they would be able to make use of.

One word more and I finish. I hope Government will not give undue weight to the interested protests of people who profess to be representatives of the so-called martial classes against the intellectual classes entering the Army. They declaim against the intelligentsia, against the nimble-brained people as if brains were at a discount in the Army. The equipment of officers, Sir, is not the same as that of soldiers serving in the ranks. Ire, grit, nerve and character are the essentials of military life, but they are not the monopoly of those who have learnt to use a bayonet or a rifle when commanded to do so. It is no use concealing the fact that the present paucity of suitable candidates fit to be trained as officers in the Army is due solely to the fact that the doors of the Army are closed to the intellectual classes. This bar to keep the intellectual classes from entering the Army is, I fear, another way of keeping the Army reserved for Britishers, for they will always be able to say that young men of sufficient education with sufficient brain power to be able to compete with English boys at the Sandhurst examination are not forthcoming. Sir, I support the amendment proposed by Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar.

[Rai Sahib Har Bilas Sarda.]

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay: European) : Sir, I confess that I approach this subject with some diffidence because I realise that we in this House are mainly amateur soldiers or no soldiers at all. And it is obviously a subject which is very complex and a subject upon which we can only come to a decision after hearing the very best advice possible. We are attempting to build a structure and it is absolutely essential that the foundations to that structure should be well and truly laid. If a mistake is made in the initial stages it may re-act against the whole problem we are out to solve. And as my Honourable friend says, the whole building might fall down. We agree that the problem is one that should undoubtedly have been faced much earlier. It is easy to be wise after the event and it is very little good discussing that aspect of the matter now. History to some extent will possibly help us in this matter. At the same time, I do not consider that delving into the past, as the Honourable Member did who has just sat down, will help us very much. Armies are changing very rapidly and conditions are changing, and in building up our structure we have got to consider the future much more than we have to consider the past. Undoubtedly, to some extent this subject is one which will have to be tackled by the Statutory Commission because it is not a local problem, it is not merely an Indian problem, it is an Imperial problem and it is for that reason that we on these Benches feel that, much as we admire and sympathise with the recommendations of the Skeen Report, we feel that until that Report has been discussed and advised upon by those who are expert in the creation and maintenance of armies, particularly with regard to the Imperial aspect, we on our side are not inclined either to approve or condemn the main recommendations of the Report to-day. We wish to hear further views on the subject and to frame our own opinions later. Undoubtedly, we have got to visualise the prospect in the future of the Indian Army having to stand not perhaps entirely alone, but in the main alone, and that situation has got to be worked up to. My Honourable friend who has just sat down referred to Colonel Crawford's speech made some little time ago in this House in connection with this Resolution and he said that Colonel Crawford desired to keep the Indian Army a close preserve for British officers. Colonel Crawford attempted to correct the Honourable Member but he did not give way. I wish to point out that the Honourable Member said the exact opposite of what Colonel Crawford said in his speech, and considering the speech was made some weeks ago and the Honourable Member has had time to peruse it, I think he might have been rather more careful in referring to it. Colonel Crawford said :

"I believe entirely that we must concentrate all our energies on the building up of an Indian Army of all arms officered entirely by Indians if we are ever to make this country capable of Dominion self-government."

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : May I just correct the Honourable Member. I will read his words from the official report of his speech. He said :

"We will concentrate, not upon the question of efficiency but upon the question of how many men are we going to take in. That is really what the Report does."

Mr. H. G. Cocke : The Honourable Member said that Colonel Crawford had stated that he wished to keep the British Army a close preserve for British officers and I have corrected him on that point.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : No, I did not say that he said so.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : We here are absolutely at one on that point that the Indian Army will have to be Indianised and remoulded but, as I have already stated, it is a very large problem and not a local one and a problem on which we wish to have further advice before committing ourselves to any details. You cannot deal with the British Army and the Indian Army in water-tight compartments. You have got to consider the whole problem of Imperial defence as a whole, and the terms of reference to the Skeen Committee were undoubtedly limited. That Committee was not in a position to review the whole situation from top to bottom. The Army Council and the authorities in England have got every right to participate in this matter and their advice is recognised to be a matter of importance. The statement of the Report at page 41 is to the effect that :

"apart from any consideration which might influence ourselves, the Army Council must have the right to decide what standard of training and qualifications is to be regarded as adequate in the case of an army officer who is to hold the King's commission."

Don't let us be in a hurry in arriving at a decision on this Report. It will be noted that the original Resolution and the amendment before the House at the present moment both include the word "immediate". In the Resolution we are to take "immediate steps", and in the amendment to give "immediate effect" to the recommendations. I say that both those words are unfortunate and this House is certainly not in a position to adopt any Resolution which includes the word "immediate".

One of the great problems which has got to be solved is the question of the improvement in the supply of the British officers. We have already been told that there is a shortage under ordinary conditions to-day. If the remoulding of this Army is going to make the problem more difficult, then, in the very words of the Report, the scheme will break down. Therefore, one of the first difficulties that has to be got over is that the scheme should be such that it will be more acceptable to the British officer than the present scheme is likely to be.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : That is your main point.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : It is not merely or mainly a question of the terms upon which these officers are induced to come out to this country, but I venture to think it is mainly a question of getting at the heart of the Britisher whom we want to attract. In other words, if the scheme is well laid on a sound foundation, it is likely that you will get men to come out because they will realise that they are helping to create efficiency in the Army. If from the first it is considered that the matter is being tackled on wrong lines, you will be much less likely to get the required number and stamp of the British officers.

[Mr. H. G. Cocke.]

I have already dealt with the question of the training of Indian officers. We all realise that they have got to be trained. It is only a question of the best method. A military college will undoubtedly have to be formed and we on this side will be only too glad to welcome that step.

Sir, we do not consider that the time has arrived for going into detailed proposals. If the scheme propounded by the Skeen Committee were adopted by this House in its entirety to-day I think it will be a misfortune. I notice that Mr. Roy said on the previous occasion that it would be an economic, social and political misfortune if the scheme were not adopted. I should like to quote his exact words. He said that :

"if the entire recommendations of the Skeen Report were not accepted, it will mar political, economic and social progress."

I have a better opinion of India than that. When he says that, if the Report is not adopted entirely, it will mar the progress of India, I do not at the moment believe him.

As regards the domiciled community of India, we realise that there is excellent material in this country and we sincerely hope that that will be made use of. There are many schools in this country which turn out a very good class of boy who will be very useful in the future moulding of the Indian Army.

The scheme outlined in the Skeen Report is full of safeguards, and if we adopt this Report without any change whatever, it is liable to break down. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief read out an extract from the Report on the previous occasion pointing out that this scheme or any scheme would depend on the requisite material being forthcoming and on the state of efficiency to be obtained. Another quotation is this :

"Our main scheme will ultimately stand or fall by the quality of the material which it succeeds in producing and which has yet to be produced in the numbers constituting the basis of our primary proposals."

And again, on the subject of education, which, as we all know, hits the very root of the problem, the Report says :

"We would make it a condition that Indian boys seeking to enter Woolwich or Cranwell should be required to pass the same qualifying tests as British boys."

That recognises at once the very high standard of education which has got to be attained and which cannot be attained to-day. I therefore suggest to the House that neither the present Resolution nor the amendment should be pressed, and that the matter can be discussed again on a later date when we have more information before us and when we should be in a better position to argue and discuss most of the foundations of the structure we are all anxious to build.

Lieutenant Sardar Muhammad Nawaz Khan (Punjab : Land holders) : Sir, with your permission, I rise to move the amendment which stands in my name.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The amendment which now holds the field is the amendment of Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar. If that amendment is defeated—the Honourable Member must make every endeavour to defeat it if he wants to move his own—then he will have an opportunity of moving his amendment. What the Chair proposes to do is to allow discussion on the original Resolution and the amendment of Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar to proceed, and then put Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar's amendment to the vote, and if that is defeated, to take up the next amendment.

Munshi Iswar Saran (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I wish to assure the House that I listened with such attention and respect to the speech of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief as is due to his exalted position, and since its publication in the Official Report, I have read and re-read it with very great care, but I am constrained to say with all respect that the speech is utterly disappointing and unsatisfactory. The speech of His Excellency can be divided into two parts ; in the first part His Excellency has asked the House to wait for the result of the communication that is in progress between the Government of India on the one hand and the authorities in England on the other, and in the other part His Excellency allowed us to have a peep into the mind of the Government of India when His Excellency dealt with the question of efficiency and our defective system of education, and so on. With your permission, Sir, I shall deal first with the first part of His Excellency's speech.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has 15 minutes only.

Munshi Iswar Saran : I shall do it in less time, Sir. Now, it would appear to a man who is not familiar with the proceedings of this House and with the history of India that this question about the Indianisation of the Army was brought up before the Government of India and the authorities in England for the first time, and, therefore, they did not know what conclusion to come to as they had not time enough to study the question in all its various aspects. But, Sir, is that so ? I submit that if you look to the past history of this question and if you keep in mind the agitation that has been going on in the public press and on the public platform, you will find that this question has been prominently before the Government of India and the authorities in England at least for 30 to 40 years. In view of the reminder which you, Sir, were pleased to give I shall be very brief and give one or two facts only. It will be remembered that on the 28th March 1921, while the debate on the Report of the Esher Committee was in progress in this House, I had the honour to move an amendment which ran as follows :

> " As soon as funds be available, steps should be taken to establish in India a Military College, such as Sandhurst, and the desirability of establishing in India training and educational institutions for other branches of the Army should be steadily kept in view."

You will notice, Sir, that His Excellency, the then Commander-in-Chief, accepted this amendment after it had been incorporated in the Resolution itself. Then, Sir, you will find that on the 24th January 1923, that Mr. Yamin Khan moved a Resolution on this question. It was then that His Excellency Lord Rawlinson said :

> " The Government are well aware that Members of the Legislature, and indeed and even wider circle of political opinion in India, are deeply interested in this very important problem. I can assure you that the Government have taken, and are taking, an equally keen interest in the matter."

His Excellency hoped that he would be able to make an announcement soon after the decision of the authorities in England had been arrived at. We then find that on the 4th July 1923 Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer moved a Resolution in the Legislative Assembly that effect be given to certain

[Munshi Iswar Saran.]

Resolutions which had been passed by this House in connection with the Report of the Esher Committee. On the 19th February 1925, Mr. Venkatapati Raju moved a Resolution and it was then that the Home Member moved an amendment which incorporated a suggestion that a Committee should be appointed to go into this question and submit its report. I am inclined to think that the Indian Sandhurst Committee was the result of the amendment moved by the Honourable the then Home Member. Again, you will find that in 1921 a Committee called the Military Requirements Committee presided over by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and consisting entirely as far as I recollect of official representatives was formed. (An Honourable Member : " Not entirely ".) My Honourable friend says not entirely. That is my recollection and therefore I said as far as I recollect. I remember that the then Law Member, the then Finance Member and my Honourable friend, Sir Denys Bray were members. From 1921 to 1927 this report of the Military Requirements Committee is engaging the attention of the authorities. It was early in 1922 that I put a question and the answer given was that the Report of that Committee was receiving the attention of Government. In 1923, again, in answer to a question the Government said that they had not received the views of the authorities in England. Now, Sir, I submit that this question has been before the Government in India and before the authorities in England at least since 1921, and now to say, " Please wait till we have considered this question in all its bearings, please wait for the decision of the authorities in England ", is putting too much strain on our credulity.

What do we find ? The Report of the Sandhurst Committee was issued in 1926, and wellnigh one year has elapsed, and what have the Government done ? (An Honourable Member : " Nothing ".) Government have not sent up their final proposals. What the Government have done according to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is that they have submitted only provisional recommendations to the authorities in England, and we were told by His Excellency that after the views of this House are known, a full despatch will be sent to the authorities in England. Why, Sir, this differential treatment between the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee and the Report of the Lee Commission ? We find that within six months of the issue of the Report of the Lee Commission, the then Home Member brought forward a resolution in the Legislative Assembly incorporating the recommendations which he expected this House to accept. Why, may I ask—with all respect,—why did not the Government of India wait and say, " Oh, let us know the views of the Legislative Assembly about the recommendations of the Lee Commission ". No. Instead of doing that, they formulated their proposals and they put them before the House and expected the Assembly to accept the recommendations made by Government. Then, Sir, may I ask, if this debate was initiated by Government ? I would have understood the desire of Government to know our views if Government had said to the Assembly : " Here is the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee. Before we make up our minds finally, will you express your opinion about it ?" They did nothing of the kind. It was left to the non-official Members of this House to bring forward a motion on this question.

There is one thing in this connection which I shall beg the House to remember. When Sir Alexander Muddiman, the then Home Member, brought forward his Resolution in connection with the Report of the Lee Commission, he laid stress on two points, one was the personnel of the Commission, and the other was the unanimous character of the Report and also that the conclusions of the Commission were conclusions arrived at after a compromise. I claim, and I am sure no one will be able to contradict me, that the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee has the same virtue as was stated to be possessed by the report of the Lee Commission. Here is a Report which is unanimous—officials and non-officials, military men and public men, they are all unanimous, and in the words of Sir Alexander Muddiman, it has got the great virtue of being the product of a compromise. Why not accord to it then, the same treatment as you have accorded to the recommendations of the Lee Commission ?

Mr. B. Das : Because it concerns Indians only.

Munshi Iswar Saran : Now, Sir, I submit that the Government for reasons best known to themselves are not prepared at this moment to tell us on the floor of this House what they wish to do in connection with this Report. If they wish to do so, there is nothing to prevent their doing it. Don't we know that in 1914 there was a conference appointed by the South African Government in order to go into the troubles in Natal and the report of that Conference was placed on the table of the House in South Africa. It was here that Lord Hardinge in 1914 got up and expressed his own views about the report that had been submitted in South Africa only that very day. I submit, Sir, if you want to express your opinion about the Sandhurst Committee, you can do so. There is nothing to prevent you from letting us know what conclusions you have arrived at or what recommendations you have made to the authorities in England. Sir, in this connection one should very much like to know the attitude adopted towards this question by the distinguished Indian gentlemen who are in the cabinet of the Government of India. Sir, I submit, that in view of all these and other circumstances the conclusion is irresistible that the Government of India is not so keen about the recommendations of the Skeen Committee as it was keen about the recommendations of the Lee Commission, and I hope the House will foregive my saying that there is a great deal of force in what people generally say. Some have the courage to say it publicly, others say it privately—that the Government will not move unless it is forced by circumstances to move. You may resent the statement, but I am saying it publicly, and there are thousands and thousands of people who say the same thing, that Government will not move unless there is something to force it. I say, Sir, we are feeble, we are weak, we are helpless. There is no doubt about it, but I do resent our being treated like children. Treat us as people who are disunited but do not treat us as children. I say to Government—Play the game. If that is your intention, tell us plainly that you are going to throw this Sandhurst Report on the rubbish heap and that you will have nothing to do with it. We shall then know where we stand. Or say that you will give effect to such and such part and not to others. Please tell us where we stand. This negotiation and this correspondence will go on, as it has been indeed going on for some considerable time. Did you not think of all this when you appointed the Committee ?

[Munshi Iswar Saran.]

As soon as the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee was published, a foreword was attached to it. My Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah and other busy men, (?) are we to understand, have been engaged in preparing the report which will supply material to Government to enable them to explore other avenues which were not within the purview of the Committee. The Sub-Committee consisting of busy men visited Canada, France and other places, and made their recommendations. You have the result of their labours and I say to Government, come to a conclusion. It does not matter what your conclusion is. I only beseech you not to continue to say that this matter is still engaging attention. Surely Government can come to a conclusion if only they care to.

There are two points which I shall with your permission make clear. It has been said by my Honourable friend the Mover that in a time of trial or difficulty it is possible the British Government may not be able to help India in her defence. I would not base my claim for Indianisation on that ground. I shall assume that England will ever be willing and will ever be able to defend India. I shall further assume that England will not charge us a single penny, that she will defend us out of pure love and out of sheer generosity. In spite of these assumptions, I still say that it hurts our national self-respect not to be able to defend our country and for our defence to depend upon foreigners. Sir, self-government may come, self-government may not come, but we desire to have the power and the capacity to defend our hearths and homes and to defend the honour of our women. Before I proceed further I shall say one other word and it is this, that there is a great deal of confusion of thought—I shall not use a stronger expression—about the capacity to defend being a condition precedent to the acquisition of self-government. I submit that this capacity is not and has not been a condition precedent so far. If you look to the history of the self-governing Dominions you will find that in no case was the capacity to defend itself a condition precedent to the grant of self-government. If you refer to the book called " The Empire at War " by Sir Charles Lucas, in Volume I, page 69, this is what you find :

" .... it may be summed up that at the time of the mid-century wars, between 1850 and 1860, as far as the Colonies were concerned, Imperial partnership was mainly limited to gifts of money for relief, or at most, to elementary preparations for self-defence in the event of the removal of the Imperial garrisons. In other words, a little more than sixty years ago, the overseas provinces of the Empire, with the exception of India, so far from being prepared to fight the battles of the Empire beyond their own shores, were not prepared in any effective sense to defend those shores. Defence was still looked upon as the charge of the Mother Country."

Sir, may I now turn to the second part of the speech in which His Excellency was pleased to refer to the question of efficiency. Now, Sir, there is no time otherwise I should have invited the attention of this House to the testimony borne, not as my Honourable friend Mr. Cocke said by ancients, but by modern authorities. I shall quote only a few words from Lord Rawlinson. He said :

" The Indian Army has a traditional reputation for efficiency and reliability which is I think universally acknowledged. It will be unnecessary for me to dilate on their endeavours, their self-sacrifice, for Honourable Members all know the great achievements of the Indian Army before the great war, during the great war and since the great war, both in India and overseas.''

Sir, it passes my poor intelligence and comprehension how the question of efficiency arises. When did you give our men a chance of working as officers and when did they fail ? Did they ever fail ? If not, then I submit the onus lies heavily on you to prove that if you give a chance to our young men to work as officers in the Army they will not prove as efficient as anybody under the sun.

Turn we now to the question of education in this country. I do not suppose the framers of this Indian Sandhurst Committee Report ever thought what use would be made of their harmless remarks on the question of education. If you look at the history of education in this country.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must now conclude his remarks.

Mushi Iswar Saran : Now I must conclude. I wish I had the opportunity to say a few words about the provocative speech of Colonel Crawford.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should have done it in the beginning. Will he now conclude his speech ?

1 P.M.

Munshi Iswar Saran : Very well, Sir, I shall then resume my seat.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I am glad to have been given this opportunity of speaking on his subject in which I am greatly interested—perhaps not so much as my friend, Dr. Moonje is interested ; but I can say that I am interested in the subject a good deal. Sir, I admire the way in which he has put the subject before the House. He has gone very thoroughly into it, and I think he well deserved the appellation of " Colonel '' hinted at in this House the other day. Sir, there were certain matters in his speech which are really fundamental and which ought to be more clearly brought before the House, and though I do not command a knowledge of the English language to such an extent as to do full justice to the subject, still I shall try to explain my views, Sir. Before proceeding to the points on which I should like to speak at some length later on as regards India, Indianisation, national spirit and such things, I think the House will be expecting from me something on the Skeen Committee's Report itself, of which I was one of the signatories. I thought, Sir, that we had compiled a very short and sweet report, and we hoped that the Report would meet with the approval and satisfaction of both the Government and the public ; but when I returned from Bombay after having signed the Report, the first question which was put to me in my part of the country was, what we had done for the martial races ! I tried to utter a few smooth words, but I was afraid that when the Report was published, it would give no satisfaction to the martial races in the north—and so it happened. I now see that deputations are waiting on His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and are parading the lobbies of this House, and I am sure more so the lobbies of the Council of State, which has some leaders of the martial races, asking the Members of both the Houses to safeguard their interests, and I do not know what can be done for them now. As regards the Report itself,

[Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.]

Sir, I think it is a very simple measure. All that we want for the present is simply to double the vacancies now open to Indians in the Army. There is a provision for an Indian Sandhurst later on in 1933. We have also suggested that half the number of officers should be Indians in 1952. Beyond that we could suggest or recommend nothing. We could not say as to when it would be possible to eliminate the British element from the Army. We also provided for a revision of the whole scheme after ten years. We thought that with so many safeguards the Report would be acceptable to Government, and I do hope that it is not unacceptable to Government. The only thing that occurs to me is that, having regard to the Imperial nature of the question or something connected with the Imperial policy of the defence of the Empire, it is being gone through more carefully and more cautiously. I think it is well that this scheme is brought before the House and is being discussed and debated. The opinion of the House will go before the authorities at home and will give them an idea of what the country wants. I do not think that the Mover of the Resolution should press his Resolution to a division just now ; there is every hope of its being carried, but something which is just the reverse of it, has happened in the other House. I am sure we shall get another opportunity of discussing it in the Delhi Session and perhaps that will be the more appropriate time for us to come to a definite decision on this subject. But whether the Mover takes it to a division or not, does not concern me ; it is his own look-out. I should only like the Government of India to know the views of the House on this subject and that, too, in detail.

Sir, when I was listening to the speech of the Mover of the Resolution I heard such expressions as " India, Indian, national aspirations, martial spirit " and things of that sort a good deal. I am really anxious to know, not as a critic, but as a real inquirer, what " India " really means ? As at present constituted, it comprises the countries of Burma, Baluchistan, British Afghanistan (in other words, the North-West Frontier Province), the tribal area, Chitral, etc., etc., and God knows how many more countries are to be conquered by the British and brought into the sphere of the Indian Empire.

Does my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje really mean that he is going to arrange for the defence of these vast countries comprising the Indian Empire ? Is he trying to make provision for the defence of all the Hindu Kush passes leading into this huge continent of India (An Honourable Member : " Yes.") Quite so. If that is the idea then bring all these countries under the lap of your reforms and civilzation. It is the biggest of all questions and requires more thought than what has so far been paid to it by the Honourable Members, who have spoken on the subject. I should like to know what similarity of ideas, races, thoughts, civilisations or customs there are which form the nationality of a country !! I am as much an Indian and wish to be so, as anybody on that side of the House (Laughter). As a matter of fact when I was in America, I readily responded to the call of a Hindu ; when anybody asked me whether I was not a Hindu, I said that I was a Hindu. (Laughter.) Every man going from India to a foreign country is a Hindu, but when he comes back to his own home, he gives up that word and calls himself a Bengali, a Burman or a Punjabi, and so on ! I do not mean that we should not Indianise the Indian Army. But what I should like is that we should first Indianise our minds. We should change our thoughts, our minds, our ideas and various other things. We should first get over the various differences that exist in the country, not the climatic differences, but differences of nations of nationality and of languages and thoughts and various other things, not to speak of communal differences ! It is rather dangerous to talk of communal differences nowadays, because we are now engaged in a conference where we are trying to remove those communal differences and we hope that we shall succeed soon. So, before I proceed further, I should like to have a definition of the words " India " and " Indian ".

Mr. President : Order, order. The question of definition of " India " or " Indians " does not arise. The question before the House is that the recommendations of the Skeen Committee be accepted by the Government. (Laughter and Hear, hear.)

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : But, Sir, the recommendations of the Skeen Committee are based on the Indianisation of the Indian Army. I want to know the meaning of the words " Indian " and " Indianisation ".

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must put this question to himself. (Laughter.) He has put his signature to the Report.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I have put this question in this manner to myself but I cannot make out a satisfactory reply. Perhaps my Honourable friends on the other side will deal with the question more thoroughly. Those of my Honourable friends who have studied the question more thoroughly and who have tried to master it will I believe, do better credit to this question. I must confess that with my poor abilities I have not been able to solve it or to come to any definite conclusion over it.

Sir, I will not dilate on this subject any further, but will revert to the Report itself. The Report was signed in November last and we were then in a somewhat better position than we are now. We have not got a huge army with which we can afford to make experiments ! The Army that we have got is just enough to guard our frontiers and keep internal peace. That is all that we have got so far. We had two other means of keeping the peace within the country, one was by the influence of the leaders and the other was by means of the police force, but I am sorry to say that the influence of the leaders has of late deteriorated, so much so that they can hardly get out of the communal bias. As regards the police, I have not seen a single case of riot enquiry, Sir, where the police have not come in for criticism, either from one or the other community. The confidence of the country is practically lost in the police and it is now of no great value to us. Now the only thing left is this well disciplined Indian Army, which has shown itself fire-proof against communal bias and influences. If the Army is also affected or tampered with, by the introduction of not very highly disciplined officers, I think we shall soon lose confidence in the Army also. At present, as I have said before, we want the Army only for the internal safety of the country ; because I am not one of those who are ever afraid of the foreign invasion bogey. I think India has not had a more stable or safe time than she at present has. It is because we have now got an independent neutral country between us and the inimical Russia, to which my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda has referred. That neutral country is not likely to allow, if it is in its power, the Russians to pass through their country whether as friends or foes. It would be practically ruining their own country if the Afghans were to allow the Russians, even as friends, to pass through their country. Things were rather different when the Government of India had the responsibility of defending the so-called Indian borders on the Oxus. At that time we were responsible for the safety of the Afghans but now they are a free people and if able to look after themselves, they will not be so foolish or unwise as to allow even a friend to pass through their country. There is a proverb in Pushtu, my mother-tongue, which says that a lashkar of even friendlies is not to be allowed in one's house, because if you allow them they will surely plunder your house. As to the Afghans themselves invading India they are unable to do so and their attempt in 1919 was, to my mind, mainly due to an invitation from certain Indians, chiefly non-Muslims, to help them in their troubles with Government.

[Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.]

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has already taken twenty minutes. I hope he will now bring his remarks to a close.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Thank you, Sir. The speech of the Honourable the Mover has brought in so many delicate questions of nationality and nationalisation that I could not avoid the temptation of saying a few words on those points. One of the remarks—and this will be my last word—one of the remarks, which the Honourable the Mover made was that the British Government had not done much towards creating a national spirit in the country, as he would like to have seen introduced in the country. I should have thought that the British had done most of all. They have tried their best to introduce nationalism, unity and uniformity of laws and customs, into a country like India, which before their arrival was divided into small communities and principalities. The first step they took was to do away with the Sati and various other customs. But a foreign Government cannot go so rashly as Lenin in Russia and Kemel in Turkey and bring about very fast nationalisation. Have they not encouraged the Boys Scouts movement and allowed Sangatons and Tanzims to prosper ? But they are naturally anxious not to disturb the feeling of any section of the community—not even by Dr. Gour's Bills. Dr. Gour has been introducing many social Bills but even there the Government have been always anxious not to hurt the feelings of any community. The whole lot of Honourable Members on the other side are the products of the nationalisation and national spirit of the present regime ; and we can boast of men like Mr. Jinnah whose whole community cannot divert him an inch from his national ideals, however strong may be the efforts of those who try to persuade him the other way. Similarly, I have got great admiration for Mr. Jayakar, who is ready to send all religious cranks to the lunatic asylum, since they are an impediment to the progress of the country. Not to speak of Honourable Members over there who, I am afraid, are a little too far advanced, even beyond nationalism and will go precipitously down-hill !

To come to a conclusion, Sir, I think a good deal has been done by the British Government in making up a nation of all the races of India, bringing them into one line of action (Cries of ' no ') but I am sorry to see that the goal before them, they think, has to be reached through European clothes and European education. If this is going to be the way by which they are to reach the goal, they must wait patiently for centuries before all these various kinds of dresses are changed into one uniform suit and before the thirty crores of people adopt one uniform language. That surely will bring about a nation, but if they can settle upon one language and upon one dress for the whole country all at once, things will go on much faster.

Sir, as I have said, the Army should be the last thing to be meddled with. Go on faster with Indianisation in other departments but not in the Army itself. You have got another scheme before you—the Territorial Forces scheme or the Auxiliary Forces scheme ; go on with those schemes province by province ; raise the tone of those Forces and make them a second line of defence and you will have learnt the art of soldiering and the art of defending the land. But this little army is too precious to be played with. Do not weaken it by bringing faster Indianisation into it.

My final recommendation is this : send your youngsters across the seas, to heaven or hell wherever you wish, but keep them away from the present very dirty atmosphere in the country ; they should be free from your own present day sentiments, so that when the time comes the new Hindu element in the Army may prove itself as reliable against its own coreligionists on the North-East Frontier, as the Muslim element has invariably proved itself on the North-West Frontiers of India and elsewhere.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. Rajivaranjan Prasad Sinha (Patna cum Shahabad : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I am grateful to you—I am very grateful indeed—for allowing me, a new Member, an opportunity of taking part in this very important debate. Before I proceed further, I should like to congratulate the Indian Sandhurst Committee on the valuable Report which they have produced. I congratulate them, Sir, not merely because the Report is flattering to Indian self-respect, but because the Report vindicates that self-respect. It vindicates Indian public opinion which has always held that if Indians have been debarred from taking up the defence of their country it is not because of any inherent inferiority which attaches to them, but because of the policy of distrust and deliberate exclusion of Indians from the higher ranks of the Army which the British Government have pursued in the past, and which they are pursuing even to-day, in howsoever modified a form. Sir, the Committee rightly observe that there is no lack of good potential material for the army in this country, and if the Government have not succeeded in reaching it or in utilising it, it is because of the defects in the method of selection, lack of publicity and suitable propaganda, and also because of the defects in the educational system of India which—the Committee might have added with truth—the Government have shown no active desire to remedy or rectify. And why ? Because the Government have deliberately followed the policy of exclusion of Indians from the higher ranks of the army of their country.

[Mr. Rajivaranjan Prasad Sinha.]

Sir, when the War broke out and Government found themselves in a difficulty, they created ten vacancies for Indians at Sandhurst. Mind you, Sir, they did not do it at the beginning of the War, in 1914 or 1915. That would have been too premature. They took full four years to do even that. When the difficulties of the War increased and they were faced with a critical situation, they hastily set up a number of military colleges in India and reserved ten seats for Indians at Sandhurst. When the war was over, the military colleges disappeared, but the ten seats reserved for Indians remained and they remain to this day. Sir, the ten vacancies are still there, and there has not been a single addition to that paltry number during the nine years which have elapsed. Government think, Sir, that they have made a great concession to the people of India in reserving these ten seats for them. They gravely complain that the people of this country have not shown a proper feeling of enthusiasm over this great concession, that young men have not come rushing from all parts of the country to compete for these ten prizes. I am afraid, Sir, there is something seriously wrong with the mentality of the Government. They betray the same mentality when they set up the sham of a responsible Government and call upon Indians to declare that it is real and not sham. Sir, some of us are hypnotised into believing that it is the real thing, while others stoutly refuse to take the shadow for the substance and Government, Sir, are surprised. They are surprised at our lack of enthusiasm for the sham commodity and insist that unless we took that for the real thing they would not give us the real thing. Sir, Government may have succeeded in effacing their sense of humour or, at any rate, in subordinating it by some miraculous process to their imperialistic instincts, but they should not be surprised if they find that Indians have still got some sense of humour in them. Therefore, Sir, I am glad that the Committee have come to the right conclusion that the real reason why Indians have not exactly enthused over these ten seats at Sandhurst lies in the extremely limited and narrow scope of the scheme for Indianisation which has been put into operation. Sir, the Committee proceed to make certain definite recommendations for remedying this state of affairs. They recommend that ten vacancies should be further reserved for Indians at Sandhurst making a total of 20 vacancies available for Indians and they recommend that this number should be progressively increased till by 1952 half the total cadre of officers for the Indian Army are Indians. They further recommend that an Indian Military College should be established in India in 1933, and they make other subsidiary recommendations. Now, Sir, there may be differences of opinion in regard to the details of the scheme, but I think I am not wrong in saying that Indians of all shades of opinion are agreed that the main recommendations of the Committee should be accepted and duly carried out. Sir, I am aware that there are many amongst us who feel that the pace of Indianisation recommended in the Report is too slow—I myself feel that the pace is exceedingly slow—but we hope, Sir—it may be a vain hope—but nevertheless we are hoping—that by the time the whole scheme comes up for review in 1928, circumstances—which we cannot foresee at present—may have shaped themselves in such a manner that Government may be willing, nay, even eager, to accelerate the pace of Indianisation. That is our hope, Sir, and inspired with this hope we are prepared to accept the recommendations of the Sandhurst Committee. And there is a further reason also. We do not wish to give Government the excuse for saying that the unanimous recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst Committee have not been acceptable to the Indian people themselves. This, then, is our position with regard to the main recommendations of the Committee. I do not wish to deal with the subsidiary recommendations. Honourable Members who have given notice of certain amendments will deal with them and I dare say more comprehensively than I can.

Now, let us see, Sir, what the Government have got to tell us in regard to the main recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst Committee. They have already attached a foreword to the Report, an ominous foreword which, if anything, is meant to damn the Report in anticipation. They tell us that the problems of recruitment and training of King's commissioned officers are essentially an Imperial concern and any proposals reacting on them must be closely scrutinised by His Majesty's Government and their Military advisers. The Noble Lord, our brilliant Secretary of State, further tells us that the whole scheme must be examined by a Committee for Imperial defence. Sir, Government, when they tell us these things, expect us, I fancy, to be impressed—to be properly impressed—by these weighty observations. But, Sir, we fail to get impressed—we may be stupid—but we cannot feel impressed by such pronouncements. And for this reason, the Indian Sandhurst Committee have made no revolutionary proposals. They do not seek to upset the existing organisation of the Army. They do not propose to reduce a single unit of the Army or for the matter of that, a single commissioned officer or non-commissioned officer. The strength of the Army remains untouched ; the number of commissioned and other officers remains the same ; the number and strength of the troops remain the same as at present. All that they propose is that a certain number of duly trained and duly commissioned Indian officers should take the places of European officers, and the number of such Indian officers should be progressively increased till a certain proportion is reached. Now, I take it, Sir, that a commissioned officer is a commissioned officer, whatever be the pigment of his skin. It is not proposed to put in untrained Indians. It is not proposed to make a certain number of commissions available to the Members of the Indian Legislature who are unfortunately fit only for politics and for nothing else. The proposals of the Committee simply mean that Government should allow a certain number of Indians to receive military training to qualify themselves for service in the Army of their country. They mean that the Government shall not keep the door shut in their faces, that they shall open it—not very wide but just a little bit wide—and allow Indians to enter and receive military training—to submit themselves to whatever rigorous tests of training Government might be pleased to impose, keeping the standard of efficiency as high as they please—not lowering it by an ineh, by an iota—and when the Indians have been so trained, when they have successfully passed all the tests of efficiency, then they should be commissioned and allowed to serve in the Army of their country. That, Sir, is the proposal of the

[Mr. Rajivaranjan Prasad Sinha.]

Indian Sandhurst Committee in a nutshell and yet, Sir, we are treated to all this talk about Imperial defence, to the necessity of gauging the exact extent of the reaction, the repercussion, which these revolutionary proposals are likely to have on problems of Imperial defence. Sir, Indians are not lacking in ordinary intelligence and can see through this maze of empty and high-sounding words the real hitch, the real difficulty which is troubling the Government here as well as in England. The real difficulty is that Government are unable to make up their minds to allow Indians to qualify themselves in increasing numbers for the higher military service of their country. They are unable to shake off their distrust and prejudice so as to allow limited, a very limited, number of Indians to qualify themselves for military service and serve in the higher ranks of the Army of their country. Sir, this is the real hitch and no other And yet, Sir, and yet, the British people aspire to remain an Imperia power, to maintain their supremacy over numerous races and communi ties inhabiting this vast Empire. Let me tell them, Sir, that racia prejudice and Imperial ambition cannot go hand in hand—cannot subsist together. Sooner or later, they will have to give up this prejudice or Nemesis will surely overtake them. Sir, they have simply got to make up their minds and not go on eternally fencing with words which deceive nobody. I hope that they will make up their minds without undue delay and accept the recommendations of the Committee. Let them accept the inevitable with a good grace, but if they do not do that, I know what the verdict of history will be. The inexorable verdict of history will be that the great British nation, in a moment of stress and difficulty, promised India to set her on the road to responsible government, but when they had emerged from the crisis, they faltered and wavered ; they had not the courage to carry out all the implications of the policy which they had announced with a flourish of trumpets. Sir, this will be the verdict. because after all, Sir, it is really a question of moral courage. It does not require much courage to subdue a nation, to disarm and emasculate and reduce a great nation to a helpless condition But it requires far greater courage—at any rate, it requires courage of a very high order—voluntarily and willingly to remove the shackles, the disabilities which you have imposed upon that nation. I hope, I fervently hope, that the British nation, the great British nation, will not be found lacking in this high moral courage. Sir, I support the amendment moved by my Honourable and esteemed friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. (Cheers.)

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : I really do not know how I should start to deal with this question. But to begin with, I congratulate His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief ; at the same time, I sympathise with him and I share his regret. Sir, I congratulate him for the statement which he made in his speech, and I am very glad that he made the position clear, with regard to one matter at least. That statement was this :

> " They are prepared to face those issues, and they are prepared to give information regarding their policy after having due time for consideration."

In other words, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief made it clear that the question of the appointment of the Statutory Commission had nothing whatever to do with the consideration of the Report of the Sandhurst Committee. The Government of India are, therefore, prepared to face the Report and deal with it. Well, Sir, I congratulate him ; to that extent it is a matter of some satisfaction. But may I ask His Excellency that he will do his utmost and not swerve from the statement which he has made on the floor of this House, and that he will pursue the matter vigorously and earnestly and leave no avenue unexplored until he has got the decision on the Report of the Sandhurst Committee ? Sir, I sympathise with him and I share his regret, because he himself says in his speech as follows :

" I had hoped that to-day I might have been able to give this House some information as regards the policy of the Government in this matter. It is to me a matter of great regret that I am unable to do so."

And we all know, and he made it very clear at the end of his speech, why he is unable to do so. He said :

" The Home Government, as I have already said, have not yet had time to formulate their opinions, and surely it will be best if they are not asked to do so in hostile atmosphere."

Then he proceeded to say that he would certainly welcome the opinion of the Members of this House. He concluded as follows :

" I trust that this Resolution may not be pressed. If pressed, the Government of India will have no other recourse than that of opposing it for the reasons I have given. But I am rather hoping that the present event may be regarded more as an opportunity for Members to state their opinions than as an attack upon Government."

I am glad that he recognises that the Members of this House should express their opinions. At the same time he asks us not to put this Resolution to the vote. May I appeal to His Excellency to consider how any House, any organisation, and particularly the Legislature, is to express its opinion except by votes recorded on a division ? Therefore I cannot understand why the Commander-in-Chief says that we should not press this motion to a division. Sir, the opinion of this House can only be ascertained collectively by recording votes. I will therefore urge upon the House that it should take a division on this question and let us express our opinion whether we are in favour of Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar's amendment or not.

Having said so much, I come to my next point and it is this. The Government position is a non possumus one. They say : " We have not come to any decision and we can therefore say nothing ". Therefore as one of the signatories of this Report, what can I say ? I can only say to the House that in the absence of any ground or any reason which may be put forward against this Report you must accept this Report. What is the objection to this Report ? The only objection I can see has come from Colonel Crawford. I was amazed at the speech he made. Not only was I amazed but I wondered, when I was listening to him, whether he was really representing the better mind of the Europeans even in this country. Then came the speech of the leader of the European group. He came to his rescue and his pronouncement, I may say, has regained to a certain extent the shattered reputation of the European party in this House. The leader of the European group spoke not only his mind and that of his party but of his people outside who belonged to his race or community or caste ; I don't know which. It was somewhat halting, hesitating. It lacked spirit. It had no enthusiasm of any kind and it merely said : " Well, the Report is there. The Government have not come to any decision as to their policy. Therefore Europeans in this country must cease thinking until the Government have made up their minds ". He had no opinion to express. Sir, the Europeans express their opinions strongly, loudly and vociferously when their particular interests are concerned, but this is to them a matter of no consequence at all. The other criticism that came from any quarter at all was a suggestion, " Don't play with the Army " – a fine phrase indeed which conveys many things. But may I ask whether the Government wishes to continue to play with the people of India ? Now, Sir, the policy of the Government has been laid down as far back as 1918. The Government of India laid down the policy of admitting Indians to the King's commissions in the Army in India and Indianisation of the officer ranks. The Army in India, as the House knows, is not an Indian army at all. They are His Majesty's Forces stationed in India. The policy was first initiated in 1918. That policy has never been repudiated, but on the contrary, over and over again, it has been affirmed in this House and even in Parliament by the Secretary of State. That policy was that you must Indianize the officer ranks of the Army in India. And, Sir, as my friend Munshi Iswar Saran pointed out, the question was raised in the first Assembly in 1921 and again in 1923. Then, as he pointed out, Resolutions were accepted by the Government. One of the parts of one Resolution was with regard to the establishment of a Sandhurst. Since 1924 I have had the honour of standing on the floor of this House and addressing the Government. I had pointed out in the very first year, in 1924 to Lord Rawlinson, that giving us 10 vacancies at Sandhurst is not playing with the Army but playing with the people of India. To say that 350 millions of people in this country cannot give you 10 boys who can be considered suitable and fit for King's commission is, I say, an insult to the intelligence of this House. What was the plea in reply put forward ? " We cannot get suitable candidates ". Well, how is that matter to be decided ? We pressed and we pressed, and in 1925 this House passed a Resolution for the appointment of a Committee and it was after great pressure had been put upon the Government by the non-official Members on this side that Sir Alexander Muddiman made a declaration in March 1925 that the Government would appoint a Committee. The policy was—and I do not want the House to forget it—to accelerate the Indianization of the officer ranks of the Army in India. Those were inter alia the terms of reference to the Committee. The next question was whether we should supplement the British Sandhurst or whether we should establish a Sandhurst in India. The Committee therefore proceeded to investigate. And what is the position now ? The position is this. You have got this report consisting of 64 pages. And may I ask the Commander-in-Chief what justification there is for him or the Government he represents suppressing and not making available to this House and to the public the materials collected by the Sub-Committee in England, in France, in America and in Canada. May I ask him on what ground he can justify it ? I may say on the floor of this House that, barring the evidence of the Indian cadets, no witness claimed any privilege or stated that he would give his evidence in camera. No such stipulation was made by anybody, either by official or other witnesses, nor by any of the authorities concerned, and I cannot understand on what ground the Government can justify the suppression of those valuable materials which were collected in those four countries. Sir, it is not doing justice to this House to ask this House to deal only with this Report without placing the materials before them on which it is based. The findings in this Report are entirely based on the materials and the evidence which were collected both in this country and in those four countries that I mentioned. Even the evidence recorded in this country of numerous witnesses that were examined is not placed before the Honourable Members. I am sure if the Commander-in-Chief would kindly read the evidence recorded—I mean the evidence of educational authorities—if he had read it he would not then have said as he did say that Mr. Das, the Law Member, was engaged in establishing a public school which would help us a great deal to solve the problem. I will read his words. The Commander-in-Chief said :

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

"In this connection I would like to refer to the efforts being made by one of my Colleagues, the Honourable Mr. Das. Mr. Das, as I think the House probably knows, is making the greatest efforts to establish in India a really fine public school. I sincerely trust that his efforts will meet with the success they deserve. He is working wholeheartedly in the matter, and, should he succeed in his efforts, I honestly believe we should have overcome the first of the many very great difficulties in the problem."

Now, Sir, I do not want to be misunderstood. I wish my Honourable friend, Mr. Das, every success, and I do not want to be misunderstood. But, Sir, is this problem going to wait until Mr. Das establishes a public school, and then only it will be solved ? Is that the interpretation, is that the reading, of the voluminous evidence of the educational authorities and the Sandhurst Committee's Report ? Surely, Sir, it is obvious : you have only got to see what the recommendations are. The recommendations are shortly these. At present you have got ten vacancies. The recommendations are that they should be doubled ; and mind you, even the Army Council is not opposed to it. They say " 5 per cent. of the establishment ", which means 20 per year. Now we want 20 suitable boys—we want only 20 suitable boys—in the year 1928 : and does the Commander-in-Chief suggest, do the military authorities suggest, that you cannot get 20 boys in the year 1928, and that you must wait until Mr. Das establishes his public school ? (Laughter.) Then what is the revolutionary change that we suggest later on ? " Increase it by four per year " : and we get to 38—mind you—in 1933. In 1933 we only get as far as 38 vacancies. You mean to suggest that you cannot get 38 suitable boys in the whole of this Continent ? And must we wait for Mr. Das's public school ? Sir, the Committee, remember, were considering the development of the educational system, the co-ordination of the educational system and the co-operation of the educational authorities and the educational organizations, with what object and effect ? A Sandhurst which will be established in India, because, when you establish a Sandhurst or a military academy in India, the Committee then were considering that this military academy of yours, when established in India, will meet with much greater success, and there will be a greater competition, and the finest material will come up for admission to this institution in India ; and it was in order to spur, in order to give the impetus to that object in view that the Committee have made those recommendations. You can, by developing your educational system in this country on the lines laid down in their Report, produce the finest material that you can find anywhere in the world. It does not mean that we have not got sufficient material now or that it would not be forthcoming. Therefore, Sir, Colonel Crawford and probably the Commander-in-Chief, have in mind the system of public schools. I know the conservative British mind, and I do not blame them if they cannot get rid of it from their heads, that the only method in this world by which you can get suitable boys for a military career is the public school system. Now let me tell the House, Sir, that there is no public school system either in America or in Canada or in France or in Germany or any other country that I know of. Now this is a matter which was very carefully considered, and an enormous amount of material was collected on this point, which of course neither the House nor the public has before them.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

Now, Sir, this is one part which is made much of and not correctly represented. If you look at the scheme, what will happen at the most will be this : that in 1933 we get as far as 38 vacancies. Later on, no doubt the number goes on increasing, but even then the highest number, recommended as detailed in the Appendix, will not be more than 125 Indians after 25 years in 1952.

Now, Sir, we come to the question of British recruitment. We are told by Colonel Crawford who seems to be a great authority on the subject—I do not know how he gets all this information, probably he gathered this information at some club when he was in London last—that the British youth refuse to come out or will refuse to come out if the recommendations are given effect to. Colonel Crawford, Sir, is the messenger of the British youth and he has brought this message to this House and to India that the British youth refuse to work either in co-operation with or under Indian officers in the Indian army on their merits. Is that a message of the British youths to India ? What does he mean by saying that birds of the same feather flock together ? What did he mean by suggesting that we should start a Dominion Army which will be entirely Indian ? What did he means by championing the 8-unit scheme? With regard to this 8-unit scheme, if he had read our report—unfortunately, of course, it is true that due to the Government's wrong attitude he has not got all the material before him—, he would have found that it was not only the Indian commissioned officers who objected to this 8-unit scheme, but every British officer commanding the regiments condemned it altogether. (Applause.) There was not a single witness who did not condemn it. When we went to England, the War Office even could not give us any convincing reason why this 8-unit scheme was brought into force. It was due to the decision arrived at by the British Cabinet and the Cabinet, I am informed, consults what is called the " Imperial Defence Committee." Now, Sir, we have fully dealt with the 8-unit scheme and our objections are to be found in the Report. But how was this 8-unit scheme exploited ? It is to be found in the kind of lectures, a specimen of which we have annexed to this Report. Who gave this lecture ? It was given by an officer. And who is this officer ? He is an officer in the India Office and he goes to Sandhurst and tells the British youths that they will never have to serve under Indians and that is why this 8-unit scheme was started. It was a misrepresentation ; it was misleading ; it was poisoning the minds of the British youth. And Colonel Crawford is now the messenger who says that you cannot expect the British officers to accept your social conditions. What does he mean by social conditions ? What has the army officer got to do with social conditions ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Live in a mess and see.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Live in a mess and drink ! (Laughter.) What do you want him to do, to have a drink ? Well, he is quite capable of that. Have you not got 44 Indian King's commissioned officers in the Army to-day ? Even Sandhurst—do they not share mess life ? Sir, I again say : read the evidence and I ask the Government to produce that evidence. Publish it.

Why did you not publish it ? If you read the evidence, you will find that there was not a single European officer to whom this question was not put. Every European officer was asked whether he was getting on well with his colleagues the Indian commissioned officers. There was not a single European officer who said that he was not getting on well with his colleagues or with his subordinates. They had nothing to complain of. Then the Indian commissioned officers are on the most friendly terms with the British officers and get on very well with them. They have got the greatest affection and love for some of their colleagues. What is the good of saying, segregate the Indian officers from the British in the Army ? I am surprised that we should be told to-day on the floor of this House by no less a person than my Honourable friend that he has a brand new scheme which would solve this problem. I ask my Honourable friend Colonel Crawford where was he when the Sandhurst Committee was sitting in India for 8 months and recording the evidence and views of various people ? Colonel Crawford was in India. Sometimes he was next door to the room in which the Committee sat. (Laughter.) Sometimes he even came into the room in which the committee was sitting. (Laughter.) Where was he then ? Why did he not come forward with his magnificent scheme which he has now put forward before the House ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford : I addressed a letter to the Skeen Committee.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Why did he not put forward the scheme that he brought before the House in his speech the other day ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford : I was not allowed to do so.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Who prevented the Honourable Member from doing so ? Well, Sir, this is the spirit of some which really brings discredit to the Europeans in this country. (Applause and Hear, hear.) Well, Sir, you have a man of the position of Colonel Crawford, a Member of this House, connected with the Military, a man with very wide experience, and yet he never came before the Sandhurst Committee, never cared to attend any of its meetings, but he now comes up here with his wonderful scheme. (Laughter.) What is his scheme ? I say that his scheme is absurd and impracticable. I know I shall be told that I am a lawyer and what do I understand about military matters ? I admit I am a lawyer. But, Sir, may I draw his attention to the paragraph in the Report which certainly bears the signature of one of the greatest soldiers in India, Sir Andrew Skeen. Certainly there were on that Committee two commissioned officers holding the rank of Major, and there were also two Viceroy's commissioned officers on that Committee. What do they say about this ? They all agreed to the proposals made in the Report. My Honourable friend Colonel Crawford says : ' Why don't you train up Indian officers '. He says that by that means the Viceroy's Commissioned officers can become

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

King's commissioned officers. What does my Honourable friend mean by that ? I have great admiration for the Viceroy's commissioned officers ; they are brave men, they are heroic men, they have shown their mettle in many a battle front. I must not be misunderstood when I say that there are inherent difficulties in the way of Viceroy's commissioned officers becoming King's commissioned officers. Generally, a man becomes a Viceroy's commissioned officer at the age of 40 or 45. He generally has to rise from the rank of a sepoy who has no education.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : Sometimes.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : No, Sir. It is only now that we are making an effort to have them more or less educated to a certain extent, but it is merely elementary education with which they are equipped. Most of them can hardly read or write. We are making efforts just now to import men with some education. What is the Scheme of my Honourable friend Colonel Crawford ? To prepare these men for King's commissioned officers. Think of a man at the age of 45 being prepared for the King's commission ? Are we to send him to school ? By the time he gets out of the school and is able to get the King's commission, he will be 50. By the time he becomes a Captain, he would have come to the fag end of his service and would be made to retire from the army. He will never have an opportunity of becoming a Major or a Colonel, and certainly never a Lieutenant-Colonel which takes over 26 years of service.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : My exact words are these :

"Instead of taking the men from the ranks at a very late age in life after 15, 16 or 17 years' service, I think I would have taken them after about 4 years' service."

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : My Honourable friend Colonel Crawford forgets how old a sepoy will be when he is recruited. He is perhaps assuming that he will be 16 or 18 years of age when he is recruited as a sepoy. Why should he assume that ? Even granting that he would be 18, here is the absurdity which I would point out to my Honourable friend who claims to be the military authority. Whom will you get ? A poor sepoy's boy. No man is going to join as a sepoy on a paltry pay of Rs. 17 if he has any guts in him and better prospects. You will get a man who is the son of a poor man, you will get a man who cannot find a paying occupation anywhere else. How can you expect a boy of eighteen who is a matriculate to join as a sepoy ? What kind of boy would you get then ? What education can you give that boy ? Then this boy is to remain in the Army as a sepoy, according to Colonel Crawford. He enters the Army at the age of 18. Then after 5 years you give him the Viceroy's commission. Why ? What will he do with the Viceroy's commission ? For 5 years he has to remain as a sepoy before he gets a Viceroy's commission ; and what has he to do thereafter ? To prepare for his studies to qualify himself to obtain a King's commission. It is the most fantastic, absurd and ridiculous scheme to be proposed by anybody.

And, Sir, what is more we have dealt with the idea which is not new. If you turn to page 32, paragraph 28. We have shown in our Report the greatest solicitude and the utmost consideration for the soldier class and their sons. We have provided for them in various ways. Sir, one of the provisions comes under the heading of Grant of King's Commissions to Viceroy's Commissioned Officers. This is what we say: you have non-commissioned officers in England who are occasionally imported into the commissioned ranks for their exceptional merits. Similarly, we say that Viceroy's commissioned officers should stand on the same footing as non-commissioned officers, and we recommend that Viceroy's commissioned officers should be given opportunities of qualifying for King's commissions analogous to those afforded to non-commissioned officers in the British Army. We considered this to be feasible and have laid down how a certain class and a certain number, selected for the purpose, may be given that opportunity. And we say that we recognise that at the present time the number of officers holding Viceroy's commissions who would satisfy the above conditions is small, the reason being that direct Viceroy's commissions are now seldom, if ever, granted, and that the standard of education prevailing among the classes which enlist in the ranks of the Indian Army is, as a general rule, very low.

Mr. President : I do not wish to interrupt the Honourable Member at all because I know this is his special subject and he is entitled to much greater latitude than others ; but if his desire is that the Resolution should be pressed to a division to-day, he must conclude within five minutes; otherwise the Resolution must go on to the next day.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I am much obliged, Sir. I have really practically finished. I have dealt with education ; I have dealt with Colonel Crawford's scheme ; then I have dealt with British recruitment. These are the three matters with which the House is really concerned at present.

Now, Sir, I will only say this. I have got two more points which I want to put to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. The first, Sir, is this. I ask the Commander-in-Chief what has he done with regard to the question of the official guardianship at Sandhurst ? Question No. 1. Question No. 2. I ask him what steps have the Government of India taken with regard to the question of admission of Indians to the Officers Training Corps at the universities? Sir, those are two matters which have nothing to do with high Imperial policy and they do not require, I take it, the consent or the approval of the Imperial Defence Committee. At any rate. so far as the guardianship is concerned, Sir, the House knows already that we have dealt with it. The present guardian, Colonel Stooks, is a man who has been proved beyond all doubt to be a hysterical, unsuitable and incompetent person. Now, the Committee have said that the present arrangements with regard to the guardianship are highly unsatisfactory. Of course it is put in very polite language. But if you could look into the record, which is still suppressed, you would have realised what sort of guardian Colonel Stooks is. It is not merely that the Sub-Committee discovered it there. Let me tell His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief that complaints about him came before the main Committee before the Sub-Committee started, which have affected the good name of Sandhurst in India, and they were so serious that the main Committee actually formulated express instructions in writing for us on this matter, and when we went there the reports and information we already had were fully confirmed beyond doubt ; and I would like to know what steps the Government of India have taken with regard to that matter.

As to the Officers' Training Corps also you know that no Indians are allowed or admitted to the Officers' Training Corps of the universities there.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

It was pointed out that it was not fair and we have not yet got a reply to it. It is dealt with in our Report also—that this works the greatest possible hardship. In the first place the Indian who is at the university if he wants to get a King's commission, will not be allowed to claim an ante-date because, unless he has had training in an Officers' Training Corps, an Indian is not admitted and then refused the ante-date. So it comes to this that he is not admitted into the Officers' Training Corps, he is not allowed to claim an ante-date. Therefore you go round and round. That is one handicap. The other handicap is that when you have a boy of a particular age, at the university, that is the period of his life when this training is most useful and most valuable ; he happens to be young and at the university and he is not allowed to enter the Officers' Training Corps Therefore, when he comes back to this country at a maturer age, he can not possibly then go in for the training with the same advantage and with the same valuable results and cannot avail himself of the Indian Territorial Force which exists. It was said that the Officers' Training Corps is intended primarily for the British Territorial Army, but no Indian would care to be in it because I think there is hardly any Indian youth—there may be an exception here and there—who would stay on in England ; most Indian boys who go there come back.

These are the two points which certainly do not require either the approval or the consent of the Imperial Defence Committee or of the Cabinet and I think the Government might give us some information with regard to those two points.

In conclusion, Sir, I would say this : I am aware that a certain clique exists in England. The India Office is surrounded by it and the only place that we went to and that had its atmosphere fouled by this clique was Sandhurst. At every other place we were received and treated with every consideration ; Sandhurst was the only place which was sought to be spoiled by this clique ; and I say to the better-minded Europeans who are in this country and to the better-minded Englishmen in Great Britain, " If this is your message from your youth, that they are not willing to co-operate, if they are not willing to work and take their rank according to their merits in this country, tear up the Declaration of August 1917 , tear it up now and here and say to the people of India " We are here to rule and nothing else." Sir, I find there may be some difficulty because it may be said after all you have got to deal with young men. But who is responsible for poisoning their minds ? It was the same old story when the Indian Civil Service was being Indianised, when we were told in this country by many who now sit on the Treasury Benches " If you are going to Indianise the Civil Service, we shall tender our resignation ; we are not going to be your servants ". It was the same story when the Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms were introduced. We were told by many Englishmen that they would leave this country rather than submit to these reforms as they could not work the Reforms. But we find, Sir, we have survived those threats. (Laughter from the Swarajist Benches), and I find that the Treasury Benches are full of those gentlemen some of whom probably had threatened to resign, but they probably thought better of it. (Laughter from the Swarajist Benches). But, I say, Sir, let us not be carried away by these threats.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must thank himself if this debate goes over to another day.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : After that, Sir, I will say nothing more, and I will once more appeal to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief not to swerve from the assurance which he has given on the floor of this House and not to play with Indian people any more.

(At this stage several Honourable Members rose to speak.)

Mr. President : Is it the desire of the House that the debate should go over to another day ?

(Several Honourable Members moved : that the question be put.)

Mr. G. M. Young (Army Secretary) : Sir, on the first day of this debate His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, when concluding his speech in words that have just been quoted by my friend Mr. Jinnah, expressed the hope that the occasion might be regarded more as a means of eliciting the opinions of Honourable Members of this House than as one for an attack on the Government. With all deference to my friend Mr. Jinnah, I venture to repeat that hope to-day. If the Honourable Member who has moved this Resolution presses it to a division, Government will have no option but to oppose it, and that for reasons which are not connected with the merits of the Indian Sandhurst Committee's Report. It is true, Sir, that Government have already sent to England their own provisional recommendations on the Report. They did this as soon as they could, partly in order to initiate the discussion with His Majesty's Government as soon as possible, but more particularly in the hope that they might be able to put definite proposals before this House during the current Session. They realised that Honourable Members would be in a better position to make their own views clear and to offer constructive criticism, if they had, so to speak, something to bite on. That hope was not, however, fulfilled, because His Majesty's Government were unable, in the short time available before Parliament dispersed, to examine sufficiently the tentative proposals of the Government of India. As a result, Honourable Members have been able to offer opinions on the subject-matter of the Report only, and merely to conjecture the attitude of Government towards it.

As the House has already been informed, these opinions will be very carefully considered by the Government of India, who will then forward to His Majesty's Secretary of State a despatch conveying the proceedings in this House and in another place, and setting forth at length their own views in the light of the opinions now expressed.

Many of the speeches, Sir, have contained constructive criticism, which is likely to be of help to the Government of India and His Majesty's Government in reaching their conclusions. But the Government of India cannot be expected to reach their conclusions here and now, or while the division bell is ringing. Until they have had reasonable time to consider the speeches made in this debate, they cannot commit themselves to the expression of any opinion on the specific recommendations in the Report. They will have to oppose the motion simply and solely because they have not come to their decisions. At the same time, as His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has indicated, it will be a great pity if the Government of India and His Majesty's Government conduct their further examination of the Report in the difficult atmosphere which a defeat or even a victory for Government in the division lobby is bound to create. It cannot be denied, Sir, that the Report, thorough as it is in many respects, has raised almost as many problems as it purports to solve. It is the Government of India and His Majesty's Government that have to work out these further problems ; and they will be glad of all the help that they can get from Honourable Members in the Indian Legislature. They will not obtain that help from the mere passing or rejection of this Resolution. I would, therefore, suggest to my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje, who has moved the Resolution, that he has served a most useful purpose in moving it, by providing the Government with his own views and with those of others who have taken part in this debate, that in effect his object has been attained and that nothing more will be gained by pressing it to the vote.

[Mr. G. M. Young.]

I should like to refer here, Sir, to a matter which I know has occasioned a good deal of criticism and disappointment and has been referred to at length by my Honourable friend, Mr. Jinnah, just now, namely, the decision of the Government of India not to publish the Report of the Sub-Committee that visited Europe and America.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : My point was not in reference to the Report of the Sub-Committee only, but the report and the material which they had collected.

Mr. G. M. Young : I will deal both with the report and the material. I will confess at once that there is nothing in this report which need embarrass the Government of India in formulating whatever policy they may ultimately adopt. There are other reasons for not publishing it.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : What are they ?

Mr. G. M. Young : At a very early stage the question arose whether certain of the proceedings of the Sub-Committee should be published. Part of these proceedings consisted of conversations which took place between representatives from the War Office and the India Office on the one hand and the members of the Sub-Committee on the other. It is not usual, Sir, to publish such conversations, and in any case His Majesty's Government intimated to the Government of India some time before the main Committee's Report was completed.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Sir, I beg to contradict that. There were no conversations at all and taken down as such.

Mr. President : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to interrupt unless the Army Secretary gives way.

Mr. G. M. Young : I said, Sir, in any case the Home Government intimated to the Government of India that they were unwilling to consent to the publication of any of the material voluntarily laid before the Sub-Committee by the War Office and the India Office. The Report of the Sub-Committee makes extensive use of this material, and could only have been published after so much excision that much of its value as an informative document would have been lost.

There was another reason to which I should not have referred if it had not been made public by a member of the Sub-Committee speaking in another place, and also by my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah just now. The Sub-Committee passed certain strictures on the personality of the retired officer who is the appointed guardian to Indian cadets at Sandhurst. These strictures appear to have been based on statements made in camera to the Sub-Committee by Indian cadets. The Sub-Committee were, of course, at liberty to put forward any personal opinion, and to refer to any evidence taken in camera when they reported to the main Committee. But the Government of India do not consider that these matters could properly be published in a State paper. The main Committee took the correct course. They pointed out defects in the system, and explained their view of what an ideal guardian for Indian cadets at Sandhurst should be. Their recommendations were fully considered by the Government of India, and the Government of India have forwarded their own provisional recommendations on this subject to the Secretary of State. But the main Committee did not on this occasion quote from the Sub-Committee ; and they refrained altogether from personalities.

There are other passages which the Government of India did not wish to include in a published paper ; but I need not detain the House with them. My point is that, while the Sub-Committee's Report was an able document and admirably served the purpose for which it was compiled, namely, to assist the main Committee in the preparation of their report. the main Committee themselves, though they desired the publication of the Sub-Committee's Report, evidently recognised that there might be objections to doing so.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : No, Sir. May I point out to the Honourable Member that the main Committee at two sittings, after careful deliberation, decided that the report of the Sub-Committee and the proceedings should be published. Then the Secretary of the Committee was directed to so communicate the decision to the Government of India.

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I have already stated that the main committee desired the publication of the Report, and I have seen the minutes of the proceedings of the main committee to which my Honourable friend refers. But the main committee neither appended the Sub-Committee's Report as one of the annexures to their Report, nor did they invite reference to it. On the contrary, they quoted from it extracts long enough to weary the reader, if he also had the Sub-Committee's Report by him. (An Honourable Member: " I hope you have read them.") I have read them, both Sir, the whole report and the extracts. Still, if there had been no positive reasons in the body of the Sub-Committee's Report against its publication, Government might have published it, even though it would have seemed superfluous to do so.

There is one other passage in Sir Phiroze Sethna's remarks which requires correction. He said that I had stated that only one member of the Committee had desired the publication of the Sub-Committee's Report, and that I afterwards corrected that statement. I wish to place on record the fact, known, I think, to Honourable Members of this House, that I never made the statement, and consequently never had to correct it. This misstatement was made, not by me, but by the correspondent of one newspaper, which corrected its own mistake some days before Sir Phiroze Sethna spoke.

[Mr. G. M. Young.]

Well, Sir, I have perhaps detained the House too long over this topic. My excuse must be that it has attracted a great deal of attention and criticism.

Sir, as I said before, Government are not in a position to meet this Resolution except by a formal negative ; but if Honourable Members still entertain any suspicion that the Government of India are merely playing for time and that their object is to shelve the Report, I would once more call attention to the fact that Government have already made considerable progress in their examination of it, and that their own tentative proposals will be most thoroughly re-examined in the light of the opinions expressed and the suggestions put forward in the Indian Legislature.

Lastly, I would invite Honourable Members to consider a passage in the much criticised " Foreword " with which the Report was published by the Government of India. With your permission, Sir, I will read it now :

"The Government of India, when called upon to deal with any scheme of increasing Indianization extending over a number of years must leave themselves free to consider whether the basis of that scheme offers the sure stable line of advance towards the creation of a Dominion Army, or whether alternative methods, which did not fall within the Committee's terms of reference, might not more profitably be explored."

Now, Sir, here is an explicit statement that the Government of India are setting themselves to deal with a scheme of increasing Indianization. They leave themselves free in one respect—to explore alternative methods : alternative methods, not alternative subjects, as the Honourable Member, Munshi Iswar Saran, said this morning. He may have left himself free in his speech to explore other subjects, but the Government of India intend to stick to the point. Surely, Sir, the passage which I have just quoted is a very significant pronouncement. It shows, if any further proof were needed, that the Government of India are in earnest in this matter At the risk of repetition, I will emphasise again the two main considerations which must accompany the elaboration of this or any scheme. One is that the system employed for conferring commissions in larger numbers upon Indians must be comprehensive and sound in its working: it should leave no factor out of account: it must be safeguarded, as far as is humanly possible, against failure. The other consideration is one the necessity for which was amply illustrated by my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje in his speech when he moved the Resolution, namely, that during the process of development, and after, the efficiency of the Army as a fighting machine must not in any way be impaired. One may introduce experimental reforms, Sir, in the constitution, or in a branch of the civil administration, and trust to experience and to public criticism to bring to light any defects that there may be. A Royal Commission, perhaps, will come along in due course and make recommendations to remedy those defects. But if one makes a faulty experiment with the fighting forces, on which the very life of the country depends, one may wake up one morning to find that it is too late to put things right. I do not think, Sir, that on the fundamental principle there is any real difference between the aims of the Honourable Mover of this Resolution and those of the Government.....

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Then accept it.

Mr. G. M. Young :....and that is why I ask him not to press his Resolution to the vote.

(Several Honourable Members moved : that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : On a personal explanation, Sir. I hope I am not misunderstood that I am trying to go back on the signature that I have put to the Report. I fully support the Report.

Mr. President : I am sure the House has fully understood the Honourable Member.

(At this stage Dr. B. S. Moonje rose in his place.)

Mr. President : I hope the Honourable Member realises that there is yet a reply by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and that this debate must terminate at 4 o'clock.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : I shall be very brief. I am very sorry that there is no time. So many points have been raised that certainly require explanation and yet I am hard pressed for time....

Mr. President : The Chair has no objection if the Honourable Member wishes to make a long speech.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : I know the risk of prolonging my speech and therefore I will not take that risk. I am prepared to say that I am willing to accept the amendment of my Honourable friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. He lays emphasis upon revision. The Report also provides for revision. The amendment says that the recommendations of the Committee are not satisfactory. I do not think there is anybody here—except perhaps amongst the European Members I do not know, but amongst at least the Indians—who will be in a position to say that the recommendations of the Skeen Committee are really satisfactory. (An Honourable Member : "They also say that.") But they say so for quite another reason. Their point of view is diametrically opposed to ours. There is ample reason for us to be dissatisfied with the recommendations of the Skeen Committee. The Indian Sandhurst is schemed to cater for only 100 Indian boys; while the English Sandhurst caters for more than 600 English boys. Besides the Skeen Committee do not recommend the establishment of an Indian Woolwich and Cranwell. But we Indians are in this helpless position that we have to be satisfied with half a loaf even though that half of a loaf may not be enough to satisfy our hunger. I do not know whether even that half a loaf will be given to us.

The recommendations of the Skeen Committee can be divided into two groups, one regarding the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst, and the other regarding making provision for training a certain number of Indian boys in Woolwich and Cranwell in England, and both the groups of recommendations have been accepted by the Government at one stage or another previously. I am really surprised to-day that the Government should fight shy of those very recommendations. If I had time I could have proved it by quoting from the Legislative Assembly Debates of 1921, 1923, and

[Dr. B. S. Moonje.]

1925. In this House there are three groups of people—the Indians, the Europeans, and perhaps the group which is represented by my Honourable friend, Sir Abdul Qaiyum.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is introducing a very debatable matter now.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : As I have said in my opening speech, this is a question of life and death to us. There is no knowing what is going to happen in the next 10 or 15 years. There is a country which is known as the tribal country, and there is another country known as Afghanistan, and if at any time connection between Britain and India be broken up in any future great war or be suspended, there is no knowing what will happen to the Indians of India. When the invasion comes what will be our position I shudder to think. History has told us and we should take a lesson from history as to what that position will be. I am quoting from the History of Great Britain by the Rev. Robert Henry, D.D., first Volume page 120 and then I will close. When the Britons were invaded in 416 A.D. by Scots and Picts, history records that the conditions of Britons at the time was much the same as ours is at the present moment. History says :

" By the policy of the Romans (who were then ruling over Britain as the English are doing to-day over India) they (Britons) had been long deprived of the use and exercise of arms ; that they now remained a timid disorderly multitude ready to become an easy prey to the first bold invader ".

That was the condition of the Britons at the time. I do not think any Indian in this House would agree to be reduced to the same position and therefore we are anxious that the recommendations of the Skeen Committee, halting, unsatisfactory and inadequate as they are, should be given effect to.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney (Nominated : Anglo-Indians) : On a point of order, Sir. May I ask for a ruling from you, as to whether you would be prepared to divide the amendment into two parts and put them separately to the vote of the House. The first part is the preamble to which some of us cannot subscribe. The second is the operative part for which some of us may want to vote.

Mr. President : That is not a question of any ruling. It is entirely within the discretion of the Chair, and the Chair is not prepared to exercise that discretion in the manner suggested.

Mr. President : The original question was :

" That the following Resolution be adopted :

' This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that as a beginning in the direction of preparing India for self-defence immediate steps be taken to bring about the Indianisation of half the cadre of officers in the Indian Army, unanimously recommended by the Skeen Committee, within a period of fifteen years, and to carry out the unanimous recommendations of the Committee with regard to the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst and the recruitment of Indian officers in those arms of the defensive forces, paid for out of Indian revenues, from which they are at present excluded '."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

" Subject to the revision of the whole scheme of the defence of the country in any future constitution for India acceptable to the people of India, and while feeling that the recommendations of the Indi continuance of British recruitment, do not satisfy if of opinion that the acceptance of the unanimous recommendations of that Committee will mark a definite beginning in the Indianisation of the Army in India, and it therefore recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to accept those recommendations and give immediate effect to them '.''

The question is that that amendment be made.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : Diwan Chaman Lall.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Sir, I am not moving my Resolution. With your permission I wish to withdraw it.

Mr. President : Sir Victor Sassoon.

(Sir Victor Sassoon stood up but did not move his Resolution next on the agenda).

Mr. President : Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar.

(Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar nodded his head, intending to convey that he did not want to move his Resolution No. 4 on the List).

Mr. President : Mr. Ram Narayan Singh :

(At this stage there was laughter and considerable confusion in the House.)

RESOLUTION RE MANUFACTURE AND SALE OF KHADI.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh (Chota Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move the Resolution which stands in my name and runs as follows :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to start Khadi (Hand spun and hand woven clothes) depots in each provincial capital with branches in each district therein for the manufacture and sale of Khadi under the entire management of the local Provincial Congress Committee and to set apart at least a sum of one crore of rupees for the purpose in the next annual Budget ".

Sir, this is a very simple Resolution but it deals with a subject that vitally concerns the very existence of the people of this country. In support of this, I shall submit but a few arguments containing very simple reasons. Sir, we Indians, as a nation in the world, want to be capable to clothe ourselves as a result of our own efforts. Sir, how long are we to depend for our clothes upon foreign countries. The very idea that we have to depend on foreign countries, that we cannot hide our shame, and that we cannot clothe ourselves is very galling to us. The point I wish to impress upon the House is that we Indians in the past have been able to clothe not only ourselves but also a large proportion of the people of other countries. But now the position is that we have to depend upon imports from foreign countries in order to clothe ourselves. During the last European war, when imports were reduced, a large number of families had to remain shut up for all the 24 hours because they lacked clothes. Who knows that such a state of affairs may not arise again ; the probability is that such occasions will arise always. I submit, therefore, Sir, that the House should carry this Resolution unanimously and that it be given effect to by the Government.

[Mr. Ram Narayan Singh.]

Now there may be some who will say that with the advent of machinery of an advanced type there is no use of talking about handlooms, charkas, etc. But the point is that this country is not in a position to purchase any more modern machinery to meet its demands. If it had been, we should, by now, have got all the machinery we need for the purpose and more mills would have been set up. So this argument to have more mills really falls to the ground.

Then it may be said what is the use of having charkas, and looms, when we can get the cloth at a cheaper cost from foreign countries ? Sir, I would say in reply that till the end of the 18th century, this country used to send its Khadi (cotton fabrics) even to European countries. Why not revive that and make the country economically free ? Besides, even if we had the resources to purchase machinery and set up more mills, that would mean an extension of the factory system, and that system is a much worse thing than the cottage industry systems which produce Khadi. Another point is that Khadi can in fairness excel any mill made cloth. We know that even now one can spin yarn of about 500 counts by means of the charka, whereas mills cannot produce yarn of more than 200 counts. We know from history that in the time of Aurangzeb a Princess wore Khadi of seven folds at a time and even then she appeared naked, so fine was the fabric. Not only that; in matters of Khadi, whatever we spend goes to the village itself. The village blacksmith supplies the spindle, the village carpenters supply the charka and loom, and so on and so forth. Every pice, every penny, which is spent in regard to Khadi goes to the village, whereas in the matter of mill-made cloth, a vast sum of money has to be spent first as capital, and that money goes to a foreign country. Moreover, as regards the profit, much of it is every year spent in purchasing new parts to replace the old ones which are no longer fit for any further use and this too goes to foreign lands. Thus only a little of it remains in the country. Let us take another argument. Sometimes there is internal trouble in the country also, and it is not possible that we may have mills in every province, in every district. In times of internal trouble, the part of the country dependent on other parts thereof will thus have to suffer, but by means of Khadi, all provinces, even districts can be made self-supporting and independent. What to speak of provinces and districts, I can say, every thana, every village and even every family can be made self-supporting and independent. It is therefore, Sir, that Khadi should be introduced throughout the country.

But there are people who might ask, if Khadi has so many advantages and, if it already existed in the country, why is it not prospering in the country to-day, why has it failed at all, why has it not succeeded in competition with the foreign mill-made cloth ? Sir, everybody knows that in this country the Khadi industry has not died out, nor has it failed in competition with mill-made yarn. Everybody knows that it was the foreign capitalist, it was the East India Company that killed the Khadi industry in the country. Sir, those who do not know this are requested to read the history of the country of the 18th and 19th centuries, and I request them specially to read the evidence of Warren Hastings, Dr. Monro and other great people that they gave before the House of Commons' Committee.

Mr. President : Order, order. Khadi must give way to the motion for adjournment. Diwan Chaman Lall.

4 P.M.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, after the speech in support of one home industry (the Khaddar industry), I beg leave to speak in support of another home industry, namely, motions for adjournment (Laughter). Sir, my motion for an adjournment reads as follows :

"to discuss a matter of recent and urgent public importance, namely, the affront offered to the Legislative Assembly by the Government in withdrawing this Session the Gold Standard and Reserve Bank Bill before the Assembly had had an opportunity of discussing the remaining clauses of the Bill."

Sir, I speak on this motion as one who desires to uphold constitutional practice, and as one who has no desire in any way to cast any reflection upon the Finance Member as an individual. I realize the difficulties of the Finance Member ; and it is because I realize those difficulties that I want the House to support the Finance Member in any action that he might take in order that this Bill should be brought before the House.....

Mr. President : Order, order. If that is the Honourable Member's object, he should not have moved this motion at all. This motion is a direct vote of censure on the Finance Member. If he desires to move it, he might proceed with a knowledge of the full implications of his action.

Diwan Chaman Lall : The censure is the censure of the Secretary of State and of the Government of India.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Secretary of State does not come in at all. The Honourable Member by this motion calls into question the decision of the Governor General in Council. The Honourable Member will not therefore be entitled to refer to the Secretary of State in his speech.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Sir, in this dose of poison that I am going to administer to the Finance Member, there is a little bit of honey in it. (Laughter.) If it is constitutionally held that it is a censure of the action of the Finance Member, let it be so held. But I am going to explain that even if it is held constitutionally that it is a motion for the censure of the Finance Member's action, nevertheless we intend to support any strong action that the Finance Member may take in bringing this Bill before the House.

Now, Sir, the question is this. When the Currency Commission was appointed, it was never the intention that a simple Reserve Bank should be instituted in this country. The questionnaire was to the effect that measures should be adopted for modifying the rules and changing the constitution of the Imperial Bank in order that that Imperial Bank should be empowered to be put in charge of the note issue. That was the original intention. But when the Currency Commission reported it was discovered that the disadvantages accruing from that procedure far outweighed the advantages that might accrue if the Imperial Bank was so empowered. (Several Honourable Members : " No, no ".) Naturally, the matter came up before this House and we had an opportunity of discussing it. Sir, I heard a little while ago, some of my friends saying " No, no ". I take it that the Noes come from those gentlemen who represent Bombay. (Several Honourable Members : " No, no.") Even at that time Bombay was against this principle of setting up the Central Reserve Bank and they have continued their opposition consistently.

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

Mr. President : All references to the merits of the Reserve Bank Bill or anything of that kind are out of order on this motion. The Honourable Member must confine himself to the constitutional question, namely, the affront offered to this House by the action of the Governor General in Council in withdrawing this Session this particular Bill without giving an opportunity to the House to discuss and decide on the remaining clauses thereof.

Diwan Chaman Lall : With due deference to the Chair, what I am trying to do at the present moment is to detail very briefly the history of this Bill in order to show that it is important that this Bill should not be withdrawn.

Mr. President : I thank the Honourable Member for showing due deference to the ruling of the Chair, but he must accept and act upon it. He must confine himself to the constitutional issue which he has raised.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Sir, I bow to your ruling. The constitutional issue that I have raised is this that, when this Bill has been before this Legislative Assembly, when it has been discussed in the Joint Committee, when it has been before the country for several months, when so much time of this Legislature and of Honourable Members who sat on the Joint Committee has been consumed in discussion of this Bill, the Government have all of a sudden for reasons best known to themselves thought it fit to withdraw that Bill from the Legislative Assembly, and I consider that this action of theirs certainly deserves the censure of this House. That, I take it, Sir, is the real constitutional issue which is in point, and it is because of this constitutional issue that I want now to state the reasons why we consider that not only this Bill should not have been withdrawn from this Legislature because of its importance but also because.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is now discussing the merits of the Reserve Bank Bill. I cannot allow the Honourable Member to do so.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Sir, I have no intention of going into the merits of the Bill.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member says that the Bill should not have been withdrawn because of its importance. This is going beyond the constitutional question raised by the motion.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I merely want to discuss the importance of the issue that we have before us, namely, that the constitutional issue that has been raised now has been raised because of the Bill having been withdrawn. We want to tell the House that this Bill should not have been withdrawn. This House has certain privileges of its own and the Government of India should in due deference to the wishes of the Legislature take the sense of this House and not withdraw in this summary fashion any Bill that may have been brought before it.

That is the main point at issue. Here we have Standing Order 4 (1) which says :

" On the termination of a session all pending notices shall lapse and fresh notice must be given for the next session."

Now, the action of the Government of India in withdrawing this Bill from the Legislative Assembly means that this motion that has been placed before the Legislative Assembly by the Honourable the Finance Member will lapse if the Bill is not re-introduced. (An Honourable Member : " No ".) I hope my Honourable friend who cried out, " No ", will have the patience to listen to what I am going to say further. Let me turn to Standing Order 4 (2) which says :

" On the termination of a session, Bills which have been introduced shall be carried over to the pending list of busines of the next session :

Provided that, if the member in charge of a Bill makes no motion in regard to the same during two complete sessions, the Bill shall lapse, unless the Assembly, on a motion by that member in the next session, makes a special order for the continuance of the Bill."

Sir, now I hope that the Honourable Member over there who cried out " No, no " will, in view of what I have read from the Standing Orders of this Assembly, realise that when a Bill has been withdrawn by the Honourable Member in charge of the same without giving this Assembly any specific date on which he intends to bring it back to the House, we must take it that it is not his intention to bring back that Bill to the Assembly. We take it that the Bill will lapse, all the motions which he made in regard to the Bill will lapse. All the efforts of the Honourable Members of the Assembly who have been apprised of the various clauses of the Bill, who have discussed the various clauses at length, who have been given some time to come to a compromise with the Honourable the Finance Member in regard to this Bill and who have shown a spirit of accommodation unknown in the history of this Legislature, I say all the efforts of the Honourable Members will have proved fruitless. I appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member that under these circumstances it was up to him to have consulted the wishes of non-official Members of this House before he took the step that he did.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Who will suffer the cost of the Committee ? (Laughter.)

Diwan Chaman Lall : I do not know what Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed is referring to when he says who will suffer the cost. Certainly it is the Honourable the Finance Member to whom he should apply (Laughter). The question before us is simply this. Should the Government of India not act on its own initiative in matters of this nature.

Mr. President : That again is not the question at issue. There is no reason to suppose that the Government of India have not acted on their own initiative. The Honourable Member has merely called into question the decision of the Governor General in Council.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I know we have nothing before us. We have also heard a rumour and it has also found a place in the Press. If you, Mr. President, will pardon me for mentioning it, it is rumoured that the

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

Honourable the Finance Member did actually tender his resignation, (Hear, hear.)

Mr. President : Order, order. I must rule references, to rumours out of order.

Diwan Chaman Lall : What we have before us at the present moment is this. This Bill having been withdrawn, there must be some cogent reasons for the action of the Government. At the present moment, I want to know what those cogent reasons are which have compelled the Government to withdraw this Bill from the purview of the Central Legislature ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member will hear that presently.

Diwan Chaman Lall : If the Government have withdrawn this Bill for any cogent reasons, I submit these cogent reasons should have been placed before us and we should have been apprised of them. As it is at the present moment, all that we have is a statement by the Honourable the Finance Member that he does not intend to proceed with the Bill at present. That is the guarded statement that he has made. I consider that this is an affront to the Central Legislature. I consider that this is an affront not only to the Central Legislature, but to all those Members and to all those leaders of parties who have co-operated so strenuously with the Honourable Member. I consider it to be an affront also to the members of the Joint Committee who have given of their very best to this measure and who have done everything in their part in order that this measure should be brought on the Statute-book. I consider that under those circumstances, the action that has been taken by the Government of India is an action which ought to be condemned. At the risk of being called to order, I do not intend to say one harsh word in this matter about the Honourable the Finance Member himself personally. (Laughter). I will say everything there is to be said about the Government of India. I consider this is a matter of long standing grievance. It is a matter which has exercised the ingenuity of many a Secretary of State and many a Viceroy in this country right down from 1870 and 1874. We have heard the same story, namely, decisions being taken by the Government of India in regard to business brought before the Legislative Assembly and then suddenly that business being dropped, we do not know why. History shows that very often in the past legislation has been stopped because of the action of the Secretary of State for India. We have got evidence that in 1870, one Secretary of State did this, and so on right through Indian constitutional history we have the same story repeated. I am indebted to my Honourable friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar for such constitutional facts as are contained in this valuable book of which he is the author. And I would advise Honourable Members to read this book most carefully.

Now, Sir, the question, as I have already stated, is not only that the action of the Government of India was wrong in having withdrawn this Bill from the purview of the Legislative Assembly, but but I consider that morally it could not be defended. Here are we who have met here in this Assembly at great inconvenience to many Members, who have met for one special purpose apart from various other small matters that were likely to come up this Session, and that was to see that this Bill was put on the Statute-book.

Mr. President : All that is beside the point. The merits of the Reserve Bank Bill and the desirability or urgency of putting it on the Statute-book have absolutely got nothing to do with the question which the Honourable Member has raised. If the Honourable Member has nothing new to add to what he has already said, he had better give an opportunity to other Honourable Members who might wish to speak on the motion.

Diwan Chaman Lall : If the measure was bad, what was the point of my moving the adjournment of the House ?

Mr. President : According to the Honourable Member's motion for adjournment, Government had no business to withdraw the Bill at that stage without consulting this House, apart from the question whether the Bill was good or bad.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I quite accept that, Sir. The Government have no business to withdraw this measure and I have said so. I am now simply adding to my reasons for thinking so, and if I am not allowed to add to the reasons I have already given, I will confine myself to the one narrow issue which the President wants me to confine myself to, namely, that it is indefensible constitutionally.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is only repeating himself.

Diwan Chaman Lall : No doubt lawyers on the other side will turn round and say that whatever has been done is perfectly within the purview of the Government of India. They are perfectly right in doing so. I do not say that legally they are not right in doing what they have done, but morally I say they are wrong. And I consider that their action should be censured by the House.

Mr. President : I very much regret to have to point out again that the Honourable Member is repeating himself. If he has nothing new to add, he had better allow other Members an opportunity of speaking.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I do not intend to allow this discussion to turn into a duologue between myself and the Chair.

Mr. President : That is just what the Honourable Member is doing.

Diwan Chaman Lall : But I do consider, Sir, that this matter is of such vital importance that some sort of latitude ought to be allowed in a matter like this when we are discussing a constitutional issue.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must realise that the Chair is determined to keep this debate strictly within the bounds of order. The Chair will not allow any Honourable Member to refer to the merits or demerits of the Reserve Bank Bill.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I do not intend now, Sir, to refer either to the merits or demerits of the Reserve Bank Bill. What I do say is this matter being narrow as it is, being confined to that one constitutional point, we have a right to refer to this question, whether in the past the Government of India have done what they are being charged with doing to-day and how constitutional practice has grown up.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the question before the House is really a vote of censure upon the Government of India. The vote of censure upon the Government of India is based on the following grounds. It seems, Sir, that the Honourable the Finance Member has not withdrawn the Bill technically. (An Honourable Member : " Hasn't he ?"). No, he has not ; you have not understood it. Under Standing Order 50 he cannot withdraw the Bill because Standing Order 50 says he can withdraw the Bill only by leave of the House. He did not resort to that procedure at all, but what he has done is this, that he has flouted this House, the Government have shown an affront to this House by adopting a procedure which raises a very grave constitutional issue and it is this. The further consideration of the Bill happens to be Government business ; and under Standing Order 7 you will find that that business is arranged by the Secretary. I will read out the Standing Order.

The Standing Order is as follows :

" On the days allotted for the transaction of Government business the Secretary shall arrange that business in such order as the Governor General in Council may direct."

The Finance Member was only a little courteous to the House by previously announcing that on Monday, that being a day for Government business, this item would not be placed on the List—I think I am correct in saying that—and thereby he has deprived this House of further consideration of this Bill. Now, Sir, I should like to know on what ground this procedure was adopted ? What are the reasons ? We feel that really it is the grossest discourtesy to this House. At what stage were we ? We were at this stage : the Finance Member said that he was willing to proceed with the Reserve Bank Bill on the understanding that it should be a State Bank, provided on this side of the House we did not insist upon this Legislature or any Legislature being formed into an electorate for the purpose of representation on the Board of Directors. That part of the Bill, namely, that it should be a State Bank, was passed. Then we came to the stage of the Board of Directors. The Finance Member stated on the floor of this House—he will correct me if I am wrong, I am speaking only from memory—that he would be prepared to consider any scheme for the constitution of the Board of Directors provided it did not contain any element of representation of the Legislature, and if that scheme was acceptable to the majority of the Members of this House he was willing to consider it. He therefore said that it was up to the non-official Members on this side to put before him a scheme on that footing. That was under consideration ; I will not go into the details, but since then he put forward a scheme which is known now all over the world as the stockholders' scheme. I think it must have reached London also by now. Now, he was good enough—and I am extremely grateful to him for showing that courtesy to us—to take us into his confidence and discuss with us his stockholders' scheme ; and the Bill was to be taken up on Monday, as it was understood. Well, the stockholders' scheme also was under consideration of all the parties ; but before we got anywhere near Monday, on Thursday evening a bomb shell was thrown on the floor of this House ; and what was that ? An intimation that this item would not be put on the agenda for Monday. (An Honourable Member : " Or during the Session.") (Another Honourable Member : " He said he withdrew the Bill for the Session.") No, Sir. He cannot say that : he can only withdraw it with the leave of the House. Therefore once you had this Bill before you, I am not aware of any practice, constitutional or otherwise, by which he could do it. Under our Standing Orders it is quite clear that this Bill cannot be withdrawn except with the leave of the House.

This is what the Standing Order says :

" A member who has introduced a Bill may at any stage of the Bill move for leave to withdraw the Bill, and if such leave is granted, no further motion may be made with reference to the Bill ".

Therefore, Sir, until that leave is granted, the Bill must be proceeded with. (A few official Members : " No, no,") (Mr. K. Ahmed also made an interruption which was inaudible). I do not want the advice of my friend Mr. K. Ahmed. (An Honourable Member : " Why not ? ") Because I think I can get along quite well without his advice.

Now, Sir, whatever interpretation you may put upon the action of the Honourable the Finance Member, I say that the Government are guilty of showing a great affront to this House. I say that this cannot be tolerated, and I think, speaking on behalf of Members on this side of the House, that there is no justification for the conduct of the Government in this matter ; and I therefore support the vote of censure without hesitation.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I have great pleasure in associating myself, on behalf of the Nationalist Party, with the motion moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Chaman Lall. In doing so, I shall strictly confine myself to the constitutional issue involved in this motion, and not import into my speech anything of what one hears in the lobby,—and one hears so many things, good, bad and indifferent. The constitutional issue is, as stated by my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah, that the procedure adopted by the Government of India in withdrawing from the consideration of this House a Bill on which Members on this side had worked for several months and at the last stage of which they had laboured for three or four days to consider a specific proposal, is very wrong. The Honourable the Finance Member at the last stages of the negotiation put before us a specific proposal, and I must congratulate him on that account, in so far as he tried his best to meet the wishes of this Section of the House on some important points. After having undergone all this worry and all the trouble which some Members took in going from Bombay to Calcutta, from Calcutta to Simla, party meetings being held nearly every evening and some of us being deprived of our luncheons and dinners on that account, after all this trouble, I say the Honourable the Finance Member, as the spokesman of the Government of India, suddenly comes forward and in a very short speech—of excellent shortness if I may say so—merely announces that he does not want to proceed with the Bill. In social life, Sir, such a discourtesy would be grossly resented. Supposing a friend of mine wrote to me saying that he was going to pay a week-end visit, and I got a bed room ready for him, secured a special cook and made everything ready for him and at once I get a wire merely saying that he did not want to come, without offering the least apology or even an explanation of the reason why he did not want to come, I should never invite him again. (Laughter.) Unfortunately, we have not the power to retaliate on the Government of India by treating them with the same cold aloofness ; if I had it, I would deal with them precisely in the same manner. May I warn the Government of India that the exchange of courtesy to the Opposition in this House will make them stronger, and that any discourtesy shown to this side of the House will certainly in the long run recoil on them and make them weaker and weaker. I am one of those, Sir, who are desirous that conventions should grow up in this House between the Government of India and the Opposition Benches which will mutually strengthen one another. I would warn the Government of India that if they do not wish to reduce themselves to the position of what a statesman in England once described—the Government of India to be, viz., a mere subordinate branch of the British administration, let them be careful; I say that if they do not want to reduce themselves to that pitiable position, there is only one way, and that is, to trust the Opposition Benches more and more and secure their support. Therefore, Sir, taking that view of our relative positions here, I am practically anxious that we should convey to the Government of India our strong resentment in this matter. By their discourtesy and affront they have rendered us impotent, and in the same measure, they are also rendering themselves impotent as against outside dictation. I have therefore great pleasure in supporting this motion for adjournment.

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I associate myself with what my Honourable friend, Mr. Chaman Lall, has said to-day. Sir, we feel it a great insult to us the way the Government of India has treated this House. After the assurance that was given by the Honourable the Finance Member that he would go on with this Bill in this Session, and after all of us at great discomfort have come here to attend this Session in good time, to our extreme surprise it was only on last Thursday we were quietly told by the Finance Member " I am not going to proceed with this Bill. " Is that the way to treat this House, Sir ? Is that the way you, the Finance Member, want to treat the Members of this House ? What did he say to the reply of the Swarajist leader, when he asked him " Are you going to proceed with this Bill in the Delhi Session ? " He said " I will not add one word more to the statement that I have made. " We all know that he has not withdrawn the Bill. But from what he said it struck us that he was not going to proceed with the Bill at all, and if that was the case, surely he should have consulted the House before making a statement of that kind.

Sir, there is one thing more. The Joint-Committee on this Bill was formed of Members of both the Houses in last March. The first meeting was held in Bombay in May last. Then the whole of that Committee was taken down to Calcutta in July last. They had deliberations there for about ten days, and after that they came to certain conclusions. After these expenses were incurred, after all the troubles the members of the Joint-Committee had taken, and after all that had been done before, the Bill came before this House, we thought the Government was anxious to go on with this Bill and we too were equally anxious to go on with it. We wanted to have a full opportunity in this House of discussing the merits of the Bill ; and if the wreckers had wrecked the Bill, well, we could have gone to the country and said " It is not our fault, but the fault of the wreckers who have wrecked the Bill ". The Government have not given us the chance to prove to our constituency that we have done our best, but have practically given the wreckers what they wanted. And this is very unfair to us.

With these few words, Sir, I associate myself with what the preceding speakers have said, and I desire strongly to protest against the action of the Government of India.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member): Sir, the referee's whistle has been so much in evidence during the course of this game that I am a little bit afraid of the ground on which I may tread in an effort to make a speech in dealing with the motion now before the House. The Honourable Member from Bombay, Mr. Jayakar, commented on what he described as the excellent shortness of my explanation of the position last Thursday evening. I confess that I should be very glad to have been able to practise the virtue of excellent silence on this occasion (Laughter). The motion, I think, is a little overstated. The adjournment of the House is being moved to call attention to the affront offered to the Legislative Assembly by the Government in withdrawing this Bill this Session before the Assembly has had an opportunity of discussing the remaining clauses of the Bill. Well, Sir, I maintain with due deference that, so far as any intention on the part of the Government of India is concerned, there has been no affront to this House, and that the Government have not withdrawn the Bill.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member knows that the Government have no power to withdraw any Bill without coming to this House.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I entirely agree that the Government have no right to withdraw the Bill without coming to this House. If Members of this House are of opinion that an affront has been offered to the House, I can only say on behalf of the Government of India that no such affront was desired or intended and that I am very sorry that any impression of that sort should have gone abroad. As regards the withdrawal of the Bill, what the Government have done is to come to the conclusion that, in view of the time available during this Session and the complexity of the problem still to be solved, it was not desirable to attempt to complete the Bill this Session. They have come to no other conclusion and any further conclusion that may be drawn from the action of the Government in this matter is unauthorised and possibly inaccurate. I cannot help thinking that the Honourable Member who had so much difficulty with you, Sir, in moving this motion, was under the impression that he was moving a motion on some other subject, shall we say, for example, what is happening at Kharagpur at the moment ? He imagined himself complaining that the Government of India in the person of a Railway Company had locked out its employees in the persons of this Assembly and refused to go on with them until they would work. That is not what is happening at all. Surely it is reasonable, when the original plan of an important portion of the Bill before the House has been considerably modified, that the Government and the House and the country should ask for time to consider the exact bearing and implications of any alternative plan for arriving at the results desired. I must not, Sir, dwell on the merits of the Bill. I confess that sometimes, in listening to the debate, I was reminded of a variant of the poem quoted by my Honourable friend, the gallant Baronet from Bombay, about the dissembling of love, and I thought of the variant—it is not so poetical—"If you love me, say so, but don't spoil my patent leather shoes." (Laughter). I must say that some of the expressions of love that were shown towards me and my Bill seemed to me to spoil the patent leather shoes of my Bill. But after all, we are merely asking for more time to deal with the matter. I cannot add anything to what I said last Thursday in regard to the position. Government require time to consider the full implications of any alternative plan. Surely, it is within the rights of the Government, and it is no affront to the House, that when difficulties arise in the course of discussion of a Bill, they should not, as is complained in this case, withdraw the Bill—that is not what the Government have done—but postpone consideration until a later Session in order that when it comes up it may be discussed, if it is discussed, (An Honourable Member : "Will it ever be discussed ?") in an atmosphere when progress is likely to be made, instead of under conditions in which there is a possibility of a break-down and the complete failure of the Bill owing to absence of a sufficient measure of agreement between the various conflicting view points which have to be considered in arriving at a final conclusion. I repeat once more that the Government have not withdrawn the Bill and they are not guilty of any intention of affronting this House or of having really done so if all the circumstances of the case are considered. This is variously described as a vote of censure on myself, on the Government of India, or on some one else. The Government of India may at times be incomprehensible, it is at any rate one and indivisible, not by confusion of persons but by unity of substance. We have to consider in full any proposal that we may commit ourselves to supporting in this House for the purpose of legislation. We do claim that we have a full right in this matter to consider with great care the full implications of the several alternatives all of which involve very complex considerations. I hope the House will, after what I have said, realise that this motion is really not fully justified. There is not, I maintain, sufficient reason for censuring the Government of India for their action in the matter of the Reserve Bank Bill. Their action, I maintain, has been taken in the interests of ultimately arriving at a successful bit of legislation and not hurrying too fast in a way that may lead to a premature failure.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I want to ask the Honourable the Finance Member a question. There were two courses open to him, either to withdraw the Bill or to move the adjournment of the consideration of the Bill. Why did he adopt this arbitrary and autocratic course which he has adopted ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think my only answer to that is that it was for the convenience of the House that they should know on Thursday evening rather than on Monday morning what the position was likely to be.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I had no desire to add to the observations which

I made on the last occasion. I waited to hear what explanation the Honourable the Finance Member was going to make, because, Mr. President, you ruled, if I may say so with all respect, rightly the other day, that a debate should not be raised. To-day when the debate is raised on the point, I find the Honourable the Finance Member gives absolutely no reason whatever for the course which he has chosen to take. We have been taught that language is given to conceal thought, and I feel that the English language conceals thought more than any other language. If ever there was an occasion for me to realise that truth in its fulness, in its completeness, and in all its vividness, it is to-day after listening to the carefully modulated speech of the Honourable the Finance Member. I am no wiser after he has spoken than before he spoke. This is not the way to treat the House. I consider the explanation which the Finance Member gives adds injury to the insult which has already been offered to us. We want to know plainly and squarely what are the reasons really why the Government of India did not proceed with this business ? Why is there this mystery, this darkness ? Is the business of the Government of India to be transacted in twilight or is it to be transacted in broad daylight ? Once a Bill of this description comes before this House I say you cannot circumvent the spirit of the rules. You may claim to comply with the letter of the rules, but you should not circumvent the spirit of the rules. The action of the Government is tantamount to a temporary withdrawal of the Bill under the pretext that they are arranging the Government business on days allotted for Government business. When once Government business is taken up, though the matter is one for you to decide and not for me, the spirit of the rules does require that, unless there is any very great difficulty which compels the Government to suspend the normal course, a Bill which is taken up on Government days must go on from day to day. That is the usual procedure. I submit that whether Government had technically the right to do it or not, it is certainly unconstitutional and amounts, as I said the other day, to trifling with what ought to be the convention of this House. The Finance Member did not really give any satisfactory reason. He said that the motion for adjournment is not fully justified. Does he mean that it is justified to any extent ? He said that the Government is one and indivisible. I cannot understand the divinity about it. I am not a theologian. The Finance Member used many other phrases which simply cloud the issue and do not lay bare the truth. A Bill has been actually taken up and some important clauses have been discussed. We had come to the crucial clause, clause 8. That was being discussed. The amendments were there. Suddenly the Government discovered that they required an indefinite adjournment for the purpose of coming to a conclusion. What is the agreement that was wanted ? I have seen no evidence of any desire on the part of the Government of India to come to any agreement with the popular party in this House. I do not desire on this occasion to express my opinion on this Bill and it would not be in order. I do not want to say whether the Bill should be of a particular kind or of some other kind. I have nothing to do with it or its merits. We stick to our demand. Our demands have been before the country and before this House. Speaking for my part and for the Congress Party, the reason why we did not think it necessary to bring this motion is because we had already expressed our resentment, and we did not think it necessary to bring up another motion before this House.

Mr. President : Does not the Honourable Member belong to the Congress Party ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : That is, Sir, domestic politics. When once a motion of this description is brought before this Assembly, there is not the slightest doubt that the Congress Party will support, as it has decided to support, this motion, because it is simply repeating what I said on behalf of my Party and, if I may say so with all respect on behalf of the other non-official Members of this House on the last occasion. If a formal vote of censure was required I do not see the slightest harm in having such a vote of censure. For it does strengthen the hands of the popular elements in this Assembly to have a vote of censure of this description formally passed against the Government. We are, however, not here for the purpose of strengthening the hands of the Finance Member or the Government of India. We are here for the purpose of asserting our own rights and liberties, and they require that the ordinary normal procedure of this House shall not be interfered with by any extraordinary action which is taken on behalf of the Government of India. I have nothing to do with the apportionment of responsibility. I am not an inquisitive person and I do not want confidences which are not given to me voluntarily. Therefore, Sir, whilst I associate myself with the censure that has been moved, I must say that I do not agree with my friend Mr. Jayakar or others in thinking that there was any great accommodation or any great deal of co-operation. My Party stands and will stand for certain principles, and it is only if the Government comes down to those principles and agrees with our Party that we will agree to co-operate and we shall not do so in the case of any Government measure or Bill which does not satisfy the fullest demands of the Party which I have the honour to represent. With these words I cordially support this motion for censure.

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz (West Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I support this motion for censure, not on the ground given by my esteemed friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, but on the ground that the consideration of the remaining clauses of the Reserve Bank Bill was postponed against the wishes of this House. The reason given by the Honourable the Finance Member that the consideration of the Bill was deferred because the Government wanted more time with a view to consider the pros and cons of clause 8 of the Bill are not conclusive and convincing. Probably there are some other reasons which the Honourable the Finance Member does not wish to give on the floor of the House. Now, Sir, the hard facts of the situation are these. The Reserve Bank Bill emanated from the Joint Committee in a form which raised certain controversial matters. The Finance Member was forced to fall back on the shareholders' bank, but, in order to inspire confidence of all the parties in this House, he gave up the shareholders' bank in favour of a State Bank. That shows honesty of purpose on the part of the Finance Member who is also the Leader of the House. A dispute arose with regard to the composition of the Directorate. There is one scheme which is embodied in clause 8 of the Bill and which empowers the Legislature to elect as many as 6 Directors to the Board. I do not wish to enter into the merits or demerits of this scheme, but obviously it was opposed by the Government and a large number of the Members of this House.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not right in assuming that a large majority of the House was opposed to a particular scheme. Will he confine himself to the constitutional issue ?

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : Sir, I am not going into the merits of the scheme. I am simply stating facts. The other proposal of which the Honourable Member, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, had given notice to move was that the provinces should elect a College of Electors consisting of 300 members and the College of Electors in turn should elect 6 members to the Board of Directors. Well, Sir, I do not know what would have been the fate of this proposal. Then again, Sir, Raja Ghazanfar Ali tabled another amendment, namely, that two seats should be reserved for Muslims through election on the Directorate. That did not meet the wishes of the Government. We all know that the Honourable the Finance Member refused to agree to the introduction of the principle of communal representation and racial distinction in a banking institution. Finally, there was a proposal for a stockholders' scheme. Everybody knows what that scheme is. It obviously gained the support of all parties in this House. But all of a sudden the Finance Member next day tells the House that the Bill cannot be proceeded with. I do not know what the real reasons are. If the Government wanted to have time the Finance Member could have stated on the floor of the House that he wanted time. There are probably certain other reasons which perhaps it is not advisable on the part of Government to state before the Assembly. Personally, I think these reasons must be strong which forced the Finance Member to postpone consideration of the measure to a fresh date. It is somewhat unfortunate that even in respect of a banking institution the Government of India has not a free hand and its liberty of action is controlled by higher authorities. The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett whose ability and integrity we all admire is not to be blamed. The object of this motion is to show to the Governments in India and in England that this House desires to resume discussion of the Bill at an early date and pass it in a form acceptable to the Government of India and a substantial majority of the House. The consideration of the Bill has been deferred contrary to the opinion of this House, and for this reason, Sir, I support the motion for censure.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Sir, I merely want to say on behalf of these Benches that we do feel in this particular case that the House has not been quite reasonably treated. We realize to the full that there may be Government measures with which it is not desirable to proceed and under our Standing Orders it is possible for these Bills not to be proceeded with in the course of two Sessions and then they drop, but in this case we feel that while there were amendments on the paper which attempted to deal with the problem, it was somewhat premature to refuse to proceed with the Bill further this Session. It is quite possible that the Government of India, in taking that line, have made themselves good prophets. It may be that the solutions which were under consideration would have resulted in further deadlocks, in which case possibly Government would have been right, but on the narrow constitutional point we feel that the Government of India should not withdraw, or rather refuse to proceed with, important measures of this sort at very short notice without further discussion.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, when I came to this House, I was inclined to support the Honourable the Finance Member in the action he had taken, because I felt that so far as the affront to the House was concerned, my Honourable friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, had made it clear on the day the announcement was made that the House resented the action of the Honourable the Finance Member ; and I thought that it might be possible to show on behalf of the Government that the Finance Member, finding that he was not willing to accept the scheme which found favour with a large section of the House, and that a large section of the House was not willing to accept the scheme which the Finance Member wanted it to adopt, might justifiably have thought it the part of wisdom not to take up the time of the House any further with the Bill and to let it drop. But having heard the Honourable the Finance Member to-day, Sir, I feel more strongly than I did before that the House has every justification for feeling that it has been treated with an affront. I cannot understand why the Finance Member should not have realized all that his action meant, but bad as it was, for him now to get up and say to-day that he has not withdrawn the Bill, that he may still proceed with the Bill, is, I submit, to add another insult to the one that has been already offered to the House. I feel, Sir, that if the Finance Member felt that in view of the differences of opinion the Government should not proceed with the Bill, it was perfectly open to him to say to the House that that was so and not to proceed with the Bill. But having given the impression to the House on Thursday last that he had come to that conclusion, for him now to seize this opportunity of a motion for adjourning the House to declare to this House that he has not withdrawn the Bill, that it is still intended to go on with the Bill, and in particular....

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I, in the interests of accuracy, point out that I have said to-day exactly the same as I did on Thursday. I have no power to withdraw the Bill, as my Honourable friend knows ; what I said to-day is exactly what I said on Thursday.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I submit the question of the Honourable Member having no power to withdraw the Bill stands on a different footing ; there is no power under the Standing Orders which can compel a Government Member or any other Member to proceed with a Bill. He may not withdraw the Bill without the leave of the House ; he cannot do so, but there is no power to compel him to proceed with the Bill, and I submit that when the Honourable Member made his statement on Thursday last, he gave the impression to the House, at least to a large section of the House, that he did not intend to proceed with the Bill. I do not wish, Sir, to dwell any longer on this subject. Government treat us as if we are here to register their decrees, to accept their decisions, or to be treated in the manner in which we have been treated. After many months of labour have been spent on the Bill, after the long discussions that have been held, for any Government Member to get up and say to the House what the Finance Member said is, I submit, extremely—I will not use a stronger word—extremely discourteous. Now, Sir, I wish to make one suggestion to the Honourable the Finance Member or rather to the Government of India. They have shown discourtesy to this House. Will they now save this House the further discourtesy of asking it to consider this Bill further ? Let the Bill drop and lie where it does. (Some Honourable Members : No, no.) After all.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is now introducing a debatable matter.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I submit, Sir, that I am not going to enter into the merits of the Bill. I only want to establish the principle that when the Government have acted in this fashion in regard to a measure like the Bill before us, the least courtesy that they can show and the most sincere regret that they can express for having taken that action is that they should not ask the Members of this House to spend any more time upon the Bill.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, we all know the history of the Bill as it has been discussed in this House. Different speeches were made in the House and different decisions were arrived at but they have all been thrown out. We knew, Sir, as a matter of fact, that a substantive scheme was after all coming before the House with regard to which we were all trying to arrive at a unanimous decision. For this purpose we had laboured long both in this House and outside it. We had the debates postponed for several days. Now, Sir, all of a sudden we find that this Bill is dramatically dropped in this Session. The two statements which the Honourable the Finance Member has made to-day seem to me to be striking at the very root of the whole matter. He has said that the Government of India have not offered an affront to this House in any way and that they had no desire or intention whatsoever of doing so. The second statement that he made was that the Government of India have not withdrawn this Bill. We must accept both these statements as quite correct. I think, Sir, the very first statement that the Government of India had no intention whatsoever to offer an affront to this House explains the whole thing. To my mind, there is a lurking suspicion that if the Government of India had no intention to withdraw this Bill and that they have not withdrawn it, then certain other influence has probably prompted them to take the action which they have taken in regard to this Bill. Whatever that influence may have been and wherever the dictation might have come from, we do not know, unless it had been explained plainly to this House by the Honourable the Finance Member. But, Sir, the dignity of the Leader of the House who speaks on behalf of the Government is certainly lowered when he lays down a specific suggestion before the House to come to an agreement and when a settlement is going to be reached very soon, that all of a sudden he is thwarted in this matter. It has been shown to the House that the Honourable the Finance Member who speaks on behalf of the Government and who was talking as a responsible officer has been thwarted in his scheme.

Mr. President : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to proceed in this strain. He must accept the statement made by the Leader of the House. The Leader of the House had never even insinuated that he had been thwarted by any other authority.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : The Finance Member has said in very guarded words that the Government had no intention of withdrawing this Bill and that they have not offered any affront to the House. I take them at their face value and I accept his statement as it stands.

[Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan.]

This very statement has to my mind revealed the whole state of affairs. (Laughter.)

Mr. President : The Government of India have taken the fullest responsibility for their action and the motion before the House calls into question that action. The Honourable Member is not entitled to go outside the terms of that motion.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I accept that the Government of India have taken the fullest responsibility upon themselves. Of course, they could not do anything else. (Laughter.) To my mind, it appears that the action of the Government of India is a very undignified one. This leads the Honourable the Leader of the House to a very precarious plight. This action of the Government of India will lower the Leader of the House in the eyes of the world. If in future the Government of India should place any suggestion before the House, Honourable Members would not take them at their word, because they would not be sure whether the Government of India were speaking with authority on the matter or not. Therefore, I submit that this unconstitutional method requires condemnation by support of this motion. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. President : The question is :

" That this House do now adjourn ".

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 14th September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 14th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

†1015*—21*.

LIQUIDATION OF THE INDRAPARASTHA STORES LIMITED, DELHI.

1022. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that the Indraparastha Co-operative Stores, Delhi, was placed under liquidation about 4 years ago ?

(b) Have the Government received any complaints regarding delay in winding up the stores or regarding misappropriation of its funds during the unusually long period of liquidation ?

(c) What steps do the Government propose to take to expedite the winding up of the Stores ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) There is no such Company as the Indraparastha Co-operative Stores, Delhi. There is, however, a company styled Indraparastha Stores, Ltd., which went into voluntary liquidation by resolution of an Extraordinary General meeting held on the 9th January 1925, that is about 2 years and 8 months ago.

(b) The only complaint received by the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, is one dated 27th January 1927, against the liquidator of the company. This complaint was answered and returned in original to the complainant, Jagdhish Pershad, a contributory of the above company.

(c) The Indian Companies Act, VII of 1913, prescribes no limit of time by which the winding up of a company should be completed. The liquidator hopes to complete the winding up of the company by the end of January 1928. The delay is said to be due to the non-realization of several decrees. In the case of voluntary liquidation the Government have no power under the Act to expedite the proceedings.

ARTICLES IN THE Hindustan Times ENTITLED "LIFE IN RAISINA".

1023. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the editorial notes under the heading "Life in Raisina" published in the Hindustan Times, Delhi, dated the 17th February 1927, and 27th March, 1927 ?

(b) What action do the Government propose to take to remove the hardships and defects pointed out therein ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions with their answers will be found at pages 4313—16 of these proceedings.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) I have nothing to add to the reply given by me to Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan's question No. 1166 on the 25th March 1927.

REMOVAL OF THE MAIN ELECTRIC SWITCHBOARD IN SOME OF "D" CLASS QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI INSIDE THE QUARTERS.

1024. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that the main switch of electricity in some of the "D" Class quarters at Raisina is in the verandah outside the quarter and can thus be easily shut off by thieves, etc., at night ?

(b) When do the Government propose to remove it to some place inside the quarters ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, this is the case in nearly all bungalows and quarters. The switchboard is situated in the verandahs in order that the meter may be read without the meter reader entering the quarters to which the tenants usually strongly object.

(b) Government do not propose to do this at present.

DEFECTS IN "D" CLASS QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

1025. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that in the case of a burglary in the last winter the thieves entered a "D" class quarter in the Albert Square in New Delhi by jumping over the low outer wall of the courtyard and entered one of the rooms through the wide ventilator (width 2 feet) without any obstacle ?

(b) Is it a fact that some of the doors of "D" class quarters are fitted with glass panes which are not required as sufficient light can come into the rooms through windows and ventilators ?

(c) Is it also a fact that usually the thieves open the bolts inside by breaking the glass panes ?

(d) Are the Government also aware that the outer door in the courtyard of some of the "D" class quarters has got openings on all the four sides (for want of wooden frame) which helps in ascending the walls and makes the house open to view from outside even when it is closed ?

(e) When do the Government propose to remove the above four defects in some of the "D" class quarters to safeguard the life and property of the residents ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Government have no information.

(b) Government understand that glass panes are fitted where light would be otherwise insufficient.

(c) Government have no information.

(d) Some of these doors have no chowkets, but Government understand that this does not produce the defects asserted.

(e) Government do not propose to take any further action at present.

REPLACEMENT BY GLASS WINDOWS OF THE HONEY-COMBED PORTIONS OF THE BATH ROOMS IN THE " D " CLASS QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

1026. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that the bath rooms of " D " class quarters in all the quarters except those newly built for the " G " point Post Office are provided with a honey-comb instead of a glazed window ?

(b) Have the Government obtained the views of any medical officer as to whether it is safe for a person to bathe with warm water in winter in a bath room which is open to draughts from outside through honey-combs ?

(c) Are the Government aware that almost all the residents have to shut up the honey-comb to protect themselves from cold wind ?

(d) When do the Government propose to replace the honey-comb by glass windows to allow light into the bath room at the same time affording protection from cold draughts when necessary ?

(e) When do the Government propose to replace the bath room pipe by high shower and torrent bath pipe like those in the Indian clerks chummeries ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes

(b) No. The tenant can protect himself against draughts by covering the honey-combed portion by a small purdah on the inside. In order to render this possible and yet admit light all solid doors have been specially provided with glazing.

(c) No, but this is what Government suggest the tenants should do if they wish to do so.

(d) Government do not propose to effect this replacement.

(e) Government do not consider that this is necessary.

CLOSING OF THE WATER PIPES IN THE HIGH LEVEL QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI SOON AFTER 10-A.M.

1027. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that water pipes in the high level quarters in New Delhi close soon after 10 o'clock in the morning thus putting the residents to great inconvenience ?

(b) Do Government propose to take any steps to remove this inconvenience ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Government understand that water pipes are open throughout the 24 hours of every day.

ISSUE OF EXTRA FURNITURE TO RESIDENTS OF " D " CLASS QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

1028. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) What articles of extra furniture are usually supplied if required by the residents of " D " class quarters in New Delhi ?

(b) What is the rate of charges for each ?

(c) Are the Government aware that extra furniture is usually supplied very late in the month of November or in December even when it is requisitioned in October ?

(d) Are the Government aware that it causes a good deal of inconvenience to those concerned and also loss of income to Government ?

(e) Do the Government propose to instruct the authorities concerned to issue extra furniture as soon as a quarter is occupied so that the extra hire may commence from the same date ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). The list of articles of extra furniture and the rate of charges can be had on application to the Estate Officer, Delhi.

(c), (d) and (e). It is not the policy of Government to provide furniture in excess of the scale that has been laid down. There is, however, a surplus of certain articles and additional demands are met from this source as far as possible. This surplus is likely to be exhausted in the near future in providing for replacements. In the circumstances furniture over and above the scale referred to can only be issued if available and certain articles may only become spare late in the season, if at all.

FIXING OF PERMANENT HANGING HOOKS IN THE WALLS OF QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

1029. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Are the Government aware that the walls of quarters are spoiled every year by the residents in their unsuccessful efforts to fix hanging hooks and nails in the walls ?

(b) To avoid unnecessary trouble and spoiling of walls do the Government propose to fix permanent hanging hooks in the walls or to indicate by lines, etc., on the walls where they can be fixed ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). The answer is in the negative.

DIFFERENCE IN THE COURSES OF STUDIES IN THE DELHI AND SIMLA SCHOOLS.

1030. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that the school courses of Delhi and Simla schools are different ?

(b) In view of the fact that the children of the Government of India employees have to move between Simla and Delhi, are Government prepared to take steps to remove this trouble ?

(c) Are the Government aware that there is a general complaint to the effect that the teachers of New Delhi schools find it difficult to give special attention to the boys that go there from Simla and join the schools for the winter only ?

(d) Do the Government propose to issue instructions to the Inspectors of Schools to consider very carefully whether the difference in the course of studies in Delhi and Simla impedes the progress of the children of the Government of India employees ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) The courses differ to a small extent.

(b) Attempts are being made to minimise the hardship.

(c) No.

(d) No ; but the Honourable Member is referred to the answer to (b).

EXTRADITION PROCEEDINGS AGAINST SARDAR DIWAN SINGH, EDITOR OF THE Riyasat.

1031. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the complaint lodged against Sardar Diwan Singh, Editor, Riyasat, by the Patiala State was lodged three years ago ?

(b) Is it a fact that Colonel Minchin (Agent, Governor General, Punjab States) refused extradition proceedings three years ago for the same criminal complaint ?

(c) Will Government state if the legal representative of Sardar Diwan Singh will be given an opportunity of being heard should extradition proceedings be started against him before the Agent to the Governor General, Punjab States ?

(d) Is it fact that in a cocaine smuggling case instituted against Sardar Diwan Singh it is stated in the judgment that " there is little doubt that Diwan Singh was an eye-sore to the Patiala people..... All that is relevant to this case is that Diwan Singh by writing such articles made himself a bitter enemy of the Patiala party.... (judgment acquitting Sardar Diwan Singh Criminal case Lahore, No. 3|3, dated 5th January 1923) ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer I gave to Mr. B. Das' question on the subject on the 31st of August.

(b) No such proceedings have been traced.

(c) The Agent has to satisfy himself that there is a primâ facie case against the accused and I have no doubt that any application from a duly empowered legal representative of Sardar Diwan Singh to be heard on his behalf would receive the fullest consideration.

(d) Government have not seen the judgment referred to.

APPOINTMENT OF A TECHNICAL COMMISSION TO EXAMINE THE GAUGE PROBLEM RELATING TO RAILWAYS.

1032. Mr. E. F. Sykes : (a) Are the Government aware that the Acworth Committee described the gauge problem as an urgent one and recommended the appointment of a technical Commission to examine it ?

(b) Do Government propose to appoint such a Commission ? If so, when ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) When the recommendation made in paragraph 181 of the Acworth Committee's Report was considered the Railway Board were more inclined to the views expressed by Sir Henry Burt in his minute of dissent, which I have no doubt the Honourable Member has read, namely, that the gauge problem should be dealt with as incidental to, and with regard to, the immediate necessities of each new project as it comes under consideration. It has not been thought necessary to appoint a technical Commission to examine the problem as a whole as Government have held the view that the work of improvement and development on a systematic basis which is now going forward was of prior importance to a possibly academic examination which might set up a competing demand for heavy expenditure on work of less pressing urgency. The question of gauge is however examined with great care when new projects are being investigated and under present instructions new branches will ordinarily conform to the gauge of the parent line, except that where expected traffic on a proposed branch does not warrant the use of the 5 ft. 6 inch standard gauge the 2 ft. 6 inch gauge will be adopted.

DETENTION OF STATE PRISONERS UNDER THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1925.

1033. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the State prisoners arrested under Regulation III of 1818 are being now detained under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1925 ? And on what grounds ?

(b) How many of these have been detained outside the Province of Bengal must be detained only in jails ?

(c) Is it the law that persons detained under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1925, outside the Province of Bengal and in what jails ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I understand the Honourable Member's question relates to the recent action taken to transfer certain State prisoners from Regulation III to forms of detention under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act. Nine prisoners have been so transferred in the last few months. The ground for substituting orders under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act for warrants under Regulation III is, as explained by Sir Alexander Muddiman in his statement of the 21st March last, to which I would refer the Honourable Member, that the former Statute furnishes means for gradually relaxing the degree of restraint to which the prisoners are subject.

(b) None of these are detained in jails outside Bengal, the object of the action taken being, as I have mentioned, that they should be released from jail detention.

(c) Yes.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Do I understand from the answer of the Honourable the Home Member that the prisoners so transferred are meant to be released in a short time ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The intention is that they should be released from the conditions of jail detention and placed under milder forms of restraint.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : What is the object of the milder forms of restraint, considering that they could run away if they wanted to ?

May I have an answer to my question ? I think it is a very serious question.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The object of the milder forms of restraint is, while providing so far as necessary for the public security, to mitigate the degree of restraint imposed upon the prisoners.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Do I understand that the Honourable the Home Member still thinks them to be dangerous people, people dangerous to public safety ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is the justification for maintaining any restraint on them.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : In answer to part (a), the Honourable the Home Member was pleased to say that the reason for transferring prisoners from Regulation III to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act was that according to the latter law the prisoner was capable of being placed under gradations of restraint, but in answer to part (c) he said that when a prisoner was transferred outside his province, he was only to be kept in jail. Then why is it that in those particular cases when they are not capable of being placed under gradations of restraint they are transferred from Regulation III to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The position is this. Under section 4 of the Supplementary Act, the power is given to Local Governments, other than Bengal, to detain prisoners in jail. That power extends only to jail detention, and if it is desired to release a prisoner from jail detention and put him under milder forms of restraint, then he is ordinarily returned to the jurisdiction of the Government of Bengal.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : In that case, the Honourable Member must know that there is no object in transferring a man from Regulation III to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act when that man is transferred outside the province.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir, in most cases there would be no object where a prisoner is detained outside the Presidency of Bengal.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Will the Honourable the Home Member kindly take it from me that in several cases prisoners were transferred from Regulation III to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act and at the same time they were transferred outside the province ? My personal experience is such, and we were kept continually for 2 years and 10 months when there was no justification, as the Honourable Member says.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not quite sure that I quite understand the point placed by the Honourable Member, but the object of the provision which I referred to is this. If the Government primarily responsible, the Government of Bengal, consider that in any particular case, the detention may be reduced from jail detention to milder forms, if that is the conclusion arrived at, there is in most cases no object in detaining a prisoner in a province other than his own province. When, therefore, these provisions are put into operation, the prisoner is brought back to Bengal and there subjected to milder forms of restraint.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is the Honourable Member aware that a large number of prisoners who were originally detained under Regulation III were subsequently specifically put under this Act and sent to Burma ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir, that is true ; but, as I have said in the first part of my reply, I understood that the Honourable gentleman opposite was referring primarily to recent cases of transfer.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, what is this mild form of restraint and what is the object that the Government have in view ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think, Sir, the Honourable Member will find this sufficiently explained in the provisions of the Act.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know what is the reason for the change into the milder forms of restraint.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think I have already replied to that point. The reason for imposing milder forms of restraint is to mitigate the conditions of the prisoners concerned.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : No, Sir. I submit it is not an answer to my question—the object of a milder form of restraint is to give a milder form of restraint. I want to know what the object is.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I really cannot take the Honourable Member's point. Certainly the question which he put constrained me to give the reply which he indicates, namely, the object of milder forms of restraint is milder forms of restraint.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know what is the ground upon which Government determine when a man is put under a severe form of restraint he must at a particular time be put under a particular form of restraint. Why is it that the Government want to do it and what are the conditions upon which these milder forms of restraint are given ? What is the criterion ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The criteria are the facts and opinions formed by the Local Government with respect to the particular prisoner in question.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Am I to take it that it is not the conditions of peace and order in the province, but the particular conduct of the detenu that governs the situation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In their relation to the question of peace and order.

REMOVAL OF MR. SATISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTY, A STATE PRISONER, TO CALCUTTA, TO UNDERGO AYURVEDIC TREATMENT FOR FILARIASIS.

1034. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. Satish Chandra Chakravarty, State prisoner, now detained in Bassein Jail, contracted filaria while he was living in a cell at Moulmein Jail ?

(b) Is it a fact that his disease has been declared incurable under the Allopathic system by the different Jail Superintendents while he was at Mandalay and he was permitted thereafter to take recourse to Ayurvedic treatment and that Kaviraj Shyamadas Bachaspati of Calcutta has given him an assurance that if he is kept under his treatment and personal supervision he may recover completely and in fact Mr. Chakravarty has somewhat improved under the Kaviraj's treatment ?

(c) Do the Government contemplate to bring Mr. Chakravarty to Calcutta and permit him facilities of personal visit and treatment by the said Kaviraj ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am making enquiries on the points raised by the Honourable Member and will inform him of the result.

GRANT OF TEMPORARY PERMISSION TO MR. BEPIN BEHARI GANGULY, A STATE PRISONER, TO VISIT HIS HOME.

1035. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Have the Government received a petition from Mr. Bepin Behari Ganguly, a State prisoner now detained in Bassein Jail, praying for temporary permission to visit his home to protect his property, from being wrongly recorded in the name of other persons during the ensuing Cadastral Survey which is now proceeding in his district, his only brother who used to look after their affairs having died leaving only a helpless widow and a minor son ?

(b) If so, are they prepared to grant his prayer ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). A petition has been received and is at present under consideration.

ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY STATION AT SYLHET GHAT.

1036. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the discussion held in a meeting of the Assam Legislative Council on the 20th July, 1927, over question No. 61, regarding the Assam Bengal Railway Station at Sylhet Ghat ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state if it is the general rule that the Assam Government cannot move in the matter of removal of grievances of the travelling public brought to their notice by the Members of the Legislative Council, unless those matters are in the first instance considered by the Railway Advisory Committee of the Assam Bengal Railway ? Will the Government be pleased to define the relations between the said Railway and the Provincial Governments so far as the removal of grievances of the travelling public are concerned ?

(b) Are the Government prepared to advise the Provincial Governments whose jurisdictions are served by the Assam Bengal Railway to draw the attention of the Agent of the said Railway Company to the matter of removal of grievances of the travelling public and such other cognate matters which are brought before the meetings of the Provincial Councils ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state how many meetings of the Advisory Committee of the Assam Bengal Railway Company were held in 1926 and 1927 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Government have not yet seen the report of the discussion in the Assam Legislative Council referred to, and will send the Honourable Member a reply to parts (a) and (b) of his question when the proceedings of the Assam Council for the 20th July 1927 have been received.

(c) Three meetings of the Assam Bengal Railway Advisory Committee were held in 1926. No meetings are yet reported in 1927.

FENCING OF THE LINES ON THE KATAKHAL-LALABAZAR RAILWAY AND THE SYLHET-KULAURA BRANCH OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

1037. *Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of run-over cases during the years 1926 and 1927 by trains of cattle and men on the Katakhal-Lalabazar Railway line and the Sylhet-Kulaura Branch of the Assam Bengal Railway ? What steps do the Government propose to take for the fencing of the aforesaid lines ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being collected and will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE HABIGANJ SHAISTHAGANJ BRANCH LINE OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

1038. *Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : Will the Government be pleased to state when the construction of the Habiganj-Shaisthaganj Branch line of the Assam Bengal Railway is proposed to be undertaken ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The line has been sanctioned, and it is hoped that construction will start this year and be completed early in 1929.

NUMBER OF POST OFFICES IN THE DISTRICTS OF SYLHET AND CACHAR.

1039. *Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : Will the Government be pleased to state the total number of Post Offices in the districts of Sylhet and Cachar ? How many of them do not entertain peons and on what grounds ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

ENHANCED RAILWAY FREIGHT ON SALT FROM THE SALT MINES AT WARCHA IN THE DISTRICT OF SHAHPUR.

1040. *Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Railway Board has imposed any enhanced rate of railway freight on salt from the salt mines at Warcha in the District of Shahpur ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state :

(i) since when the enhanced rate was introduced,

(ii) what was the previous rate,

(iii) what is the enhanced rate and from what station and for what distance ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the rate of railway freight for salt from the salt mines at Khewra in the District of Jhelum ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to explain the reasons for imposing different rates of railway freight for the same article on the State-owned and State-managed Railway line ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to give the figures showing the quantity of salt and the amount realised for railway freight on salt exported from Warcha railway station to stations beyond a distance of 100 miles for each month from 1st January 1927, to 31st July 1927 ?

(f) Are Government aware that the imposition of enhanced railway freight on salt from the Warcha salt mines has been prejudicial to the consumption of Warcha salt and facilitated the import of salt from the Khewra mines in parts where salt from the Warcha mines was normally sold and consumed ?

(g) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state what steps they propose to take to prevent the trade and consumption of Warcha salt being prejudicially affected by the continuance of enhanced railway freight ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : As the answer is a very long one, I propose, with the Honourable Member's permission, to lay it on the table.

(a) The Railway Board have not imposed any enhanced rates. The enhancement was made by the North-Western Railway.

(b) (i) The enhanced rate was introduced from 1st June 1927.

(ii) The previous rate was as follows :

For the first and up to 100 miles ..	.380	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 100 miles but not exceeding 300 miles to be added to the charge for 100 miles.	.220	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 300 miles but not exceeding 600 miles to be added to the charge for 300 miles.	.130	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 600 miles to be added to the charge for 600 miles.	.110	pies per maund per mile.

(iii) The enhanced rate which applies from Warcha is as follows :

For the first and up to 150 miles ..	.380	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 150 miles, but not exceeding 250 miles to be added to the charge for 150 miles.	.333	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 250 miles, but not exceeding 500 miles to be added to the charge for 250 miles.	.200	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 500 miles, but not exceeding 700 miles to be added to the charge for 500 miles.	.130	pies per maund per mile.
For extra distances above 700 miles to be added to the charge for 700 miles.	.100	pies per maund per mile.

(c) The rates described in the answer to (b) (ii) still apply to salt despatched from Khewra.

(d) The enhancement is due to the cost incurred in working the branch line between Gunjyal and Warcha, but it was at the instance of the Central Board of Revenue that the enhancement was made to fall upon long distance traffic and not upon local traffic. The Board's motive was to attempt to discourage an excessive demand for Warcha Salt, coupled with a reduced demand for Khewra salt, from places to reach which Warcha salt has actually to pass Khewra ; this peculiarity in demand was causing serious practical difficulties to the Salt Department. The Board was unwilling to meet the problem by raising the issue price of Warcha salt, since such a course would have affected local markets adversely as well as the more distant markets.

(e) and (f). A reference is reported to have been made to the Rates Advisory Committee, and the information asked for will doubtless become available in the course of the enquiries made by that Committee.

(g) The action to be taken by the Railway Board or Government upon the result of the reference to the Rates Advisory Committee cannot be anticipated now ; but it is fair to let it be known that if the rates for long distance traffic from Warcha and Khewra are again equalised, it may be thought necessary to find other means to discourage the excessive diversion of the demand for salt from Khewra to Warcha.

PROHIBITION AGAINST OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT JOINING THE ANGLO-INDIAN AND DOMICILED EUROPEAN ASSOCIATION.

1041. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will the Government please state if it is a fact that officers of the Indian Medical Department are debarred from joining an avowedly non-political body, the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association, All-India and Burma, on the plea that it is contrary to military law ?

(b) Is it a fact that military officers and men are allowed to be members of other similar Associations, e.g., Masonic Lodges, the Y. M. C. A., the Ex-Services Association, etc. ?

(c) Will the Honourable Member please inform me if there is any evidence to show that officers of the Indian Medical Department, who were members of the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association till October 1924, were, at any time, drawn to movements of a political character which necessitated the issuing of the circular No. 476|3612-B.-3641-B., dated 16th October, 1924, by the Director-General, Indian Medical Service, to the Surgeon Generals with the Local Governments ?

(d) Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that most of the officers of the Indian Medical Service, the Royal Army Medical Corps and the Royal Air Force Medical Corps, are members of the British Medical Association ?

(e) Do Government intend to take immediate steps to prohibit these officers from being members of the British Medical Association ?

(f) If the reply to part (e) is in the negative, will the Honourable Member please state why a privilege is allowed to the superior offices which is denied to the subordinate services ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Members of the Indian Medical Department are debarred by the operation of paragraph 203 of the Regulations for the Army in India from membership of the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association. In the view of the Government of India, the association is not an entirely non-political body.

(b) Military personnel are permitted to become members of the institutions mentioned by the Honourable Member : but he appears to be begging the question when he calls those institutions " similar ".

(c) There is no evidence of the kind suggested. The letter was issued because it was brought to notice that, under Regulations, military personnel are debarred from joining the Association.

(d) Yes.

(e) No.

(f) So far as I am aware there is nothing to prevent members of the Indian Medical Department from joining the British Medical Association, provided that they are eligible under the rules of that Association.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Does military law permit of army officers becoming members of Trade or Labour Unions ? If not, will the Honourable Member please state why military medical commissioned officers are permitted to join the British Medical Association, which is entirely a Labour Union of the first order ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I must ask for notice of the first part of the question. The second part is a question that does not really concern the Government of India, as the British Medical Association is a body in the United Kingdom.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Are officers of the Army in India members of the British Medical Association in the United Kingdom ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes, Sir.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Then, is it right or is it permitted by military law for these officers of the Army to be members of a Labour Union anywhere—in the United Kingdom or India ?

†1042*—1047*.

NUMBER OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES IN EACH BRITISH PROVINCE.

1048. Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of persons belonging to what are styled as depressed classes in each British Province according to the census of 1921 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member is referred to page 225 of the Census of India, 1921, Volume I, Part I. A copy of this Report is in the Library of the Assembly.

NUMBER OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES EMPLOYED IN THE POLICE FORCE IN EACH PROVINCE.

1049. Mr. M. S. Aney : What is the numerical strength of depressed class men in each of the British Provinces in the Police force ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Recruitment to the provincial police forces is a function of the Local Governments, and the Government of India are not in possession of information on the point.

EXCLUSION OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES FROM THE POLICE FORCE.

1050. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Is it the policy of the Government not to employ members of the depressed classes in the public service in general and the police service in particular, so long as the depressed classes are not treated as on an equal footing by all sections of the Hindu community ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and the answers thereto will be found at pages 4316—18 of these proceedings.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state clearly whether it has issued instructions to the Local Governments in general and the Punjab Government in particular, to exclude the depressed classes altogether in the recruitment of the provincial police force on the ground that their employment for the present will impair the efficiency of the police service and be not in the best interest of the composition of the police force ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No.

(b) The Government of India have issued no such instructions.

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I bring to the notice of the Honourable Member that in reply to a question put on this point the Punjab Government have stated that recruitment of the depressed classes to the police service is not possible so long as they are not treated on a footing of equality by the Hindus ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I have not seen the answer to which the Honourable Member refers.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Honourable Member make inquiries in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As I have already explained, the recruitment to the provincial police force is a matter within the discretion of the Local Governments and I consider it unnecessary to ask for reports from the Local Governments on that point.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Am I to understand the Honourable Member's meaning to be that the Provincial Governments are at liberty to depart from the general policy laid down by the Government of India in the matter of recruitment ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir ; if there is any general policy regulating the matter.

†1051*—1052.*

HINDU-MUSLIM RIOTS SINCE 1920.

1053. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government be pleased to place a statement on the table giving the following particulars regarding Hindu-Muslim riots since 1920 :

(a) date of riot, (b) place, (c) cause of the riot,

(d) number and nature of the casualties on each side,

(e) legal proceedings taken in its connection, (f) the result of such proceedings ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I regret that the Government have not got the full information which the Honourable Member asks for and its collection would involve elaborate enquiries all over India. I think however he will find that the statement laid on the table of this House on the 18th August 1926, together with the statement which I now lay on the table showing details of occurrences from the beginning of 1926 up to date will give him a clear view of the number and nature of these unfortunate conflicts in recent times :

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and the answers thereto will be found at pages 4318—19 of these proceedings.

Date.	Place of occurrence.	Casualties.	Cause of disturbance.
		1926.
1st February 1926.	Agra City, United Provinces.	1 person roughly handled by hooligans.	....
7th February	Madhi in Pathardi Mahal, Ahmednagar district, Bombay.	6 persons slightly injured.	Dispute over a building called the temple of Kambhoba or Dargah of Hazrat Shah Ramzan in which both Hindus and Muhammadans have in past claimed and exercised rights.
11th February	Barondi, Ratnagiri district, Bombay.	1 killed and 21 injured.	Alleged playing of music before mosques by Hindu procession on Maha Shivratri day.
12th/13th April	Rewari, Punjab	1 killed, several injured.	Cause alleged to be playing of music before mosque by Hindu marriage procession. A Muhammadan crowd also attempted to take a corpse in procession through main bazar.
2nd to 15th April.	Calcutta ..	46 killed and 675 injured.	The playing of music before mosque by a Hindu procession.
14th/16th April	Sassaram, Shahabad, B. and O.	2 killed and 15 injured.	The trouble originally arose out of an individual quarrel between a Hindu and a Muhammadan followed by an attack on a gathering of Hindus and later the looting of shops.
22nd April to 9th May.	Calcutta ..	67 killed and 395 injured.	The tense feeling resulting from the previous (vide above) rioting had not died down. The immediate cause of renewal of hostilities was a brawl between some Hindus and Muhammadans.
17th to 26th May.	Kharagpur, Bengal	Casulaties believed to be 11 killed and 32 injured.	Playing of music before a mosque by a Hindu funeral procession.
1st June ..	Hajinagar Paper Mills, 25 miles north of Calcutta.	40 injured ..	Objection by Hindus to a Muhammadan passing a Hindu temple to fetch water.
14th/15th June	Rawalpindi City	16 killed and 90 injured.	Communal tension arising out of resentment of Muhammadans over the leasing of land in close proximity to the Jnma Masjid for purposes of a cinema and the alleged playing of music by a Sikh procession while passing the mosque.

Date.	Place of occurrence.	Casualties.	Cause of disturbance.
		1926.
22nd June ..	Damoh, C. P. ..	7 injured ..	Bakr-Id celebrations.
22nd June ..	A village in Darbhanga District.	4 or 5 slightly injured.	Ditto.
Do. ..	Jhusi village near Allahabad.	1 killed and 9 injured.	Ditto.
Do. ..	Maksudpur, Thana Katra, Muzaffarpur District.	4 injured ..	Ditto.
23rd June ..	Singhasan Beniapatti Thana, Darbhanga District.	4 killed ..	....
Do. ..	Shankarpur, Sursand Thana. Sitamarhi Sub-Division, Muzaffarpur District.	No injuries reported.	Bakr-Id celebrations.
Do. ..	Bihar Sub-division	Do. ..	Ditto.
Do. ..	Gaya	Do. ..	Ditto.
Do. ..	Sihali, Bara Banki District, U. P.	9 injured ..	Bakr-Id celebrations. Hindus attempted to stop cow sacrifices by force.
24th June ..	Delhi	3 killed 62 injured	Bakr-Id celebrations. Immediate cause was the knocking down of a man by a run-away tonga in Khari Baoli.
Do. ..	Gobindpore, Gaya Distrcit.	Riot with murder: number of casualties not reported.	Bakr-I l celebrations.
Do. ..	Katra Thana, Muzaffarpur District.	2 persons injured	Ditto.
1st to 7th July	Pabna, Bengal ..	23 injured ..	The immediate cause is believed to be the taking of a Hindu procession with music past a mosque.
15th July ..	Karachi ..	11 injured ..	Alleged annoyances to some Hindus by a Jew convert to Islam.
11th and 15th to 25th July 1926.	Calcutta ..	28 killed and 226 injured.	Disturbances in connection with Hindu religious Rath Jatra and Raj Rajeswari processions and the Muharram celebrations.
21st July ..	Purnea, B. and O.	1 person injured	Mhuarram celebrations.
21st August ..	Andarsul, Taluka Yeola, District Nasik, Bombay.	Few persons injured slightly.	Playing of music before a mosque by a Hindu procession.

Date.	Place of occurrence.	Casualties.	Cause of trouble.
27th August	Delhi ..	50 persons injured	The immediate cause was a quarrel between a Hindu Bank chaprassi and a Muhammedan shopkeeper who was instrumental in bringing about the dismissal of the former.
5th September	Kidderpore, Garden Reach, Calcutta.	13 injured (1 seriously).	Playing of music before a mosque by a Hindu religious (Janmastami) procession.
6th September	Madhi, Pathardi Mahal, Ahmednagar, District Bombay.	11 persons injured slightly.	Dispute in connection with a Hindu bullock procession in celebration of the annual 'Pola' festival.
8/10th September.	Dacca City, Bengal	8 killed and 72 injured.	Janmastami festival celebrations.
16th October	Calcutta ..	None reported ..	Dasahra celebrations.
Do. ..	Howrah ..	1 killed and 20 injured.	Ditto.
23rd December	Delhi City ..	1 killed and 4 injured.	Disturbances following the murder of Swami Shradhanand.
		1927.
1st February	Kaganarai village, North Arcot, Madras.	1 killed and 7 wounded.	Ill-feeling between a wealthy Muhammadan Mittadar and a wealthy Hindu ryot.
17th February	Abdulpur in Bahadurganj town, Ghaziput District, U. P.	1 killed and 16 injured.	Immediate cause was a quarrel between a Muhammadan and a Hindu Halwai over the preparation of some food.
20th February	Bombay City ..	1 killed and 30 injured.	Music before mosque.
2nd March ..	Ponabalia, Kulkati, Barisal District, Bengal.	17 killed and 12 injured.	Procession before mosque.
23rd March ..	Badlapur, Thana District, Bombay.	25 injured ..	Trouble arising out of a Muhammadan procession.
29th March ..	Larkana, Bombay	1 killed and 68 taken to hospital. (Number of other injured persons who are stated to have been treated by private practitioners is not known).	Dispute between Hindus and Muhammadans over the possession of a woman and 3 boys.

Date.	Place of occurrence.	Casualties.	Cause of trouble.
10th/11th April.	Aligarh ..	40 injured ..	Dispute between Muslim ekka drivers and Hindu parao contractors.
3rd May ..	Surat, Bombay ..	1 killed and 58 injured.	Music before mosque.
3/7th May ..	Lahore ..	27 killed and 272 injured.	Tension between the two parties was already acute. The actual outbreak was occasioned by a chance quarrel between a Muhammadan and two Sikhs.
11th June ..	Dinapur, B. and O.	1 killed and 4 injured.	Cow sacrifice.
3/4th July ..	Some villages in Meherpur Subdivision, Nadia District, Bengal.	3 killed, 1 missing and 4 injured by gunshot and several others reported injured.	Communal ill-feeling culminating in attack by one party upon the other party's village, and counter-attack by the other party.
10th July ..	Sholapur, Bombay	43 injured ..	Clash between Hindu Rath procession and Muhammadan Muharram Tiger procession.
Do. ..	Faizpur, East Khandesh, Bombay.	1 killed and 7 injured.	Music before mosque.
Do. ..	Bareilly, U. P. ..	36 injurred ..	Muharram celebrations.
11th July ..	Murawan in Unao District, U. P.	1 killed and 13 injured.	Ditto.
11/14th July..	Multan, Punjab	12 killed and 18 injured.	Ditto.
13th July ..	Sandila in Hardoi District, U. P.	8 injured ..	Ditto.
About 13th July (exact date not specified).	Ballia, U. P. ..	Few injured (number not reported).	Ditto.
2nd August ..	Bettiah town, Champaran District, B. and O.	13 killed and 80 wounded.	Mahabiri procession.
4th August ..	Basim in Akola, C. P.	1 killed and 50 injured treated at hospital.	Friction arising out of Muharram celebrations and cow sacrifice.
15th August ..	Karepatan, Deogad Taluka, Ratnagiri District, Bombay.	4 injured ..	Gokul Ashtami celebrations.

Date.	Place of occurrence.	Casualties.	Cause of trouble.
19th August	Comilla, Bengal	2 killed and 33 injured.	Music before a mosque.
Do. ..	Mohamdi in Kheri District, U. P.	About 14 injured (exact number not known).	"Chehlum" and "Janmastami" celebrations coinciding.
21st August ..	Ichauli, Police Circle, Tikatinagar, 34 miles from Barabanki, U. P.	7 injured ..	"Ramdol" procession.
23rd August	Delhi	About 10 injured (exact number not known).	A Hindu died as the result of an attack in the train on the night of 21st/22nd Auhgust by a robber whose identity is not known. Rumour spread that his assailant was a Muhammadan and this led to disturbances during the funeral procession.
28th August	Bareilly, U. P. ..	13 killed and 107 injured admitted to hospital.	Procession passing a mosque.
29th August	Cawnpore, U. P.	1 killed and 56 injured.	....
4th September	Nagpur ..	19 killed and 123 injured admitted to hospital.	Trouble in connection with a Muhammadan procession.
11/12th September.	Sholapur, Bombay	5 killed and 66 injured (exact number not known).	....

PLAYING OF MUSIC BEFORE OR NEAR MOSQUES.

1054. *Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table copies of the orders passed by various Government authorities in various places relating to the stoppage of or placing restrictions upon the playing of music before or near mosques ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Any orders of this nature would ordinarily be passed by the local authorities in exercise of the powers conferred on them by section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the provisions of the Police Act. Government have no copies of such orders which are passed in relation to particular local circumstances.

QUARREL DUE TO THE PLAYING OF MUSIC BEFORE MOSQUES.

1055. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of the places where quarrels have taken place on the question of music before mosques, the date of the quarrel, the origin of the quarrel, the number and nature of casualties on each side, the proceedings taken by the Government and their results ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer I have just given to his question No. 1053.

PROVISION OF EMPLOYMENT UNDER GOVERNMENT FOR CLERKS, ETC., OF THE ARMY CANTEEN BOARD.

1056. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that the Army Canteen Board (now in liquidation) was a company guaranteed by the Government of India ?

(b) Have the Government taken any steps to ensure that those clerks, etc., that have rendered useful services to the Board for several years are not thrown out of service without being provided elsewhere in other Government Departments where their experience can be utilised ? If so, what steps, and will those that have crossed the limit of 25 years of age be debarred from joining other Government departments as being over age ?

(c) Will the employees of the Canteen Board, when appointed in other Departments of the Government, be granted any advance increments or special personal pay so that they may not have to start from the bottom of a time-scale after several years of service in a quasi-Government office ?

(d) What efforts have the Government so far made to have the Indian clerks of the Board absorbed in permanent vacancies in the Indian Corps of Clerks and other military offices and with what result ?

(e) Are the Government prepared to reserve some of the future vacancies in the office of the Military Accountant General for suitable accounts clerks of the Board's office ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) to (e). The terms of agreement under which these men were employed in the Army Canteen Board definitely laid down that employment was terminable at one month's notice. Government cannot therefore accept any direct responsibility in the matter of their future employment nor can they grant any general exemption from the ordinary rules or reserve vacancies expressly for them in any office. They are, however, doing what they can to help individuals and ten Indian ex-employees of the Board have already obtained employment in Government offices.

BURGLARIES IN NEW DELHI.

1057. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Is it a fact that there is a general complaint of the residents of New Delhi regarding the frequent burglaries that have taken place there during the last 12 months ?

(b) Do the Government propose to issue instructions for granting more freely licences for guns and pistols for defensive purposes to the residents of the city ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Certain complaints of this nature have been received.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given by me on the 22nd August to a similar question by Mr. G. P. Singh.

FILLING OF SECOND DIVISION TEMPORARY AND OFFICIATING VACANCIES IN ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

1058. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Will the Government please state the number of second division temporary and officiating vacancies for which candidates were requisitioned by the various branches of the Army Headquarters from the Establishment Officer from the 1st November 1926 to 30th June 1927 ?

(b) In how many of these vacancies were unpassed candidates appointed and how many of them (unpassed men) were Muslims and how many Hindus ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) 163.

(b) 82. 46 of these were Hindus and 25 Muslims.

†1059*—1061*.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

NAMES OF INFORMERS WHO SUPPLY INFORMATION TO GOVERNMENT IN REGARD TO INDIANS RESIDING IN AFGHANISTAN, RUSSIAN TERRITORY AND PERSIAN TERRITORY.

1015. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state the names of non-Indian or other informers who supply the Government with information :

(a) from Afghanistan,

(b) from Russian territory, and

(c) from Persian territory, in regard to Indians residing in those countries ?

Sir Denys Bray : I am not quite sure of the Honourable Member's purport. If he desires to know how to get news of Indians abroad, His Majesty's representatives, who endeavour to keep in touch with all British subjects, British Indian subjects of course included, are always ready to exercise their good offices on their behalf. If his question refers to sources of information of any other kind, I regret I am unable to make any statement.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN NON-GAZETTED APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARCHAEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

1016. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the total strength of the non-gazetted appointments both clerical and technical in the Archæological Department and how many of them are held by Moslems ?

---

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers thereto will be found at pages 4319—21 of these proceedings.

(b) How many new non-gazetted appointments both clerical and technical were created in the Department during the last three years and how many were given to Moslems ?

(c) Do Government propose to increase the number of Moslems in the Department in making future appointments both clerical and technical ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) There are 129 non-gazetted appointments in the Archaeological Department of which 28 are held by Moslems.

(b) From the beginning of the year 1925, 25 posts were filled in the Department out of which 5 were given to Moslems.

(c) Yes, provided that suitable qualified applicants are forthcoming.

EUROPEAN AND INDIAN RAIL MOTOR DRIVERS ON THE KALKA-SIMLA RAILWAY.

1017. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government kindly state the strength of rail motor drivers on the Kalka-Simla Railway ? How many of them are Europeans and how many of them are Indians ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is differentiation between the grades of European rail motor drivers and Indian rail motor drivers, as well as in the uniforms supplied ? Is it a fact that a European rail motor driver starts on Rs. 215 and goes up to Rs. 325, rising by Rs. 15 annually, whereas an Indian rail motor driver starts on Rs. 100 and goes up to Rs. 175 only, rising by Rs. 10 annually ? Is it a fact that a European rail motor driver gets double uniform of what is supplied to an Indian rail motor driver ?

(c) Is it a fact that the nature of the duties between the two grades of rail motor drivers is exactly the same but the differentiation is only a racial one ?

(d) Is it a fact that one of the rail motor drivers in the European rail motor driver's grade is an Indian Christian and that for the sake of religion he has been given the European grade ?

(e) Are Government aware that there is considerable heartburning amongst Indian rail motor drivers on account of this invidious distinction in the grades ? Are Government also aware that some of the Indian rail motor drivers know English very well, and are well educated ?

(f) Are Government prepared to consider the desirability of relaxing this invidious distinction in the grades and making all the grades equal, so that those Indian drivers who have got the necessary literacy in English qualifications and do the same work as Europeans may have equal chances of promotion ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am obtaining the information for the Honourable Member.

GRANT OF A LOCAL ALLOWANCE TO THE POSTMEN OF SIMLA.

1018. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the postmen at Simla are on the same scale of pay as the postmen of the first class Head Offices in the plains and get nothing extra to compensate them for the high cost of living at Simla ?

(b) Do Government propose some compensatory allowance for Simla postmen equal to that given to the clerks of the Telegraph Department ?

(c) Is it a fact that no local allowance is given to the postmen of Simla while other departments of the Government, including the post office clerks, are in the enjoyment of the same ? If the answer is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state the reason for not giving a local allowance to the postmen at Simla ?

MEMORIAL OF THE POSTMEN OF SIMLA.

1021. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Was any memorial received by the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs in India from the postmen of Simla ? If so, what action was taken on it ? If no action was taken, what was the reason ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I propose with your permission, Sir, to answer questions Nos. 1018 and 1021 together as they relate to the same case. The postmen at Simla are on the same scale of pay as those in the other 1st class Head offices in the Punjab and North West Frontier Circle, but whereas the former are provided with free quarters, the latter are given a house rent allowance of Rs. 5 a month. In none of the cases is a compensatory allowance granted. The postmen at Simla have submitted memorials to the Director-General on the subject of their emoluments and these are being considered in connection with a general scheme for the revision of the emoluments of such officials at all places where such a revision has not recently been carried out.

The answer to part (c) of question No. 1018 is in the affirmative, but as already pointed out, the postmen in Simla are provided with free quarters while clerks of the post office and other Government departments do not enjoy this concession.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE OF POSTMEN.

1019. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are postmen entitled to one month's privilege leave every year like the other Government servants ? If not, why not ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : No Government servant is 'entitled' to leave. Postmen like other Government servants in superior service earn every year privilege leave or leave on average pay, according as they have elected to remain under the Civil Service Regulations or to come under the Fundamental Rules.

SYSTEM OF SENDING CASH FROM THE HEAD POST OFFICE IN SIMLA TO THE SUB-POST OFFICES.

1020. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) What is the system of sending cash from the Head Post Office in Simla to the Sub-Post Offices ?

(b) Why is not the cash given in leather bags sealed by the Postmaster of the Head Post Office, to be opened by the Sub-Postmaster of the Sub-Post Office ?

(c) What are the arrangements for the protection and safety of the postmen and the cash when it is taken by a postman to distant places like Mashobra ?

(d) Do Government provide conveyance for the postmen when they have to take money to places over 5 miles ? If not, why not ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Cash is remitted in sealed bags through the post and loose through head postmen and overseers.

(b) As the duty of giving cash in sealed leather bags is performed jointly by two responsible officials of the Head Office, it is not considered necessary to impose this duty on the Postmaster. In the Sub-Post office the cash bag is opened by the Sub-Posmaster.

(c) When a postman carries heavy remittances to places like Mashobra another official accompanies him.

(d) Yes ; that is the rule. I am however enquiring into the practice in respect of the outlying offices of the Simla Head Office.

CONTRIBUTIONS MADE BY THE DISTRICT BOARD OF HAZARIBAGH TOWARDS THE COST OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE JOINT RAILWAY AND DISTRICT BOARD BRIDGE OVER THE KONAR RIVER.

1042. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the different amounts the District Board of Hazaribagh (Central India Coalfield Railway) was asked to pay on different occasions as the contribution of the cost of the construction of the Joint Railway and District Board Bridge over the Konar River in the district of Hazaribagh ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the District Board of Hazaribagh was put to a great difficulty in paying the said different amounts on different occasions owing to the uncertainty and inaccuracies of the estimate of the said construction of the said work and its consequent several necessary revisions ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the name or names of the engineer or engineers who prepared the estimate of the Bridge and the length of his or their experience ?

(d) Were the engineer or engineers taken to task for the preparation of such a bad and defective estimate ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The required information is being obtained and a communication will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

SEARCH FOR MISSING CURRENCY NOTES BY THE CURRENCY OFFICE.

1043. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Currency Office has ceased any more to search for missing currency notes on being supplied with the numbers of such notes ? If so, why so ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to re-introduce the practice for the convenience of the public ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : If the Honourable Member is referring to the maintenance of " stopped note " list at Currency offices,

I would invite his attention to the Government of India, Finance Department Resolution No. 523-F., dated the 12th November 1912. The reasons given therein for the abolition of that system still hold good and the Government do not propose to reintroduce it.

REFUNDS ON MISMATCHED OR OTHERWISE DEFECTIVE CURRENCY NOTES.

1044. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Currency Office refuses any more to find out counterparts of mismatched halves of currency notes as it used to do before ? If so, why so ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to restore the old practice in this behalf and, if necessary, charge reasonable remuneration for the extra service to be rendered by the Currency Office ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The rules regarding refunds on mismatched or otherwise defective currency notes were published in the Gazette of India dated the 21st May 1927. Refunds can still be obtained on mismatched notes subject to certain conditions. The rules were issued after prolonged consideration and the Government do not propose to revert to the previous practice

INFANTILE MORTALITY.

1045. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the rates of infant mortality in the different provinces of British India during the last five years ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : A statement giving the information available is being placed on the table.

Statement showing the rates of infant mortality in the different provinces of British India during the five years ending 1925.

Provinces and Administrations.	Infant mortality per 1,000 of births during the years.
	1921.	1922.	1923.	1924.	1925.
Bengal Presidency.. ..	206·1	187·7	182·1	184·17	179·05
United Provinces	265·8	183·8	169·4	191·99	175·51
Delhi	217·2	120·26	212·85	179·33	192·33
Assam	188·5	198·2	179·5	184·75	174·35
Bihar and Orissa	191·4	139·9	146·5	158·4	137·66
Madras Presidency ..	166·0	166·4	173·7	179·21	180·94
Bombay Presidency ..	178·1	169·1	159·7	191·17	162·01
Central Provinces	279·5	228·7	220·3	234·94	204·44
Punjab	191·6	169·6	196·62	212·57	187·71
North-West Frontier Province	195	151·5	149·5	161·36	139·13
Burma	172	185·3	184·1	197·86	188·99
Coorg	225	272·5	217·3	331·03	293·56
Ajmer Merwara	256·3	208·2	236·5	227·45	207·35
Total ..	197·9	175·1	175·56	188·66	174·40

ARTICLE IN THE Searchlight ON THE SUBJECT OF INCOME-TAX ADMINISTRATION.

1046. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the leading article in the Searchlight of Patna of a recent date on the subject of income-tax administration ? Will Government be pleased to say if they propose to institute an enquiry into the allegations contained therein ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government have now seen the article in question. They do not propose to institute any enquiry into the allegations made in it, but the Central Board of Revenue has already received and is considering a report upon them from the Commissioner of Income-tax.

ABOLITION OF THE BRANCH POST OFFICE AT BETWAN BAZAR, MONGHYR.

1047. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that the Branch Post Office at Betwan Bazar, Monghyr (Bihar and Orissa) is likely to be abolished due to the man running the same having expressed his inability to do so any longer owing to the inadequacy of remuneration paid to him for the same ? If so, do Government propose to increase the remuneration so as to ensure the continuance of the office in question in view of its supplying a real local need ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

EMOLUMENTS OF CLERKS AND SORTERS IN THE RANGOON GENERAL POST OFFICE, AND CLERKS OF THE MOFUSSIL IN BURMA, AND SORTERS OF THE BURMA RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

1051. U. Tok Kyi : (a) Is it a fact that prior to the introduction of the time-scale pay in the Post Office, the difference in the initial emoluments of clerks and sorters in the Rangoon General Post Office on the one hand and the clerks of the mofussil of Burma and the sorters of the Burma Railway Mail Service on the other was only Rs. 10 ?

(b) Is it not a fact that the same initial difference in emoluments was recommended by the Postal Enquiry Committee ?

(c) Are the Government aware that the present initial difference in emoluments between Rangoon and the Burma mofussil and Railway Mail Service is as much as Rs. 20 ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether the difference is compatible with the latest orders of the Burma Government on the subject as regards its own officials stationed in Rangoon and in the mofussil of Burma ? If not, are Government prepared to take early steps to rectify matters ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, in respect of post office clerks, there was no difference in the case of Railway Mail Service sorters.

